Mr. Patrick Duncan's Statement

THE following is the text of the statement made by Mr. Patrick Duncan before joining the Defiance Campaign: "We are approaching the greatest crisis in our history. It is no longer in the power of White South Africa to impose on non-White South Africa discriminations based purely on colour, not even by a drastic policy of internments, and within the lifetime of many of us our non-White fellow citizens will be emancipated.

"All that is in the power of White South Africa is to choose whether the change will come with or without violence. Anyone who wishes to know the horrors of race-violence should read the history of St. Domingo. On that island 150 years ago race-war transformed what had been the world's richest colony into a starving, superstition-ridden wilderness. If White South Africa turns to-day to naked force to preserve the present caste-system it will be held responsible by history for the race-war that will probably destroy our country.

"The African and Indian political movements are to-day pledged to the methods of non-violence. That is to say they are putting Christianity into practice. They are bravely refusing to consent to oppression; but they in their turn are refusing to injure their opponents. Such methods point to a future South Africa which will award equal value to persons of all colours, while at the same time allowing freedom to groups that wish to remain racially or culturally separate. It will be possible, for example, for the Afrikaner people to maintain their group purity and culture, while behaving justly to all other South Africans of other colours.

"No other movement promises a future like this, and it is reasonable that all who love our country should support the two congresses. The only way that I can show my solidarity with them is by participating in the Defiance Campaign.

"I believe that the congresses are in no way responsible for the recent sad riots. Since I believe in non-violence I support the Government in all legitimate action taken to suppress riots and to preserve life and property.

"Our country has two great needs: firstly stability which will favour investment and development; and secondly the liberation of our non-Whites from the industrial, land, political, and other restrictions that at present prevent them from playing their rightful part in our great country's great future. The two are inter-dependent, since there will never again be stability in South Africa until there has been this liberation. To realise these two needs is the most worthwhile task that calls our generation."

Durban Indian Child Welfare Society

THE Durban Indian Child Welfare Society celebrated its Silver Jubilee in the second week of December 1952. A busy week in connection with Child Welfare work commenced with the official opening of the celebrations by the Administrator, Mr. D. G. Shepherson, and concluded with a conference of the Natal Indian Council for the Child Welfare opened by Dr. A. W. Hoernle. It was an important and an interesting occasion in the history of Indians in South Africa. It has demonstrated the advancement made by the Indian community, hedged as it is by all kinds of unjust and humiliating restrictions, by individual effort. Notwithstanding the fact that the Government of this country has not a single good word to say about the Indian community the latter has reason to be proud of its achievements in the field of labour, commerce, education and social work almost unaided or grudgingly aided by the local or central Government. Whether Natal wishes to acknowledge it or not its history proves that the Province owes its present prosperous condition to a large degree to the sweat and blood of the forefathers of the present Indians. In commerce it was the hard-working, diligent and thrifty Indian who went into the wilderness and developed trade and supplied the people with the necessities of life. Many a housewife blesses the Indian hawker for the supply of fruits and vegetables which she gets in all climates every morning at her very door. In the field of agriculture the Indian market gardener has quite often been referred to as an asset to this country. In the field of education the authorities could not but pay a compliment to the Indians for the remarkable spirit of self-help they have shown in the midst of all the impediments placed in their way by restrictive laws. The Sastri College, the Sukun Technical College and all the aided school buildings, many of them magnificent structures, stand as living monuments of Indian self-help. In the field of social work we have as living monuments the Indian Child Welfare Society and the various Indian Benevolent Homes all initiated and founded individually or collectively by Indians themselves. In the field of sports too the Indians have made their mark. There is not an organization which is conducted so efficiently and in a disciplined manner as the South African Indian Sports Association.

The subject matter of the present article is the Indian Child Welfare Society which has just celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday. It must be acknowledged with a sense of gratitude that the laurels for the existence of that Society go to Mrs. A. Christopher ably assisted by her husband Advocate A. Christopher. They are the soul of Indian Child Welfare work particularly in Durban and generally throughout the Province. Dr. Hoernle's opening speech at the conference of the Natal Indian Council for Child Welfare, which appears elsewhere in this issue, has brought to light the difficult conditions in which the Child Welfare work is being carried on. It is pleasing to note that the Indian teachers throughout the Province are taking a keener interest in the work and are ministering to the needs not only of Indian but the helpless African mother and their children, a fact which was brought out in the Presidential address delivered by Mrs. A. Christopher.

God helps those who help themselves and the assistance and support the Child Welfare Society is to-day getting from the National Council for Child Welfare and from the authorities is proof of that and the Indian community owes a deep debt of gratitude to that institution and to the authorities for what they have been doing. The president very rightly remarked that the root cause of the trouble in regard to child welfare is the lack of housing. We would go one step further and emphasise the fact that the root cause of all the trouble is the lack of proper housing and education, both of which are criminally neglected by the Government particularly in respect of the non-European people. When one sees vast sums of money squandered on luxuries such as improvements on the beach front and other holiday resorts one cannot but wonder at the utter stupidity of the present system which allows such things at the expense of the poor and the starving humanity. The future of the world depends on how the child has been brought up. That is the foundation. If the foundation is faulty the whole structure is bound to collapse sooner or later. Those engaged in this foundation work therefore deserve all the encouragement, help and support that can be given. We very heartily congratulate the Durban Indian Child Welfare Society on its twenty-fifth birthday and wish it a bright and prosperous future.

NOTES

Springs Mayor On Apartheid In Churches

"YOU cannot placard Christianity 'for Europeans only,'" said the Mayor of Springs, Mr. C. M. Maltman in reply to an attack by the Mayor of Pretoria North, Mr. D. H. P. du Toit, on the presence of non-Europeans at a mayoral service in Springs. Mr. du Toit is reported to have told the Press that if he had known non-Europeans would be present at the service, his council would not have been represented. "The fact that members of the Advisory Board and principals of non-European school were being invited to the service was given publicity," said Mr. Maltman. "It appears that it is something dreadful for Europeans and non-Europeans to be present at a church service where people responsible for the Administration of the town ask for God's blessing on the administration. I wonder if the people who have attacked me ever ask themselves if it is not wrong to expect only one section of God's people to attend his church. What about the wonderful work being done by the Dutch Reformed Church missionaries in Central Africa, and what about the recent conference in Bloemfontein attended by representatives of the Dutch Reformed Churches and Basuto Churches, who joined in prayer at the start and end of the conference?" Mr. Maltman said Roman Catholics recognised no colour bar in their religion, and non-Europeans were always welcome at their services. "I can see no reason why Christian people should adopt any other attitude when it comes to a civic service."

South African National Tuberculosis Association

In a Press statement Santa writes: The Johannesburg City Council has donated 5 acres of land for the first part of Johannesburg's TB scheme. With monies from the National Appeal, Santa will erect a block for non-European child TB sufferers. It is hoped that accommodation for 100 cases of orthopaedic TB, and 100 cases of primary pulmonary TB, will be provided. This site is adjacent to Baragwanath Hospital. The patients will be under the medical supervision of the Baragwanath staff. "This generous donation is yet another example of co-operation in the TB field between Government, Province, Municipality and voluntary organizations—in this case Cripple Care and Santa," said Mr. Paul C. Sykes, Settlements Adviser to Santa. His worship the Mayor of Johannesburg, Councillor H. Miller, who is Chairman of Santa Johannesburg has made the following statement: "It is a wonderful gift as it enables us to get to practical grips with the problem as early as possible. The Johannesburg branch of Santa will devote a great deal of its efforts to the more practical and positive aspects of the problem. It is my earnest hope that we will be able to commence building operations in the early part of the New Year. It will make room for many badly pressing cases, which the hospitals cannot accommodate."

Santa Appeal Figure Rising Steadily

The Santa National Appeal figure has now reached £431,000. The steady flow of cheques and donations that is coming in shows the goodwill with which the public is participating in Santa's Appeal. Among the various fund raising schemes is the Junior Crusader Scheme. 25,000 children—European and non-European—have been enrolled, bringing their contributions to over £2,240. Money received has been put to immediate use. £29,500 has been paid out for the erection and extension of accommodation at TB Settlements.

NEWS OF THE DEFIANCE CAMPAIGN

First Woman Served With Resign Order

MISS BETTY DU TOIT, national secretary of the National Union of Laundering, Cleaning and Dyeing Workers and branch secretary of the Johannesburg branch of the union, and secretary of the Cleaning and Allied Workers' Union, has received a notice from the Minister of Justice, Mr. Swart, ordering her to resign from these positions within 30 days. She is the first woman to receive the order. Miss du Toit who is one of those arrested together with Mr. Patrick Duncan, informed the Press that she had also received a second notice from the Minister for-the corner of Fox Street and McLaren Street, a block from Marshall Square Police Station. At this post office there is a wooden partition which separates the European from non-European section of the counter. Mr. Selby entered the non-European section and joined the queue. When he reached the counter and tried to hand in a telegram addressed to the Minister of Justice, Mr. Swart, calling for the abolition of colour discriminations, the post office official refused to accept the telegram. Mr. Selby continued to stand at the counter. Meanwhile the non-European women and the African joined a European queue on the other side of the partition bidding her attending any meetings or gatherings other than those of a bona fide religious, recreational or social nature for a period of two years. Both notices had been issued in terms of the Suppression of Communism Act. Miss du Toit said that before taking any action or making any decision on her next step she would have to discuss the matter with her committee and union branches. She also intended bringing the matter up with the South African Trades and Labour Council.

European And Others
Arrested

A European, Mr. Arnold Selby (34), secretary of the African Textile Workers' Union, two non-European women, Miss Dulcie van Buuren and Miss Margaret Johnson, and a Native, Zacharia Mondlazi, organizer of the African Textile Workers' Union, were arrested in Johannesburg for defying the apartheid laws in a post office at and tried to send off similar telegrams. A post office official refused to accept these and told the non-Europeans to go around to the non-European section. This they refused to do. The police were then sent for and all four defiers were arrested and taken to Marshall Square. This case was remanded to January 5. This were released on their own recognizances.

Tried To Defy P.O.
- Apartheid in Durban

Miss Sita Gandhi, 24 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahila Gandhi and grand daughter of Mahatma Gandhi accompanied by two resisters entered the European section of the Broad street Post Office on Monday December 29. They handed in telegrams addressed to the Prime Minister, Dr. D. F. Malan, demanding entry of the U.N.O. Commission into South Africa.

The resisters refused to use the non-European section of the Post Office when asked to do so by an attendant and waited until the telegrams were accepted by a male attendant, who also took their names and addresses.

The resisters were accompanied by Mr. R. L. Astenstein and Miss Butcher who had attempted to do a similar thing in Capetown but on being brought before the Court was found not guilty and discharged.

Ban On Another A.N.C.
Leader

Mr. Walter Sisulu secretary-general of the African National Congress and joint secretary of National Action Committee of the defiance movement has been served with a notice in English, signed by Mr. C. R. Swart, Minister of Justice, stating that "there is reason to believe that the achievement of Communism would be furthered if you were to attend any gathering in the magisterial district of Johannesburg."

Another notice in Afrikaans also signed by Mr. Swart, was served on Mr. Sisulu under an Act of 1914, ordering him to remain within the magisterial district of Johannesburg for six months.

"Neither the defiance movement nor any of my activities has anything whatever to do with Communism," Mr. Sisulu is reported to have commented.

WESTERN CIVILISATION

IV—SPIRITUALITY OR DOGMA?

(C. W. M. GELL)

THE point of the last article was not to suggest that Europeans and Americans should become Hindus or Buddhists, or that they should slavishly follow yoga disciplines which the East has found effective in its own context. There is an old Chinese proverb that, if the wrong man uses the right means, the right means will work in the wrong way. Jung renders this in the modern idiom, "Denial of our own historical premises would be sheer folly . . . Only by standing firmly on our own soil can we assimilate the spirit of the East." Any drastic severance from our own tradition violates and outrages our inner convictions which have centuries of accumulated history behind them. It is impossible for anyone to achieve spirituality in a tradition almost wholly alien to him. As Radhakrishnan says: "As a means of creative religion, the native cult has an absolute advantage over any imported religion." We cannot, therefore, merely translate the Eastern truths of the inner life into a Western idiom and thereby acquire them for our own use. We have to learn from the East to give a new prominence in our lives to meditation and contemplation and, by thus developing our insight, to found our active life upon inwardness—to create what Schweitzer calls "inward men with an active ethic."

This is an ideal midway between the thoughtless, active self-devotion of the West and the passive self-perfecting to which Indian practice has rather too often lapsed. It was first expressed by Dr. Harry Emerson Forster in a sermon in New York on 15th November, 1915:

"There are two aspects to every strong life—receptivity and activity, relaxation and tension, resting back and working hard. A man who cannot do the former, can never do the latter well—never."

Schweitzer, after condemning the Western world's "intoxication of activity," makes the same point:

"We do not have enough inwardness, we are not sufficiently pre-occupied with our own spiritual life, we lack quietness, and this is not only because in our exciting, busy existence it is difficult to obtain, but because, ignoring its importance, we do not take pains to secure it, being too easily contented with living our lives as uncollected men who merely aim at being good."

Prayer should not be a demand for the gratification of our desires; but a resting back, listening in the silence of our hearts for that still, small voice. It is what Heraclitus meant by "listening to the essence of things;" the Psalmist, when he said: "Be still and know that I am God;" and St. Thomas a Kempis when he wrote: "Blessed are the ears which vibrate to the pulses of the Divine Whisper." Prayer is the practice of the Presence of God.

Indeed, we have no need to appropriate doctrines and disciplines from the East. For, if we would learn to approach religion with greater concern for inner spirituality than outward observance, we can find all that we require to re-civilise our culture in our own Christian tradition, both in its Palestinian and Greek origins and in the heritage of the European mystics. The world knows no finer example of the spiritual life, based upon a world-denoing or world-transcending religious inspiration but worked out in this actual (if contingent) world, than the life and teaching of Jesus Christ; and what a wealth of spiritual experience is available to us in the visions of those who wrote the Fourth Gospel and the Apocalypse, of Clement and Origen and the Cappadocian Fathers, of St. Augustine, Dionysius the Areopagite, Erigena, Abelard, Aquinas, of Master Eckhart, Tauler, Ruysbroeck, Jacob Boehme, of St. Theresa of Avila, St. John of the Cross. These are only some of the names in a great army of spiritual warriors drawn from all the centuries and running through Bunyan, Pascal, Blake to Evelyn Underhill and Simone Weil in our own time.

But unfortunately, owing to the historical circumstances of its early life and its imperial connection, Christianity soon abandoned the simple Apostolic faith—"Jesus is Lord"—and not only conferred upon him a divinity and divine insensibility to which he made no claim, but hedged this about with a complicated series of dogmas to which the Christian must either subscribe in toto or remain outside the Church. So that dogmas became formulas of exclusion from the family of God; instead of notes of teaching, imperfect human expressions of the inexpressible eternal truth, supports and symbols for our guidance towards inner realisation of that truth. These dogmas, many of them dating from the 4th and 5th centuries, have become more or less repugnant to intelligent opinion; and this, combined with higher criticism, historical research and archaeological discovery (all of which challenge some of the historical foundations of traditional Christianity), has led to the discrediting of the established Churches, which are commonly identified with Christianity itself.

Yet so far are some Christians from seeing that, if spiritual truth be bound to particular historical interpretations and time-conditioned dogmatic formulas, it must eventually lose its universal and timeless validity; that they not merely take their stand upon an indefensible doctrinal rigidity, but (some of them) go over to the dogmatic offensive. The recent enunciation of the Dogma of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin—the actual ascent into Heaven of the earthly body of the mother of Jesus—has no basis in scriptural authority or rational experience. The Barthian approach is no less uncompromising. The re-spiritualization of Christianity surely does not lie in this direction where faith and reason must conflict.

A necessary concomitant of this conservative attitude of the Churches to dogma is their claim to identify themselves with the Ideal, Universal Church of the Kingdom of God, with power to "bind and loose" on earth and with authority to decide absolutely on the validity of personal religious experience or belief. Since the test is one of conformity with the dogmas of the Church, this claim is altogether distinct from the Indian appeal to reason or from the criterion of Jesus—"by their fruits ye shall know them." Nor by "fruits" did Jesus mean a rigid code of external conduct such as the Pharisees then prescribed and as some preachers of South Africa's largest Church sometimes still seem to be requiring.

It would be less than fair not to admit that these Churches which provide a completely logical and fully explanatory system of intellectual and spiritual security (that is, granting their initial dogmatic assumptions and the exclusion of private judgment) do meet a widespread, contemporary craving for authority, which may seem as much in the Communist purging of "deviationists" as in the Catholic anathematizing of modernists. Very many people long for certainty in their beliefs and are glad to have their moral decisions taken for them. Jung has spoken of this craving as "a humiliating sign of the spiritual immaturity of European man, but a fact with which we have to reckon."

Nevertheless, if Christianity is to meet the whole challenge of the modern world, there must be a relaxation of inflexible dogmatism (whether Catholic or Protestant) towards a more liberal spirituality, even if this involves some loss of coherence in theology—a coherence which has already become questionable for thinking men because of the dubious nature of its basic premises. Side by side with those who cling to the security of traditional doctrine and its authoritative interpretation, there must be latitude of the mind for those who wish to follow the spiritual life of Jesus without accepting every particular belief of the Church. These latter, more critical of intellect and stronger in heart than their brethren, have the courage to face the great mystery of life, knowing that there can be no certain or final knowledge. As Jung says: "The step to higher consciousness leads away from all shelter and safety. The person must give himself to the new way completely, for only by means of his spiritual integrity can he go further." All spiritual progress on which civilisation ultimately depends, finds its inspiration in the vision of those who claim this spiritual freedom. Buddha and Jesus, Socrates and Paul, Muhammad, St. Francis, Luther and George Fox were all non-conformists in revolt against the religious theory or practice of their day. Ritual and dogma conserve truths already won by individual intuition and spirituality which are the creative forces of religion. As Dr. Schweitzer has admirably put it:

"We know how much that is precious exists within the ecclesiastical Christianity which has been handed down in Greek dogmas and kept alive by the piety of so many centuries, and we hold fast to the Church with love, and reverence and thankfulness. But we belong to her as men who appeal to the saying of St. Paul: 'Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty,' and who believe that they serve Christianity better by the strength of their devotion to Jesus' religion of love than by acquiescence in all the articles of belief. If the Church has the spirit of Jesus, there is room in her for every form of Christian piety, even for that which claims unrestricted liberty."

Religious truth, on which we base the hopes of civilisation, is independent of time and place and particular intellectual formulations. For the Christian the essence of religion is in being possessed by the living critical God, as incarnate in Jesus Christ as Will of Love.

"It is not Jesus as historically known, but Jesus as spiritually arisen within men, who is significant for our time and can save it. Not the historical Jesus, but the spirit which goes forth from Him and in the spirits of men strives for new influence and rule, is that which overcomes the world. . . . The abiding and eternal in Jesus is absolutely independent of historical knowledge and can only be understood by contact with His spirit which is still at work in the world."

There is nothing, therefore, contrary to the essential spirit of Christianity in amending dogmatic creeds where they now conflict with historical facts and scientific conclusions; or in liberal-ising the conception of Christendom to all who profess and call themselves Christian and who lead a Christian life. Indeed, this reform is absolutely necessary to the recovery of Christianity's spiritual and intellectual integrity and to the reintegration of religion, thought and ethics, upon which the immediate future of our Western Civilisation and the survival of man depends. As Radhakrishnan says: "The spirit of truth never clings to its forms but ever renews them. . . . Truth may be immutable, but the form in which it is embodied consists of elements which admit of change."

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

CHANGE IN CONGRESS LEADERSHIP

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

TRADITION has fixed the festive season as the time when political organisations in the African and White communities take stock of themselves. This is somewhat unfortunate because it tends to rob events happening at this time of the gravitas of their real significance. A case in point was the election of Mr. Albert John Luthuli to the presidency-general of the African National Congress at Johannesburg last month.

His choice at this particular time is an important expression of African opinion. And with the general elections in the white community not very far off, it is desirable that the significance of this should be given wider publicity.

Mr. Luthuli took over from Dr. Moroka when the political policies pursued by the latter were gaining universal acceptance among large sections of the African people. It was generally felt by these not in close touch with African politics that if Dr. Moroka did not decline to stand for election, he would be returned to the leadership of Congress again. This line of approach was reinforced by the argument that in any case it would not be wise to change horses in mid-stream.

In Africa, however, two events had occurred in recent months which had made it imperative that the community should make its feelings known in no uncertain manner. The first was the court case in which Dr. Moroka and some of his adherents in the national executive committee of the African National Congress were charged under the Suppression of Communism Act. During the trial Dr. Moroka is reported to have made a plea in mitigation in which he seemed to lay stress on the fact that his associates had helped the Voortrekkers when the fortunes of the latter were low. I read the evidence as reported in the Press and the impression I got personally was not that Dr. Moroka had tried to show how his ancestors had helped the Voortrekkers to destroy, among others, the Basuto, but that he had sought to show how the policy of co-operation between white and black is traditional in his family and how he had tried to pursue it in the African National Congress.

Unfortunately inasmuch as the Government has worked up an anti-African hysteria in sections of the Afrikaans community, there is a growing anti Voortrekker hysteria in sections of the African people as well. I must explain here that this is not directed against the Afrikaans speaking people. It is an unmistakable reaction to Malanisms. The Malanists regard themselves as the only guardians of Afrikaans culture and the only upholders of Voortrekker ideals. Because apartheid is anathema to the African, anything racist with which this Government is associated is also anathema. The Voortrekkers fall in this category because of the Government's claims.

For Dr. Moroka publicly to claim association with the Voortrekkers was received in the African community as a demonstration in sympathy with apartheid, however indirect. The delegates went up to the Johannesburg conference determined to express firm disapproval of anything which might in any way be construed as hobnobbing with apartheid in any shape or form. Although the resistance movement—whilst Dr. Moroka had led—had scored outstanding victories, only 47 delegates to the conference remembered this as against 160 who strongly disapproved of his behavior in court.

Secondly, in weighing Dr. Moroka against Mr. Luthuli, the delegates also found themselves in the position to express another opinion on apartheid. A few weeks before the Johannesburg conference Mr. Luthuli had been dismissed from the post he had held as Chief of the Amakoswa Tribe because he had refused to resign from the African National Congress or the resistance movement.

His firm stand against Dr. Moroka received universal approval in the African community. Most delegates went up to Johannesburg determined to express clear and unambiguous aversion to Mr. Luthuli. The election of the President-General gave them the best opportunity to do this in a way which nobody could mistake.

In this light, Mr. Luthuli's victory is a noteworthy defeat for apartheid. The African people have made it as clear as democracy allows, that they will not tolerate anything suggesting a coming to terms with apartheid. Although Mr. Luthuli was only a provincial leader, his heroic stand immediately made him the symbol of African resistance to apartheid tyranny.

If the Government claims that apartheid is being supported by the African people, Mr. Luthuli's election is a shattering reply.

Incidentally, the election should also give heart to quite a good many Indians and Europeans who were worried over the activities of Mr. S. S. Bhanga. The choice of Mr. Luthuli—by 150 votes to 17—should make it clear to all which way the African is going. After this we should not hear much about Mr. Bhanga again.

Apart from being a vote of confidence in Mr. Luthuli for his stand against apartheid, his election marks a turning point in Congress policy—a shift towards constructive. The resistance movement has been at least 85 per cent. successful and the leaders of the African National Congress are satisfied that the first phase of the movement has shown that they have the African community solidly behind them.

Their satisfaction has been increased by the effects of the campaign on the European public. It has set in motion a movement which might one day turn this country into a land fit for free men to live in. I have in mind the decision by white supporters and sympathisers to participate actively in the resistance campaign. By courting imprisonment side by side with the African and the Indian they have given substance and reality to that concept of South African nationhood which regards the various racial groups in this country as equal citizens and co-builders of a new and greater South African nation which shall accept merit and not colour as the criterion by which to assess the value of a man.

Mr. Luthuli, in his acceptance speech, made it plain that the policy of the African National Congress, the policy which he himself will carry out energetically, is to make the European and the African and the Indian rediscover one another in sharing a common nationhood and in striving hand together by ideals held in common.

This calls for emphasis on a growing scale on the constructive aspects of the resistance movement. Very many top notch men in the African National Congress have the feeling that the success of the campaign now calls for this. It is a trying phase which calls for rare qualities of leadership. When the delegates met in Johannesburg, they decided that Mr. Luthuli is the best man to carry nine million Africans on to the next phase of their struggle in alliance with the Indians and the Whites.

NATAL INDIAN COUNCIL FOR CHILD WELFARE

THE conference of the Natal Indian Council for Child Welfare was held at the Bolton Hall on December 20 and 21. The conference was opened by Dr. A. W. Herrold, chairman of the South African National Council for Child Welfare, who had specially come from Johannesburg for the occasion.

In her speech Dr. Herrold said, for six years she had been chairman of the non-European Standing Committee of the National Council for Child Welfare, and it had been necessary for her to keep steadily in mind both the consensus of opinion of the Council and the growing thought of the non-European Child Welfare Societies affiliated to that National Council through the non-European Standing Committee.

"I myself am a staunch believer in voluntary action," she said. "By the give and take of thought and exchange of opinion social institutions grow. By respect for opinions differing from our own, by the attempt to understand the reasons for them, and the determination if one does not agree with them, gradually to change them by reason and understanding, we gain in depth and human sympathy."

"In the work of the Standing Committee," she continued, "we accept the Natal Indian Council for Child Welfare one of our strongest supports. It is you who have taught me at any rate, the value of Provincial bodies. During the war your Council was not very active, but since the war your organisation has developed under trained guidance and I can speak with conviction of the growing value of the work you are doing."

"The Children's Charter tells us," said the speaker, "that mankind owes to the child the best that it has to give. It tells us that the child has the right to be born in beautiful surroundings, to get the nourishment that it needs to develop its mind and body, the shelter and the loving care that it needs to unfold its personality. Training to fit for its niche in the working community; especially to express the natural emotions and opportunities to share in the spiritual values of human life, and also to carry the responsibilities of citizenship. There are the values we have to use to guide us."

"In 1944-45 three medical investigations of the highest distinction in England made a survey of health conditions in England. They wrote these words: 'The evacuation of our cities during the war and the findings of our Medical Researching Boards have laid bare such a mass of preventable disability, of undernourishment and poor development that we are ashamed. There is much to be done; we know how it should be done, and it is within our capacity. If we have the will to do it.' England is tackling her problem magnificently."

"Now, in our country too, a survey has been made, a survey of Indian Life and Labour in Natal. I think we should all be grateful to Professor Burrows and his assistants, for the careful study they have made of many aspects of Indian life in Natal. All those who care for human lives, and especially those who work for child welfare should make a very careful study of this little brochure, and year by year an attempt should be made to see the conditions disclosed in this study are altered so that any new study made, let us say in five years time, will show a very much improved picture."

"The 1951 census showed that the Indian population of Natal is now 298,205. Seven out of every ten of this population live in the eight largest towns in Natal."

"The population is a youthful one. 48 per cent of the Indians in 1946 were under the age of 15 years and only 10 per cent were above the age of 45 years. Among the Europeans only 26 per cent of the population was under the age of 15 years and 28 per cent was over 45 years."

"Now, in these years that are upon us, we shall have an increasing number of youthful adults, marrying, needing homes, producing children. For these schools will be needed, and later, opportunities for work, and recreation and opportunities to fulfil human aspirations. As Professor Burrows says 'The growth of Indian population is an important factor to consider in planning to meet consumer demands, especially for housing, schools, hospitals, health services and urban amenities, as well as gauging the supply of available labour for industrial, commercial and agricultural employment.'

"Child-death rates," she said, "is very high and in recent years one in every three deaths has been that of a child under fifteen years of age. During the year 1949-50 27 per cent of Indian deaths in Durban were of infants under one year. The main causes of these deaths were gastro-enteritis, pneumonia and prematurity, all easily preventable conditions, and largely due to ignorance which can be overcome."

Our immediate concern as child welfare organisations is with the social services and we must be very grateful for the strides that have been made since the Commission of Enquiry into Social Security, which was appointed in 1943, made its recommendations to the Government. In 1944 Old Age Pensions and Blind Pensions were made available to Indians and in 1946 the Disabilities Grant Act included all racial groups."

"In 1949 there were 1,568 Indians in receipt of disability grants at a cost of £37,525 and 5,005 Indians received old age pensions at a cost of £137,705. In 1939 only 90 families received maintenance grants. In 1949 3,132 received in all an amount of £138,721. There is no doubt the activity of our child welfare societies is largely responsible for bringing the need of the families to the attention of the authorities."

"In March 1946, 1,604 Indian families also benefited from the family allowances grant at a cost of some £19,000. We have lost this grant owing to the apartheid policy of the Nationalist Government but the non-European standing committee never ceases to call the attention of the authorities to the need. Some day, I feel sure, this grant will be restored."

"The National Council of Child Welfare has the well-being of every child at heart. It will always do all it can to press for better conditions for all children, and this Provincial Council can rest assured that serious attention will always be given by the National Council of Child Welfare to needs and conditions which require the help of the Provincial and Union authorities. The new chairman of the non-European Standing Committee, Mrs. Newman of East London, is a very keen worker for all underprivileged people and under Miss Mackenzie at headquarters you have a tireless and devoted staff doing all in its power to improve conditions all over the country. At the same time the National Council in its turn, must rely on the local bodies for the actual work. The ultimate development of each child welfare society depends on the energy and enthusiasm of the local community. It is for this reason above all that I wish to congratulate Natal on its Indian child welfare societies and this Provincial Council for Child Welfare for its co-ordinating work. It is an old saying that a chain is only as strong as its weakest link. Our multi-racial society cannot prosper as it should while conditions such as Prof. Burrows has described exist in our midst."

Pakistan News

From Our Own Correspondent

Karachi December 14.

AMONG the problems which the Government of Pakistan must solve, there are three which command immediate and urgent attention. Without seeking to assess their relative importance, they are: the current economic difficulties, Kashmir and the framing of the constitution.

The economic difficulties are described as such and not as a crisis which a few months ago, they threatened to become. The situation arose early in 1952 when it was evident that there were no customers for Pakistan cotton, very few customers for raw jute and, to crown the trouble, the former surpluses of home grown food grains had become a deficiency. It had been constantly stated that in food grains Pakistan always could and would be able to provide for herself with, sometimes, a surplus for export. The earnings from the sale of jute and cotton were to provide money for the purchase of those articles of food which Pakistan does not produce at all or in sufficient quantity and for the purchase of manufactured goods and equipment which the country does not yet make for itself.

The food grain deficiency must be regarded as a serious ground of criticism of the administration and, after a good deal of specious excuse, it is now satisfactory to read that the country's public men are squarely facing the reasons for it of which the chief undoubtedly is that too many ambitious farmers turned over too much land to the production of cotton. That this is so, is best proved by the fact that the cotton crop 1952-53 season will be by far the largest since the birth of Pakistan. The excess cannot be explained by improved methods of growing and Nature's beneficence.

As soon as the situation presented itself, measures to deal with it were adopted. To prevent demoralisation in the cotton market, the Government fixed a floor price at which it was ready to buy all approved cotton; the cotton export duty was lowered and, to cover the possibility of diminished earnings in foreign exchange, the Open General Licence was much restricted in its scope. At the same time, Banks were instructed to open Letters of Credit, intended for the importation of foreign merchandise, only upon the deposit by the importer of minimum margins which, in the case of goods on OGL, was fixed at seventy-five per cent and in the case of goods on licence, fifty per cent. The State Bank of Pakistan issued further directions intended to prevent evasion of the scope of these limitations on imports.

In the result, the Government found itself the owner of practically all the 1952-53 season's cotton crop and, it must be conceded, the Pakistan Cotton Board did a good job in disposing of all the cotton within a short time. Substantial deals were negotiated with China and the balance was sold to smaller lots elsewhere. The loss suffered by Government was offset by its earnings on the reduced Cotton Export Duty and it may be said that in taking over the sale of the 1952-53 cotton crop, the Government acted efficiently and effectively.

As to jute, the Government has faced the situation objectively and has announced the reduction of East Bengal's jute acreage from sixteen acres to five acres. This is a bold and encouraging step which is doubtless based on the knowledge that certain types of fine quality jute are produced only in East Pakistan. That this is so, is established by the Jute Board's recent announcement that the floor prices of fine qualities are to be raised. The land which is released from jute production will be turned to rice growing.

The final measure of economic adjustment was the cancellation, in full, of the Open General Licence to import. This was announced just prior to the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' conference and it is fully expected that on the return of Khwaja Nazimuddin and the Ministers of Finance and Commerce who accompanied him, the future import policy will be defined.

Thus, we are justified in calling this series of reverses a difficulty and not a crisis. The trouble is not yet over, but there are clear signs of healing. The 1952-53 cotton crop, which, until recently, was piling up in the goods yards at Karachi, is beginning to move and although money is still very tight, there is a sense of optimism among the well-informed and sounder men of business.

It is natural enough that there should be much talk and many rumours concerning the possibility of a devaluation of Pakistan's currency. It is a matter which regularly crops up, especially so at such times as those we have described, and is always a topic for much argument, but it can be asserted that the prospects are remote and become more so as the situation improves. The importance to Pakistan of an undervalued currency is enormous since she stands in need of so much in the way of capital goods and equipment from abroad. To cling to the present position may call for determination even stringency but as time passes there must be a demonstration of its material benefits.

All in all, the break in the summer of easy money, which Pakistan has enjoyed for five years, will have salutary results. Too many people had forgotten that Fortune is a goddess who can frown as well as smile. From the economic troubles of 1952, Pakistan is likely to emerge wiser, stronger and fundamentally sounder.

Problem Of Kashmir

Not, it appears so yielding to the exertions of the Government, is the problem of Kashmir which drags on from one abortive step to the next. A kind of self-inflicted obduracy seems to have gripped both parties, but in Pakistan it is now felt that whereas, at one time, Mr. Nehru was fighting for what he thought himself entitled to, he is now dishonestly evading the only issue, namely, a free and fair plebiscite under the auspices of the United Nations to which body Mr. Nehru was the first to appeal. To many Pakistanis, this is painful since Mr. Nehru has always been regarded as one who, whatever might be his opinions, was a man of personal integrity.

The present disturbances in Kashmir, created against the Government of Sheikh Abdullah by the Praja Parishad, are regarded in Pakistan as certain evidence of Hindu chauvinism and the insecurity of all Kashmir Muslims. It is hardly possible to blame them. When leaders of the Hindu Mahasabha go the length of picketing the Indo-Pakistan test matches, which have been playing in a genuinely sporting spirit on both sides, Pakistanis may be forgiven if they wonder how sincere are the sentiments of the Republic across the border.

INDIA LETTER

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Iron Press Tribute For India's Five-Year Plan

WIDELY circulated Teheran Daily "Dakhtar Imroz" has commended India's Five Year Plan as a big and praiseworthy economic step for general speedy betterment of the country.

The paper says, "The plan aims at self-sufficiency in food as well as rapid industrialization of India. Practically nothing was done during the British rule for the economic welfare of the country in spite of India's very rich and varied natural resources. It is heartening to find that ever since Indians assumed administration under the leadership of Mr. Nehru important and far-reaching steps have been taken to eradicate economic ills of the country, most outstanding being abolition of Zamindari (landlordism) and other agrarian reforms such as construction of useful dams and the establishment of a chemical fertilizer factory, first of its kind in whole Asia.

"The Five-Year Plan is indeed a great step forward calculated to yield immense benefit to the country. Added to this the Indian Government has decided to industrialize the country which would render her independent of foreign goods. It was for the achievement of this object that Great Gandhi had introduced an important measure in the shape of Charkha movement."

Untouchability Illegal In India

Mr. A. D. Mani of India last month described as an unsatisfactory presentation of alleged untouchability in India in the report of the Economic and Social Council on World Social Situation. Mr. Mani was speaking in the debate of the General Assembly's Special Committee. He said that there was no untouchability in India because the constitution had made it illegal. He added that Harijans (untouchables) as India Government called them received all opportunities of public life and one representative of the community was an important member of the Central Cabinet. Mr. Mani said that Harijans were represented in various state governments and in all matters of social and economic reform participation of Harijans was invited and ensured.

Yugoslav Goodwill Mission In India

A Yugoslav goodwill mission to India consisting of five leading personalities of Yugoslavia arrived in Delhi last month. The mission is led by Rodoljub Colakovic, Federal Minister for Education and Culture. Other members are Vladimir Simic, speaker of the House of People of Yugoslavia, Lazo Kolisevski, Prime Minister of Republic of Macedonia, Avdo Humo, Deputy Prime Minister of Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Mrs. Vida Tamsic, President of the Yugoslav Women's Association. The mission will spend a month in India meeting important Indian personalities, visiting places of scientific, cultural and industrial importance. Throughout their stay they will be state guests. This is the first goodwill mission to come to India from any European country.

Winners Of Mahavir Chakra

At a special investiture at the Rashtrapati Bhawan in New Delhi last month President Dr. Rajendra Prasad presented Mahavir Chakra to the next of kin of the three officers of the Indian army who died in the defence of Kashmir. The Officers were—Brigadier Mohammed Usman, hero of the battle of Nausheer, Lt. Col. Rai, who stemmed a tide of invaders on Srinagar during the first days of the Kashmir operations and Lt. Col. B. H. Talia who died defending two vital pockets just outside Nausheer. In the course of his speech President Dr. Rajendra Prasad said, "Three officers whose memory we are going to honour belonged to three different communities—Muslim, Hindu and Sikh—and they have shown not only great heroism, devotion in duty and ability in military affairs but also how our army is composed and it fights for the protection of all. I, therefore, have great sense of pride in offering these decorations to their heirs." This is the first time that the President himself awarded Mahavir Chakra.

Glass House For Wheat Rust Research

A glass house for wheat research was opened at the Indian Agricultural Research Institute at Pusa by Dr. P. S. Dashmukh, Minister for Agriculture. The house was built under the co-ordinated wheat rust control scheme of India Government. First of its kind in India so far as equipment and improved research methods are concerned the glass house has cost nearly Rs. 55,000. It will provide for research on wheat rust and for varieties for their resistance to rust in plots. Two more glass houses one in Simla and the other in Nilgiris (Madras) will be constructed during the financial year.

RHODESIA NEWS

(From Our Livingstone Correspondent)

PROPOSALS for the setting up of separate African States in Central Africa, where the more educated Africans could take up senior positions among their own people, were put forward by the Marquis of Graham. He said "I would like to see Black States where the Africans hold sway and other States in which the Africans receive our help."

The Federation of six territories in British East and Central Africa with a total population of twenty-six millions was proposed by the Capricorn African Society. Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, covering an area of about one million square miles. The society is to call a conference of the leaders of all races in the six territories to approve the plan and to consider other more detailed proposals.

Belgian Colonial authorities in Africa are watching for any spread of territories from Kenya.

An indirect reference to the Mau Mau was made by the Lusaka Magistrate, Mr. C. D. G. Harbord, when he sentenced two Africans to four terms of imprisonment for publishing circulars alleging a plot by a European to poison sugar sold to Africans and make them sterile. Mr. Harbord sentenced the principal of the two accused Africans to three years' hard labour (the maximum penalty). They were found after office hours in the duplicating room of the Government Information Office making copies of the statement.

A commemorative issue of silver crown pieces to mark the Rhodes Centenary celebration and the 1943 Exhibition will be made by the Southern Rhodesia Currency Board, it was learned from the latest issue of "Centenary News."

Mr. A. B. Pant had gone to New York on the 5th October, 1952, as a member of the Indian delegation to the current session of the United Nations General Assembly. Mr. Pant has just arrived in Nairobi, and it is not yet known whether he intends to visit this territory—Northern Rhodesia.

MORAL RE-ARMAMENT

New World News Agency, Johannesburg, states

AT New Delhi on December 17 the Grand Cross of the Order of Merit, the highest honour of the German Government, was conferred on Dr. F. N. D. Buchman, founder of Moral Re-Armament, in recognition of his contribution to post-war unity between Germany, France and other countries. Dr. Richter, Counsellor of the German Embassy, in making the award on behalf of President Heuss and the Federal Republic of Germany, said,

"Moral Re-Armament is well known all over the world and has become a most important and influential force not only in the field of religious but in the field of practical politics, international, internal and social. You were the first foreigner who brought Germans again in touch with the world outside the barriers of foreign occupation. This decoration is an expression of our thankfulness, our deep sympathy with your movement, our goodwill to the world and our everlasting gratitude."

Courtesy Stanislaus Osterag, the French Ambassador confirming what Dr. Richter had said, emphasised the significance of the occasion against the background of 4 or 5 centuries of Franco-German animosity. "The effect of MRA on plans and politics after the war has helped our Governments concretely on both sides," he said. "It is evident that if we want peace then an end must come to all this animosity. The basis for union in Europe must be understanding between France and Germany." He referred to the fact that the French Government had awarded Dr. Buchman the Legion of Honour 2 years ago.

The Acting speaker in the Indian Parliament commented on the significance of official representatives of the French and German Governments joining in this ceremony on the soil of India despite some differences in policy between East and West. He said, "Under the leadership of Dr. Buchman we can meet," and expressed the hope that this event would be the inauguration of world peace. The ceremony was attended by Ambassadors and other important dignitaries.

Dr. Buchman is travelling through the Far East with a Moral Re-Armament task force at 180 at the invitation of Governments and other leaders in Ceylon, India, Pakistan, Burma, Thailand, Indonesia and Japan.

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other of the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining; and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, sea expeditions, a chase with blood hounds, and romance. DIPLOMACY FROM GLASS HOUSES

NOVEMBER number of 'The Forum' (Johannesburg) writes: Dr. Malan's trade against India was a diplomatic blunder of memorable size. It was nicely timed for the opening day of the current session of the United Nations and it bore all the marks of full deliberation. To defend South Africa against criticism led by India, the Union Government resolved to adopt the old strategy that attack is the best form of defence; and, child-like, to cry out, "You're another!"

It is a strategy that is bound to fail. The reasons for its failure should have been apparent in advance to anyone with even a limited knowledge of international politics.

For one does not have to claim profound knowledge of the way the world is going to recognize that India to day holds a key position in the balance of power that divides the world. A glance at the globe shows that India lies adjacent to both Russia and China as well as next door to such unsettled countries as Iran and Burma. If India chose in a conflict to side with the East rather than the West, the whole outlook would be gravely altered. At the present time, India is following a careful policy not of neutrality, but of independence of both the great power blocs of West and East. She declines to commit herself to either side, preferring to judge every international issue on its merits.

This may or may not be an admirable policy to pursue amid the tensions of the times, but it is a policy that India does follow and that she is free to follow. In these circumstances both Britain and the United States have adjusted themselves to the fact and taken proper account of it in shaping their own attitudes.

Dr. Malan's blast on the subject of India's internal problems crashes into this international situation with the delicacy of a bull in a china shop. It can have produced nothing but embarrassment and dismay among South Africa's friends abroad.

To make matters worse, Dr. Malan showed himself ignorant about what is actually happening inside India. When India attained her full freedom five years ago, she set about providing herself with the legal framework of a modern state. The new constitution, drafted entirely by Indians, includes a bill of human rights. The legal status of the "untouchable" out-castes was revolutionised. The practice of "untouchability" was abolished and the disabilities formerly attached to it were prohibited by law. The power of the new state has indeed been used to fight against all forms of religious and racial prejudice in India. No doubt things as deep-seated as those prejudices will last a long time. No doubt they are not easily removed by the mere passage of laws against them. But the incontestable fact remains that under Mr. Nehru's wise leadership, India is exerting every effort that a federal Government can make to put in order her own huge, untidy house.

It is true that people who live in glass houses should not throw stones at their neighbours. That is why India has been busy replacing her most exposed glass walls with solid brick. South Africa, on the other hand, especially under the Nationalists, has spent an inordinate amount of energy in extending her glass walls. The world keeps looking through these walls and sending journalists to report on the curious building operations. This is the time Dr. Malan has chosen to pick up a handful of stones and throw them back at India. It is an action that would be easy to understand in a battle among schoolboys. As a method of national defence, as a contribution to international order and security, and as a novel departure in diplomacy, these tactics have nothing to commend them.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 9TH JANUARY, 1951

Change Of Name Suggested

INDIAN OPINION was founded fifty years ago. The necessity for the publication of the paper had arisen then to ventilate the grievances of Indians settled and domiciled in South Africa. These grievances had arisen owing to Indians being discriminated against by the White Government on the basis of their race and colour. Indians, however, who had advanced both educationally and economically claimed equal opportunities with the White man. This was denied to them and discriminatory legislation was passed against them. The fight against such legislation has continued ever since. In the meantime the other communities have made great progress and are now asserting their legitimate rights in this land of their birth. The White Government is averse to conceding those rights and have now made two distinctive groups—the White and the non-White. The policy is to create as many different groups within the non-White groups as possible with the obvious object to divide and rule. Placed under such adverse circumstances the non-Whites have now united into a common front. The question today has become one of White vs. non-White. It is no longer a question between Whites vs. Indians.

In the circumstances the question has arisen whether the name 'Indian Opinion' is not outdated and whether it is not desirable to change the name into one which would embrace all the non-Whites. But even there are Whites too who are strongly opposed to the racial policy of the Government and seek the abolition of the colour bar from the South African legislation and stand for justice for all South Africans. So then it is really not a question of Whites vs. non-Whites but of Justice vs. Injustice—Rights vs. Wrong. It is felt therefore that 'Indian Opinion' should represent that broader outlook and its name should signify that. It is felt that there is a lack of true statesmanship in South Africa and that it would be fitting if the paper founded by Mahatma Gandhi would point the way to that. The view has therefore been expressed that there should be a change in the name of 'Indian Opinion' to suit the present changed circumstances. It is felt by those responsible for conducting the paper that the reading public should be taken into their confidence in this matter and to get to know their number. The question before them is: (1) Whether the present name of the paper should be changed and (2) If it should be changed what should be the new name given to it?

From a purely sentimental point of view many would be averse to changing the present name. But it is desirable that much importance should not be attached to sentiment and that the question should be viewed from a broader aspect. We would request the reading public to give their views on the matter within one month from the date of this issue. The management will try to respect the wish of the majority but it will be solely in their discretion to act as they deem fit.

One of the new names already suggested is 'The Statesman.'

The Plight Of Indians

THE following letter appears in the 'Rand Daily Mail' dated January 1.

Sir,—The Kingdome Town Council's notice in recommending to the Land Tenure Advisory Board that Kingdome be made an area for European occupation only, and that all Asiatic residents should cease doing business and living in Kingdome has come as a deep shock to many European residents of the town. It is a wicked plan, completely unworthy of Kingdome, and one which, if successfully carried out, would throw 700 Asiatic men, women and children on to the streets.

These people live on a usually modest income derived from trading with Europeans (they are not allowed to trade in the locations) and have been good and peaceful citizens and taxpayers of the town since republican days.

It is incredible that not one member of the Council, apparently, raised his voice in protest against this scheme. Many European taxpayers, however, are furious that their Town Council should have so much as suggested it. It is an action like this—discrimination on purely racial grounds—which gives South Africa such a bad name overseas. It is not Christian and undemocratic. —C. R. S. FACHEB

The plight of Indians in the Union has no bounds. Indians in Pretoria, Springs and other towns too, we understand, are faced with a similar situation. In the circumstances we have no doubt we are voicing the sentiments of the Indian community in saying how very grateful we are for this voice of sympathy and justice coming from a true Christian. It is like a ray of light amidst the encircling gloom. Unless the volume of the voice grows rapidly the Indians and the non-Europeans will undoubtedly suffer but no one knows what will become of South Africa herself. We are tempted to quote here from a letter we have received from a distinguished European friend the following words: "For the sake of the Europeans as well as for the non-Europeans I can only hope and pray that justice may be done. If not, we Europeans will ultimately suffer more than you of other races in this country."

It is high time for those Indians who are still apathetic and who are carefully guarding their material wealth while others are suffering, to take a lesson from these happenings. However much they may guard it their material wealth will slip away unknowingly. What will remain with them is their manhood. That will live still eternally. If they have not that they will die like worms and nobody will take any notice of them. That is therefore the greatest wealth and the Government has given them a unique opportunity to prove their worth. Are they going to have faith in God and obey His law or live as slaves of the tyrant. They should rather die at the hands of the tyrant than to surrender to his will and live an ignominious life. God alone is our Saviour and we must dedicate our all unto Him. That is the only way we all have to take. The sooner we realize it the better for us and for all.

Catholic Church Shows The Way

ALL men of goodwill and, in particular, the Christians in all parts of the world will receive with joyful gratitude the news of the appointment of Monsignor Emmanuel Mbatia as Bishop of Leribe. This is the first occasion that an African has been elevated to the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church and an important essential step marks an important turning-point in the history of the Christian Church in Africa south of the equator.

The appointment is an eloquent recognition of the fact that the African, like every other human being created by God, is as devoted to the service of his Creator as any other human being. In a country dominated by wicked racial ideas, the need was very great for the Christian Church to witness for the African in this regard.

But a particularly gratifying aspect of the appointment is that once more the Roman Catholic Church has taken the courageous stand of asserting its unshakable belief in the brotherhood of Man and in the common fatherhood of God. It always seemed strange that in South Africa the Christian Church more often than not temporized when it came to declaring openly for this principle. The Catholic Church has taken a clear and unambiguous stand and this should make it clear to all the world where the Church stands—for it is one thing to declare principles and in our experience it is quite another thing to practice them in dealing with the man of colour.

We speak for every South African of goodwill, regardless of creed and colour when we warmly congratulate the Catholic Church on its decision. And while doing this, we should at the same time warmly congratulate Monsignor Mbatia on the distinguished service he has given to the Church and which has enabled him to demonstrate that the people from whom he comes are as good children of the Creator as any found on earth. Monsignor Mbatia has won distinguished honour for the African people as a whole and the Roman Catholic Church, by recognizing his rare abilities, has won for itself a proud place in the hearts of very many Africans—even outside the Church.

NOTES

A WARNING TO THOSE WHO TRAVEL FROM ONE PROVINCE TO ANOTHER

WE wish to sound a note of warning to all Indians who enter one Province of the Union from another on any account not to do so without acquiring a permit from the Immigration Department. For if they do and are caught they will be running the risk of being locked up in prison immediately and kept there for one night and banished to the next day before the Magistrate who is empowered to sentence any such person being convicted to a maximum period of three months' imprisonment without an option of a fine. The authorities are so strict that they do not even allow such a person to be released on bail. The practice of examining passengers travelling by train on border towns, whether they hold a permit of entry or not has been done away with for a considerably long time, and no violence is kept on those travelling by road. But the law is still there and is being over-strictly enforced under the present Government who is determined to adopt every possible means to control the Indians and, on the slightest pretext, to get them out of the country. Nobody should therefore take any risk unless he or she does it intentionally to defy the law and is fully prepared to suffer the consequences.

Government Makes Another Mistake

The decision to reject the idea of the United Nations Commission on Apartheid coming to investigate conditions on the spot is a deplorable and unstatesmanlike blunder on the part of the Government. Not so very long ago the Union Government told the United Nations that it deplores colour discrimination. Very many people in this country raised their eyebrows sceptically when they read this. But once the United Nations had decided to come and find out the truth for itself, if South Africa had nothing to hide, it should have allowed the commission to come. As things stand, nobody with intelligence will believe the blarney the Government says at UNO on its good intentions towards the map of colour when it cannot allow that good to be subjected to public scrutiny. The truth which the Government seeks to hide is that there are very many things which the commission will bring to light which have not yet been now been published. For, in all seriousness the non-European have been very modest in stating their case against racial oppression. Their strongest indictments of apartheid have been little more than moderate statements.

Greater South Africa

In the storm of racial conflict which now rages in South Africa the news report from Johannesburg describing the guests at the Bishop of Johannesburg's children's Christmas party was a ray of light which once more justified the hopes, the sacrifices and the struggles of those who labour for a South Africa where merit alone, and not colour, will be the criterion by which to assess the value of a man. According to the news reports, the Bishop invited the children of all the Anglican clergy in his diocese regardless of colour, to a Christmas party. African and European children played freely, without inhibitions on the towns. A young African lady, whose new shoes were an embarrassment to her had on costume whites over in disposing decorum of them and running about freely in the bare feet Nature gave her. The picture of the Bishop's party is a picture of the Greater South Africa for which all men of goodwill work. The destiny of South Africa lies along the path where no man shall be penalised for having been created dark, where men of all races shall be bound together by a common love for their country and a mutual regard for each other's contributions to its greatness. When that time comes man shall banish racial hatred from his heart. The Bishop's little guests showed what a happy country ours will be when that state of affairs is reached.

distribution, nor will it associate with any other committee in South Africa.

The Christian Action Committee of London, which holds the money, is an inter-denominational group of churchmen headed by Canon John Quilliam, the Chancellor of St. Paul's.

The idea of the fund arose when people who read of the racial troubles in South Africa sent money to newspapers and periodicals in Britain to be used to help any victims. Through the committee, churches collected money for the same purpose from their congregations, and finally the funds collected by the newspapers and the churches were put together in the relief fund to be administered by the Christian Action Committee, through the now defunct group in South Africa.

Mr. Blaxall said there was sufficient money in the fund at present, but it was by no means a large sum.

VICTIMS OF RACIAL DISTURBANCES

TO GET AID FROM OVERSEAS

PEOPLE suffering in any way through no cause of their own, whether European or non-European, from the results of past or possible future racial disturbances in the Union, will be helped financially by a fund organised by the Christian Action Committee of London. It was announced last week by the Rev. A. W. Dixall, secretary of the Christian Council of South Africa. This fund will take money from overseas sources only, and no donations will be solicited or accepted in South Africa. The distribution of the relief funds will, however, be administered by a group of people connected with churches in the Union and with welfare and aid societies.

M. Alan Paton has agreed to be chairman of the group, and a preliminary meeting attended by representatives of the Society of Friends, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the Church of the Province (Anglican), and other such bodies was held recently.

Mr. Blaxall said the groups that will be to approach directly or circulate ministers of religion and social welfare bodies, and ask them to collate information about people adversely affected by racial disturbances.

Relief will most likely be given to families of non-European whose heads or other wage-earners lose jobs because of strikes or other such action, or who are killed or wounded in disturbances.

The group will decide whether such injuries or loss of work are due to direct participation in disturbances by those affected, but a principle is that children or wives of men directly involved cannot be held responsible for such action.

Europeans suffering as a result of disturbances will also receive aid if their suffering is no fault of their own.

Mr. Blaxall said the group had already begun its task, and had inquired through church ministers about possible help to riot victims. It had approached the Mayor of Port Elizabeth to ask if people who had benefited from his fund needed further help.

On no account will the group turn over any money to political or semi-political organisations for

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a climax with each other of the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining, and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with bloodhounds and romance. WESTERN CIVILISATION V—BACK FROM BARBARISM

(C. W. M. GELL)

IN the last article we discussed the revitalisation of Christianity by a new emphasis on inner spirituality. Great as would be the new potentiality of such Christianity within the national compartments of our Western culture, it would have an immense significance beyond.

For, as a result of the aggression of the West and its conquest of land, sea and air, the world has become physically one. In the context of this physical unity, exclusive national and racial cultures have become dangerous anomalies. But all efforts to evolve a world political unity are bound to fail until there is a common spiritual approach to the problem. This is not to advocate a syncretic religion; but rather, a cross-fertilisation of existing religions. So that each religious tradition, while retaining its individuality, distinctive doctrines and characteristic practices, will become aware of its spiritual fellowship with the other great traditions and will recognise that the many religions are all dialects of the one language of the human spirit, which reflects the Spirit of God. For beneath the multiplicity of forms the quest is one. But the practice of this sanatana dharma—the higher spirituality—is not possible when the existing religious traditions are mutually exclusive. Here again, we can learn from the spiritual toleration practised through the ages by the indigenous religions of India. We need in abridgement what Radhakrishnan has called "the strange abridgement of the Semitic faiths—Christianity, Judaism and Islam—that the acceptance of a particular religious metaphysics is necessary for salvation, and non-acceptance thereof is a firm and everlasting eternal punishment in hell." The intolerance of those who served a jealous God and sought to work His will by force is written in letters of blood throughout human history. It is practised today by those who imagine themselves to be the agents of an inexorable dialectic of history. Tolerance, like all forms of one-sidedness, is barbaric. The civilized man recognises that he is not alone possessed of the truth and, if a Christian, appeals to the verdict of St. Augustine:

"That which is called the Christian religion existed among the ancients and never did not exist from the beginning of the human race until Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion began to be called Christianity."

In this spirit of tolerance towards the outward forms of all religions and respect for their inner motives, it will be possible for the devout of all the great spiritual traditions to work together from their very diverse starting-points for the coming of what Christians call the Kingdom of God. World peace or effective world government, are not possible without a foundation in a world spirituality.

But before this universal ethic can be practised, there has to be performed that task in which, above all others, our generation has failed. Even an age to which the gift of fresh spiritual insight is not given, can draw upon the vast spiritual storehouse of the religious experience of the centuries, provided that it is willing to think out the rational interpretation of that experience in the language of its own time and then to work out its practical application to contemporary problems. Religious experience, of which the physical vision is the heart, remains a mere dream (except for those rare souls to whom it comes) until it has been interpreted by the intellect and practised by the will. Interpretation is the function of philosophy and its practice is ethics; the two together constitute the essential activity of civilisation. The particular and tragic failure of our contemporary Western culture has been its inability, in terms both of time and inclination, to submit to the rigorous mental discipline and conscious self-control which this process demands.

Mankind's Only Hope

As an instance of this, we may briefly consider the conception, mentioned above, of the Kingdom of God. The idea in its modern form originated with Jesus, who behaved in its intention as a supernatural event. Time has falsified the dogmatic setting of this immense eschatological hope, but not its spiritual significance. It remains something to be realised, not as an act of God (as Jesus believed), but by our own devoted efforts to live out the gospel of love which he taught and practised to the end. To us is given a great opportunity to recapture the immediacy and urgency which inspired the early Church. Marked today must either realise the Kingdom of God or perish. Where the first believers set their hope solely on the Kingdom of God in expectation of the end of the world, we must do it in expectation of the end of the human race. If the Spirit of God cannot prevail over the spirit of the world, we shall shortly abuse our scientific discoveries to destroy mankind. But the Spirit of God cannot conquer the world until it has won its victory in our hearts. This it can only do when we have made the experience of Jesus our own by meditation and thought, and thus learnt to live out his ethic in our lives. To paraphrase Shelley, we have "... to think, till thought creates from its own wreck the thing it contemplates."

The final stage in the evolution of civilisation is ethics; from religion interpreted by philosophy to its practice in action. This is clearly something very different from mere dynamism or unreflective activity. Ethics is the ordering of our whole lives, both in general principles and daily detail, by conscious allegiance to the ideals which have come down to us through the medium of thought from the primal spiritual consciousness.

Defects

The first purpose of these articles has been to direct attention to the central defects of Western civilisation, of which the greatest are misapplication of energy and lack of thought. It would satisfy my object if I were to attempt to impose my solution, even if I were vain enough to think that I had one. But I will briefly refer to Schweitzer's ethic of "reverence for life" which, I believe, points our way.

This is founded on the realisation that man is will-to-live, living in a world of living creatures which also will to live. But unlike the animals, man, being endowed with reason and volition, is able partly to free himself from the natural, predatory cycle of will-to-live preying upon will-to-live. What he needs is a compelling moral principle, which Schweitzer discovered after long search in the phrase Reverence for Life. This recognises that all creatures share with man the mystery of being alive and therefore have an equal right to continued existence—since we cannot presume to read the cosmic purpose, in fulfilment of which we and they were created. Thus, ethics becomes the recognition that it is good to maintain and further life, bad to damage and destroy it. Reverence for life wonders, indeed, why life can only be maintained at the expense of other life. It regards this painful conundrum as putting us under the obligation of taking life only under the pressure of necessity—either for food or in self defence—and of conducting ourselves towards all forms of life as one who owes a debt for the lives he has had to end. At no stage may the individual escape his personal responsibility for decisions in regard to living things, whether fellow-men, animals, insects or plants. Individual ethics are absolute as against social or national ethics; and no external authority may ever relieve or mitigate our individual responsibility. The ethic of reverence for life is not merely a negative one of refraining from doing harm (as the Indian doctrine of ahimsa sometimes appears), it enjoins the greatest possible activity in the promotion of life and the happiness of life and in the alleviation of all forms of suffering and distress. With the Buddhist, Schweitzer would say: "As long as living creatures suffer, there is no possibility of joy for the man who is full of compassion."

Essence Of Civilisation

Schweitzer calls his ethic "ethical mysticism" since it combines serviceable activity in the world of sense with the spiritual experience of God as Will of Love from which it derives its inspiration. It is the ethic of love widened into universality and, therefore, an ethical expression of the teaching of Jesus in the language of our time. It calls each one of us to be an active warrior for the coming of the Kingdom. As Schweitzer sees it:

"The essence of civilisation consists in this, that the reverence for life which is my will to live struggling for recognition does get stronger and stronger in individuals and mankind."

We so often hear the present crisis in the world described as a struggle between Democracy and Communism. But these are only the outward forms. The real tension is within our souls. Democracy is a barren thing indeed, unless the mentality of committee is transformed into a spirit of fellowship by great ideals commonly held and plain tasks commonly envisaged. The real struggle lies, as Radhakrishnan insists, "between empiric and material values, supported by organised religions and provincial patriotism, and the sovereignty of spiritual ideals..." A reborn living faith in spiritual values is the deepest need of our lives. Only religion which demands as its first principle individual change, the substitution of the divine for the dark image in the soul, can create that new heart in the peoples.

The great heresies of our times are the beliefs that man is merely a political or a social or an economic animal, and that his troubles can be solved by changing the hierarchy of power or by developing his control of nature

Some of these external remedies may be necessary to create the conditions in which civilisation may become possible.

But, finally and fundamentally, man is a fragment of spiritual life whose serious business is religion, of which philosophy is the ward and ethics the deed. There can be no civilisation unless it is based on this fact. Its two foundations are the recognition that the whole possibility of civilisation depends on the vision, thought and will of individual men; and that, therefore, its price is constant vigilance in defence of the ideal of spiritual and intellectual independence, both against the tyranny of human authority as represented by Church, State or Society and against the tyranny of the material life which presses so hard upon us today. We Westerners—and not we alone—have to learn again to respect every individual personality as a reflection of the image of God; and each in his own life to develop the full possibilities of that personality by seeking God intuitively, interpreting Him rationally, and pursuing His Will ethically. This is the pattern of the civilized life, whether Western or Eastern, Christian, Hindu, Buddhist or Muslim.

of the Union, was born on the 29th June, 1918. He was educated in Johannesburg, Cape Town (Diocesan College), Switzerland and England (Winchester and Balliol). He joined Colonial Service at the end of 1940 and was posted to Basutoland early in 1941 as Assistant District Officer. In 1945 he was seconded to the office of the High Commissioner, Victoria and Cape Town. In 1946 he served as Private Secretary in the High Commissioner Sir Evelyn Baring. In 1947 he got married to Miss Cynthia Ashley Cooper (daughter of Sir Patrick Ashley Cooper, Governor of Hudson's Bay Company and director of the Bank of England. The same year he returned to Basutoland. In June 1949 he went to England for a Devonshire course at London University, lasting nearly a year. He returned to Basutoland as Judicial Commissioner (with court hearing appeal cases from the Paramount Chief's courts.) In 1951 he met Mahatma Gandhi and began a deep study of Mahatma Gandhi's literature. In 1952 he resigned from Colonial service in order to assist in realising Gandhi's political ideals in South Africa. He is a father of two sons aged five and three and has taken up farming at Basutoland. His residential address is Riverside Farm, Box 77, Maseru, Basutoland.

THE DEFIANCE CAMPAIGN

ACTIVITIES ABROAD

(From a letter received by an esteemed correspondent in Johannesburg)

AMERICAN newspapers featured reports of the resistance band led by Mr. Patrick Duncan and Mr. Mahatma Gandhi at Garmiston last month.

In Chicago there is growing interest in the Union's racial policies. Roosevelt College organised a special conference on the subject in concert with four other bodies active in race relations. Dr. Edward J. Sparling, president of the college, was in the chair at one session and Dr. Homer Jack, the well-known Unitarian pastor, at another. Professor H. K. Matthews of Fort Hare made a deep impression with his discourse, as he has done in all his addresses in the United States.

In New York, a new group has recently been formed under the name of "Americans for South African Resistance." One of its objects is to collect money for the resistance campaign. The Rev. Michael Scott has also been in touch with these and similar activities abroad.

Roosevelt College was founded a few years ago in protest against the colour bar introduced into another Chicago college. It has been a great success, attracting many famous lecturers.

Mr. Patrick Duncan Admiral

(Commenting on the Garmiston band of resisters, the conservative British weekly, 'The Economist' says: "Few people outside South Africa can fail to admire the courage shown by Mr. Patrick Duncan and others in courting arrest at the hands of Dr. Malan's Government. The name of his father, Sir Patrick

Mr. Patrick Duncan

Duncan, is one to conjure with in the Union; he was widely and sincerely respected among all races. Now his son has associated himself as a European with the movement of defiance against the policy of apartheid. No one can pretend that this decision and the motives behind it have anything whatsoever to do with communalism. What effect will it have? So far, the action of this small group of seven Europeans has been coolly received in public, even on the United Party side. . . . Yet a large number of white South Africans are known to sympathise in private with the defiance campaign; and no employers have yet penalised any Africans for taking part in it. Mr. Duncan and his associates have given a lead which some of their countrymen may yet follow.

[Mr. Patrick Baker Duncan, son of the late Sir Patrick Duncan, first South African to become the Governor-General

UN FIGHTS PREJUDICE

THE United Nations last month took further important steps in its struggle to secure racial equality all over the world. The General Assembly adopted a resolution condemning all forms of racial discrimination. The resolution and the debate arose largely from the report of the special committee on colonies. This report contains a notable section on race relations.

The report declares that effective means of eliminating race prejudice and of establishing racial equality should be sought by all States in the form of laws and administrative practices. In addition enlightened public opinion should be encouraged by education. The report points out that, with the evolution of society, so-called "protective legislation," originally intended to shelter indigenous people, may become unnecessary and even degenerate into discrimination. This danger occurs particularly when members of a "protected community," such as Africans, have come to share the general life of other elements in society.

The Committee on Colonies expressed the opinion that it is highly desirable to abolish racial discrimination. This, it says, is now a matter of urgency because, with the quicker pace of economic and social development and the increasing contact between all races, forms of discrimination that were perhaps small in their effects on a largely immobile and isolated community may rapidly become sources of real hardship and legitimately bitter grievance. The Committee regards legislation as an important means of breaking down prejudice.

This latter conclusion is very significant. It means that UN has virtually endorsed the view held by the best sociologists that it is possible to reduce common prejudice by law. This view is based on the experience of New York, Illinois, Massachusetts and several other American States which have passed laws prohibiting racial discrimination in public or private employment and in the use of publicly provided amenities of all kinds.

The Committee on Colonies included among its members the colonial powers and also India, Pakistan, Indonesia, Egypt and Brazil.

An attempt to make this a permanent committee of UN was defeated, but the committee was set up for another three years, Britain promising to cooperate with it for that period, but no longer.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

PLAN TO BAN CONGRESS

By JORDAN K. NGURANE

THERE is reason to believe that at any time now the Malan Government might declare the African National Congress an illegal body under the Suppression of Communism Act.

The Government Press continues its distorted interpretation of Congress policies. The idea behind all this is to create the impression in the public mind that the Congress is riddled with Communists and that drastic action is therefore justified.

But the facts of the situation indicate plainly that the African National Congress is not and has never been a Communist or, for that matter, Left Wing organisation.

It was founded in 1912 by the late Dr. Pixley ka I. Seme. The late Dr. John L. Dube was its first president-general. Its aims were to weld together the African peoples of the Union into one political and cultural bloc for purposes of self-preservation. Secondly, it was launched to create a situation in the body politic of the country where the African would be recognised and accepted as a citizen like every other South African.

To start with, it put forward the African case by resort to petitions, deputations, representations and appeals to England under the mistaken view that South Africa's membership of the Commonwealth meant that the Queen of England could influence the trend of Union legislation. Quite unmistakably, it was a body composed of moderates all along the line.

After the failure of the deputations to England—that was during the early twenties—the African National Congress seriously committed itself to active collaboration with the liberals. But then, liberalism at the time accepted the status quo and tended to frown violently on anything which inclined to what was then called 'extremism'.

It was partly to revolt against this that during the middle twenties the African people elected the late Mr. J. T. Gumede as their spokesman Number One. In some ways Mr. Gumede was a very impressive man. Unlike his predecessors in office, Moscow cultivated a very strong liking for him—with the result that he was invited to Russia. When he reached the country of the Soviets he was treated, in his own words, "as though he was the Prime Minister of the Union."

He was aflame with love for the Soviet system when he returned to this country. So serious was his love that he went to Bloemfontein where he harangued the Congress delegates on the virtues of Russian Socialism. I have never come across satisfactory evidence to show that Mr. Gumede was a Communist. On the other hand he never concealed his admiration for the things he saw in Russia during his guided and planned tour of the Soviets.

The reactions of the Congress conference were prompt and characteristic: a vote of no confidence in him was moved and carried. After that Moscow gave up the job of trying to monkey about directly with the leadership of the African National Congress.

A new tactic was tried. Unemployed Africans were sent from the Union to Leningrad and Moscow for advanced training in Communism. When these returned they made no special bid to lead the masses. Like most good Africans, they joined the African National Congress and a few of them were on and off elected to the executive committee of this body. In the meantime, of course, the Communist Party of South Africa had been brought into being. They spent most of their time as functionaries of the party, then as active Congressmen.

During this time Congress was trying, under the impact of the All-African Convention, to wear itself from the influence of its liberal guides.

Then came World War II. The moderate leaders of Congress decided not to embarrass the Government—in the words of an unfortunate Native Representative Council proponent. The Communists, would have nothing to do with an imperialist war.

But when Hitler invaded the Soviet, and Stalin was forced to fight, the local Communists immediately rallied behind Smuts and fought for democracy and liberation.

Events in the outside world towards the end of the war had already made a deep impression on the African people. Every where the demand was made that a new and determined bid should be made to enable the African to emerge recognised as a citizen from the war. But the Congress leaders of the time were inseparably wedded to their policy of not embarrassing the Government. As a result, Mr. Paul R. Maseke, who once held a seat on the now defunct Native Representative Council, formed what he called the African Democratic Party. Though it was a movement led by Africans it had no colour bar. Everybody could be a member, regardless of colour.

At the same time a movement of revolt was going on inside the African National Congress itself. This had its origin in the spirit of nationalism which had then taken firm root in the hearts of the African people. It led to the formation of the Congress Youth League, a militant and anti-Communist band of young men and women who worked untiringly to save Congress from falling under Communist domination.

A protracted cold war was fought over this issue and ended with the triumph of the League. Congress became a militant organisation and spurred Marzian violence in favour of Gandhi as satyagraha. From then onwards the road was clear for the defiance campaign which has driven the Government to the extreme of planning to ban the African National Congress.

The world needs to know that if and when the African National Congress is banned, it will, not be because it is under Communist influence. It will be because the Congress has emerged as the only single factor strong enough to bring apartheid toppling to the ground.

The persecution of Congress leaders as well as the proposed ban are not blows at a subversive movement for nowhere has the case for subversion been established. They are the desperate blows of a desperate band of politicians against the only body which has shown that it has the strength, the determination, the courage and the following to make unmaking of apartheid. That is the crime that the African National Congress has committed. It is a crime which can never be tolerated in apartheid philosophy.

It is particularly unpardonable now, after Congress has shown that it has the strength not only to crush apartheid but also to influence the course of events in the general elections next year. It is no secret that the African National Congress, like every democratic body, is vitally interested in the outcome of the elections. If Congress has its way, it would certainly take every lawful precaution to ensure that the Malanites were not returned to power. But Congress's interest would not end there. African Congressmen want to make South Africa the land of the free; where Christ's Golden Rule applies instead of the satanic creed of apartheid which preaches racial hatred and tyranny.

A CIVILIZATION IN DECAY

By WILFRED WELLOCK

The following is one of a series of articles the author has written on "The Supreme Crisis Of Our Civilisation."

CIVILIZATION'S count time in rise, which blossoms and decays. Life is humbly, and that progressive and expansive. It bursts into brilliance in periods of vision, contrasts and fades, and even perishes when vision fails; and vision does sometimes fail. It is a fact of some significance that all Western civilisations have been short-lived. Only Eastern civilisations, like the Chinese and the Indian, have survived three millenniums. No outstanding vision has inspired Western civilisation for several centuries and such as there have been are now exhausted. A new creative era lies within our reach, but there is no certainty that it will come to birth. One genius has run to consummation production and consumption, and to power in order to ensure these. Our leadership is over death and destruction, not over life. We have reanimated the era of world economics and world wars, and devised the means of world destruction. But we lack the power to save us from that fate, which may be nearer than we dream. Is vision, then, to fail? That is the only question that now matters.

A Change in Men And Society

As a result of the changes wrought by the Industrial Revolution on the nature of man and of society, the transference, by the compulsion of starvation, of craft workers from well-integrated villages to bleak soul-less towers, to lead power-driven machines to giant new factories, was transference from a life which yielded numerous social and spiritual values and thus had meaning, to one which had neither meaning nor a vestige of social or spiritual significance; from a status which embraced personal responsibility, creative opportunity, vocational and social value, independence and local standing, to a condition of abject dependence upon the will of a rich and powerful employer whose primary aim was profitably to make money.

In due course, as competition for world markets grew, it became the practice to cheapen production by means of increased specialization. This ultimately led to the techniques of the assembling line, and the claim of repetitive machines, when the percentage of repetitive labour in some industries reached as high as 95 per cent.

This Spiritual Atrocity

This condition is the negation of everything which has to do with human dignity and the culture of the spirit: it is in fact the negation of spiritual man, man the creature made in the image of God. In this set up intelligence is a disability, a hindrance to production, as it stimulates a sense of frustration, destroys all interest in one's work and thus lowers production, whence all manner of diversions have to be introduced in order to condition people to function at the sub-human level. Increasingly scientists are being introduced for this very purpose; to such degradation but modern science work.

Neither religion nor culture has protested against this spiritual atrocity. Owing to the dexterity by which the new materialism was clothed with the sanctity of religion, a fatal blind-spot has developed in regard to it which even today obscures some of its worst consequences. The glorification of riches, of social status and national power has resulted in a condition of social and spiritual impoverishment, irresponsibility and weakening moral and social sensitivity which is visibly undermining the fabric of our civilization. The trans-forming of once responsible, well-integrated persons, craftsmen with social obligations and responsibilities, into mechanized robots has caused work for the great majority to have no other significance than that of earning money. We thus arrive at a cash-based, materialistic civilization—a society of fragmented persons who live largely on mass-excitements and spectacles and expect to satisfy all their needs by means of money. In this spiritually barren existence religion has no meaning and the church only a perfunctory mission.

Need we wonder that pillaging among the workers, and conscienceless charging of high prices in the upper reaches of society are rampant, and are growing? The course of this evil is the loss of connection between a man's work and his soul. Lack of responsibility in work ends in lack of responsibility in morals. Indeed we are rapidly producing an amoral civilization, its end will be near unless we reverse many of its processes.

Neo-Materialism Of Our Age

To sum up, the root problem of our age is spiritual, and arises from the rapidly increasing emphasis that has been placed on material values during the advance of the Industrial Revolution, which has resulted in the almost complete identification of human well-being or the good life with maximum consumption of goods and services.

In the West, greed and the love of riches and material abundance, which from the first have been the primary motives behind capitalism, have at last penetrated every section of society. They have neutralized the idealism of the early socialists—the men who stood for a qualitative civilization—and through Marx have passed on the incubus of materialism to Communism. Today a devouring materialism is ravaging the earth's resources at a greater rate than they are being replenished, either by maintaining the earth's fertility or by discovery and invention.

Devouring Earth's Resources

In the London 'Times' (17-8-49), an article on "The Wastage of Raw Materials" drew attention to the urgent need for their conservation, and quoted Dr. R. P. Loussee, F.R.S., at a meeting of the British Association, as follows:

"Man is now making vast rends upon capital resources. It has been stated that more minerals have been taken out of the ground in the U.S. since 1900 than from the whole world during the whole of previous history."

The article also stated that the American Association was told the year before that

"by the end of 1947 the cumulative production of coal during all past human history amounted to approximately 81,000 million metric tons. Of this, 62,000 millions have been mined and consumed since 1900."

The U.S. uses more iron and steel, more petrol, more newspaper, and more rubber, than all the rest of the world put together. She now imports all these raw materials and over eighty others, having largely exhausted her own supplies. Indeed 'Time' (31-15-51) declared:

"In many ways the U.S., once the owner of seemingly inexhaustible natural treasure, was in danger of becoming a have-not nation."

And what is the goal of Western civilization? Is it to reach America's standards of living?

Whither Mankind?

Almost throughout the West it appears to be taken for granted that the real issue today is the struggle for supremacy between the Western or American "way of life" and Communism. This is a tragic misunderstanding of the times, and a world war fought on that issue would be the greatest calamity imaginable. It is an entirely unreal issue, as both these "ways of life" rest on power for the achievement of the highest possible standards of material living. The real difference between them is as to who shall distribute the national wealth and on what principle. As the conflict between these two ideologies deepens, the freedom of democracy visibly weakens.

From that impasse there is no escape other than that of accepting the guidance of spiritual values and principles. The new materialism, so far from satisfying basic human needs, is producing a spirit of restlessness, and nowhere more strikingly than in the U.S. In the realm of appetites and indulgences there is no end to the multiplication of wants, while the more one has the more restless one becomes.

It is the nature of our life, due to modern industrialism, that is wrong, and it is wrong because it does not conform with man's spiritual needs, that forgotten better part of his nature. When the main motive of labour and industry is switched from satisfying self-expression to money-making, man becomes machines and societies competitive gladiatorial associations that live on excitements which they miscall sport and on self-indulgences, which they call fun.

A Civilization In Decay

Ours is a civilization in decay. It has become so outworn and unstable that growing fear is shaking its very foundations. If the decay is to be arrested, many of the spiritual rights and values that have been lost during the course of the Industrial Revolution must be restored. This will involve major changes in our economy, in our social, political and industrial organization and techniques; indeed in our entire way of life.

PAKISTAN'S CONSTITUTION

It is feared that the framing of Pakistan's constitution may be a source of much internal argument and dissension, for it is a matter on which opinion and emotion are very strong indeed. On the one side are those arguing that the constitution should be "Islamic" and on the other, those who say that there is no such thing and that the constitution of the country, while inspired by Quranic morality, should be devised in the light of present day needs and present day thinking. On this issue there has already been newspaper controversy and recently, Mr. A. K. Brohi, Advocate-General of Sind and a well-known lawyer and scholar, published convincing articles to show that any constitution which is based on the principles of freedom, equality and justice, is compatible with the tenets of Islam. Others took up the cudgels against him, but it was not difficult to see that Mr. Brohi got the better of the argument and soon he himself is a devout Muslim and well-versed in Islamic learning, the victory was an important one for the Government which is believed to favour a constitution conceived on what may perhaps be called modern lines.

Nevertheless, those who clamour for a rigidly derived "Islamic" state, are vociferous and active. Generally speaking, the leaders in this movement are not intellectually well equipped to carry on their campaign, but as they address themselves to the narrow and ignorant, their own lack of grasp and scholarly deficiencies do not matter when agitating among their own followers. Still, an exception must be made in the case of Maulana Mahdoodi who is prominent in this affair and is generally recognised to be a man of considerable ability and knowledge.

Controversy on these matters generally appeals more to sentiment than to reason and it is to be hoped that when the time comes for public consideration on the draft constitution, dispute will be calm. There are some who feel that the matter could well be deferred until the Government finally overcomes its economic problems, but on the other hand, so much time has already elapsed that prolonged delay could only give rise to the accusation that those now in power are seeking to extend their control of affairs

Amid these matters of public concern, the development of the country and its resources proceeds. In the Punjab, the Thal area, hitherto a desert waste, has been handed over to a Government-promoted, but autonomous body, the Thal Development Authority. Under the auspices of this body, the land is being reclaimed, levelled, cleared and put to the cultivation of grain, cotton and sugar cane. Landless people are being re-settled and given houses to live in, seed to sow and implements to use. The Authority is placing large orders for tractors, ploughs and irrigation plant. With the assistance of FAO experts, a considerable area has already been brought into profitable use and in course of a few years, the Thal area will produce a large volume of natural wealth. The sugarcane will be processed at the conventionally situated and newly installed factory at Mardan. This factory is the largest in Asia and has been erected since the partition. Pakistan has always been obliged to spend a considerable amount of foreign exchange every year on the import of sugar, and it is perfectly feasible for Pakistan to grow and manufacture its own requirements of this foodstuff.

Oil prospecting is also being carried on, both in East to West Pakistan, by two major oil companies which, between them, are spending something in the order of ten crores of Pakistan rupees on these investigations. The prospects are described by well-informed people as "fairly good." So far, one or two new producing wells have been brought in in areas already proved, such as at the Attock Oil Company's field, but there has also been an interesting strike of natural gas at Boghi in Baluchistan. A substantial discovery of oil would change the face of the country, especially since it has no satisfactory coal resources of its own.

The passing reference to the cricket matches between India and Pakistan, deserves further mention, for it must be a satisfaction to everyone that this year Pakistan sent a team to India to play five Test matches, as well as games against other representative sides. Having defeated the English touring team last year, Pakistan entered the Imperial Cricket Conference on the proposal of India which is also something pleasant to observe.

The Pakistan team has done well in India, with an innings victory in one Test match, defeats in two more and one drawn. The fifth match is now going on in Calcutta with the honours so far evenly shared. The Pakistan side is young and perhaps a little overwhelmed by the importance of the occasion. That is something they will grow out of. Meanwhile, they have shown that their standard of play is high and among them are some cricketers who, in a few years, are likely to acquire distinction on many a field. Moreover, the seventeen year old schoolboy, has been amazing runs during the present tour and must be considered a prodigy. The best cricket prophet a great wicketing career for him.

SPORT IN INDIA

INDIA LEADS IN HOCKEY

If in one sport India is on the top of the world, that is hockey or more technically, field hockey according to Olympic nomenclature.

Ever since India's maiden appearance in the Amsterdam World Olympiad of 1928, culminating in her overwhelming, run away triumph over all and sundry, India has had no occasion to look back. Not only has her sequence of magnificent victories in successive Olympiads not been broken but not the slightest hint of a threat has been offered from any quarters. Like a great tidal wave India has swept all opposition; even the expected challenge from Pakistan, "a chip of the old block," as it were, in terms of technique and style was not forthcoming in the 1948 London Olympiad and the Helsinki meet of 1952.

Perhaps the analogy of a tidal wave in an effort to convey India's hockey supremacy is not appropriate. For India's strength lies in artistic stick work bordering on jugglery but at amazing speed, deft passes and perfect understanding—a style modelled on the "wizard" Dhyan Chand, the greatest hockey genius the world has ever seen. Thus India's strength is akin more to the unique fencing skill of a D'Artagnan than the "brute" force employed by a Samson in overpowering the proverbial lion.

Cricket's Growing Popularity

It is however the British game of cricket that probably enjoys the greatest popularity in India. Thousands flock to the game and millions listen into running commentaries on it. The youngest member among the cricketing nations, until Pakistan's entry recently, India in 21 years of international cricket have had M.C.C. (England), the West Indies, Pakistan, besides many other representative teams on Indian soil and have toured England four times and Australia once for what is known as "Test" cricket. Although India has produced stalwarts in the game like Ranji, Dulsep Singhji, Pataudi, C. K. Nayudu, Mahomed Nissar, Wazir Ali, Amer Singh, Vijay Hazare and Vinoo Mankad, their success in Test cricket has been limited.

So wide has been the popularity of cricket that the first complete stadium to be built in India was the Brabourne Stadium in Bombay which is one of the world's most symmetrical stadium. This is significant particularly as the number of sports stadia in India cannot be said to be consistent with the intense enthusiasm for all sport in the country. It is only recently that the National Sports Club of India have built two fine Olympic Stadia in New Delhi and Bombay, thanks largely to the imagination and initiative of A. S. de Mello who gave India the Brabourne Stadium.

Honour For South African Indian

Mr. Cassim Ebrahim Jeeva, B.Sc., a South African Indian student studying in India for M.B.B.S. degree, has had the unique opportunity of being selected to represent the Uttar Pradesh Northern Province in the National Cricket Championship of India, for the Ranji Trophy, against the Madhya Pradesh Central Province Cricket XI. He is the first South African to play in the National Cricket Championship. Mr. Cassim Jeeva is the son of Mr. Ebrahim Jeeva, proprietor of the Union Printing Works, Durban, who is staying in India for educating his children and grandchildren. Mr. Cassim Jeeva is the captain of the Aligarh University Cricket Team 1951-52. He was awarded University Cricket Colours 1950-51 and best batsman and wicketkeeper prize 1950-51. He is also secretary of the South African Students Association, Muslim University, Aligarh, 1951-52. We congratulate Mr. Cassim Jeeva on his success and wish him good luck.

Real Swaraj (independence) will come not by the acquisition of authority by a few but by the acquisition of the capacity by all to resist authority when it is abused. In other words, Swaraj is to be attained by educating the masses to a sense of their capacity to regulate and control authority

It is man's imagination that divides the world into warring groups of enemies and friends. In the ultimate resort it is the power of love that acts in the midst of the clash and sustains the world.

—Mahatma Gandhi.

DR MALAN'S NEW YEAR MESSAGE

BROADCASTING a New Year message to the people of South Africa on New Year's eve, Dr. Malan, the Prime Minister said: "As was the case in previous years, I now again wish to convey on behalf of myself and the Government our best wishes to all sections of our people on the occasion of the New Year which will presently begin. May an abundant measure of happiness and prosperity be your share."

"The Christmas message of a week ago is still ringing in our ears. It has reminded us of the fact that true peace and happiness do not consist in external things. On the contrary they consist, in the first instance, in an inward experience born from the right relationship with the Great Unseen and emanating therefrom in peace between man and man destined ultimately to culminate in universal peace—peace on earth."

"We pray that this, during the coming year, may be realised in and between us all, and in increasing measure in the whole world in which we live."

"We are indeed living in troubled times. Everywhere in the world at large uncertainty and fear prevail. This is proved by the thousands of millions which are being spent every year on rearmament, resulting in economic scarcity, exhaustion and poverty on a scale unknown before."

"This is accompanied by the continued forging of new weapons with ever increasing power of destruction and death. Added to this is the disheartening fact that the world organisation specially created for the maintenance and promotion of world peace is through internal causes obviously becoming more impotent and futile."

"In our own country these world conditions are reflected in unrest in some quarters, in deliberate defiance of the law, and in some places even in an appeal to force, coupled with the perpetration of shocking atrocities."

"This is indeed no cheering picture which presents itself to us. For tracing the underlying causes this is obviously not the fitting occasion, but standing as we do, face to face with the future, our present concern is certainly and fittingly to try to discern as clearly as we can the beacons which indicate to us the way towards that peace and happiness which we desire for each other and for our country. I shall confine myself briefly to this last."

"Firstly, living as we do in a multi-racial country, we must recognise each others' right of existence unreservedly. South Africa is our common heritage and belongs to all of us."

"Secondly, we must create and maintain conditions in which every population group will feel secure in the maintenance and development of what is particularly its own. South Africa must not consist of camps in which one section must find it necessary to entrench and defend itself against another."

"Thirdly, we must all in the first place and above all consider ourselves as children of South Africa to which we owe our undivided loyalty and devotion."

"Fourthly, South Africa as a whole must maintain undebated her character as a partner in the West Christian civilisation, and must consider it as her calling to protect it against attacks from outside and subversion from within."

FRIDAY, 16TH JANUARY, 1953

Dr. Malan's New Year Message

PRIME Minister Dr. Malan's New Year message to the people of South Africa is worthy of note in that it is somewhat different to his general attitude. If what he spoke on New Year's eve were put into practice we have no doubt this would be a happy land to live in for all, there would be peace in South Africa and South Africa would have made a worthy contribution to the peace of the world. But the trouble is that most people do not practice what they preach and our Minister, unfortunately, is not an exception to this general rule. "True peace and happiness is born," he says, "from the right relations with the Great Unseen and emanating therefrom is peace between man and man destined ultimately to culminate in universal peace—peace on earth." The question is, are our relations with the Great Unseen right? We are unhappy to have to say that Dr. Malan or his Government has not set a good example in this respect. As the Prime Minister admits we are indeed "living in troubled times" in our own land, and "uncertainty" and "fear" is prevalent here to day more than anywhere else in the world.

Dr. Malan rightly denounces "the thousands of millions which are being spent every year on re-armament, resulting in economic scarcity, exhaustion and poverty on a scale unknown before." But what is South Africa's contribution to avert this? Again we have to say nil. On the contrary she is doing everything possible to help it and economic scarcity, exhaustion and poverty are experienced by the vast majority of the people in this country today as they have never been in the past. South Africa's sole reliance, to bring about peace and security in her own country, is on weapons of destruction and death. She has not set a better example to the world which the latter could usefully follow. South Africa's contribution towards weeding 'the world organisation specially created for the maintenance and promotion of world peace' is by no means small. She has openly declared that she will render it impotent if she cannot have her own way. She has not shown the slightest sign of sacrificing anything to maintain that great organisation. She has indeed given the impression that she considers it and treats it as a thorn in her way.

South Africa can at least boast of one thing that while in the other parts of the world force is met with force and violence with violence here in South Africa there are thousands of men and women who are not meeting force with force and violence with violence but are courageously refusing to submit to the tyranny of the rulers in the spirit of non-violence and are imposing sufferings on themselves and dedicating themselves to the Great Unseen in order to change the heart of the tyrant. If these succeed it will be the noblest example in the way to securing world peace without the use of deadly weapons and South Africa will have reason to be proud of it.

Dr. Malan refers to the "dreams which indicate in us the way towards that peace and happiness which we desire for each other and for our country" and goes on to enumerate them.

"Firstly," he says, "living as we do in a multi-racial country, we must recognise each other's right of existence unreservedly. South Africa is our common heritage and belongs to all of us." This is most admirable. It is as it should be.

"Secondly," he says, "we must create and maintain conditions in which every population group will feel secure in the maintenance and development of what is particularly its own. South Africa must not consist of camps in which one section must find it necessary to entrench and defend itself against another."

Here we have a bone to pick. Dr. Malan's own Party has formed itself into a camp and is seeking to entrench and to defend itself against another. It has succeeded in a large measure since it has power in its own hands and has consequently assumed a bullying attitude. It is now seeking to form group areas with the machinery it has created on its own and is thus creating camps hostile to one another by its own example.

If, as Dr. Malan says in the third instance, "we must all in the first place and above all consider ourselves as children of South Africa to which we owe our individual loyalty and devotion," he is certainly not helping us to do so by the creation of these camps. And when it comes to South Africa his vision seems to become somewhat narrow, for above all we are children of God and then we are children of South Africa. If we remember the first thing and keep it in mind always and in our actions we would certainly not go wrong. But from this point onward Dr. Malan seems to have lost his way.

In the fourth instance Dr. Malan talks of "South Africa's character as a partner in the West Christian civilisation which" he says, "must be protected against attacks from outside and subversion from within." Thus ambiguous language is understandable. The Bible teaches us, as all other scriptures do, that we are all children of one God and that we must love our neighbour as ourselves. It makes no distinction between East and West, North or South. Civilisation is to know God and to abide by His law. Anything contrary to that is contrary to civilisation.

Fifthly Dr. Malan says, "we must in addition to our mutual interest in and our assistance to each other, realistically recognise the natural differences as well as the gap in the level of civilisation existing between various sections." We fully agree that the natural differences created by God "must be realistically recognised and respected." Indeed we must thank God for creating this diversity or else life would be monotonous on this earth. This diversity has given beauty to it but God tells us that it is our duty to seek unity in this diversity for each is the complement of the other and none can stand alone. This lesson is brought home to us vividly in times of trouble but we are apt to forget God and succumb to Satan in times of peace when selfishness and greed get hold of us."

"The gap in the level of civilisation existing between various sections" which Dr. Malan speaks of is created by man to gain his own selfish ends. It is not the creation of God. God bids us to treat all fellow human beings alike and to live as equals irrespective of what colour or race they may be. This very simple thing seems to Dr. Malan like "attempting to jump over a gorge or a valley." That is just where the biggest mistake is being made. The Prime Minister calls upon all of us to solve out differences "on a higher level in accordance with the demands of sincerity, honesty and civility as it behoves a civilised and Christian nation." It is easier to learn by example and who could better set that example than Dr. Malan and his Government?

Sinister Plot

WHEN the Suppression of Communism Bill was going through the Union Parliament leaders of non-European thought made it plain that they were sure the word Communism was just being used as a screen to cover up the real intentions of the Government—which was to crush the liberation movement of the non-white peoples. Events have since proved beyond all shadow of doubt how right the non-whites were. But a new danger is already rearing its head in the ranks of the Government—the drastic measures threatened against the reformers.

We had a foretaste of it recently when the Minister of Justice instructed the Police to shoot at the slightest provocation. If he were dealing with Europeans who have the vote he would not have acted so irresponsibly. He would have regarded non-white lives as precious human lives. But because the non-whites do not have the vote he could afford to treat them with less regard.

But there is something more to it than that. With the general elections not very far off and with the Government fearing that it might be losing its hold on the race-hating section of the white voters the warning given at Johannesburg by a delegate to the conference of the South African Labour party is worthy of being taken serious note of. Dr. G. Routh, a delegate, warned the conference against a "sinister plot to bring the defiance campaign down in a pool of bloodshed." It was a white delegate who uttered this warning and as far as we know, he has not been among those who have gone to jail for participating in the resistance movement.

When Parliament gathers in another few days the non-European people should be ready for more draconian legislation to crush the resistance movement. But happily for South Africa, the non-white peoples, in particular the Africans and the Indians, who have borne the brunt of the struggle, have shown by their heroism and consistency of purpose under extreme trials that their love for freedom will stand every test that the race-hating Malpas can devise. For the tyranny imposed on South Africa is a challenge to every democrat's love for freedom. For this reason as we await the opening of Parliament let us give our loins and prepare ourselves as a people spiritually to go through the most trying tests of our loyalty to the ideal of a free South Africa.

Book On Mau Mau

AN interesting commentary on the highly sensationalised activities of the Mau Mau in Kenya came from South Africa recently when a manager of a Durban firm of bookellers told the 'Natal Daily News' that the book on the Mau Mau recently released in South Africa was not arousing noticeable interest among the White people.

This is good news as it is an indication, however slight, that the ordinary White citizen in this country is not the race-hater his leaders want the world to believe he is. Quite a lot was said about the book when it came and we suspect bookellers committed themselves very heavily to the belief that since Swart's comparison of the Mau Mau and the resistance movement the book would be a best-seller. That it has flopped just shows that the White people are quite sure that they have nothing to fear from the Africans and the Indian resisters.

Incidentally, it is worthy of note that Sir Brian Robertson, British Commander-in-Chief, Middle East, who was recently sent to Kenya to throw in his bit of sensationalism into the Kenya situation announced, after an on-the-spot study of the Mau Mau situation, that there was not the slightest justification for the suggestion that the army should take over in Kenya. The situation, he said, was one which required to be dealt with through the ordinary channels of maintaining justice and order. When Swart next shouts about the Mau Mau level-headed men and women should remember that Sir Brian debunked much of the propaganda based on Mau Mau activities.

But we want to make clear one point—although we rejoice that the exaggerations of Mau Mau activities are proving a flop, we disapprove very strongly of the tactics used by the Mau Mau. The murder of human beings and the destruction of property, no matter how justified (as in war) is repugnant to us. But this is not the end of the story. Mau Mau activities are a challenge to Britain; a demand for reform. It will not be until Britain faces this problem squarely and without equivocation that Mau Mau activities will come to an end. Alternatively, Britain might find herself saddled with another Malaya situation in Africa.

Change Of Name Suggested

The following article appeared in our last week's issue. It is reproduced here for those whose eyes may have escaped it.

INDIAN OPINION was founded fifty years ago. The necessity for the publication of the paper had arisen then to ventilate the grievances of Indians settled and domiciled in South Africa. These grievances had arisen owing to Indians being discriminated against by the White Government on the basis of their race and colour. Indians, however, who had advanced both educationally and economically claimed equal opportunities with the White man. This was denied to them and discriminatory legislation was passed against them. The fight against such legislation has continued ever since. In the meantime the other communities have made great progress and are now asserting their legitimate rights in this land of their birth.

The White Government is averse to conceding those rights and have now made two distinctive groups—the White and the non-White. The policy is to create as many different groups within the non-White groups as possible with the obvious object to divide and rule. Placed under such adverse circumstances the non-Whites have now united into a common front. The question today has become one of White vs. non-White. It is no longer a question between Whites vs. Indians.

In the circumstances the question has arisen whether the name 'Indian Opinion' is not outdated and whether it is not desirable to change the name into one which would embrace all the non-Whites. But then there are Whites too who are strongly opposed to the racial policy of the Government and seek the abolition of the colour bar from the South African legislation and stand for justice for all South Africans. So then it is really not a question of Whites vs. non-whites but of Justice vs. Injustice—Right vs. Wrong. It is felt therefore that 'Indian Opinion' should represent that broader outlook and its name should signify that. It is felt that there is a lack of true statesmanship in South Africa and that it would be fitting if the paper founded by Mahatma Gandhi would point the way to that. The view has therefore been expressed that there should be a change in the name of 'Indian Opinion' to suit the present changed circumstances. It is felt by those responsible for conducting the paper that the reading public should be taken into their confidence in this matter and to get to know their wishes. The question before them is: (1) Whether the present name of the paper should be changed and (2) If it should be changed what should be the new name given to it?

From a purely sentimental point of view many would be averse to changing the present name. But it is desirable that much importance should not be attached to sentiment and that the question should be viewed from a broader aspect. We would request the reading public to give their views on the matter within one month from the date of this issue. The management will try to respect the wish of the majority but it will be solely in their discretion to act as they deem fit.

Two new names have been suggested: 'The Statesman,' and 'New Outlook.'

NOTES

Senator Brookes' Retirement

THE news of the retirement of Senator Edgar H. Brookes from the beginning of this year from the South African political field will, we have no doubt, be received with the deepest regret by all non-Europeans as well as many others who have known him personally or of him. His loss is one which South Africa can ill-afford especially at a time like the present one when there is almost a bankruptcy of statesmanship. Dark days have set in on South Africa ever since the passing of Jan H. Hofmeyr and General Smuts. Dr Brookes had assumed the mantle in a wonderful way and though his was a lonely voice in Parliament and out it was a powerful one which even the Nationalist Government had to reckon with. He was the one person in the Senate who always commanded the respect of all Parties. It was one of the tragedies of South Africa that just in the beginning of the last session of Parliament Dr. Brookes was suddenly incapacitated owing to health reasons from defending the nine million people who enjoyed no democratic rights in a country ruled by three million Whites. What a mockery of democracy! And yet this country has the audacity to call itself a democratic country! However, Dr. Brookes was so overburdened with work and anxiety to uphold the fair name of the country he loved so dearly that it was that which actually broke his back. His loss in the political field will be felt more keenly by the non-Whites because he was one of the very few sincere friends they could look to in the darkness which surrounded them. It is pleasing to note, however, that though we have lost Dr. Brookes' able assistance in the political field we shall still have the benefit of his deep learning through his lectures and his versatile pen on both of which he will now be able to concentrate more than in the past. We can only hope and pray that he may be blessed with health and energy to continue his noble services to South Africa and through it to humanity.

OUR CONTINUING CRISIS

By C. W. M. GELL

THERE is a rather common tendency to think that, because the Government has "accepted" the Appeal Court's ruling that the "High Court of Parliament" is illegal without immediately resorting to some evasion of the Constitution, the heart has gone out of our constitutional crisis. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Nationalist "acceptance" (if that is the correct description of a very equivocal attitude) of the latest judgment is merely temporary and tactical. Their intention to destroy the compact of Union, if necessary by unconstitutional methods, remains quite unaltered.

It is now clear that there are two main planks in the Nationalist election programme—the defence of "White civilisation" and the "establishment of the sovereignty of Parliament over a Court of five paid officials." But the first plank will be very much to the front of the platform and the second relatively to the background. Indeed, it is because the Nationalists think the colour question is running so strongly their way that they have "accepted" the appellate decision with so little fuss.

I will not deal here with the fraudulent nature of the Nationalists' claim to be the only true guardians of "White civilisation." If it had not been for their arrogant dogmatism and callous disregard for other people's feelings, the colour question would not have been raised in its present form at the present time. An electoral victory for the U.P. will not automatically restore us to safety and unity. But it is the indispensable first step towards reviving the possibility of a reasonable settlement of the racial issues.

The Nationalists, however, believe that the almost all-White electorate will think differently; that, seeing an active non-European agitation in progress, the voters will choose the party which offers the strongest repressive policy; that they will forget that these same champions of law and order are the men who tried to flout the Constitution and the Courts, and who staked the lives of racialism by their own clumsy bungling. You don't usually call in the incendiary to put out his own fire. But the Nationalists think the voters will do just that. And, if the electorate shows any sign of going off the racial ball, there is, with tension running so high, always the chance of another riot or two to hot it up again.

Just how sure the Nationalists are that the gullible South African voter will overlook their responsibility for the existing tension, can best be seen by studying their varying constitutional moods. On the historic day in March when the Appeal Court reaffirmed the validity of the Constitution, Dr. Malan declared that an "intolerable" and "unacceptable" situation had been "created." His Ministers and press vociferously supported his "trump card" to destroy "the last vestiges of Cape-British liberalism" and free them "the constitutional enslavement of South Africa to the legislation of a superior British Parliament." There was a talk of a "Third South African War for Freedom" and the Prime Minister launched his High Court Act with the uncompromising statement: "We are going ahead with our plans to protect the sovereignty of Parliament, no matter what happens."

But they have not, in fact gone ahead! All the truculent clamour during March and April of the "National election" in pursuit of its sacred mandate from the volkswil has been curiously hushed since then, until the rejection of the High Court Act (first by the Cape Provincial Division of the Supreme Court on August 29 and finally by the Appellate Division on November 13) was received almost in silence. Why?

Fair-minded people will concede that Coloureds voting on the common electoral roll is genuinely repugnant to Nationalist ideology. But this was not the only motive behind the Separate Representation of Voters Act. At least as compelling was the Nationalists' conviction that they had little hope of winning the next election unless they could rig several Cape constituencies in their favour.

But the reaction of all sections of the European community to the Defence Campaign, which began on June 26, changed the whole outlook. Our Europeans notoriously take a short-term view of colour questions. Here—provided no one paused to consider what had precipitated the movement and what mere repression must inevitably bring about at some future date—was a ready-made situation for the Nationalists. For they know exactly what the Nationalists' "place" is, and the Opposition is a little uncertain or unable to explain itself succinctly. The outbreak of Mau Mau terrorism in Kenya and our own race riots in October and November completed the turning of the tables, restoring the chief seat of racial relations in the Union to the popular bastion against the "Black miracle." In a matter of months the Nationalists' electoral prospects had improved out of all recognition, even on the present rolls.

This, and this alone, accounts for the present tactical "acceptance" of the latest Appeal Court judgment. But let those who imagine that the Nationalists have suffered a change of heart, look more closely at the evidence.

First, there was Dr. Malan's candid admission of September 15: "That with all the implications of the matter, we as a Government cannot allow ourselves to lose." That would be difficult to retract. Then, Mr. Strydom has been intermittently asking the electorate to choose whether the volkswil or the Courts shall be king. Dr. Doo-er, that very faithful devotee of "court-proof" laws, has made similar encouraging remarks without so far divulging his new master-plan. Senator M. J. Vermaulen supported his Ministers on September 9 in very definite terms: "I want to assure you that no Court verdict will put our party off its stroke. We believe that the Afrikaans people are sovereign and that the action is besoort."

On October 20 Senator Verwoerd was even more precise, promising that his party would "establish the sovereignty of Parliament," whether it got a two-thirds majority or not. On the morrow of the Appeal Court judgment the Nationalist press expressed itself with modest fervour in favour of carrying the issue to "the final judge, the nation." Although there was none of the rabble rousing demagoguery which characterised its diatribes in March, the tone of patient obstinacy was there. Next day Dr. Malan hurriedly made his "acceptance" at Odendaalsrus before dashing on into the thick of the racial fray. On November 23 Mr. Schoeman, yet a noted constitutionalist, told his constituents that he was coming to them in April to feed out who was sovereign. On November 24 Mr. Havenga issued his Natal manifesto about "putting an end to disarray... and the implications of the latest judgment." On November 27 Mr. Strydom promised to introduce a Bill after the election, prohibiting the Courts from declaring legislation invalid. As a lawyer, he should have known better! Mr. Swart has maintained a discreet silence on the constitutional issues. Is he, perhaps, recalling what he said in 1931? Mr. Louw has confined his attention to "ultra-liberals and interfering clerics"—and, of course, the English press. It was left to another lawyer, Mr. Naude, to make specific suggestions on December 20 for translating the volkswil into action—by (1) reviving the "High Court of Parliament," or (2) packing the Bench, or (3) packing the Senate, or (4) starting afresh with a new republican Constitution.

Now (1) is clearly illegal. Mr. Pirow, who has so far proved himself a reliable legal prophet, regards (2) as impracticable and (3) as also illegal. As to a republic, we have the assurance of Dr. Malan, Mr. Schoeman and other Ministers (for what it is worth) that a republic will not be introduced without a two-thirds majority (of votes or seats?) at an election fought especially on that issue.

There are two lessons to be drawn from this evidence. First, that the Nationalist intention to abrogate the Constitution has been temporarily shelved for purely expedient reasons. When trying to capitalise the law-breaking of others for electoral purposes, it is unwise to remind people who were the first to set the example of law-defying. All the above quotations were extracted from speeches which were principally concerned with racial matters.

Secondly, there is probably no legal way round the Entrenched Clause, except a two-thirds majority of both Houses sitting together. Unless the Nationalists achieve that extremely unlikely majority, they are (if successfully) committed to a legislative programme they cannot legally fulfil. In May last year Mr. Strauss and Mr. Lawrence promised to contest illegal legislation by every legal means and, if the Government sought to impose invalid measures, to meet force with force. That pledge must remain part of the Opposition's election programme and an unyielding resolve in the heart of each one of us. That is the political tradition to which we are heirs—"The Evening Post," (Port Elizabeth.)

"And finally, we must, in addition to our mutual interest in and our assistance to each other, realistically recognise the natural differences as well as the gap in the level of civilisation existing between various sections.

"Their existence no one will deny nor the fact that they will still continue for generations to come.

"It may be safe to jump over a ditch. To attempt to jump over a gorge or a valley is fatal. Our first duty is to maintain and protect the highest and best we possess in the interest not only of ourselves but also of all. And for the rest the solution of South Africa's racial problem will require all the tactfulness, firmness and patience we can command.

"Political differences there will always be as in every other democratic community. In itself this is no evil. The decision must always rest with the people, and where such a decision is again due during the year we are entering now let us all together resolve to carry on the ensuing campaign on a high level, in accordance with the demands of sincerity, honesty and chivalry as it behoves a civilised and Christian nation.

LIQUOR HAVOC IN AMERICA

By BHARATAN KUMARAPPA

AMERICA went back on Prohibition, and today some people there are regretting the fact, as will be seen from the two following extracts from American journals in regard to the prevalence of crime in U.S.A. owing to alcohol.

The Journal of the American Businessmen's Research Foundation says in its issue of January-February, 1952:

"Alcoholic beverages have recorded an enormous toll of our nation's crime record in the past seventeen years. Various estimates of alcohol's role in crime have been made.

"In 1946 the Foundation directed an inquiry concerning alcohol and crime to States' Attorneys throughout the U.S. Overwhelming testimony showed liquor an outstanding cause in 50 to 95 per cent. of actual cases brought before officials.

"Several years ago, Judge Joseph T. Zottoli of the Municipal Court of Boston conducted an intensive study of the relation of alcoholism and crime in Massachusetts. He concluded: 'More than 90 per cent of the adult population of prisons in Massachusetts, to which prisoners are sent for misdemeanours, are there through offences caused by drunkenness. About 50 per cent of persons receiving sentences to penal institutions have committed offences relating to alcoholism.'

'The Union Signal,' a journal of Social Welfare, in its issue of August 16, 1952, publishes a note written by C. Aubrey Hearn, saying

"Whether purposely or by accident, the newspapers are beginning to tell the truth about the outrageously conducted liquor business in the United States.

"Almost every divorce has liquor behind it. Two-thirds of the murders and major crimes also have liquor as a contributing factor. Automobile accidents are largely caused by liquor.

"Liquor is costing the Government twice as much as it is contributing in taxes and other revenue.

"Of course the old lie still continues to be told and we are informed over and over again that Prohibition was an awful curse, and yet any man who wants to know the truth can ask any policeman on the beat or any police judge on the bench and he will tell you that crimes, lawlessness attributable to liquor have quadrupled since repeal. America has touched a new moral bottom since liquor was restored to its place of despotism."

NOTES

Communal Fines

Agitation grows daily on the White side, fanned on by Muslim supporters, demanding that communal fines should be imposed on whole communities in the event of riots. If this leads to legislation it will introduce a new principle in South African legal practice, where the innocent are penalised for the crimes of others, just because they happen to have the same skin colour. Britain tried this tactic against the Mau Mau in Kenya. It had the direct effect of consolidating the Mau Mau front. For, in a country where people are oppressed for the sole reason that they belong to a particular race, what is more natural for them than to band together inseparably when they are held responsible racially for crimes they have not committed? The Africans and the Indians are going through very try up times. But if they stand together solidly, even the communal fines will not rob them of freedom.

If Africans Want Only

Given Opportunities

We reproduce the following from the Economist (London) for the enlightenment of White South Africa.

"Sir,—Your note on the Northern Rhodesian copper strike discloses a state of affairs most saddening to industrialists in the British West Indies. In Jamaica, citizens of African race hold high positions in every field of industry. Black and coloured managing directors, general managers, chief engineers, chemists and agricultural superintendents are among the ablest in the sugar industry, and as a fine set of men as one could discover in any part of the world. Experience here proves what is obvious to all but the bigoted, namely that, if given the education, experience and opportunity, the black man has every bit as much ability as the white in every walk of life.

It is bad enough to see these so Christian and potentially disastrous policies followed by the Government of South Africa. It is truly shocking for such things to be allowed to happen in a British colony. I therefore extend a cordial invitation to employers and managers in the Northern Rhodesian copper belt to come over to Jamaica to learn what people of African descent can achieve in industrial and agricultural management, when provided with the opportunity and incentive.—Yours faithfully, R. L. KIRKWOOD, Chairman, Sugar Manufacturers' Assn. Of Jamaica Ltd.

First Chinese Resister

South Africa's first Chinese passive resister, who was recently arrested in Pretoria, appeared in a Johannesburg Court recently to answer a charge of being in an African location without a permit. The Chinese 23-year-old Koem Lau Dr, pleaded guilty and said: "My sole purpose in breaking the law was to bring to the notice of the public the injustices suffered by the Chinese community under the Group Areas Act." He was reprimanded and discharged.

NO LONGER REPRESENTS US

Mr. R. M. Desai who has for some time been working for 'Indian Opinion' is no longer in the employment of 'Indian Opinion' and does not in any way represent us.

Manager 'Indian Opinion', lectured for years in the United States, and who now holds the chair of sociology at Cornell College in Iowa.

Having been associated with Gandhi at various times, Dr. Muzumdar writes of what he knows, and he is at his best in narrating events or recording facts. Familiar as these are to many Asians, it is good to have them put concisely and made available once again at a reasonable price (the book sells in South Africa at 13s.). The author is not so happy in his analysis of the true significance of Gandhi's theories and practices. Now that Gandhi's political technique and religious spirit are being revived in Africa for further use, the time is at hand for a re-assessment of their value and a discussion of how best they can be adapted to the needs of our own day. Dr. Muzumdar is right to raise the question how Gandhi's thought is related to socialism. It is a difficult problem, so difficult that it is not surprising that no one has yet attempted a full analysis of it. Dr. Muzumdar's own few papers on this subject are very unsatisfactory. For one thing, he writes in the prevailing American atmosphere which is hardly conducive to objective discussion of radical ideas. He does, however, recognize that there is important common ground held by socialists and by adherents of Satyagraha. "If socialism," he says, "be equated with sympathy and solidarity with the exploited masses, with a passion and striving for social justice, with an economic arrangement conducive to the free development of human personality, then certainly Gandhi was a socialist." On the other hand, Dr. Muzumdar thinks that Gandhi rejected most of the rigid doctrines ascribed to Marx, while accepting both the theory of surplus value and the labour theory of value because he realized that capital exploits labour.

However that may be, it is highly important in these days to recognize that there was common ground between Gandhi and socialists and that they were wise enough never to let their doctrinal differences reach a point where there might injure close and cordial co-operation. To recall that fact now is to remind ourselves of the lesson implicit in it. There was never a time when it was more imperative than it is today for like-minded people to work generously together for racial freedom and human enlightenment in this dark continent.

THE REVIVAL OF GANDHI'S SPIRIT

By JULIUS LEWIN

BOOKS about Mahatma Gandhi will be written for generations to come. Men are busy recording his lightest words and depicting his everyday activities. Only last year, a distinguished American, Dr. Homer A. Jack, made a special pilgrimage to South Africa to "walk in the footsteps of Mahatma Gandhi," to look at the places and mark the spots where the great man had been in his early years. It is somewhat like a Christian like Dr. Jack describes his own efforts as in some degree comparable with those of the early disciples of Jesus Christ who lovingly re-covered the ground that their Master had once walked on.

The latest book, "Mahatma Gandhi," has been published simultaneously in New York and London by Scribner's as one in their series about "those thinkers of the last hundred years who have influenced the intellectual currents of our time. This short book was written by Dr. Haridat T. Muzumdar, who has lived and

INDIA LETTER

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Gandhian Outlook And Techniques

A Seminar of the "contribution of Gandhian outlook and techniques to solution of tensions within and between nations" is held in New Delhi from January 5 to January 17. The Prime Minister inaugurated the seminar, which is being organised by the Indian Commission for co-operation with UNESCO.

Foreign participants are Lord Boyd-Orr (U.K.), Dr. Ralph Bunche (U.S.A.), Prof. G. Tucci, well-known Italian orientalist; Madame Cecilia Meneses, Brazilian poetess and educationist, whose poem on the assassination of Gandhi was widely published; Prof. Massingood, of the College de France; Dr. Mohammad Hussain Reikal, a former president of the Egyptian Senate and winner of the Fund First prize in Arabic literature; and Mr. Yuzuko Thurum, the well known pacifist of Japan.

Participants from India are Dr. B. R. Nathankubhase, Acharya Narasimha Dasa, Dr. Zakir Husain and Acharya Kripalan. Prof. Homayun Kabir will take part as the representative of the Government of India.

The idea arose out of the decision of the first conference of the Indian National Commission for co-operation with UNESCO, regarding the drawing up of a world-wide programme of action to promote universal peace and goodwill among nations after intensive study of Gandhian's ideals and techniques. It was felt that a preliminary exchange of opinion between India and foreign thinkers would be helpful in this connection.

Mr Nehru's Message To Viswa Bharati

Prime Minister Nehru, who is Chancellor of the University of Viswa Bharati Tagore Institute, in a message on the occasion of the first convocation of the university, said, Viswa Bharati must ever remember the ideal taught by Gurudev—that of a harmonious, physical, intellectual and moral development and endeavour to work for it. Mr. Nehru stated "As the Acharya of the Viswa Bharati, it would have been my pride and pleasure to be present at the convocation of the university and welcome in person the President, who is going to grace the occasion with his presence. I regret greatly that other duties have prevented me from being present on this occasion. The day when the convocation is held I shall be far away near the southern tip of India.

"I would, however, like to welcome the President and to express the happiness which all of us feel at his visit to this institution which Gurudev built up through many years of labour and dedication.

"I am glad that the authorities of the university have decided to confer on this occasion honorary doctorates on two veterans of the Viswa Bharati—Sri Nandalal Bose, the great artist, and Sri Kshitimoben Sen, the great scholar. In honouring them, the university honours itself and pays tribute to their eminence in their respective fields and their life-long devotion to the educational ideals of Gurudev.

"This is the first occasion on which Viswa Bharati will confer its own degree on its students as a statutory Central University. I am not enamoured of degrees and it was not for awarding degrees that Gurudev built up this institution. He wanted to train students in an atmosphere of freedom and joy so that they might participate, in their later years, in creative activities of a free India. Degrees, however, have their uses, but only if they are not looked upon as ends in themselves. The ideal to be aimed at is that of a harmonious, physical, intellectual and moral development. Gurudev taught this, and Viswa Bharati must ever remember this and endeavour to work for it."

Things In General

Defiance To Be Intensified

The "defiance of unjust laws" campaign, which was suspended over the Christmas and New Year holidays, would be continued and intensified in 1953, Mr. T. A. Coobellie, joint secretary of the South African Indian Congress and African National Congress Action Committee said in Johannesburg last week. From June 26, 1952, when the campaign started, until the end of the year, 8,065 people had been imprisoned for defying unjust laws. The regulations recently promulgated by the Minister of Justice, Mr. G. R. Swarth, and the Minister of Native Affairs, Dr. E. F. Verwoerd, providing a fine of up to £300 or imprisonment not exceeding three years for insulting Natives to break a law, would have some effect on the campaign, he added. "But these regulations will be countered and the campaign will go on in spite of them."

The offices of the S.A.I.C. and the A.N.C. were searched by the Police in Johannesburg but nothing was confiscated.

Farwell To Maulana

A farwell reception was given last Sunday by the Darban Muslims to Maulana Abdul Ala M Siddiq, who left yesterday by air from London en route to Mauritius. The reception was given under the aegis of the Natal Muslim Council at the Avonlea Theatre. Rabbi Harry Swift, who was one of the speakers, said the departure of Din Eminence would take away some of the "spiritual beauty" of Durban which it had enjoyed for some six months. An address was presented by Mr. I. M. Bawa, the president of the Council on behalf of the Muslims of Natal. More than 2,500 people were present. During his sojourn in South Africa the Maulana delivered a number of sermons and elevated the people from the material to the spiritual plane, which it must be admitted they badly needed. The Maulana will carry with him the good-wishes of all the Indians of South Africa.

The Banout Hindu Maha Sabha

The Banout Hindu Maha Sabha was formed by the foresight of the Tamil School Board, who were granted Free Sites for the building of Temple and School, but ceded their rights to the above newly formed body so that the whole Hindu community could enjoy the privileges in whatever venture the above Sabha undertakes. The following office-bearers were elected—Patrons: Messrs. E. P.

Naidoo, I. Singh and N. Parbhoo, President: Mr. P. Singh; Vice-Presidents: Messrs. P. M. Nalaker, T. J. Ponnammay, R. Chentam, A. J. Lowton, O. K. Kaplan, O. V. Gendhi; Secretary: Mr. O. R. Moodley; Assistant Secretary: Mr. A. A. Lowton; Joint Treasurers: Messrs. V. Parbhoo and S. Palast; Committee-Members: Messrs. P. Ponnammay, O. B. Moodley, P. M. Gavendar, Sidney Pillay, P. Govender, J. Singh, G. R. Lawton, J. Ranganathan, G. Singh, D. Singh, O. Nane, D. Jivan, P. I. Vallabh, P. Rowles J. Paubla; Trustees: Messrs. G. R. Moodley, P. Singh and V. Parbhoo.

The Africans of Uganda, British East Africa, have established a Mahatma Gandhi Memorial School. The relationship between the Indians and the Africans in Uganda is very friendly and Mahatma Gandhi has been instrumental in bringing it about. It is out of their deep regard for Mahatma Gandhi that the Africans have thus decided to commemorate his name.

WORLD COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

ASIAN STUDY CONFERENCE

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Lucknow, Jan. 5.

THE Asian Study Conference of the World Council of Churches opened in Lucknow on December 27. Its importance lay in two facts that it was being held for the first time on Asian soil and secondly representatives from foreign countries were participating in it. Delegates from Burma, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Japan, New Zealand and the Philippines participated in it. It was also attended by the General Secretary of the World Council of Churches, who was deputed to visit South Africa from March to May last to study apartheid.

Dr R. B. Mahtani, East Asia Secretary of the World Council of Churches and the International Missionary Council, speaking at the opening plenary session said that the conference would discuss four main themes, the Christian hope, missions and unity, responsible society in East Asia and race relations, and on December 28, this conference discussed the first three items on the agenda.

On January 5, the Council Committee of the World Council at its meeting in Lucknow opposed all forms of discrimination based on race.

The Committee which was particularly discussing South African racial problems passed a resolution saying that all racial discrimination is contrary to the will of God as expressed in the Christian gospel.

The resolution called upon member churches to do all in their power to end discrimination wherever it exists, because it increases tension and bitterness.

Speaking in the discussion Raja Mahendra Singh, one time Indian Agent-General in South Africa, said that in a place like South Africa it was very difficult to separate completely political from religious situation. He said that the situation in the Union brooked no delay. He said "on the race question we should stand four square, no giving in at all. We must take the Christian attitude."

India's Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, who spoke on the occasion said against the background of the situation on the African continent that in the world today it is quite impossible for any country to "carry on" on the basis of racial superiority.

"That is the very basic matter to be considered. Maintenance of order is important, but in doing that we should not do something which appears to a large mass of people that it crushes them. Even all the armies of the world combined cannot crush the national feeling of the races."

The Asian Study Conference convened by the World Council of Churches concluded its deliberations in Lucknow on 30th December after accepting with minor changes reports submitted by the various study groups into which it had earlier been divided.

The group set to study race, caste and class tensions in its report to the plenary session declared that the race policy at present followed by the South African Government was un-Christian. The Group felt that the World Council of Churches should express condemnation of it. Silence in this matter would, it said, be liable to be construed as acceptance of that policy.

The Group affirmed its belief that all men were children of God and equal in His sight. Therefore the Church could not associate itself with the theory of racial superiority.

ATOMIC ENERGY FOR WELFARE OF SOCIETY

NEHRU OPENS RARE EARTH FACTORY

From Our Own Correspondent

Ernakulam, Dec. 24.

MR. NEHRU today formally set in motion two new national undertakings by declaring open the Indian Rare Earth Factory at Eloor, (Travancore-Cochin) near Alwayo, and by turning the first sod for construction of the railway line Ernakulam with Quilon.

The factory is designed to process Monazite, a mineral sand extensively found along the coasts of Travancore-Cochin. It has been constructed at a cost of about Rs. 50 lakhs.

The factory went into production in July this year and has a capacity to process 1500 tons of Monazite annually with provision for doubling the quantity by certain adjustments.

Mr. Nehru announced that the Atomic Energy Commission (India) has drawn up a plan for the development of atomic energy during the next four years and the Government of India had approved the plan.

This included, Mr. Nehru said, the setting up of a medium sized reactor. The reactor, he added, was something which helped them in experimenting with things and in getting to the next stage of using atomic energy. The Government of India attached great importance to the development of atomic energy because atomic energy had a very great and important contribution for the world's resources of power for industrial as well as social uses in the future.

Mr. Nehru said normally people thought more in terms of uranium than anything else like atom bomb or atomic energy. As a matter of fact uranium existed in very small quantities round about here in Travancore-Cochin. They had plenty of uranium and much more of it in other parts, notably in Bihar. Therefore they had to look at the problem of gradually developing atomic energy for social purpose from an all-India point of view.

He said they were prepared to co-operate in this task with other countries and if their financial resources permitted they could welcome co-operation from other countries to have scientific talent of the first order so that they could go ahead by themselves or in co-operation with others.

Mr. Nehru declared, "We are not out to compete with anybody but we do want to do this work ourselves."

Moral Re-Armament

DR. F. N. D. BUCHMAN'S New Year message appeared on the front page of the 'Delhi Express.' Dr. Buchman, founder of Moral Re-Armament, is travelling with a Moral Re-Armament task force of 120 through the Far East. Last week they held an Assembly in New Delhi. In this message he says,

"Men are hungry for bread, for peace and for the hope of a new world order. A nation where everyone cares enough and everyone shares enough so that everyone will have enough will pattern a new social and economic order for this and all future generations.

A nation at peace within itself will bring peace to the world. A nation which makes 'what is right' regnant in personal, industrial, political and national life will pioneer the next historic step in the progress and destiny for all mankind. The world is anxiously waiting to see what God can do in, by, for and through one nation wholly given to Him. India's tradition and heritage equip her in a unique way to win and unite through a rebirth in men and to set the pace for world renaissance. Will India be the banner nation for a new age in 1953?"

The New Year's hope that India and Pakistan will come together as two brothers, "with India the big brother and Pakistan the little brother" brought the Delhi Assembly for MRA to its feet in a standing ovation today. The speaker was Begum Qudsia Begum Ahmad, delegate from Lahore and wife of the former Pakistan Ambassador to Turkey. She thanked the Indian Committee of Invitation for having brought Dr. Buchman and the team to this part of the world and extended an invitation on behalf of her country to visit Pakistan. She said, "This Assembly and this team has raised my opinion of the West. From reports I have heard here I have been greatly impressed with what a great world force MRA has become. West and East can meet on this platform. Let us not think West and East. We are all one. Let us unite in Asia, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma, Thailand, Indonesia, Japan and China to make one world." —New World News Agency.

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other of the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with blood-hounds, and romance. INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

MR. ATTLEE'S TRIBUTE TO INDIA

Duty

Duty is that which is due to Humanity which we owe to all those who are poorer and more helpless than we are ourselves. It is a debt which, if left unpaid during life, leaves us spiritually insolvent and moral bankrupts in our next incarnation.

—H. P. Blavatsky,

Let us put all our burden on God and He will take us along to our heaven of rest and peace. To trust in man is no good, think of and remember God for ever. He protects the world. Hold Him constantly in mind. He who surrenders himself entirely to His keeping, never is left alone. O God, Thou art the friend and leader of all Thy true devotees.

—Saint Tukaram.

MR. C. R. ATTLEE, Leader of the Opposition in the British House of Commons, in a broadcast from New Delhi on January 5 said: "I am visiting India again after an interval of 23 years and I am finding the experience most interesting. In the years 1927 to 1929 I paid two visits to India. I travelled the length and breadth of the land and I made many enduring friendships, and I had the privilege when I was Prime Minister of welcoming your Prime Minister as one of the constituent parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations. And now I come back, it is interesting to see what has been happening. I am struck by the great energy that is being displayed throughout India."

Of course, I have not been able to see very much yet. I have only flown across and come to Delhi, but I find Delhi an enormous place now, and I see something of the work that is being done for the refugees—a difficult problem. In the afternoon I have been round the Department of Industrial Research and there, I think, are the foundations being laid of the things which will be of utmost importance to India—the development of the wealth of the country in the interest of all the people.

I have been struck in those years when I held responsibility as the Prime Minister of Britain of the vital importance of there being a full understanding between the peoples of Europe and the peoples of Asia, and in this matter it seems to me that India holds a key position, because India has its ancient civilisation but, at the same time, has had such close contacts with the West that Indians are fitted to be the interpreters between the East and the West. And, further than that, India exhibits the most remarkable example of democracy in action in Asia. I was enormously impressed by the way in which the elections were carried through.

In the struggle that is going on throughout the world between free institutions and totalitarianism, it seems to me that India has a very leading part to play as the greatest Power in Asia. She, I think, will set the example to other Asian countries that are following along the same course. And above all, I think, it is necessary that we should cultivate the closest possible personal relations.

There are very many personalities that bind together the peoples of our countries and nowadays we all meet as equals. I find wherever I go a great pleasure in meeting our Indian friends, talking of our common problems, because the world today is so closely bound up that while Indians must and should take the greatest possible interest in their problems, they have their part all the time to play in the greater world problems; and I have been struck by the statesmanship displayed in the U.N. by the Indian representatives, particularly recently in the attempt to get a settlement of the Korean question.

Therefore, I would like to say to all of you who are listening to me here in India that there is an immense fund of friendship for India, sympathy in any difficulties she may face in the belief that holding as we may do so many common ideals, we can help the world in moving towards better days, days of peace and days of better conditions for the ordinary man and woman. May I close by just saying God speed to you all.

INDIAN OPINION

Africans' Complaint Against Indians

THE article on "Serious On Afro-Indian Alliance" by Jordan K. Ngubane, appearing elsewhere in this issue, must set the minds of all responsible Indians thinking seriously. The charges laid against a section of the Indian community are unfortunately irrefutable. The African has been so terribly oppressed and exploited all these years and despised not only by the White rulers, but, it must shamefully be admitted, by sections of the Indians as well, that the more enlightened among the Africans are quite justifiably beginning to lose patience and they easily feel hurt even where no hurt is actually meant. For instance, when "The Hindustan Times" referred to the African as being "somewhat mercurial" we do not believe the paper had the slightest intention to use the term insultingly. The African is understandably sensitive about the adjectives used to describe him. This, in itself, is a good thing. But as the African grows to full nationhood he will have to realise more and more that being sensitive is not the end and that where genuine weaknesses of his are pointed out, he should not be ashamed of admitting them. If he must be universally accepted as the equal of all men he must ever be conscious of them and try to remove them. It is therefore all the more pleasantly amazing that such a people should have been able to show such a tremendous amount of restraint and dignity in the present campaign. There is no doubt about the fact that it is a miracle which is most creditable to the African. The amazing thing about it is that this has come about without any previous training. What the intelligent African has a right to take exception to, however, is the blunder which the "Hindustan Times" has unconsciously made in apportioning credit for leadership, suffering and sacrifice. In fact, a very large part of credit for this must undoubtedly go to the African people. Practically the whole burden of leadership has been borne by them and it is they who have undergone most of the sufferings and sacrifice. The part the Indians have played so far amounts comparatively to little and yet the Group Areas Act materially affects them more than anybody else, the Africans being the least affected. The Indian with the back ground he so proudly claims to have, has exerted himself mightily little for anyone to have any regard for it. And it is this which hurts the African.

New Outlook Required

Mr. Ngubane has referred to the N.I.O. and a section of the Indian Press who, far from trying to befriend the Africans and help them in their great struggle for emancipation, are trying to play the part of "Rhengu" by collaborating with the Government to crush them or to get their own material interests safeguarded at the expense of the African. Past experience should have taught them that that is not going to pay, but that, on the contrary, it may cause incalculable harm not only to themselves but to their whole community. The time has come when the Indians—the merchant class in particular, who by their material wealth are looked upon as holding a leading position in the community must have an entirely new outlook in their relations with the Africans. The time has passed when the latter can be regarded as an insignificant people worthy only of their exploitation. It will be well for the White ruler too to realise this fact. There is a rapidly growing consciousness among the Africans. They are no longer prepared to tolerate such things. They honestly and sincerely mean to recover their manhood which has been snatched away from them by violence or by non-violence. Thus they have been inspired to adopt the non-violent way as taught by Mahatma Gandhi is a blessing for South Africa. If Indians wish to be true to Mahatma Gandhi, by whom they swear from the house tops at all times they must not play the leadership but make common cause with the Africans in their great struggle and be and act as their humble servants, not out of any fear complex but because humility is the hall-mark of Truth and Non-violence and in truth humility lies real service to the down-trodden humanity.

Most Unfortunate Thing

One of the most unfortunate things about the African people is that they have not one single organ which can be said to represent their voice. The so-called African papers that exist do not express the true sentiments of the Africans. They benefit mainly the European syndicates by whom they are owned and feed the Africans with stuff that would result in stultifying their national spirit, growth and advancement. Some of these papers have gone to the extreme of devoting much of their space to poisoning the relations between the Indian and the African. To create friction between the Indian and the African seems to be the object some of them have set themselves—as if Indo African conflict will make the African move forward a little faster. These have large tirades and can therefore easily poison the minds of the Africans. Fully conscious of this fact, "Indian Opinion," which has the welfare of the Africans truly at heart, has deemed it its duty to open up its own columns for their benefit and it is desired as soon as time, space and circumstances permit, to introduce the African languages in it.

Personal Contact

We entirely agree with Mr. Ngubane that there is a dire need now than ever before for closer personal contact not only between the Indians and the Africans in South Africa but between the people and the Government of India and the African people, if India really means to help the Africans in their struggle for emancipation. We whole-heartedly agree with the suggestions made by Mr. Ngubane in this respect.

In conclusion we cannot lay too much emphasis on the need for all non-Europeans in South Africa to make common cause to fighting a common enemy not losing sight of the fact that the enemy without may be just a reflection of the enemy within ourselves which is more dangerous than the one without. Our aim should therefore be to be good and to do good. If we can succeed in doing that we are sure all will eventually come right.

Republic Of India

INDIANS throughout the world will celebrate on Monday, January 26 the fourth anniversary of the attainment of the Republic of India. It is a great day in the history of India for on that day she threw off the foreign yoke and became completely independent. She is proud of her achievement more than any other country under the circumstances can be and she has every reason to be because unlike any other country she achieved her goal without flowing rivers of blood. The parties with which she had waged a non-violent war have not remained her enemies. On the contrary they have become her true friends. They are both living in amity and are helpful to one another in every aspect. How strange it is that while our Prime Minister Dr. D. F. Malra should declare India as South Africa's enemy, Mr. Aulic, the former Prime Minister of Britain, with whom India had fought so bitterly for over half a century and had her Government to completely retire from India, should pay her such a glowing tribute and acknowledge her not only as the best friend of Britain but of the whole Western world. So being a Republic she is still the most useful partner in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Though India has made tremendous strides during the six years of her independence and four years of her complete independence in political, social, educational, economic and spiritual advancement and has helped to solve the problems of world peace and is still doing so successfully let her not be too proud. Let her not forget that she is held in high esteem by the outside world because of her high standard of culture and philosophy. It is in that respect that she is looked upon as the guiding star. Let her be ever conscious of that fact and fit herself for that great task and not become consciously or unconsciously an imitation of the materialism of the West. Let her not be entrapped in that glamour for if she does as she seems to be doing she will lose all she has gained and the same fate will await her as awaits the West. We must confess that we are not too enamoured of her rapid industrialisation. What we have been enamoured of is the great achievement of that simple little man but a great soul Vinoba Bhave, in settling the land problem and now in trying to settle the economic problem in a non-violent way by changing the hearts of the people. Though he is receiving scant publicity his achievement surpasses all other achievements and is really showing the way to the world to bring about real peace and happiness. India's relations with Pakistan are unfortunately not too good and her two sons representing the soul of India, Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan and Dr. Khan Sahib, are still pining in Pakistan jail for no crime whatsoever. How can India glory over her achievement when these things exist? How can there be any peace of mind for any true Indian? She must thank God for what she has been able to achieve and in a spirit of humility search within lest her own hands are not soiled, her own conscience not beguiled which is hindering a settlement of the problems that are still facing her. Let her search whether she is really honouring the memory of Mahatma Gandhi whom she regards as the "Father of the Nation," or whether she is betraying him. India is as much in need of light as the world at large is. We Indians to the outside world send to the President of the Republic of India, Dr. Rajendraprasad and to the Prime Minister Mr. Nehru our felicitations and pray that the Almighty may give them wisdom and courage to perform the very heavy task of guiding the destiny of our dear Motherland.

Apartheid Policy Responsible For Riots

The Committee convened by the Kimberley City Council to inquire into the riots in No. 2 Location in November, began its sitting in the City Hall last week. All the members of the Committee are Councillors. The first witness, the Venerable Archdeacon Wade, Rector of St. Matthew's Church, said the broad policy of apartheid brought about the conditions which led to the riots. Archdeacon Wade said there was little or no contact between the City Council and the location people. The housing position was far from satisfactory and unfulfilled promises had made many give up hope. The beer hall had been a major cause of the riots in the location. The strength of the beer served had been a bone of contention and when it was suggested the people concerned were arrested for preparing a concoction. Archdeacon Wade said that lighting in the location was an important factor. The lack of lighting was helping the isolation element. He said Natives found the beer hall in Kimberley unsatisfactory. Licences should be granted to individuals for the brewing of beer. As far as the bus service to the location was concerned, the staff did not exercise sufficient self-control when dealing with Africans. The Venerable Archdeacon H. E. Wraige said he attributed existing race relations to the policy of the present Government and its repressive legislation.

Study Of Educational Facilities

A five-man Natal University team, aided by the Natal Education Department is soon to start on a 12-month survey of all the available education facilities for Europeans, Natives, Indians and Coloureds in the Province. The team will be composed of four university graduates, holding education diplomas, under the leadership of Professor Arnold Lloyd, Dean of the Faculty of Education at the University of Natal. It will start sitting at the beginning of the university term and will visit all the centres in the Province where educational facilities are warranted and where such facilities are thought to be warranted. The aim is to find out the exact position with regard to available facilities at present. An official of the Education Department told the Press that there was a total of 298,204 children of all races attending schools in Natal at present. There were 50,681 European, 51,539 Indian, 7,305 Coloured and 178,686 Native. Out of this total there were 114,583 (40,535 European, 13,976 Indian, 4,666 Coloured, 55,306 Native) children attending Government schools, and 103,636 (4,655 European, 44,170 Indian, 2,505 Coloured, 112,306 Natives) attending Government-aided schools.

Segregation in Schools

The principle of race segregation in Coloured and Asiatic schools in the Transvaal, insofar as teachers and pupils is concerned, has been dropped from the provisions of the Draft Education Ordinance, which the select committee presented to the Provincial Council in Pretoria.

DUNCAN'S DEFIANCE

By C. W. M. GELL

THE very heat which is generated when Europeans discuss Patrick Duncan's conduct in joining the passive resistance movement constitutes one justification of his action. For it has challenged all those who believe in racial liberalism not merely to define their principles, but to express them in action at a time when it is socially invidious and even legally dangerous to do so. Duncan with his conspicuous has crossed the dividing line between passive sympathy with the non-European cause and active support for it. In doing so he has exposed the political and moral dilemma of our European liberals who, as an overseas critic recently said, have lately seemed to move so cautiously as to be in danger of not moving at all.

Duncan is a friend of mine. I have known something of how his mind has developed towards this decision and I think his motives deserve to be more widely known, even than his admirable statements have made them.

He has told himself that he has "thought defiance" for the last four years, ever since it became plain that Nationalist policy must precipitate a decisive crisis in our race relations. He and I and others realised that the only hopeful activity open to non-Europeans was civil disobedience—not, as many suppose, with the primary purpose of silencing the jails and embarrassing the authorities (though it may have that incidental consequence), but of shaking and shaking (the conscience of South Africa and the world. We watched with admiration the unexpected dignity, restraint and discipline of the Defiance volunteers in the face of a certain amount of provocation and ill-treatment. We felt a common sorrow at the wave of violence which swept the Eastern Province and Johannesburg in October and November.

There was a moment then when Duncan faltered, afraid that more violence was likely and would betray the campaign's early promise. But it gradually became clear that the riotous outburst of Defiance incidents or involve Defiance leadership, that in three out of the four towns there appeared to have been some police or administrative provocation which, while not amounting to murder and arson, at least explained how the general racial tension fomented by the Government's policies was exploited by big game and criminals for their own ends. The circumstances which provoked civil disobedience are inevitably such that they may lead to explosions of violence. Those who are responsible for the circumstances do not have the right to blame passive resistance to their policies, for the violence which those policies engender. There can be no more denying threefold indictment of Nationalist policy than the Government's refusal to appoint a judicial commission of inquiry, the irresponsible and sensational expansions of the riot press, and by Messrs. Swart, Verwoerd, Louw, Strijdom and others, and the palpably false identification of the Defiance Campaign with Mau Mau terrorism.

A little belatedly and perhaps not quite as unambiguously as we hoped, the leaders of the African National Congress condemned the violence and re-affirmed their adherence to the principle of non-violence. And Duncan decided that he must take the step for which he had prepared earlier in the year by resignation from the Receptacle service and settling on a farm within the Free State border.

Now here, I think, his motives have been misrepresented. The first and most widely published criticism was that of all the most influential English-language critics, which was to his action at Germiston location on December 2 "a slight and an embarrassment" to the electoral prospects of the present political Opposition as well as a threat to the conception of "White Supremacy with justice" which it professes.

Duncan was not unaware that his action might cost the Opposition a few fleeting votes. He did not wish to give the Nationalists any gratuitous assistance. But he is one of those many liberal South Africans who believe that the U.P.'s greatest weakness is its failure to oppose the Nationalists' fundamental principles with any principle of its own at all. If Duncan's defiance embarrassed the U.P., the blame must lie rather with the U.P.'s reluctance to think out any colour policy of its own, distinctive in principle from that of the Nationalists. Thus, to blame Duncan for the embarrassment is to commit the same error of logic as the Nationalists do, when they blame the Defiance Campaign for the riots. It is to confuse a secondary effect with the primary cause.

Secondly, two other considerations decisively outweighed these short term arguments of political expediency in Duncan's mind. The first was that the hysterical and modulated thinking which followed the riots dangerously increased the risk of the non-Europeans coming to believe that the head of every White man was against them. Both the English and Afrikaans press indulged in political leading articles more or less implicating the Defiance movement and the whole African community in what had happened. The Nationalists, who had systematically broken down all bridges between Europeans and non-Europeans, sought the maximum party advantage by misrepresenting the facts. "The Opposition paid lip service to 'conciliation,'" but declined to consider the consequences without which conciliation is meaningless. Even municipalities and individuals with a long and practical liberal record momentarily went into reverse, though there were honourable exceptions and others who quickly recovered their faith and courage. But it was against this background that Duncan made his decision. And time may yet prove that his gesture made its small but not unimportant contribution towards preventing the dual metropolis of all Whites appealing and being opposed by all non-Whites.

Thirdly, there is a little publicised struggle going on within the African and Indian Congresses between the liberal and communal leaders. I am speaking now of genuine communists, not the comic-opera category of "statutory communism" with which Mr. Swart seems to befuddle the laity and bespatter all opponents of the Government's racial ideology. There are several communists among the non-European leaders, notably in the Transvaal, whose adherence to non-violence is purely temporary and tactical. But there may be not yet dominate the Congresses. The danger is that, if the genuine liberals among the Congress leaders—men like ex-Chief Luthuli, Drs. Moroka, Njongwe, Nankar, Professor Matthews, Mankel Goshit, Lucas Phillips—do not adopt any resolute by peaceful methods, they may be discredited by their failure and the refusal of Europeans to recognise them as spokesmen of their people. In an effort to bring home to the public the realities of the present situation, some European liberals are saying that there are no "moderate" non-European leaders in the sense that there are none with any followers among their own people who are less "extreme" than the official policy of the A.N.C., this is true enough. But the present A.N.C. policy is very "moderate" compared with what it would be if the racial extremists and communists were in control of the Congresses. Common sense and European self-interest both urge us to come in terms with the non-European movement which reasonable men still have the confidence of their people.

Duncan is very conscious of this and realises better than most Europeans how little time is left for an honourable and ethical compromise before, in their anger, frustration and ignorance, the non-Europeans go over into irreconcilable hostility towards all Whites men. Weighing all these considerations and the apathy of the larger part of his fellow Whites, he has decided that his conscience as a Christian and his love of South Africa required him to support actively the non-violent campaign for justice and a larger future for the underprivileged four-fifths of his fellow-countrymen. In doing so, he has moved a few to join him and stirred a great many more consciences in a way that more political skillfulness could not have done. When someone described him and his companions as "the only Whites with clear consciences," they acknowledged the decisive nature of his deed.

Some sincere and practical workers for racial co-operation may question the manner or timing of Duncan's action. He would himself be impatient only with those who have done nothing but talk, or with those whose small-mindedness would censor their intention of maintaining perpetual White domination in a thinly-veiled disguise. His message to us is twofold. First that "within the lifetime of many of us, our non-White fellow citizens will be smothered." We can only choose whether it happens with violence that would destroy South Africa, or by agreement and mutual trust. Secondly that our condition is so critical that it is not enough to cast a vote once in five years and leave the rest to the politicians. There is an active political leader today among the Europeans openly dedicated to an ethical solution of the racial question, because none believes the electorate would support him. We have to choose that to grace to the non-Europeans that we mean to meet their legitimate aspirations and to our politicians that it will pay them and South Africa to do so to grace by our deeds that we have principles, and mean to stand by them, whatever the cost in personal sacrifice or social ostracism.

Within the limits of his individual effort, that is what Oppen has tried to do, stressing the solidarity of our common humanity overruling racial differences. Let those who criticise him prove their sincerity and convince by their own deeds and, today. For we have no longer enough. And those who are not yet prepared in some manner to take their stand actively, forfeit the right to criticise those who do.

THE WIDER WORLD

By JOHN GILD

"WHEN MALAN GOES"

THE new session will give the Union Parliament its first opportunity to debate the significance of the defence campaign. The campaign began just as Parliament adjourned last year at the end of June. No doubt there will be plenty of wild words, and not only from the Government side. For one of the saddest things in the country today is the failure of the Opposition to oppose the Government in an effective fashion. That is why it is so dishonest to pretend that "when Malan goes," all will be well. The United Party, better organised than at the last election, is hard at work, assisted by the world's English daily papers, pointing across the sea that it is only the Nationalists who have ruined race relations. People must be persuaded that a change of government will produce results of progress. It is, of course, true that it would be a good thing to get rid of the Malan Government. But it would be foolish for white people to delude themselves with the belief that the United Party could speedily put matters right. Mr. Struwig and the malcontent men who surround him have given no sign that they perceive, even dimly, how to relax tensions, let alone how to "solve the problem." They are too eager to get back to the fruits of office that they have given no serious thought to anything but slogans like "when Malan goes." As long as they continue to evade realities, no Indian or African can have faith in any organisation but one built up by the efforts of his own people.

New Liberal Groups

There are, fortunately, some Europeans who recognise that neither of the major political parties is at present capable of reconstructing South Africa on new foundations. As David Davidson put it in his superb book, "Report on South and Africa," it is to white people merely a question of "which white supremacy" shall rule. Malan's brand of Strauss, and to understand that struggle is "little better than a shabby farce." But there are increasing numbers of Europeans with enlightened minds who decline to take part in the work of the United Party. These people are now searching for the best form of activity for their political energies,

They have formed loose liberal groups in Capetown, Johannesburg and Mafeking, and they are meeting shortly at the Cape to discuss linking their groups to produce a common purpose. Alan Paton and Margaret Nollinger are among those interested in this movement, but the groups are still leaderless. Another weakness is the fact that "liberal" is an exceedingly vague term which covers all sorts of politically hopeless and unhappy men and women. Some of these people are, however, beginning to see that in the Congress movement lies the best hope of progress in race relations. Freedom cannot be given to non-Europeans on a plate held out to them by Europeans. It can be achieved only by long and patient exercises on the part of those who want it. Europeans can greatly help, above all by making the movement inter-racial and co-operative in its aims, but the effective demand must come from those who will gain most by its success.

American Foreign Policy

President Eisenhower has in the coming months to make important decisions in the foreign policy he has chosen Mr. John Foster Dulles as his chief adviser. All his life Mr. Dulles has cherished the ambition to be Secretary of State, a position held nearly 60 years ago by his grandfather. As a Wall Street lawyer, Mr. Dulles was a partner in one of the world's most influential law firms, one which counted foreign governments among its clients, including leading Nazi leaders. He is also a keen Christian, a pillar of the Presbyterian Church. As the main author of the peace treaty with Japan, he antagonised some of America's friends, including Mr. Anthony Eden, by his brusque handling of their objections. Like his grandfather, Mr. Dulles will be partial towards Japan, and not merely for sentimental reasons. Japan is making great strides forward in re-building its industries. To the endless quest for allies in the cold war, the United States feels that it cannot rely on India. So it is leaning heavily towards Japan. This is part of the same basic design to oppose the new China. Some of the Republicans who put Mr. Eisenhower into the presidency, don't trouble to hide their demand for action against China. Unlike Britain and India the United States has refused to recognise the Communist Government. Whether the new Administration in Washington will be pushed into an even more aggressive policy—that remains to be seen. Perhaps Americans will realise, before it is too late, that no good can come in mankind from war in Asia.

Sympathy Abroad

More news has now come from "Americans for South African Resistance," the new society formed to show sympathy with the defence campaign. Among its sponsors are Dr. Marjorie Johnson, president of

Howard University (for Negroes) in Washington, Mr. Roger Baldwin, a famous figure in the American Civil Liberties Union, and Mr. Norman Thomas, leader of the Socialist Party. The joint chairmen are the Rev. Donald Harrington and the Rev. Charles F. Frigg. The address is 415 West 144th Street, New York 32, and the secretary is Mr. George M. Mosser. An announcement quotes a letter from one of the younger leaders of the African National Congress, who wrote "There has been a transformation in the way of thinking of the Africans. . . . They are on the march, and whatever the result of the present defence campaign, even if it ends in total defeat at the hands of the Government, South Africa will never be the same again."

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

STRAINS ON AFRO-INDIAN ALLIANCE

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

EVEN in the best of times and in the happiest of countries an arrangement like the Indo-African alliance against colour discrimination would have been a delicate affair. In a country like South Africa, at the present moment, it has within it complicated tensions of a highly explosive nature. For this reason alone, if for nothing else, it behoves the partners to the alliance to treat it with the realistic care it deserves.

In recent months the African has discerned certain trends among his allies which made him feel that his national pride was being insulted or that certain sections of the Indian community were bent on giving a twist to the resistance movement which would give to it a character that would redound only to their own exclusive credit and reveal African contributions in poor light.

I shall confine myself to two events—the first in this country and the second in India because my purpose is not to set out communities involved in a row about these things nor to give our enemies clues of where the alliance is weakest. These two incidents are selected because they are indicative of unhappy trends and in themselves are too dynamic given to our mutual enemies by those whom we have the right to claim as friends.

The first case concerns the Natal Indian Organisation. This body is in a very unique position. To the average African, it is more representative of Indian opinion than even the Indian Congress. This is a mere statement of fact and does not in any way reflect my own opinion. Somehow, the average African feels that the N.I.O. is more expressive of Indian opinion than the Congress.

There are two reasons for this. The clearest picture that the average African has is of the Indian as a trader and since the N.I.O. represents the merchant class it is accepted as the real representative of the Indian community.

Secondly, the African people, I suppose like most Indians against the African, have not as yet shed all their suspicions against the Indian—suspicions based on their experiences with the trader class and which led to the 1949 riots. The riots were, in actual fact, a demonstration against the merchant class, but then the African regards the merchant class as the leaders of the Indian community as well. So that the N.I.O. stands in the position of exceptional responsibility vis-à-vis the Indian people in African eyes.

The ordinary Indian factory hand finds it hard to understand African suspicions of him—whereas the African judges him in terms of his (the Indian's) merchant class.

Plot To Dynamite Campaign

Reports circulating in Durban suggest that the N.I.O. is on a plot to dynamite the resistance campaign acting in collaboration with the Minister of the Interior. The N.I.O. counterblast, it is being said, might be started in the form of an open denunciation of the campaign followed by a series of underground negotiations with the Government which would end up with the Government seeing to these denunciations "responsible Indian opinion." From there the way will be clear for drastic laws to be passed against the resisters here and for a heated exchange between the Union Government and India at U.N.O. based on the "responsible" denunciations.

These reports might be based on fact or they might be rumour. But against what is going on in the N.I.O. at the moment, and which we need not bring to the light of day at this stage, African anxieties are not altogether without foundation. This is particularly the case when it is remembered that the N.I.O. itself has complicated the situation by its own reluctance to enable the African and the world to know precisely where it stands on the resistance movement. It is for the N.I.O. to dispel the mists of suspicion surrounding its activities.

The second instance concerns the behaviour of sections of the Indian Press here and very often in India. The treatment meted out to African leaders and African contributions by important sections of the Indian Press at times does little to cement Afro-Indian relations. Both in this country and in India the resistance movement is often reported as though it were an Indian movement. The impression is being sedulously created that the African leaders of the struggle are juniors to their Indian counterparts.

One has to contrast the behaviour of Indian journalists with the reports we get from the British and the United States Press. From those sections which we have grown to regard as impartial we get fair and accurate reports which do not play down anything vital done by either the African or the Indian. As much cannot be said of the sections of the Indian Press under discussion: a Press we have every right to expect to be friendly—more friendly than papers from England and America.

'Hindustan Times'

A case in point is a recent editorial in the December 28, 1952 issue of the 'Overseas Hindustan Times'. Discussing the entry of the Whites into the campaign and the Indian community's role in it, the editorial concludes: "The attainment of independence by India could not fail to produce its effect on Indians in South Africa and the unexpected success which their movement has attained is as much a tribute to their leadership as to the readiness with which the somewhat mercurial African has risen to the call for vigorous and dignified which a non-violent resistance campaign enjoins."

Two things are worthy of note here. The editor is quite sure that the resistance campaign is an Indian movement, led by the Indians. Secondly he goes out of his way to cast aspersions on what he calls the "somewhat mercurial Africans."

The 'Hindustan Times' is one of the most powerful papers in India and wields considerable influence on both the people and on the policy of the Indian Government. What is more, it has a world circulation. So that whatever it says is bound to be read right round the world. The damage such a paper can do is obvious.

In the editorial under review the editor has allowed himself to be guilty of two unfortunate errors. He has his facts all wrong and, secondly, has gone out of his way to cast aspersions on the African which are quite uncalled for.

Of the 8,000 people who have gone to jail so far the percentage of Indians does not in any way suggest that they regard the campaign as theirs. At the very best, the numbers they have sent to jail have been of little more than token dimension. To call the campaign theirs creates the impression that somebody somewhere wants to play down the achievements of the "somewhat mercurial African" and play up, even at the cost of exaggerating and distorting facts, the achievements of the Indian. We, Africans, never begrudge the Indian his due. We have never concealed our admiration for his perfect mastery of the creed of non-violence, nor have we concealed our desire to learn from him. We are indebted to the Indian for the help he has generously given us. But we do not want him to make unfair claims at our expense.

Wrong Facts

Even on the plane of leadership, the editor's facts are all wrong. Up to now, hardly more than two prominent Indians, barring the former Communists, have come out courageously in support of the African defence campaign. The editor probably had the National Joint Action Council of the resistance movement in mind when he wrote of leadership. But even here the Africans and the Indians are evenly represented—an African gesture of appreciation to the Indian for his part in the campaign. At the very best, equal representation should mean joint leadership and nothing more.

I must, on behalf of the African, express strong disapproval of barbed adjectival qualifications used to describe my people because they are not only in bad taste but also because they do not in any way create better understanding between the Indians and ourselves. In them is implied a slur on the African community and as a result on the valiant men and women who have made colossal sacrifices to lead us which no self-respecting African can tolerate. We expect these things to come from the opponents of our just cause and not from declared friends.

I appreciate the fact that there is a lot of ignorance about the African in India, or in America, England and elsewhere. But the remedy for this lies in the hands of the Indian Press and Radio. I think it is in the interest of the cause which we and the people of India hold dear—the attainment of human freedom through non-violence—that the Indian Press should arrange with African journalists in this country to give it regular contributions describing conditions and developments in the African community. Leading African personalities should be asked even to prepare talks to enlighten the people of India on going on in the African community—to be broadcast through All-India Radio.

Secondly, we must set in motion a movement for the exchange of correspondence between our two peoples so that they should build up personal friendships and get to understand India's truly great cultural attainments—if to seal the bonds of comradeship with the Indian here. It is extremely difficult for the African—I mean even the well-educated African, to build up a strong and abiding friendship with the Indian here. The Indian lives in his own cloister, telling us of his great culture, when he does nothing to make us understand it and through it to understand him better.

Thirdly, even in the resistance movement one would like to see India working in direct consultation with the Africans. Up to now the main intermediaries between ourselves and the people of India have been individuals who are not in real sympathy with our national aspirations. And if the picture they have given India of ourselves has been unfortunate, it has only complicated relations between the Indian and the African here.

Our alliance with the Indian here is always subject to very many stresses from our common oppressor. If we will not betray our struggle, we and the Indians need to march arm in arm as men and equals. Anything which drives us off this course must be subtly weeded out or exposed, for ours is the destiny to make South Africa a land fit for free men to live in.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. B. Parmesar, well-known residents of Durban celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at St. Anthony's Hall on Saturday, January 16. The Hall was filled by a large crowd of men and women. Quite a large number being relatives of the Parmesars. Mr. and Mrs. Parmesar very happily cut the wedding cake specially made by Mrs. Jithoo and the guests present partook of the light refreshments that were served. Congratulatory messages were received from all over the Union and other places. Mr. S. L. Singh acted as the M.C. and among the speakers were Senator Clarkson, V. Lawrence, Manilal Gandhi, M. B. Naidoo, J. W. Godfrey, P. R. Luther, Mrs. A. Christopher, Dr. Anusuya Singh, Pundit Jugmohan, R. Sanyal, M. Ramoathar, C. Varadachariu and others. Songs specially composed for the occasion were sung. Music was supplied by the Tonic and his Quintette orchestra. After Mr. and Mrs. Parmesar expressed their hearty thanks for the eulogistic terms in which the speakers had referred to them and for their good wishes the very pleasant and happy function terminated with an expression of gratitude by Mr. R. Chetani one of the sons-in-law.

S.A. Indian Soccer Team To Tour India

A South African Indian football team will leave South Africa on May 3 for a six weeks' tour of India. The team of 17 players, a manager and a trainer will leave Durban on the Karanja on May 3 and arrive at Bombay on May 24. After a tour of six weeks they will return in the Kampala, which leaves Bombay on July 9. The proposed itinerary for the tour will be discussed at a council meeting of the S.A.I.F.A. in Durban on January 25. The S.A.I.F.A. had proposed 14 matches, including three Tests. The team will most probably be selected at the end of March, and it is probable that fixtures throughout the country will commence a month earlier to give the selectors an opportunity of studying the form of players.

Our America Letter

By HOMER A. JACK

Chicago, January 8.

THE World Council of Churches is the new, international Protestant body organized in Amsterdam in 1948. At its first meeting, the world Council passed strong statements condemning racial discrimination and segregation within and outside the churches. In 1950, the Central Committee of the World Council, meeting in Toronto, Canada, proposed that a multi-racial, inter-denominational delegation be sent to the Union of South Africa. Both the Dutch Reformed Church in South Africa and the English-speaking churches in South Africa responded by indicating that the time was not ripe to receive such a multi-racial delegation. Instead, the World Council in April and May 1952 sent its Hollander general secretary, Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft to South Africa.

While I was visiting South Africa in the summer of 1952, I heard rumors of the first draft of Visser 't Hooft's report to the World Council. Some African churchmen said they saw the draft and felt it was a good report. Churches from other, more liberal denominations in South Africa also said they saw the first draft and also felt it was a good report. This ambiguous reaction intrigued me, but it was not until last week that I finally saw a copy of the report entitled, "Christianity, Race, and South African People." It is published as a 35-page pamphlet by the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America.

This is a report to the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches which, at this writing, is meeting in Lucknow, India. What the Central Committee will do with the report, except file and forget it, is problematical. But the report itself remains a curious document meriting comment. Dr. Visser 't Hooft admits at the onset that his observations are "not a general report on conditions in South African churches." Throughout the report one sees that Visser 't Hooft is more the theologian and the ecclesiastical politician than the sociologist and the religious prophet. He is best at analyzing the theological basis of apartheid and best at concluding all churches and making none of them angry (for his job as general secretary of the World Council is to keep all the denominations now members of the Council still members and to induce others which are not yet members to join).

There are evidences in the report that Dr. Visser 't Hooft was well wine and dined by his fellow Dutchmen, however many gentlemen removed. He seems to endorse the apartheid-created medical school for non-whites in Natal and he criticizes the African National Congress. He echoes the widespread canon in white circles that "a good deal of the reporting concerning South Africa is quite definitely misleading." He almost implies that apartheid could be given a fully constructive meaning.

Dr. Visser 't Hooft's recommendations and suggestions are essentially ecclesiastical, chief among them being the negative suggestion that the World Council of Churches should not send a multi-racial delegation to South Africa at this time since it "might well create misunderstanding rather than understanding." This, again, might be good politics for the World Council of Churches, but is a denial of the religious principles which the World Council has consistently propounded. Why should it hesitate at this time to send a delegation to South Africa, one containing some non-whites? What could be more important than at least to try to send a delegation including some outstanding non-European clergymen? Their visit to the South African churches could only do good if the non-Europeans were allowed to enter the country and, come to think of it, no harm could possibly be done if it got to be known that some distinguished non-European representatives from the World Council of Churches were barred.

These are the personal reactions to this report on South Africa by this correspondent, but let us turn to the January 5th issue of "The Christian Century," most important weekly of interdenominational Protestantism. It devoted a leading editorial to the Visser 't Hooft report and is critical. It likened the report to a speech by an American president which initially was called "very able" but, on second thought, someone asked, "On what side of the question was the speech?"

The editors of the powerful "Christian Century" magazine state plainly, "We question whether there is much in this report to offer help to Christians and churches to South Africa in dealing with a problem of such dimensions and perplexity." It plainly says that with the "fundamental human revolt of the African Christianity is that conflict must reckon." If Christianity must come into conflict with the colonial order, "then it must accept the penalties of that conflict." Above all, "The Christian enterprise must pay whatever price is involved to free itself from seeming to be—and frequently being—a part of the historically doomed colonial order." This is the kind of tough judgment which some Christian body should make about South Africa, a kind of judgment which tragically did not result from the two-month visit of Visser 't Hooft.

The parade of books published about Mahatma Gandhi continues unabated. The latest is "Mahatma Gandhi: Fascist Revolutionary," by Haridas T. Muzumdar and published in New York by Scribner. This slim volume is one of a dozen in the Twentieth Century Library, a new series about "those thinkers of the last hundred years who have most influenced the intellectual currents of our time." Mahatma Gandhi follows in this collection such giants as Charles Darwin, Albert Einstein, and Sigmund Freud.

Professor Muzumdar is a well known American of Indian origin who has interpreted Gandhi to America for more than three decades. This is his fifth book on Gandhi and contains interesting chapters on Gandhi's economics and pedagogy as well as an analysis on his "moral equivalent of war." Best news for the future of the Gandhi literature in America is that John Haynes Holmes, longtime interpreter of Gandhi to the West, is bringing out a new volume on Gandhi which Harper will publish next autumn under the title, "My Gandhi."

The defiance campaign in South Africa has continued to lead its way into the American press. When Patrick Duncan and Nagpal Gandhi defied the law in December, this was front page news in many American newspapers and the correspondent first heard about it over a television news programme. The non-white press in America played up the facts that Dr. Ralph Bunche, prominent American Negro, was named to the three-man committee of the United Nations to investigate apartheid in the Union of South Africa... This correspondent's articles on his observations of the Union of South Africa have begun to appear in "The Courier," largest non-white newspaper in America with editions in 14 metropolitan centres.

Potpourri: Adlai Stevenson, retiring governor of the State of Illinois and past candidate for the presidency, has announced his plan to visit India on a proposed tour of the Far East. Efforts are being made to induce him also to visit Africa... It is rumoured that United States Justice William O. Douglas, who has visited Asia several times in recent years, will visit Africa next summer. This is another indication of the growing interest about Africa on the part of the American people and its leaders... Michael Scott, who has been observing the United Nations General Assembly sessions in New York City for the past several months, was one of ten persons named on the 1952 honour roll for democracy by the Chicago Defender, large non-white weekly published in Chicago.

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

Imagine a world without God, and then we shall see. Without God the Universe loses its meanings; without God our ideals are dreams and our hopes are bubbles; without God's faith feet stand on nothing; without God man sinks down essentially to the level of the brute. But with God, a real God, and a God of infinite wisdom and love, the Universe is alive, hope lights eternal fires, love reigns in all worlds; and there is no good thing on earth or in heaven that is not waiting to be ours.

—J. T. Sunderland.

Not all the armies of all the empires of earth can crush the spirit of one true man, and that our man will prevail.

—Terence MacSweney.

Long, long is the way, rugged is the ground and the weary steps must be trodden with bleeding feet, and bleeding hearts.

—Dr. Rash Behari Ghose.

THUS SPAKE THE MAHATMA . . .

In every great cause it is not the number of fighters that count, but it is the quality of which they are made that becomes the deciding factor. The greatest prophets, Zoroaster, Buddha, Jesus, Mohammed—they all stood alone . . . But they had living faith in themselves and their God, and believing as they did that God was on their side, they never felt lonely.

Passive Resistance cannot proceed a step without fearlessness. Those alone can follow the path to the end who are free from fear, whether as to their possessions, their false honour, their relatives, the government, bodily injuries or death.

Five years ago on this day we lost him . . . With choked voices and bended heads, with heavy hearts and weeping tears . . . we lost a prince among men—God lived in him and he lived in God. Even now we long for the touch of that vanished hand and the voice that is no more, and no more that divine touch to soothe. His stature reached the heavens—the greatest man of our ages gone by and ages to come.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 30TH JANUARY, 1953

Talk Of A Truce

THERE have been talks of a truce on the resistance front for some time now. Its advocates, who include outstanding men on all sides of the colour line, argue that the defiance campaign has made a definite impression on the White people of South Africa and that it has done this in such a permanent way that the Government has been forced to recognise it.

In view of these two facts and with an eye on the general elections in another two or three months, these people have for some time now been urging the leaders of the resistance movement to call a truce. Such a move, it is said, will be a realistic gesture of goodwill designed first to prevent the prevailing racial tension developing into a deadlock; second, to impress and, therefore strengthen, that section of European opinion which has begun to recognise the reasonableness with which the non-European has put forward his case and, thirdly, to create a situation which might make consultation and negotiation between the non-Whites and those White sections willing to do this, possible.

The case for a truce seen in this light is formidable. If the non-Europeans can declare a truce at this stage they would not lose the initiative which they have bought at very great cost—in terms of human suffering and sacrifice. On the other hand, one of the immediate gains would be the creation of a situation in which the Europeans would have to demonstrate their own goodwill by returning a slightly better Government than Dr. Malan, free from duress.

In this light, such a truce would not in any way be the abandonment of anything by the resisters. On the contrary, it would strengthen their case immeasurably by showing that the non-European appreciates the difficulties with which some of his White countrymen are faced and that id so far as lies in his power, he is not willing to do anything to complicate things for them unnecessarily. This, we believe, is the case of the advocates of a truce in a nutshell.

The other side of the case deserves to be stated as well. The resister notes with appreciation that his sacrifices have made a favourable impression on sections of European opinion. He notes, also, that this section has not gone out of its way to show much understanding of his own difficulties. Add to this the fact that the Government is drafting draconian legislation to crush the resistance movement in which it might be supported by some of these people. In fact, "reasonableness" has not stopped the introduction of the hated influx control measures at Port Elizabeth.

While men of goodwill might be strengthened by a truce the resister believes that it would be a futile gesture for him to say he is going to strengthen an unknown quantity. With the Government determined to be unreasonable, the resister feels that for him to declare a truce would be justification of everything the Government has done to date to humiliate the non-European people and would enable the Malanites to go to the country and say: "See! We cracked the whip and the leaders of the resistance movement went skulking into their bunk-beds. Firmness is what the non-Whites understand. If you return us to power, we promise to deal more firmly with them and make mincemeat of the resistance campaign."

It should be recognised that the resister regards himself as a man of honour and principle and rightly believes that in the face of brutality and unreason, with which there can be no compromise, he would rather go down fighting than capitulate in the vain hope that the race-haters might see better reason.

A complicating factor is the attitude of the United Party, which might form the next Government. In the fight against Malanism, it does not fight with the will to win. This weakness places the resister in the position where he has every reason to fear that he might fall into a trap where he might be betrayed by the very people whom he shall have helped to come to power. In the absence of any definite and concrete proposals for reform, the resister has every right to doubt the intentions of the United Party.

In our view, however, the South African situation is more than normally complicated and where opportunities present themselves of reasonable and honourable compromises, neither the non-Europeans nor the Whites should let them go. Equality with the Whiteman does not and should never mean that we non-Whites have everything our own way. It means as it should mean that at all times we shall gladly meet the other man as far as we would like him to meet us.

Against this background, the call for a truce is something that deserves the serious consideration of the leaders of the non-White people. Particularly is this the case when it is remembered that as these remarks are being written Parliament has before it a motion by Col. Pilkington-Jordan asking the Government to meet the accredited leaders of the non-European people. The motion is obviously supported by the United Party, of which Col. Pil-kington-Jordan is a member. The South African Labour Party has already committed itself to consultation with the non-Europeans. Even the Liberals, through the Institute of Race Relations, are working on plans to meet the leaders of the non-European people.

From these moves it is quite clear that the anti-Malan sections of White opinion want to meet the non-European people. The principle is one which should be acceptable to men and women who have pledged themselves to use only persuasion and non-violence to ensure respect for their wishes. The terms on which such consultation shall be made is strictly a matter for the leaders of non-European thought.

The non-Europeans would be quite justified in ignoring the appeals for a truce—because there always lurks behind them the threat of treachery, either intended or not intended. The non-European can argue that he has not got the time to waste taking risks with the destiny of ten million souls. But if we want to build a united nation and not just set up a black tyranny in place of the White, we shall do well to remember that a statesman can afford to negotiate from strength. And the situation in which all of us as South Africans are, calls for statesmanship. For this reason alone, a positive response to the appeals for a truce until after the elections is something which the leaders of the resistance movement should sincerely and urgently consider.

NOTES

Parliament To Be Asked To Seek Non-European Co-Operation

Notice of a motion that it was essential, in the interest of national unity and internal peace, that the Government should seek the co-operation of accredited and responsible non-European leaders, with a view to the removal of existing racial tensions, was given in the Assembly today by Col. R. D. P. Jordan (U.P., Rondebosch).

Institute To Convene Interracial Conference

A nation-wide conference of responsible people from all races is soon to be called by the Institute of Race Relations. This was decided at the Institute's council meeting in Capetown. The resolved said that as it was urgently necessary to re-establish contact with all races this conference should be called without delay. The council welcomed the establishment of labour bureaux with their aims to increase the Africans' chances of finding work and to reduce the African labour wage provided these bureaux were not the only means through which Africans could find work. Mr. J. D. Reinhardt Jones was re-elected president.

D.R.C. Worried By Officials' Discourtesy To Africans

The discourtesy towards Natives sometimes shown by State and railway officials is listed by the "Kerkbode," organ of the biggest Dutch Reformed Church, as complicating factor in South Africa's race problems. Quoting an account of Native urbanization by Prof N. J. J. Olivier, the "Kerkbode" states in a leading article that only a minute proportion of the Africans streaming into the cities are Christians and a high percentage are almost completely uncivilized. "What they learn from their first encounter with White people is certainly not calculated to simplify this great problem. "At the third class ticket office, the police station, the labour bureau and other points of contact things do not always go well. "He who has an ear to hear overheard more than one rough word that makes one shudder, while the strictly matter of fact attitude typical of the ordinary official—and excepted of him—does not leave much room for humane, let alone Christian considerations. "High wages, bad trading matter, strong temptations, much drink and a crowd of other dangers confront these improving masses, but the friendly word and Christian helpfulness are far rarer in our over-hasty society. "The "Kerkbode" appeals to every believing Afrikaner to become a missionary by word and deed in his own surroundings.

Government Paper Demands Indian Boycott

"Transvaal" (Nationalist) suggests a boycott of Indian traders by Europeans as a means of persuading Indians to leave the country. "There is fear among the Indians that the Apartheid laws of the Government will in the long run compel them to leave the Union in large numbers," says the newspaper. "If this should come about few Europeans and non-Europeans would third a tear. "The time has arrived when every member of the public should help to speed the departure of the Indians. We have often remarked on the sad phenomenon that Afrikaners, who are an example in their fellowmen in different spheres, still buy from Indians, thus jeopardizing the future of their own people and their posterity. "Let all Europeans stop buying from Indians for six months and the problem will be half solved already. Everything cannot be expected of the authorities, and success can only be attained if the public plays its part. Can anyone who calls himself a Nationalist refuse to help?"

Afrikaner Clergyman On Whiteman's Fears

Total apartheid was fair and liberal if it was fairly and liberally applied, the Rev. J. Reyneke, an executive member of the South African Institute of Race Relations said at the Institute's discussion on racial tension and racial policies in Cape Town today. A policy of segregation, he said, "might lead to the creation of a non-White block holding the balance of power. This block might force the passing of legislation leading to universal adult suffrage. "It is not inconceivable that in 30 years time all adults in South Africa—Black and White, educated and uneducated, civilized and uncivilized—will have the suffrage. Then we will have a new tyranny—the tyranny of numbers. "If this comes to pass, many White people will say 'This is no place for me.' "But the Afrikaners will say 'We cannot withdraw. South Africa is our home. We have no back door. We must hold what we have. We can see what is coming and wish to prevent it.' "On the policy of the Institute, Mr. Reyneke said, "we are here to create good relations between Black and White. We must champion the cause of the non-Whites, help them and comfort them. But don't let us forget that by placing one section of the community we may harm the race relations we are seeking to promote. "We must consider the good things, the positive accomplishments. The Government will spend £8,000,000 this year on African education. There are more African children at school in South Africa than White—but you won't hear Michael Scott say that at U.N."

Indians Pass Resolution

On Defiance

The steering committee on the 58th session of the Indian National Congress passed a resolution calling on the "civilized" nations to look upon the struggle of the satyagrahis—passive resisters in the spirit of the late Mahatma Gandhi in South Africa as a "struggle of mankind for freedom of opportunity and racial equality." The resolution called upon South Africans of Indian origin to support the passive resistance movement and to share the "sacrifices" of the resisters. The resolution also referred to the Union Government's "offences against the laws of humanity and the conduct of civilized nations."

A European's Fine Gesture

We must take note here of a wonderfully pleasant experience our representative had in Durban last week. He had gone to some Indian merchant to collect funds for a school being built at the Phoenix Settlement. A European called a stranger to our representative overheard the conversation he was having with the Indian merchant and without any solicitation offered to donate the sum of £10—10-0 because he considered the cause of education to be a great cause, for the future of the world depended on the enlightenment our children received and which allowed of no distinction based on class, colour or creed. The greatness of the gesture was in the spirit in which it was made. We are profoundly grateful to this European friend.

Medical Journal On

Skin Colour

Colour in the human skin depends on many factors, some hereditary and some environmental, but not all of them known, according to an editorial in the latest issue of the "South African Medical Journal." Although it is fairly certain that skin colour is determined genetically, it is by no means certain, how many pairs of genes control it, states the article. "But," it continues, "there is too much subjective bias in these matters, and adequate and objective research into this important problem will not be possible until prejudice has been eliminated, so that an objective assessment can be made. An appreciation is necessary of the underlying principle and arbitrary assumptions determining the features of race; but the way in which skin colour is inherited should make clear the dangers of relying on her layman's concept of how these things are determined." Skin colour and hair form are not correlated, states the journal, and these traits are inherited independently. But, what is "perfectly clear on the basis of the genetical determination of skin colour," is that a child born of Coloured parents, but with a skin indistinguishable from that of a White child has a skin as pure "as that of the original Caucasian ancestor."

Israel Delegation To U.N.

Condemns Racism

Speaking on racism in South Africa, Mr. S. Ellsiehr, Israel delegate to U.N., said, "this question has a special significance for my delegation. In the course of their long history, my people have known only too intimately the full meaning of racial discrimination and are sensitive to its implications whenever they occur. It is this conscious action of our own history and of general principles which must guide our policy in any case where the issue of discrimination arises." He added, "We hope that the Union of South Africa will realize the ever-growing sensitivity of many people and states in regard to the matter under discussion. We hope, too, that the Union of South Africa will find the way to comply with the wishes of the majority of this organization." In conclusion he said, "If this discussion will lead to direct negotiations between the parties with the aim of finding an honourable solution—it will mean great progress along the path of the peaceful co-existence of different peoples of differing origin and race."

Churches Condemn Race

Bar

All forms of racial discrimination were strongly condemned by members of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches meeting at Chicago (U.S.). After a long discussion in private, the committee reaffirmed the Amsterdam Assembly's protest against the exploitation of non-self-governing peoples and the flagrant violation of human rights, involved in racial discrimination. Mr. Clifford Marchmont, of the United States Protestant Episcopal Church, said that the churches had failed to set on reasonable standards of racial equality made by the Amsterdam Assembly, and he urged that no further statement should be made until the local churches had carried out these resolutions in their day-to-day life. Mr. Kenneth Grubb (Great Britain), chairman of the Committee of the Churches of International Affairs said that Christian leaders of liberal outlook in South Africa had told them that it would not be advisable at the moment to issue an emphatic protest about the present situation there. Dr. Henry H. Leliper (U.S.A.) told a press conference later of a Negro who, after being asked to leave a white church in America, was told, "We have you don't feel badly about this." The Negro replied, "Oh no, I was telling the Lord about it in my prayers, and he said, 'Hoo, you don't need to worry. I have been trying to get into that church myself for 25 years!'"

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

COMMUNISTS ADVOCATE A NEW RACIALISM

By C W M GELL

OUR South African Communists, both European and non-European, have always posed as the only sincere champions of racial equality and, conversely, as the only effective opponents of racial discrimination. The recent outbreak of anti-Semitism throughout Eastern Europe and Russia must, therefore, lead to a good deal of heart-teaching among their genuine idealists who have felt drawn to Communism for racial reasons.

Of course, I am not writing this article in the vain hope of converting any confirmed Communists who have already surrendered their consciences and intellectual freedom in the blind pursuit of an inexorable dialectic of history and the infallibility of the Universal Communist Party and its Russian directors. Such people have so toughened their digestive systems by generations of eating their own words that they are now willing to swallow anything and say they like it. They were organising resistance to fascism throughout the Western world in 1933-8, sabotaging the war effort of the "imperialists" in 1939-41 (after the Stalin-Hitler pact), leading the same imperial war effort in 1941-5 (after Germany had attacked Russia), turning again to industrial sabotage after 1945 (during the "friendly" period that preceded the Cold War), and finally trying to wreck the economic recovery of Western Europe by thwarting the Marshall Plan (though they only succeeded in their own satellite, Czechoslovakia).

Anyone who believes that this chauvinistic record is inspired by the desire to better the lot of the common man has lost the use of his critical faculties. Its sole motive is the furthering of the long-range strategy of the Communist Party, (1) to consolidate its power and control in the Russian heartland ("socialism in one country first") and (2) to disrupt the economic and political strength of the non-Communist world with a view to installing their Communist Parties in power by a coup d'état. These two current processes were seen at work in the three years after the war, during which nine once-independent nations in Eastern Europe became Soviet satellites. The only one which has recovered its independence, while retaining its Communism, began with a strong and genuine Communist movement which the others lack ed. But the outcasting of Yugoslavs from the Communist fold refuted those few unserving devotees who still maintain that the People's Democracies are both genuinely democratic (i.e. represent the majority opinion of their countrymen) and genuinely independent. We of the world outside the Iron Curtain might have given Communism the benefit of the doubt in regard to Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary, which were previously governed by feudal and even fascist autocrats. We were very doubtful, though badly informed, about the Baltic states. We were pretty sure that the Russians were lying about Poland. But we were downright certain when Czechoslovakia's turn came. It has been that unhappy country's melancholy privilege to provide the final irrefutable proof of, first, German intentions (March 1939) and then Russia (1945).

And it may, therefore, be no coincidence that this most "wasteful" of Slav nations was the focal point of the new anti-Semitism. For of all the Slav peoples the Czechs—the Bohemians of history—have the longest and most valiant record of intellectual independence in the face of the most adverse political conditions. No thoughtful observer of the present tragedy seriously doubts that among the reasons for the severest persecutions is the intellectual individualism, religious dissentiveness and international contacts of the Jews, which factors would be more operative in Czechoslovakia than elsewhere in Eastern Europe. Every violent revolution eventually consumes its revolutionaries. Because of their intellectual heritage Jews have always been among the revolutionary leaders of Eastern Europe. But for this very reason these same men become a danger to the monolithic police dictatorship of the Communist Party (the mis-called "dictatorship of the proletariat"), when the latter is trying to consolidate its power into a permanent form. Having become the Musaparts of the Russian revolution, the Kremlin clique now has to purge its "deviationists," its go-ahead revolutionaries as well as its counter-revolutionaries. In these circumstances the turn of the Jews was as sure to come sooner or later as that of the Ukrainians, Armenians and other racial minorities.

Personally, I shed no tears over Slansky and his associates.

Having plotted successfully the overthrow of their country's freedom against the undoubted wishes of a large majority of its population, they ironically received from their political friends the fate they very justly deserved at the hands of those they betrayed. It is not their well-earned execution that one mourns, but the palpably false grounds on which principally they were convicted. For by identifying them against all the reasonable evidence with Zionism, the Communist authorities have deliberately paved the way for a new persecution of the 300,000 Jews remaining in East Europe and the 2 million or so in Russia—common people leading undistinguished lives.

To pretend that this is just a recrudescence of the Nazi type of anti-Semitism would flatter the Communists. It is both more or less than that. Less, because anti-Semitism was one of the cardinal, evil principles underlying the whole Nazi Herrenvolk ideology. Communism, as such, is not racist and, indeed, is opposed in principle to all forms of racism. But the new persecution is more horribly reminiscent even than the Nazi business because, while the latter was faithfully following its own fifth principles, the Communist form of anti-Semitism represents a shameless, cynical betrayal of professed principles in the interests either of preserving the present Soviet regime or of an unadmitted political opportunism. Possibly the Russian motives combine something of both these elements. The evidence accumulates of a gigas in purge throughout Russia and Russia-controlled countries in which Jews are prominent victims and which may be either a living Stalinist struggle against younger competitors or a mortal combat to decide his successor. Equally strong, however, is the evidence that Russia is seeking to make the maximum trouble for the Western powers in the strategically important, rich oil-bearing lands of the Middle East by exploiting the Arab hostility to the Jews and Israel. An abortive coup in Pakistan two years ago, Communist provoked riot in Persia and Egypt, the present unrest in Iraq the activity of the Russian embassy in Beirut and personal attacks on Israeli ministers all go on in the same direction. That Russia was one of the chief original sponsors of Israel, which is something the notably short-memoried Arabs now overlook, would count for nothing against Israel's refusal to become a semi-satellite and her continuing but unavailing efforts to secure the emigration of Eastern European and Russian Jews to a new and freer homeland.

I am not mainly concerned here with Russia's real motives which we cannot yet know with certainty. The point I want to make is that the whole basis of present Communist philosophy is so false that dishonouring of international, legal and moral obligations as well as the ruthless disregard for human life and of declared principles, whenever an opportunistic advantage seems to present itself, are only to be expected from such rotten premises. Communism, first of all, says that this world is all. We do not live, as all the great spiritual traditions assert sub specie aeternitatis (under the gaze of eternity); we live only to make this best of this world. Anything that improves material existence—the greatest material good of the greatest number which only the "dictatorship of the proletariat" is supposed to be able to achieve—therefore justifies itself and any means whatsoever used to attain that improvement. Secondly, since this world is all and man has no soul which is part of the Great Spiritual Principle, individual men are unimportant. They are expendable units of a social mass moving forward under a new regeneration to its predestined heaven on earth. In divididit personis, communities, races, nations may be sacrificed as well in order to advance the cause," which in practice has come to mean the Party interests within a Communist society and Russian expansionist ambitions in international affairs. This practice is a slight, but only a slight, deviation from basic Communist theory. For the evangelists, thirdly, an inexorable dialectical process—that is an inevitable, irreversible historical process by which power passes from economic class to class until it finally comes to reside in the "dictatorship of the proletariat" as a prelude to "withering away." Strictly speaking the frantic activities of Communist agents are largely unnecessary, since they only seek to hasten something that will come to pass anyway. But since this world is all, each man will naturally try to bring heaven to a being before he himself passes into oblivion and, in any case, the Hegelian Marxist dialectic provides the perfect justification for every human action—just what ever happens is good because it is part of an inevitable process towards a desired end. Such an outlook, in which consideration of right and wrong are irrelevant, can only lead to the most thoroughgoing material selfishness. And that in fact is what Communism is all about. It is nothing in history but only a his day or after) conforms to Marx's arbitrary termination of the struggle for power process. A power group of proletarians does not differ fundamentally from any other power group. As one group succeeds another and establishes its own privileges, the "withering" process trends indefinitely into an unrealisable future.

Communism's great appeal is, however, based upon a misunderstanding of its philosophical implications. Of those who embrace Communism freely and do not have it imposed on them, the small intellectual elite of genuine idealists are captivated by a creed which promises to effect so great a degree of social justice. They do not at first see that the lack of scruple which the theory encourages and the practical politics of its historical emergence must preclude the attainment of its ideal. Bad means never reach good ends, for ends and means are inseparable parts of each other. These idealists are not, in fact, dedicating themselves to the high ideals which Communism proclaims, but to a small group's interpretation of those ideals at a particular moment in history, which is a very different thing. And they must accept with the unquestioning loyalty of automata every tactical somersault and about-face dictated by that group, in its callous pursuit of monetary tactical advantage. This is in practice the very reverse of idealism, but by the time the usual idealistic recruit realises it he is too deeply involved for his mind has become too irrevocably warped to back out. He is by then irrevocably committed to undeviating subservience to the policies of his Party and his State in a pragmatism unparalleled in history.

And the great majority of willing adherents to Communism have so little to lose that they accept blithely a system which promises them the earth and their fortunate neighbour's riches as well. Communism seems to such people to be all things to all people. What they have to realise is that it is only so far as long as it suits it to be so—i.e. for as long as it suits the immediate purpose as the local Communist Party or Russia's imperial policy.

Many of the first category of Communists joined the movement in the '30s in a genuine revulsion from Nazi anti-Semitism. Many of these Communist recruits were Jews. Today the Communist press in Western Europe, which is skilled in the art of standing on its head, explains that Stansky and his colleagues were not executed for what they were, but for what they did. But they were made to confess to having done something which they almost certainly did not do, something which raised a suspicion against all Jews in Communist countries. Their "crimes" deliberately implicated a whole racial group which once again is now suffering dispossession and the concentration camp (in East Germany under former Nazi police officials). Despite the theory, this is racialism in practice and Communist attempts to pretend otherwise remind me of Dr. Malan's claim that the Group Areas Act is non-discriminatory.

An alliance with the Communists offers our non-European in South Africa no more abiding hope than the Jews of realising their legitimate aspirations. At best they might exchange a pig minority for a class autocracy which would probably liquidate the pigmentary aristocracy but would even more certainly subordinate the development of this country to the needs of a European homeland and the freedom of the individual to the rigid, ever watchful discipline of the Party and the secret police (of a far more efficient brand than our present type). At worst, it would use the coloured peoples of Africa for as long as they were helpful in Russia's power politics and sacrifice them without compunction or regret when some other advantage offered.

Russia is now woeing the Muslim world. I remember seeing the few surviving Kazaks struggle in north-west India in the later years of the last war. This nomadic Muslim people of several hundred thousand trekked from their steppe in central Asia rather than submit to forcible abandonment of their religious freedom and their conversion into an industrial proletariat. After a painful, persecuted journey of many thousand miles, the few remaining thousands crossed the Karakoram into India, a weary, starving, emaciated, plundered remnant. They had been found to be "unassimilable"—a term whose overtones we understand well in this country. They suffered and died because in the land of no racial discrimination they valued their own racial and religious traditions, neither seeking to impose nor be imposed upon. And that is the fate of millions of Jews today in the Communist states—ordinary men and women leading humble lives, most of them, tortured because of race, because their persecution may assist Communist power politics and intrigue in other lands. If there is good and evil, the system that does thing is evil, and its ethos unutterably immoral.

Perhaps I may be allowed to recall words I wrote in an article last year: "The case against anti-Semitism or any other form of racial intolerance among Europeans is exactly the same in principle as the case against the doankap—that it is a denial of the Oneness of humanity or the intrinsic value of the individual personality." Since the class theory of Communism denies the first and its materialism the second of these two humanist doctrines, the inhumanity of Communist practice is not accidental, but a logical and inescapable consequence of its inhuman philosophy.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

HEADING FOR TROUBLED WATERS

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

ONE of the greatest triumphs of the resistance movement has been to make people in all racial and political camps think seriously over the problems which gave rise to the defiance campaign. Perhaps nowhere has this been so noticeable as in the White community. For this reason, events in that community at the moment move so rapidly that the careless might lose count of them.

A case in point is the attempt being made to bring into being an all-White organisation which will enjoy enough African confidence to make racial co-operation between the African and the White people once more attractive.

It would appear that already, two different groups of White people are rivals for the African's favours. On the one hand are those who met recently in Johannesburg and formed themselves into a South African People's Congress. On the other are the men and women—mainly liberals and university people—who are trying to agree on a political programme which will restore South Africa to the path of racial sanity.

The first group—the Whites—men who have brought into being the South African People's Congress—is reported to have already been given the blessing of the African National and the South African Indian Congresses. Its declared aims are to remove every form of colour bar as well as to give every South African the opportunity to rise to any height to which his abilities might entitle him. This is a courageous statement of intentions, something very necessary in the present times when White people who claim to be democrats hesitate and equivocate, torn between loyalty to Christ and democracy, on the one hand and crude self interest, on the other.

The second group—the liberals, do not seem to be quite clear on what they want and do not seem to agree, as these notes are being written, on how to work for its realisation.

This is unfortunate in the extreme—although the attitudes and behaviour of the two groups might or might not be eloquent. The very name of the South African People's Congress is rightly or wrongly suggestive. People's Congresses, Leagues and Associations the world over, have varied in their political hues from rose pink to red. In South Africa the red political colour has been proscribed by law. But the law has not made political pinkness a crime. For this reason, if the average African sees in the new South African People's Congress an organisation with a predilection for going socialistic, he would not be entirely to blame. It would be for the new Congress to convince him that it is not what its name suggests it might be.

This body might be seen also from the narrowly African standpoint. In this light, I am surprised how the African National Congress in particular could have been so unimpressed as to bring into being a political group with whose ultimate intentions it might not agree. Either a stupidity one cannot explain has enfolded the Congress mind or the Congress is fast losing its political soul.

Whether the Congress in the Transvaal was aware of it or not, it seems to have plunged headlong into a political trap whose ultimate aim is to crush the spirit of African Nationalism. At the moment, there are people in this country, people belonging to certain political camps from the extreme left to the extreme right, who plot and scheme by day and by night to influence Congress policies in the direction of their own choosing. The South African People's Congress might be quite a harmless organisation of honest White men and women who seek to restore South Africa to the path of racial sanity. Or, it might not be. It might be a "front" by which ideologies hostile to the cause of the African seek to undermine the African National Congress and finally neutralise the spirit of African Nationalism. They would then one day set up the People's Congress as the voice of the oppressed people of South Africa and set before our people goals we had never dreamt to attain for ourselves.

In these days Congress leaders cannot say they have been too careful or circumspect. The African National Congress has, by taking a firm stand against Malanisms, shown that it is the only political body with the courage to take and strike blows effectively against oppression and the tyranny of colour. In this connection it finds itself attracting all sorts of political friends and allies; some of them genuine; some distinctly parasitical in intent and others with clearly treacherous motives.

Of course one cannot label an organisation before it has shown by deed what its real purpose is. For this reason, it would be wrong and unfair to accuse the South African People's Congress of having any particular motive, other than what it has made known to be its goal. But even the White members of this body will be fair enough to realise that the African can't afford to be credulous. If we are suspicious and seek to be assured that we have nothing to fear from political organisations which want to work with us, it is because our experiences of working with similar organisations in the past have produced the unhappiest results.

I do not, by this, mean to throw suspicion on the motives of the South African People's Congress. But I do suggest that, firstly, the name is very unfortunate because in the African's mind it has connotations of something which is basically anti-African and, secondly, that it is in the interest of the African people themselves to be a little wary about jumping into the arms of White political pressure groups whose political hue they do not actually know.

This is particularly the case at the moment because almost every White pressure or political group, from the extreme right to the extreme left is making every effort to build a bridge between itself and the African people. Even the apartheidists spend time, money and thought to win over the African. The Institute of Race Relations has organised a national conference to build its own type of bridge between itself and the Africans. Other groups are equally at work to set up their own bridges. In these circumstances the African National Congress needs to show an independence of thought which a body leading 9,000,000 voiceless souls should show. It seems to me Congress on this occasion has been in such a haste to join with the White people that it has lost its sense of perspective.

And this haste will be particularly tragic if it transpires later that the White people who are truly behind the South African People's Congress are either from the extreme left working underground or are the agents of apartheid. If they are neither, well and good.

The liberals, of course, have not concealed their own political hue. They are trying to strike a mean between the "hasten slowly" school and the younger men and women who realise that now is no longer the time to do that because it is no longer the Whites who set the pace of political progress but the African. Since the African does, he will insist on his own terms for co-operation. Most of the liberals cannot as yet shake themselves off from the mentality in which they think of themselves as members of a ruling caste. Consequently their hedging about is a means to strike a bargain with the African which will not expose them to the charge of being disloyal to a social order which gave them exclusive privilege. Alternatively, very many of them might not be convinced that the evils we are fighting are evils at all. They might be irritants and pinpricks, as so many of them often say.

But even they, when finally they do come up with their own group, will have to be treated with care—just as we plead that the African National Congress should have been less hasty in committing itself to working hand in hand with the South African People's Congress, if Press reports reflect the position in correct light.

On the other hand White awakening to the fact that the African is now a political power to reckon with is very healthy. But our leaders must always be very careful to ensure that they do not follow policies where the African National Congress is merely the stooge of an non-African political group or the other. A leader who betrays Africa's pride in that way is a false African Nationalist and a traitor to Africa.

Finally, the leaders of the African National Congress owe their people the duty to make a clear, public statement outlining the reasons by which their policy is guided in their relations or dealings with non-African political organisations and pressure groups. I realise that there is a certain timidity about telling the truth these days. But if the people will not be allowed to drift to disaster, the African National Congress will have to take them into its confidence. To wait until Swart has it might be too late.

NON-EUROPEANS "MUST BE CONSULTED"

CHURCH CALL TO DR. MALAN

CONSULTATIONS between the Government and accredited representatives of the non-European sections of South Africa, in an effort to understand the causes which had led to racial tension in the Union, was urged in a statement issued by the executive committee of the Christian Council of South Africa and sent to the Prime Minister, Dr. Malan.

At the conference of the S.A. Institute of Race Relations in Capetown, speakers called for immediate round-table talks on the colour question between the Institute and the South African Bureau of Race Relations.

The Christian Council, presided over by the Archbishop of Capetown, the Most Rev. G. H. Clayton, met in Capetown recently and issued the following statement:—

The executive committee of the Christian Council of South Africa desires to express its profound sympathy with the non-European Christians of South Africa in the circumstances in which they find themselves.

"It recognises that many of them are conscious that the operation of legislation and administrative action, based on racial discrimination, deprives them of the opportunity of self development which is their right."

"The absence of any constitutional methods by which they can find a remedy is calculated to give them a sense of frustration and hopelessness."

The statement said that the committee understood and sympathised with the motives which had led many to associate themselves with the civil disobedience movement.

"Not if feels bound to point out that obedience to the law is a Christian duty, and that disobedience is only justified when such obedience involves disobedience to the dictates of conscience."

"It desires to represent to those in authority that it is of the first importance that an attempt should be made to understand the causes which have led to this position of acute racial tension; and for this purpose, it strongly advocates that there should be consultation between representatives of the Government and accredited representatives of the non-Europeans."

"Further, it is of the opinion that there is grave danger of injustice done, so long as persons, who are accused of an offence, are deprived of the right of defending themselves in the courts, and it urges that this right should be restored," the statement concluded.

The Christian Council of South Africa consists of the following churches: Quaker Society of Friends, Salvation Army, Presbyterian Church of South Africa, Congregational Union of South Africa, Church of the Province of South Africa (Anglican), Baptist Union of South Africa of the Native to-day arose from the fact that for the past 40 years he had been told that the system under which he lived—with the Bantu Advisory Boards, the N.R.C.—was a training ground for his ultimate assumption of human rights.

The Native accepted that system as a starting point. That situation had been destroyed by the blunt statement of the present Government that the Native people would have to be satisfied for always with an inferior status, under White domination.

It was the substitution of bossism for trusteeship.

Mr. M'zimba made a plea for faith from the White population which brought a long ovation from delegates.

"Fear of being swamped indicates something fundamentally wrong in our relationship between Black and White. The White man does not fear us," he said.

"What we need is faith. The White man asks us to have faith, but he is not prepared to have faith in us. There can be no consultation between two groups who do not trust one another."

The African National Congress have not looked for a Gold Coast, where the White man would be forced to push and go.

The demand of the Native to-day was for a partnership between White and non-White.

"Tell me
Doctor . . . What do you mean
by a safe antiseptic?"

To be called safe an antiseptic must be safe in several ways. It must be reliable, it must be gentle, it must be non-poisonous, it must help, not hinder, the natural processes of healing and repair. 'Dettol' the modern antiseptic, is a highly efficient destroyer of germs, but it works on the germs, not you. It is non-poisonous, pleasant, safe to have around.

MOVE FOR "ROUND TABLE" OF ALL RACES

A CALL for a conference between the South African Institute of Race Relations and the South African Bureau of Race Relations (Sabre), as an essential step in resolving racial tensions in South Africa, was made at the annual meeting of the Institute in Cape Town by the Rev. H. P. Jonck.

Successive speakers—among them Mr. D. M. Buchanan, Mr. H. R. Gadio, of East London, Chief A. J. Taitbull, of Natal, Mr. D. G. S. M'zimba, Professor B. Z. Ntantu and Dr. E. G. Malherbe—called for an immediate round-table conference of people of all views.

"Now is the time to call such a conference," said Mr. Jonck. "The first, and absolutely essential, one is with Sabre. We must do something to stop this schizophrenic action over the African and these two bodies must come together."

"It is no use any longer to bombard one another with pamphlets."

"There is already a great change of heart," he added. The fact that the Dutch Reformed Church is convening a conference of all churches on the question is a sign of the times."

Supporting the suggestion, Dr. E. G. Malherbe said that such a round-table conference should be sponsored either by the Institute of Race Relations, Sabre, or one of the universities. This was the psychological moment at which it should be done.

Mr. D. G. S. M'zimba, of Durban said that the attitude

DUAL STANDARDS IN SOUTH AFRICA

By O. CALDECOTT in 'Peace News'

SOUTH AFRICA'S apologists are apt to point out in defence of the Union, or in mitigation of her racial excesses, that there are many other countries where the Rights of Man are not fully achieved and where the denial of democratic rights is a feature of government.

And they add that, in the light of Soviet tyranny, the Southern States of the U.S.A. and Kenya, South Africa has a fine record of social welfare work, of selfless encouragement to Native aspirations and of educational opportunities for the people of colour.

This argument not only persuades South Africans that, since they are not as bad as some, they have no cause to be "unfriendly" structures, but it also induces in liberal critics overseas a feeling that the world is being unnecessarily hostile to South Africa. It is necessary to clear this matter up.

Those social orders which in the past have, in the words of Professor Lecky, failed "to recognize the claims of personality" have either collapsed or survived only by the exercise of the greatest oppression.

There have been and there are many such, and each and everyone of them has forfeited its claim to moral authority and the allegiance of its citizens—the ancient regime in France, the Tsarist regime, Chiang Kai-Shek's government and the British rule in India.

In condemning South Africa's failure to accord just and equal rights—or at least the possibility of such rights in the foreseeable future—we in no way excuse or condone present or past oppression on either side of the Iron Curtain.

There may have been other societies in which poverty, bad housing, racial separation and illiberalism have prevailed but they all succumbed when their members recognised that the claim of man to equality of status as human beings had hope of being recognised. It is because the non-European has realised this to be true of South African society that he is now groping his way towards the formulation of a revolutionary method.

And it is no good at all arguing that collectively and individually white South Africa gives much to the non-European through welfare bodies, charities and missionaries and that the non-European should be grateful, respectful and appreciative because the White master has been kind to him.

To argue this and to expect that it is to accept the dual standards underlying white South African thinking—which loses sight of the fact that it is inferior status, the denial of dignity, the implication of a different nature, needs and rights which gulf and hurt the non-European and pervert the Black-White relationship.

No matter how kind the individuals with White skins, no matter how "understanding" the failure of White South Africa, even at its best, to concede that non-Europeans are entitled to claim the same rights as Europeans—the vote, racial security, freedom to move and settle and own property—this failure is at the root of the matter and is the over-riding indecency of the colour bar society, whether it be in South, East, Central Africa or the Southern States of America.

Organised charity and individual kindness can at best palliate in a basically unjust society.

Although I have not seen a copy of it, 'De Kleur Krisis en die Weste' ('The Colour Crisis and the West') by Dr. Ben Marais has, apparently, made a considerable impact in South Africa where it is rare to find a Minister of the Dutch Reformed Church expounding critical views on segregation policies.

Dr. Marais, whilst firmly urging the solution of total separation and the creation of separate states, has some profound things to say about present policies, which, of course, are far less moral even than such total apartheid would be.

"We Whites," he writes, "are a small island in a great sea. Our danger does not consist only in intermixture but also in the fact that, to maintain ourselves we may try in an unworthy, selfish and un-Christian manner to hold the non-European under and, in our own interest, make permanent his inferior position by depriving him or withholding from him rights to which he is entitled. In the long run this cannot be sustained. A people that does this digs its own grave."

WORLD QUIZ IN APARTHEID

IN preparing his book on apartheid, Dr. Marais set an international colour quiz.

A questionnaire was sent to 20 eminent churchmen and theologians from all over the world, asking them their opinions on the problem of apartheid and the church.

Dr. Marais chose, especially, "strongly-Reformed" churchmen. "These groups stand nearer to than any other section of Protestant Christianity," he said.

Among them were members of the Gereformeerde Kerk of Holland, the Hervormde Kerk, and the Obseant Reformed Church of the United States.

And they voted solidly against apartheid.

This was a specimen question, with four answers.

Q: Do you believe that the Bible gives justification or leaves scope for a policy of enforced racial segregation within the Christian Church?

Dr. G. Driltenburg (Wurth [Netherlands]): Never moral.

Professor Karl Barth (Basle): No.

Professor Emil Brunner (Zurich): Of course not.

Professor Dr. Franz J. Leenhardt (Geneva): No.

Dr. J. H. Savinok (Amsterdam): No. I don't believe that

Dr. B. Derkshof (Dordrecht): No. That is a sin. Gal 3: 28.

Professor Wilhelm Vischer (Montpellier): No.

Professor Derkshof v.d. Brankel (Utrecht): The Bible gives a clear judgment against racial segregation.

Professor N. Dahl (Oslo): No.

Professor Samuel Zwemer (Princeton): No.

Dr. Karl Hartenstein (Germany): My answer is a clear no.

Professor Barth, the most famous theologian in Europe, answered authoritatively "No!" to every question about apartheid. In one suggestion he replied "No! Nazi-theology!"

Professor Brunner said in one place: "All the attempts of some churches to give scriptural foundation for a factual race discrimination are sheer hypocrisy. They know quite well that it is a mere camouflage of quite other motives and reasons."—The Star.

BRITISH COMMENTS ON PROFESSOR HAARHOFF'S SPEECH

ACCORDING to 'Pace News' last year's Hayes Memorial Lecture (intended "to promote a better and wider understanding of the international obligations of Christian peoples") was "a dreadful portent." The guest lecturer was Professor T. J. Haarhoff, head of the Classics Department of the University of the Witwatersrand. This is what 'Pace News,' the pacifist weekly, says of it:

It was perhaps a pity that a Professor of Classics should have been selected for the purpose, for while Professor Haarhoff's address was generously studded with (coloured) ornamentation (even the limerick on the young lady of Riga was presented in Latin) this was no very satisfying substitute for the illumination we might have hoped for on racial issues.

We do not think it unjust to say that Professor Haarhoff regards the racial issue as between the Afrikaans-speaking and the English-speaking sections of the South African community as of primary importance, in any case he gave this matter the best place in his lecture.

He gave no indication that there was any realisation among White South Africans of the character of the outrage towards the sense of human equality manifesting itself throughout the African continent that would make for true partnership in the mixed communities instead of the pseudo-partnership we so often hear vaguely expounded, and which is so obviously a euphemism for keeping things as nearly as possible as they are at present.

His single mention of the movement of non-violent resistance against the re-called laws of racial discrimination, that had so far resulted in 7,500 court sentences for black people, was a reference to a comment of the President-General of the South National Congress who had said that "the Bantu chiefs of Natal, more than 200, had warned their people against the passive resistance movement on the ground that the Indians were using the Bantu people as a political pawn." The Professor did not say whether in his view the passive resistance movement has no more significance than this, and surely in a lecture under this title this has some importance.

The immediate practical proposals he had to offer were that there should be a limited number of Parliament working in conjunction with the European members who now represent them, one Indian member working with a sympathetic European, and one of two "coloured" members.

We have devoted some space to the character of this lecture, because we take it for granted that the Professor Haarhoff, who is attached to the Witwatersrand University, represents the best of white South African opinion, and that being so one can only regard with the profoundest pessimism the prospects in South Africa during the next decade.

IRON CURTAINS

Earth's multitudes are sundered.

Each half is afraid of the other and of the lethal steel that may shatter a double curtain. One that separates peoples, and another that holds off atomic annihilation.

On one side, from brewing vats of potent dogma, bitter fumes arise and swirl in provocative snarls while from the other come evil odours of fierce apprehension and wrath.

In vain we seek the unsullied air of a 'fraternity where minds can speak without fear, distorted suspicion and propagated enmity

What can raise or demolish the curtain?

What can open pathways of peace, signposted with respect and goodwill?

What can remove the infectious poison?

Maybe we need first to appreciate how every iron curtain comes from an ancient foundry that fashions many intimidating protections

Was not "Apartheid" made therein and all its variations, impacted with colour-bars, and wrought by dwarfs obsessed with gross prejudice—foolish little craftsmen who worship a god clad only in pink and never tawny

Was not also made therein all racial arrogance and national enmity?—the severed blindness that saw no affinity of mood between 'Rule Britannia and 'Deutschland uber Alles' and operated the cynical paradox of seeking to rearm disarmed aggressors!

Were not therein made the arrogant devices that have sheltered wealth and class-privilege?

Ah, but therein also are manufactured the weapons and armour of all vanity and pride, the harsh instruments of intolerance of creative thought and the missiles of human hatred.

Surely no demolition of vast curtained blasphemy can succeed unless we become more apt in the crafts needing a richer courage, a more perceptive eye, winged devotion, a faithful stability of spirit and a more sensitive appraisal of the whole Man.

Surely we pursue our massive task effectually only if, dissolving the fear that mental divergence must issue in hostile severance, we remove the mental screen between your heart and mine.

How can we bring Earth's kindred into fellowship unless knowledge be endued with elements drawn from a precious liberated personal communion that can penetrate beyond implacable wills?

—R. W. Sorensen.

"By thine own soul's law

And if men thwart thee

And if men hate thee

Sing thou thy song and Hope thou thy hope and

"Master of human destinies am I Fame, love and fortune on my footsteps wait
Cities and fields I walk,
I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by,
Hovel and mart and palace—soon or late
I knock unbidden, once at every gate!
If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before I turn away. It is the hour of fate.
And they who follow me reach every state,
Mortals desire, and Save death, but those who doubt or hesitate, Condemned to failure,

penury and woe,
Seek me in vain and

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 6TH FEBRUARY, 1953

Catastrophe To Be Preferred?

THE current issue of the 'Forum' contains an article by an advocate of apartheid which deserves to be pondered over by every South African. Mr. P. J. Cillie, an editor of 'Die Burger,' the Capetown Afrikaans organ of the Government, starts by saying that "... our colour problem is in reality mainly a problem of nationality, in essence quite analogous to that of countries like India, Palestine and Ireland ... Ever since Union they (most White people) have increasingly felt that White South Africa constitutes or should constitute a separate and distinctive nation ... To maintain that, economic forces having made nonsense of previous attempts at the territorial separation of races, we must now accept the inevitable by including the Black majority in our blueprint for the future South African nation, seems to be an example of the fallacy of regarding economic facts as somehow more important and powerful than the forces of nationality. The dynamic of nationality will not be denied; and if a greater measure of territorial apartheid should prove to be impossible by orderly and planned processes, 'nationality' will probably in the end resort to the catastrophic methods it employed in those partitioned countries (Palestine and India) referred to above."

Two things will immediately strike the reader in

Mr. Cillie's case: His dogmatic approach to the myth of nationality and his thinly disguised hostility to reason as the final arbiter in the relations between Black and White in this country.

The chief value of this statement of Malanite intentions, however, is that it makes clearer the true aims of Afrikaner Nationalism and reflects in clearer light the evils against which the men of colour, in common with White democrats, have to fight.

"The 'dynamic of nationality' is a myth defied by the Nazis. Those who accept it regard themselves as being threatened by those among whom they live. Although, they are very loud in professing allegiance to the Christian faith, they never realise that as soon as the 'dynamic of nationality' becomes the 'Be-All and-End-All' in life, Truth, Justice and Christian Love go by the board. In their place remain crude self-interest and an uncompromising rejection of the Golden Rule.

Mr. Cillie rejects with scorn the idea of a nation made up of Black and White people. The fact that the Blacks are in the majority is only an incidental fear. Nationality is the deciding factor. And because it is, those who belong to a different nationality group cannot be reasoned with; are not people with whom to share a common citizenship. They are people always to be kept apart,

If this cannot be done by orderly and planned processes, civil war communal murders, the forceful removal of people from their homes (for these things happened where the 'dynamic of nationality' won) are prospects which Mr. Cillie invites us to look to with equanimity.

In all this, of course, what he really succeeds in doing is to state, in effect, that the bridge between those Whitemen who think as he does and the non Whites is ultimately unbridgeable. In the end efforts to bridge it might produce catastrophic results. This explains why the Government has come along with the Public Safety Bill. If the non-Europeans can, by peaceful organisation and orderly demonstrations, create situations where they can place themselves in the position of negotiating on terms of equality with the Whiteman, the votaries of the "nationality dynamic" will not hesitate to resort to extreme measures to silence all demands for reform.

We know Mr. Cillie does not speak for the majority of the White people when he postulates that the bridge between them and the non-Whites is ultimately unbridgeable. Very many of them might not be liberals. That we concede. But very many of them want a stable society—something they would not get if the 'dynamic of nationality' held its way all along the line.

But the greatest danger in Mr. Cillie's catastrophe-talk is that it hardens non-European opinion and creates a black dynamic of nationality. When dynamics of nationality clash, they usually leave behind them a trail of destruction which at best can only be a monument to human stupidity.

Rheinallt Jones

MEN of goodwill in all the racial camps received with grief the news of the death, after a long illness, of Mr. J. D. Rheinallt Jones.

For many years he was very closely associated with the South African Institute of Race Relations, which he founded and whose president he was when he died. He could be called a champion of the rights of the man of colour. But in being that, he was a champion of the old school. He recognised the evils in our social system. Throughout his long public life he believed that the group he led—a few Africans, Europeans, Indians and a handful of Coloureds—could, through discussion, research, bulletins, deputations and memoranda, build an effective bridge between the White and the non-White races.

As a means for building closer personal friendships between the select few, his methods probably worked. But tried against the national canvas, they brought the word "liberal" into disrepute.

Liberalism's failure to be an effective bridge brought into being African Nationalism; a new force now trying to bring the African to the position where he can negotiate with the Whiteman on terms of equality. As things stand to-day, the liberalism for which Rheinallt Jones stood is definitely on the way out. But the greatest thing is that from the ruins of the old, a new liberalism is arising which holds within itself the promise of building a true and durable bridge between White and non-White men of goodwill. This in itself, is a magnificent tribute to the vision of Rheinallt Jones. For, when the history of the times comes to be written, men will say of him that he held the torch—albeit falteringly—aglow and kept alive the faith. Therein lay the man's greatness.

Tragedy in Britain, Belgium
And Holland

DEATH and destruction came to Britain and Europe during the week end when gales lashed the North Sea into a fury which engulfed people and property in one of the worst natural disasters of the past 100 years. Men, women, children and animals were drowned or battered to death. Hundreds are believed to be dead and thousands rendered homeless. The sympathy of the world will go out to Britain, the Netherlands and Belgium in this grievous disaster. To those who are suffering and to those who are mourning the loss of their dear and dear ones, go prayers and heartfelt compassion of every man and woman of goodwill.

Malan's Government Dislikes
Christian Action Activities

A fund to assist the families and dependents of civil disobedience resisters in South Africa, who have been imprisoned for resisting the apartheid laws, was launched publicly at a meeting in Central Hall, Westminster, London, recently. Over a week ago Canon L. J. Collins, Chancellor of St. Paul's Cathedral and Chairman of Christian Action, said that £1,400 had been collected for the fund, principally as the result of a private appeal through the post to members of Christian Action. Mr. James Griffiths, the former Colonial Secretary, and the Rev. Michael Scott were among those who spoke in support of the fund. The serious view which the Union Government is taking of Mr. Griffiths' association with the work of Christian Action to raising funds for the dependents of the unjust law resisters in South Africa, is reflected in letters which the Union High Commissioner, Dr. Greyer, has written to Mr. Attlee in this connection.

Don't Exaggerate Differences
—Steyn

The question of relationships between Europeans and non-Europeans had changed more in the last 10 years than in the previous century—not only in South Africa, but throughout the world—and the new conditions which had been created had to be dealt with in a new way, said Dr. Colin Steyn, M.P., at a United Party meeting in Capetown recently. With our small white population in the southern tip of this continent, we must act with wisdom and understanding if we are to survive," Dr. Steyn said. "We must look for points of contact. We must not exaggerate our differences and prejudices. Having a heterogeneous population, it is only by co-operation, among all sections that we will have any success. The Africa and the South Africa of yesterday will never return—we must deal with the new conditions in a new way."

Institute Calls For Racial Conferences

The findings Committee of the South African Institute of Race Relations recently made the following recommendations on the Union's racial tensions:—(1) The 23rd annual meeting of the Institute's Council:—1. That Council approves the Statement of the fundamental beliefs and attitudes of the Institute of Race Relations as contained in the pamphlet "Go forward in faith."

2. That it is urgently necessary to re-establish contact between all the population groups in our country.

3. That, therefore, a Conference or series of Conferences of responsible individuals drawn from the various population groups should be organised with as little delay as possible.

4. That Council instruct the incoming Executive Committee of the Institute to arrange for such Conference or Conferences, and to decide both on the time and place for these Conferences, and on the programmes of discussion.

5. Council recommends to the incoming Executive Committee that arrangements be made for the publication of Mr. Quintus Whyte's assessment of the situation which led to the publication of "Go forward in faith."

Death Of Rhelmalt Jones

Mr. J. D. Rhelmalt Jones, president of the South African Institute of Race Relations and adviser on Native affairs to the Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa, died in Johannesburg. He was 68. For five years—from 1937 to 1942—Mr. Rhelmalt Jones sat in the Senate as elected representative of the Natives for the Transvaal and Orange Free State. Soon after he retired from the Senate, he became Director of the South African Institute of Race Relations. Throughout his public life he was actively engaged in social and welfare work, both among the Native and the European communities and was a recognised authority on race relations, juvenile employment, education and technical training. As a speaker and writer he made considerable contributions in all these spheres. He was born in North Wales in 1884, and came to South Africa in 1905. Mr. Rhelmalt Jones had been seriously ill since the middle of December from a suspected tropical infection. He visited Portuguese and British territories in East Africa, the Sudan, Europe and the United Kingdom and Central Africa towards the end of last year.

PATRICK DUNCAN, MANILAL GANDHI AND OTHER RESISTERS SENTENCED

THE trial of eight participants in the defiance campaign in Germiston on December 8, concluded on Wednesday morning, February 4, when all were convicted of a charge of behaving in a manner calculated to cause Natives to resist and contravene a law, or to prevail upon them to resist and contravene a law, or to prevail upon them to obstruct the administration of any law by leading a procession or group of Natives into the Germiston location.

Mr. Patrick Duncan, son of the first Governor-General of South Africa, was fined £100 or 100 days' imprisonment with compulsory labour, and Mr. Manilal Gandhi, son of Mahatma Gandhi and editor of 'Indian Opinion' was fined £50 or 50 days.

Du Tint, Troup, Stamelman and Cohen were each fined £50 or 50 days, half suspended for three years on condition that they do not commit a similar offence during the period of suspension.

Holt and Shall were each fined £20 or 20 days, similarly suspended for three years.

Bail was fixed pending an appeal.

In finding the accused guilty, the Magistrate said that it was obvious Mr. Duncan was a very well educated and very intelligent type of person, and one who held a responsible position. It was also obvious that the others were well educated and intelligent types.

Mr. Duncan had left the Colonial Service to take part in the political sphere, and he came to Johannesburg on December 4 to participate in the defiance campaign.

Mr. Duncan had told the Court that he intended to enter the location in defiance of the permit regulations and that he had no permit to do so.

The accused must have known that their action of entering the location would cause a crowd of Natives to collect whether out of curiosity or otherwise, and that as soon as they entered the location the crowd would follow them.

They behaved in a manner and did acts calculated to cause Natives to resist and contravene the law.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

SMUTS BY HIS SON

By C. W. M. GELL

MR. SMUTS' life of his father (Casell, 25/-) does not pretend to be the official biography. It is a personal eulogy. It tells us a good deal about General Smuts' personality and the impression he created among those nearest and dearest to him. It also quotes extensively from some of his speeches which will not be readily available elsewhere for some years. As General Smuts was by any standard a great man whose vision and abilities left their mark on our country, our Commonwealth and our world, this must be a valuable book.

It is nevertheless a bad book. This is not because of its uncritical adulation nor because of the comparisons between General Smuts and some of his contemporaries which (notably in the case of Hofmeyr on p. 384) seem to transgress the bounds of good taste. These all relate to the subject of the book and may be allowed to such an author of such a book so soon after his father's death.

It is a bad book principally because of what Mr. Smuts has added to it on his own account. Perhaps it is unfair to be so critical of one who disclaims any qualifications as a journalist, historian or politician. But South Africans notoriously lack a critical historical perspective and all too easily therefore accept statements served up to them in black and white. And since this book about so focal a figure abounds in facts and inaccurate historical asides by the author, there is a real danger that it will help to perpetuate some of the myths which feed the vanity and conceit of a White population preponderantly apathetic about its political and social responsibilities.

Where Mr. Smuts comments on world affairs, his views are often absurdly naive or definitely mistaken. No one except a South African—possibly no one except an Afrikaner—seriously believes that the repercussions of the Anglo-Boer War "still reverberate around the world." (p. 27) The complicity of Joseph Chamberlain in the Jameson Raid has long been a vexed question. But who has ever before and on what evidence involved the British Prime Minister, Lord Rosebery? (p. 35) To suggest (p. 90) that the outcry against the importation of Chinese labour for the Reef gold mines decided the British decision of 1905 is to lose all sense of proportion. And surely the London Land Bank Loan of £3 million to the Transvaal Government (p. 103) was not the result of the gift of the Cullinan diamond to the King?

There is no point in prolonging the list of improbable or inaccurate historical references. No one is likely to treat Mr. Smuts' book as a reliable guide to world affairs. His opinions on such matters are, therefore, curious but unimportant, though one is surprised that the publishers have not corrected a few of them.

The case is rather different, however, with respect to South African history and the chances of people being misled on issues which are still alive today are much greater. I think it is important, therefore, that the unreliability of Mr. Smuts' opinions on his own country's history should be widely known. I shall hope in a later article to have the opportunity of commenting on a number of other topics from this book. In this article I will confine myself to Mr. Smuts' remarks about Indians and Asia, in order to expose the limitations of his historical method.

The Indians had, for example, on p. 41 with Natal importing "6,000 low-caste Hindus Indians." This is only a minor inaccuracy, as about 10 per cent. of these early immigrants were Brahmans or Rajputs. In some of the later batches as many as 21 per cent were Brahmans, 11 per cent Kshatriyas or Vaisyas, and only some 35 per cent Sudras or out-castes. Certainly over the whole period of immigration the lower castes considerably outnumbered the higher, as they do in the population of India or indeed (speaking of classes) of any other country at all.

The next misrepresentation is far more serious. Mr. Smuts writes: "The Indians bred prolifically and at the turn of the century presented a formidable problem. The people of Natal instead of raising a clamour to get the coolies repatriated, merely crossed their arms in resignation." (p. 94) On p. 101 he writes: "The Indian people were breeding like rabbits and the country was fast becoming swamped by them." And on p. 106: "The 6,000 Indians originally imported had by 1910 multiplied to 250,000."

Any unsuspecting reader would surely suppose from these statements that the total immigration was 6,000 and that natural increase was the cause of the growth of the Indian population in the Union. But in fact, 100,000 Indian immigrants was (with brief interruptions) continuous from 1860 to 1911 and constituted by far the greater part of the expansion of the Natal Indian population, which rose from 6,000 in 1871 to 21,000 in 1880, to 11,000 in 1891, to 101,000 in 1901 and to 132,000 in 1911. No natural increase could produce these results, especially since, if the Indians were breeding like rabbits, they were also (particularly their infants) dying like flies. There was also a high adverse mortality rate throughout the period: 166 Indian males to every 100 females in 1891, 167 in 1904 and 156 in 1911. The total indentured immigration for the period 1860 to 1911 was something over 142,000 Indians. Free Indian immigration was about 50,000.

Secondly, and even more serious than Mr. Smuts' mistaken fertility inferences, the picture of the patient, long-suffering Europeans of Natal is quite untrue to the facts. By an overwhelming majority they and their government voted for Indian coolies in order to provide themselves with reliable labour for their plantations. Britain and Boer, from the tropical coast and the highlands inland, they had put their names down for Indian labourers for agricultural and domestic purposes. Nor was it ever open to them to raise an effective clamour for repatriation, because the Indian Government only sanctioned indentured emigration from India on terms (embodied in Natal Law 11 of 1850, sections 6, 9 and 28) which permitted the coolies to become free men on the expiry of their five years' contract and offered them a grant of Crown land in lieu of their free passage home, if they preferred. That is to say, the Europeans of Natal freely chose to import Indians on terms which encouraged them eventually to settle as free men and, despite a growing volume of protest from some quarters which certainly does not read like the evidence here, in response to their own very considerable profits continued in favour the importing of Indians on these terms until 1911.

On p. 101 Mr. Smuts makes two more points which demand attention. He says that the disfranchisement of the Natal Indians in 1896 was a measure of self-protection to ensure the security of the White. Whether the then population of 10,000 Europeans, 100,000 Indians and 107,000 Africans constituted a "White" or a "coloured" matter, not improved by the continued importation of Indians. But he does not say that 100,000 Indians were free and could theoretically qualify for the vote, and the actual voters' roll contained the names of 9,309 Europeans and 151 Indians.

Secondly, the £3 poll tax which Mr. Smuts thinks was imposed to "deter Indians from coming to South Africa" was in fact intended to deter Indians who had completed their term of indenture from settling here as free men. The original proposal was for a £25 tax which was punitive by the standards of those days. But the Indian Government, which could have cut off the supply of indentured immigrants, had this reduced to £3. The whole history of Natal and the Indian immigration is of a struggle between the profits to be obtained from the use of cheap indentured labour and the anxieties caused by the growing freed Indian community. Profits won every time. No doubt the colonists would have liked to import coolies, subject to their immediate repatriation on the expiry of their contracts. But it was the Indian Government which laid down the terms which Natal had to accept or go without coolies. Having chosen to accept both the terms and the coolies, it could not "clamour for repatriation" without abrogating its historical obligations which are still binding today. And disfranchisement was then, as it is today, an attempt to perpetuate White political monopoly while continuing to reap the profits of multi-racial economy. I do not think that any unsuspecting reader of Mr. Smuts' remarks: "In 1911 further immigration of Indians into the country was prohibited" (p. 106) would guess either from his words or their context that this was a decision of the Government of India because of the unsatisfactory treatment of Indians in the Union and that it was energetically but unsuccessfully opposed by Natal and the Union Government. Thus, it was India and South Africa which brought coolie immigration to a close.

Both General Smuts and Gandhi were too big to consider whether during their political career of 1907-13 one "got the better of the other." (p. 106) The historical conclusion must be that Smuts made no concession on major matters, though he did hope that closing Indian immigration entirely would free Europeans from the fear which inspired their illiberal policies. That hope was disappointed. The concessions which Gandhi's first campaign of satyagraha won were worth more to sensitive feelings and racial pride than to material value, except for the repeal of the £3 tax.

Mr. Smuts regards the Durban riots of 1949 as "no reflection on the White man..." (but) an indication of the danger of the nature of their exploitation by unscrupulous Indian merchants.

(p.519) Echoes of this line of reasoning appeared earlier on pp. 94 and 106. Now, since the bulk of African shopping in Natal (and Durban in particular) is done with Indian stores and since merchants of all races include some avowed persons, no prudent person would deny that some Africans may have had legitimate grievances against some Indians. But some, at least, of this resentment should have been directed rather against the general rise of prices than the personal avarice of individual merchants. And Europeans bear a share of the responsibility for what happened, for (a) the anti-Indian speeches made during the 1948 election campaign, (b) their frequently declared antipathy to Indians (there were some depraved Europeans who actually cheered the African voters on) which encouraged the Africans to think the Indians could be attacked with impunity, and (c) the apathy of the electorate (virtually all Europeans) in the face of non-European frustration, squabbling, homelessness, ill health, lack of education etc.—to say nothing of the offensive against non-European rights which has intensified in the last four years but originated much earlier. It is an inevitable corollary of confining political power to one race group that that race group is then responsible for almost everything that happens.

By that strange inversion which even General Smuts for all his breadth of vision could never quite overcome in regard to coloured peoples (e.g. his comments on the independence of India and Indonesia), Mr. Smuts considers that our situation in South Africa is "often complicated by the fact that the problems of India and Empire are often projected onto our domestic area." (p.104) There is some truth in this but much more in the proposition that the Union's racial policies are an abiding source of embarrassment to the rest of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Smuts's book contains so much that is valuable that I do urge him to consider whether for future editions he should not most carefully revise all his own historical comments. The few here criticised show a serious defect in his book which is consistently repeating itself throughout his pages and which could be eliminated without in any way detracting from his main purpose.

the crusades he preached to them when in reality they believed only in him.

R J was in the thick of every controversy over Native policy in the last 25 years. Always he tried to prevent racial discrimination and, when he failed, to modify its evil effects. To his great credit, he long recognized the crucial importance of the African National Congress, repeatedly endeavoured to encourage its growth, and, in the very end of his life, held that his successful organization would be a vital factor in bringing about political change.

It is hard to recall any European who has been more zealous in the pursuit of social justice and of racial freedom and in whom there glowed a more equitable fire.

We who must face the future, inherit from this pioneer a legacy of good works inspired by firm faith. We shall honour his memory best by building well on the solid foundations he laid.

ALAN PATON ON DEFIANCE

AN article by Alan Paton, author of "Cry the Beloved Country," in the "Church of England Newspaper" (October 17, 52) described the attitude of some White South Africans to the Defiance Campaign. "While White Liberals and Christians, being of their time and place, find it impossible to support actively the campaign, they find it equally impossible to condemn it. In their hearts they hope it will succeed in bringing about opportunities for a richer and fuller life for all people, but they would choose to see such opportunities given honourably rather than under duress. The British Christians see the issues very simply and clearly. They know that South Africa is in position A, where as it ought to be in position B; therefore it must move from A to B at once as a matter of simple morality. Now the White South African Christian will no doubt agree that South Africa ought to be in position B, but if he wishes to go there immediately, he knows that he will have to go there by himself. That is precisely what Michael Scott did."

Now an ordinary White South African Christian does not like going places by himself;

if he does, he may have to sacrifice career, possessions, security, family, in fact the whole order of his life. He hesitates moreover to make common cause with non-White people against White people, nothing in his life and education has prepared him for such a step.

"Many White Christians will speak boldly, but cannot go so far as to identify themselves with the Black men's cause. It is because White South African Christians are more cowardly or more hypocritical? It is because they are more cowardly than, say, the German martyrs under Hitler? I do not think so. I think it is because they are not yet in the same position as the German martyrs. It is no use for anybody to tell me, or for us to tell ourselves, that we soon will be. The truth is that our Government is of its own kind Christian, and no question has yet been posed to us in any such fatal and final way...

"I do not suggest that British Christians should not criticize us; let them do what they think is right. But if they do criticize and rebuke, let them first have prayed for us.

RHEINALLT JONES

By JULIUS LEWIN

BY the death of Mr. J. D. Rheinallt Jones, the theory and practice of race relations have lost their oldest pioneer. In the South African Institute of Race Relations, Rheinallt Jones leaves a monument to himself that may prove more lasting than bronze. In the hearts of countless men and women of all races who knew him, he leaves a memory of high purpose served by great knowledge and directed by strong faith in humanity.

When he came to Johannesburg from the Cape in 1918, "R. J." was already concerned with social welfare. He soon realized that there could be no social progress in the Union unless the conditions of the non-White people was first studied and then action taken as a result of study. In this realization he was far in advance of his times. It was years before his view was accepted by public opinion in general. To gain its acceptance, he founded the Institute of Race Relations in 1929, singlehandedly with the support of the inter-racial Joint Councils that he had nursed into life in various towns.

If it is realized today that good race relations necessarily involve personal contact and friendship between Whites and non-Whites, no one did more than R. J. to establish that idea in the minds of White people. Not only in their offices but also in their homes at Florida, R. J. and his first wife set their fellow-citizens a splendid example.

Through fair weather and foul, R. J. retained his quiet confidence in the capacity of non-European people to improve their own position. He likewise maintained his own steady, persistent pressure, through a dozen different channels, for alteration of the laws that hampered non-Europeans and held them back.

Under his direction, the Institute grew and enlarged its beneficent activities. R. J. made his best contribution less by oratory and writing, though he was at ease in both, than by the unobtrusive power of a captivating personality. It consisted partly in an unusual resourcefulness in finding methods by which vague benevolence could be converted into constructive action, partly in his Welsh genius for discovering common ground where men of differing views could meet; and, most of all, in an effortless ability to inspire confidence which beguiled people into believing in

DANGERS AHEAD FOR CONGRESS

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

THE African National Congress might soon find itself entangled very badly if it does not exercise a little more discretion in its choice of allies.

As the leader of the resistance movement and the senior partner, whatever happens to the African National Congress will perforce produce important results on the resistance movement. The leaders of the Congress need to remember that they do not lead only their own people; they lead all who have chosen to join the ranks of the resistance. Thus, what would perhaps assume no particular significance if the resisters were the Africans only, might produce very far-reaching repercussions. For this reason, the leaders of the African National Congress have, by their success to date, brought on their shoulders additional responsibilities.

It is because of this that now, more than at any other time, the Congress should be more than careful about the things it does.

At the moment two dangers threaten the African National Congress—one from the side of the Government and the other from the underground leftists.

As everybody knows, the Government is determined to do one or both of two things to him Congress: to exploit its existence and identify the resistance movement with the Kryas Mau Mau. The first move will have been a blow at a body which has proved clearly that it is a political force which alone can successfully challenge and defeat apartheid. The Government, however, might decide not to rush anything by way of badging Congress at this stage. It might decide to allow the Congress to continue its existence in the hope that agents provocateurs will provoke from Congress a response which might be distorted and then give substance to the Government's Mau Mau charge.

Against this background, the leaders of the resistance movement are acting very wisely if they follow a cautious course at the moment. Our leaders often get too little credit and unwarranted kicks for the wisdom they display in leading us. But at the moment the situation is extremely fluid. Even the Government has been forced to act a little more than warily. This is about the best tribute to the tact and wisdom of the men to whom we have entrusted our destinies.

But too much caution might lead to paralysis and a betrayal of the struggle. If Congress has to be cautious at this stage and, for that matter, send as few men and women to jail as possible, the reasons behind this should be made known to the public—it is to counter malicious propaganda suggesting that the resistance leaders have been frightened by the crack of Verwoerd's whip, into self-peddling on the active front.

The dangers from the Government side we all know. It is the dangers from the underground communists which do not appear to be more widely known, even among some of the people who should know better in Congress.

When Malan talked of the Suppression of Communism Act the communists at the time were scared pale. They could not imagine themselves jailed, persecuted or even hanged for loyalty to their political faith. They would not fight apartheid openly, come what might. They rushed into their bunkers underground and there waited to see what would happen. The Congress took up the Malan challenge and fought back with exemplary courage: that is, it fought back as a masser which shamed the communists. In this, of course, it was joined by the Indian Congress.

These two bodies know what fate awaits them. Their leaders have made colossal sacrifices to date. But this has not deterred them. They both fight on and are determined to go down fighting rather than try and play safe and scuttle the resistance movement.

This stand of theirs has enabled them to send 8,000 men and women to jail from all walks of life, representing all races. It has won for them world-wide respect and admiration. This has convinced the underground communists that they made a blunder by running away from the struggle in the way they did. They have been quick to mend their ways and are now making determined bids to stage a come-back at any price.

Their tactics are simple. They do not return to the struggle as underground communists, nor do they espouse clearly communist causes. They are, finally, plotting some of their trusted men in non-European political, trade union and social organisations. One point where the communists beat all their opponents, barring the Malanites, is their absolute devotion to their cause. If they are instructed to join a movement to influence its decisions, they will work harder than anybody, very often for no material gain whatsoever, to bring its objects nearer realisation. In that way they quickly rise to the top in very many organisations. Secondly, they are well-grounded ideologically. They know precisely what courses will best advance communist goals from day to day.

A movement might all along think that it is still on its rails when, in fact, it has long abandoned them and is clearly on its way to Moscow.

Where plotting is not effective, they bring into being new organisations with perfectly plausible aims and objects. These organisations are used as "fronts" which underground communism employs as platforms or sounding-boards. They might enter into alliances with other bodies or work with them, not so much to achieve the goals of the latter as either to destroy them or encourage them to keep closer to the Moscow line.

Thirdly they skilfully play-up or play-down leaders whom they dislike. At the moment distinguished African leaders like Dr. James L. Z. Njongwe, president of the Cape Congress, do not get the publicity they deserve from the leftists. Dr. Njongwe is cited here because his is a typical case of a man who is being played down because he is dangerous to the underground leftists. He has built up his own Cape Congress independently of the communists and shows that he has a firm hold on his following. Nobody can touch Dr. Njongwe in the Cape. Well, if they cannot corrupt or undermine him, the next best thing is to bottle him up in the Cape and prevent him from being universally recognised as the national hero that he is.

There are very many Dr. Njongwes in all the four provinces whom the underground leftists are subtly trying to destroy to pave the way either for making Congress one of their "fronts" or for strengthening the men they have planted or seek to plant in it.

As soon as the contents of the draconian bills in Minister Swart's briefcase are more widely known, we might find a number of organisations under underground communist domination coming forward with suggestions of a bigger alliance embodying all the enemies of apartheid, regardless of colour. There would have, of course, to be a supreme co-ordinating body to dictate to all the national bodies constituting such an organisation. And in this co-ordinating agency, the underground communists will sort things out in such a way that they dominate without anybody suspecting them.

The African National Congress is, of course, target-Number One of the underground communists. By showing that it enjoys the confidence of the African people it has won for itself regard as a good host to the leftist political parasites.

Strenuous efforts might be made to force Congress to take such follow courses which might bring about its early elimination. As things stand pressure might be exerted on Congress to prepare now for a national strike. Such a strike might well prove disastrous. I do not suggest that Congress is afraid of disaster. But Congress would be extremely unwise to invite disaster its way when it knows very well that it will not cope with it. Thus, for Congress to call a national strike is a hurry and without making the necessary preparations would suit the underground communists very well because it would antagonise the African masses against Congress and justify Minister Swart in crushing the Congress.

Congress would find it next to impossible to re-group underground except on terms dictated by underground communism—which has a longer and more expert tradition in this respect.

One of the advantages favouring underground communism is the fact that all they need to do is to pull strings only along the Reef and they have the African National Congress at their beck and call. The underground leftists do not conceal the fact that the election of Mr. Luthuli as President-General is a major calamity for them for two reasons. Mr. Luthuli is first and foremost a nationalist—the farther he can go is towards the centre, from the right. Secondly, the residence of the chief executive officer of Congress in Natal, miles away from Johannesburg, threatens to decentralise the control of Congress and in that way weaken the central hub which it wishes their easy reach.

Johannesburg's role has always been unfortunate because in the sacrifices and organisation, the Transvaal, and Johannesburg in particular, have not made the contributions which qualify them for being regarded as the national headquarters of the African National Congress. But this is not the point really at issue. The point is: Too much centralisation of Congress control in Johannesburg deprives the other provinces of an effective say on how their affairs shall be run and, secondly, binds Congress bound hand and feet readily to its underground enemies of tomorrow.

The fact that such a distinguished fighter for African freedom like Dr. James L. Z. Njongwe should not have an effective say in the inner councils of Congress or the resistance movement is very significant, and, I might add, dangerous.

What Congress needs is to make every province have an equal voice in the administration tion of our political affairs—even if this means the transference of the headquarters, as was the case in the past, to where the President-General is. A refusal to do this today might tomorrow create dangerous tensions inside Congress itself, apart from helping the underground communists. The call is therefore for a statesmanlike attempt to give all the provinces an equal say in the inner councils of Congress and the resistance movement, if to no trench in them the feeling that these bodies are their own and do not have to be dictated to by the Reef.

Given goodwill, these adjustments can be made smoothly without trouble and the African people and their true allies will stand to gain tremendously.

NON-EUROPEAN LEADERS ARRESTED

THE President of the African National Congress, ex-Chief A. J. Lutshuli the President of the Natal Indian Congress, Dr. G. M. Nalaker, and Mr. J. W. Singh a vice-President of the Natal Indian Congress and Mr. O. I. Amos an Executive member of the Natal Indian Congress and Mr. Denton Mngadi a member of the A.N.C. were arrested at the Nicot Square, Durban last week.

The N.I.C. had called a mass rally of protest against the squalid shereg of school accommodation for non-European children in Natal. It is estimated that no less than 37,000 Indian children alone are without school, and there are thousands upon thousands of African children who have no schools to go to.

The meeting was opened by Chief Lutshuli who said that it was unconstitutional to the degree that the people had come to ask for education for their children. Indian schools had already opened and many thousands of children had been refused admission. In the case of Africans, facilities exist for at least 40% of the children of school going age.

The N.I.C. had not been given permission but it was felt that on account of the urgency of the matter the meeting had to go on.

Mr. J. W. Singh said that he saw no reason why the Durban City Council has seen fit to refuse permission to hold the meeting. They had made it a policy to refuse permission for all meetings called by the N.I.C.

Mr. Singh had only spoken for about five minutes when an Police Officer and two plain-clothed policemen stepped on the platform. The Officer later quoted Mr. Singh's speech and said "Have you permission to hold this meeting?" The plain-clothed policeman then said "Dr. Nalaker—I am arresting you, and you Lutshuli."

Mr. Singh asked the Officer if he could say something to the gathering of several thousands who were at a loss to understand the police intervention. The Officer refused. And, he himself came to the microphone and said "I am warning you that this meeting is illegal. I am warning you to disperse. Otherwise you lay yourself open to criminal action."

Then he got two African policemen to translate his words into Zulu and Sotho and an Indian policeman to Tamil.

The people however refused to leave, but the leaders from the platform beckoned to them to go away peacefully. The people shouted "Africa" and started singing "Mayi Soye Afrika" and dispersed.

When the police officer came on the platform a big cordon of at armed policemen quickly formed round the platform and the square. They carried guns and batons and looked threateningly upon the people.

Earlier in the afternoon the police had threatened the owner of the loudspeaker equipment that he would be charged if he hired his equipment for the meeting, but notwithstanding this threat, the loudspeaker was installed.

At the meeting hundreds of people signed a petition to the Administrator of Natal asking for more schools.

Shortly after his release Chief Lutshuli, said:—"The authorities are apparently very much frightened because they do not allow us to speak even about a non-political subject. I regret very much the attitude of the Durban City Council which is so much out of touch with English traditions of freedom of speech. The English speaking people talk so much about the totalitarian Nationalist government, but what can be more totalitarian than the ban placed on our meeting. We shall continue to speak to our people. That is our duty. We pray as leaders that God may make us truly responsible and not make us fail in our duty."

Treated Like Criminals

The five non-European leaders appeared in the Durban Magistrate's Court last week charged with holding an unauthorized meeting in Nicot Square, Durban, one of the defence attorneys, Mr. R. I. Aronstein, said that the accused had been treated like common criminals after their arrest; their finger-prints had been taken for an alleged contravention of a by-law.

Mr. A. B. Knox, one of the counsel for the defence, said that it would be necessary to call the Mayor of Durban, Mr. Percy Gebora, to prove that no permission was required to hold the meeting. The defence, he said, would also take the point that the by-law was ultra vires.

Mr. Knox said that, while agreeing to the adjournment of the case to February 17, he wished to protest at the manner in which the authorities handled the accused.

The police and municipal authorities had been advised that the meeting would be held with the intention of fanning a hot man, but in spite of that the five men, who were responsible people, had been arrested and taken away in a police van in custody.

That this was unnecessary was shown by the fact that the men were released on their own recognisances after giving their particulars at the charge office.

Since the promulgation of the by-law permission to hold meetings have been persistently, arbitrarily and unreasonably refused, said Mr. Knox.

Mr. A. Obandrea, who appeared for Dr. Nalaker and Mr. Mngadi said that when he visited the charge office to ascertain the nature of the charges he was told to wait outside until the charges had been made out.

The magistrate, Mr. O. E. Sussel, said he would go into the matter.—Sigs.

INDIA REPUBLIC DAY CELEBRATIONS

In Cape Town Celebrations were observed at the Palace Theatre, Salt River by about 2000 people of a cosmopolitan nature.

Mr J. L. Malhotra, assistant secretary to the High Commissioner for India said, the people of India wished to make their contribution towards the peace and the stability of the world and the ideals incorporated in the Charter of the United Nations.

The meeting passed a resolution extending greetings and good wishes for the future progress of India as an independent country and praying that the people be given guidance to conduct their future progress with wisdom and peace.

The resolution expressed gratitude to India for the moral support she had given to the oppressed peoples in different parts of the world, and particularly in South Africa, in their struggle for democratic rights.

Mr. B. D. Obayde, chairman of the Republic Day celebration committee, paid tribute to the part Mahatma Gandhi and the other leaders had played in the struggle to obtain freedom.

The celebration ended with a programme of Indian national songs and music by the Chauhan Brothers, children of the Gandhi Memorial School and the Habibie Institute.

Miss Champa Chandel presented the Arabian and Indian Classic dances.

In Durban, a joint meeting was held by the Kathiawar Hindu Sava Samaj and the Surat Hindoo Association.

In Natal, the Indian community celebrated the third anniversary of the Indian Republic, at the Shantyre Indian School, Mr. D. M. Patel presided. Mr. K. T. Patel, principal of the school paid a tribute to those who have died for the country and to those who are today carrying on the fine work.

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Delhi, January 30.

MR. JAWAHARLAL NEHRU, Prime Minister of India and the president of the Indian National Congress completely dominated the fifth session of the Congress, which ended on Monday the 26th January at Hyderabad. His views prevailed on every issue under consideration. The session unanimously endorsed his foreign policy.

The Congress reiterated its admiration and appreciation of the Satyagraha movement in South Africa against racial discrimination, to which the overwhelming majority of the people of South Africa are subjected by the Government of the Union.

The Congress in its resolution further said that the Government of South Africa continues to flout world public opinion even as embodied in the moderate resolutions of UNO, which so rightly upon the Union Government to enter into negotiations and allow the acts of racial discrimination to be eliminated. The Government of South Africa has thus given further evidence that it does not respect the principles of human rights to which the civilized world has given its approval and also that the date not a law the light of reason or of truth to be directed to its offences against the awe of humanity and the conduct of civilized nations.

Protagonists of linguistic provinces provided some groundwork at the otherwise tame session, but ultimately they also bowed down to Pandit Nehru's will and the re-organization of provinces on linguistic basis, for which the clamour had reached a new height after the decision to form separate Andhra province, was postponed for at least four or five years. Led by Kaka Qadri, former Minister of Public Works at the Centre and Shri N. Lingappa, president of Karnataka Pradesh Congress Committee, the forces demanding immediate formation of linguistic provinces beat a hasty retreat when they found that Pandit Nehru and the Congress High Command held very strong opinion in this matter. And Kaka Qadri himself presented the resolution deciding to postpone the issue till "Andhra State was established."

Main reasons for this postponement were that if reorganization of provinces was taken in hand at this juncture, it would create bitterness bordering on hostility between the peoples speaking different languages, taking their claims on each other's territories. Already heated controversies are going on between various States, Gujarat and Maharashtra are squabbling over Wagh area, Gujarat and Rajasthan over Ahu, Andhra and Tamil Nadu over Madras and some other talukas, Bihar and Bengal over certain Bengali speaking areas of Bihar. So if immediate reorganization was taken in hand, people's and their leaders' energy would be directed towards this question, generating unnecessary heat and animosity. Such situation will be the biggest impediment to the implementation of the Five-Year Plan, on the success of which the fate of the Congress at the next general elections depends. The Congress is staking its all on the success of this plan and wants to employ all its energy and resources to its implementation. Surely the people who have never had linguistic provinces before can wait for a few more years.

The newly created provinces will upset the existing administration which will have to devote its energy to stabilize the newly created provinces, with its numerous problems. Further they will be financially deficit provinces during the initial period requiring substantial aid from the Centre, thus depleting the already short funds for the Plan.

Regarding the implications that prevailed in the Congress Committee's last session the Congress passed a resolution authorizing the Working Committee to draft amendments to the Congress constitution to eradicate this evil.

Mrs. Nehru deprecated the Anglo-American plan to invade Pakistan in the proposed Middle East Defence Organisation (MEDO). Inclusion of Pakistan in MEDO is regarded by New Delhi as a back to the walling Arab nations in the proposed Organisation. Creation of such alliance will, over and above other difficulties, bring cold war nearer India's border, by the establishment of Anglo-American bases in Pakistan against Russia. It is felt by the political circles here that the last resolution by Anglo-American block regarding Kashmir passed by the Security Council was the result of a secret deal between Pakistan and the Anglo-American countries by which in return for joining MEDO, Pakistan was promised help in obtaining Kashmir.

We have seen policemen lathi-charging and arresting people, but Madras city witnessed a rare scene of policemen being lathi-charged and arrested on a mass scale.

Policemen's Association had put forward certain demands regarding pay, leave etc. These demands were, according to the Chief Minister of Madras, Mr. Rajagopalachari, just, but the Government was not in a position to satisfy them. On the contrary Government arrested two office bearers of the Association, policemen numbering about 4000 refused to draw their salary as a protest. The Government regarded this as an act of indiscipline and acted swiftly. All the policemen were dismissed and nearly 150 policemen including 60 members of the executive committee were arrested. Now the situation is normal.

Justice Wadhwa, appointed by the Government of India to examine and recommend on the formation of Andhra province has started his work. Prof. Ranga, leader of the Hindu Mahasabha, presented a demand to include certain talukas of Tamilnad in the proposed Andhra State. Wagh area of Madras city continues isolated.

In Saurashtra anti-lease tax agitation continues. The strike and satyagraha started on 1st December 1952 has not been abandoned, despite the generous concessions given by the Chief Minister Shri Quebar. All the prisoners sentenced for breaking the law were released and the Sales Tax Act was toned down to a great extent. While giving these concessions, Shri Quebar said that the Government had gone as far as it could and no more concessions would be granted. After his announcement negotiations were started by Mrs. Sobha Kripalani, the leader of the Praja Socialist Party, for rapprochement. But Praja Parishad wanted to make political capital out of the agitation and so placed impossible demands which could not be accepted by the Government. So the negotiations broke down and after two days' pause satyagraha was resumed.

In Panaji 19000 District Board school teachers went on strike, which ended after the intervention of Muzumdar Azad, Education Minister, Government of India.

The Central Committee of the World Council of Churches which met at Lucknow practically refused to take effective action against racial discrimination, which according to its own constitution was against God's will. It passed a statement of opinion offering support and encouragement to all peoples and agencies labouring for a solution of the racial problems in South Africa. The Committee, affirming its conviction that all political, social and economic discrimination based on groups or race, wherever it existed, were contrary to God's will, recognized the fact that the existing racial discriminations were increasing tensions and bitterness in different parts of the world. It urged member churches to engage in the Christian reconciliation ministry and do all in their power to end such discrimination.

The majority of the delegates felt that the Council should not merely confine its proposed reforms to the churches alone, but call for an outright denunciation of racial discrimination wherever and in whatever form it existed.

TERMS OF ANTI-RESISTANCE BILL

NEW BILLS OPEN DOORS TO POLICE STATE

THE Criminal Law Amendment Bill, more popularly known as the Anti-Resistance Bill, makes it an offence for a person to "advise, encourage, incite, command, aid or procure any other person or persons in general" to commit an offence by way of protest against a law or in support of any campaign against a law.

It also seeks to outlaw the offer or acceptance of financial or other assistance for organised resistance against the laws of the Union and provides for special measures for the recovery of fines imposed in terms of the legislation.

It provides for deportation for those convicted who are not south Africans by birth or descent and for the restriction of movement of persons within the Union.

The measure includes a section entitling the Postmaster-General to intercept mail suspected of containing money for organised resistance movements.

Sentences

Any person who commits such an offence will be liable on conviction to the penalties prescribed for incitement to breach of Union's laws.

For offences committed by way of protest or in support of any campaign against the laws of the Union, or in support of any campaign for the repeal or modification of any law or the extension or limitation of the application or administration of any law, a court may, on conviction, impose the following sentences—

- (a) A fine not exceeding £300;
- (b) Imprisonment for not more than three years; or
- (c) A whipping not exceeding strokes; or
- (d) Both fine and imprisonment; or
- (e) Both fine and a whipping;

- (f) Both imprisonment and a whipping.

For incitement to commit an offence in support of a resistance campaign, the court may impose the following penalties.

- (a) A fine not exceeding £500;
- (b) Imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years; or
- (c) A whipping not exceeding strokes; or
- (d) Both fine and imprisonment; or
- (e) Both fine and a whipping.

(f) Both imprisonment and a whipping.

Incitement

The penalties for incitement apply to any person who, in any manner whatsoever, advises, encourages, commands, aids or procures any other person, or persons in general, to commit an offence by way of protest against a law or in support of a campaign of resistance against the laws of the Union, or to any person who uses any language or does any act or thing calculated to cause any person or persons to commit such offences.

The Bill makes it an offence for any person to solicit, accept or receive from any person or body of persons, whether within or outside the Union, or who offers to give to any person or body of persons any money or other article in support of a resistance campaign.

Offences under this section will be punishable by the penalties provided for incitement.

In addition to imposing these penalties, the court may, on conviction of any person, confiscate to the State any money or article in possession or under the control of the person convicted.

Provision is made for the joint trial of persons alleged to have committed similar offences at the same time and place.

Where a person convicted in terms of the Bill fails to pay the fine imposed on him within 48 hours, the court may issue an order to recover the money by attachment and sale of movable property.

A magistrate's court will have jurisdiction to impose any of the sentences provided in the Bill except that no magistrate's court will have jurisdiction to impose a sentence of a fine exceeding £300 or imprisonment for a period exceeding three years.

Deportation

The Bill provides for the deportation of any person who is not a South African citizen by birth or descent, and who has been committed in terms of the Bill, if he is deemed by the Governor-General, or in the case of an inhabitant of South-West Africa, by the Administrator, to be an undesirable inhabitant.

Such a person may be removed from the Union or from the territory and, pending removal, may be detained in custody in the same way as prohibited immigrants.—Sapa.

THE Working Committee of the African National Congress and the South African Indian Congress in a Press statement says it views with "grave alarm" the introduction by the Minister of Justice, Mr. C. R. Swart, to Parliament of the Public Safety Bill and the Criminal Law Amendment Bill. The so-called Public Safety Bill is the most serious challenge to the civil liberties of the people and will pave the way for a new system of governing the country by proclamations and Martial Law.

The power to declare a state of emergency in the Union of South Africa under which the existing laws of the country may be suspended and the powers of the state be exercised by the Governor-General or the Minister of Justice himself will leave the entire fate of the country in the hands of Mr. C. R. Swart. Such wide and sweeping powers will be used to render the courts ineffective, to destroy not only the Congress but also all the anti-Nationalist groups, to round up leaders and throw them into concentration camps, to crush the rights of the citizens to express their legitimate opposition to the oppressive policies of the Government.

It should be realised that if the Bills were allowed to become law, the draconian measures contained therein will make the country undergo all the horrors of the police state. No person, no home, and no organisation will be safe from the witch hunt it will let loose. It will be a mistake to assume that these measures are intended merely as an electioneering stunt, to make the electorate believe that the Government is only dealing with the Defiance movement. Such an attitude is fraught with tragic consequences for the people.

The present Government is notorious for its abuse of power. The history of the last five years is full of such examples which need not be enumerated here. The Congress, therefore, call upon all the democratic forces within the country to raise their voices and organise a Union-wide protest to these Bills and to do all that is humanly possible to prevent a grave catastrophe befalling South Africa. The Congress call upon the Whites and non-Whites to join hands in this country-wide campaign.

The Congress warn the Government that its attempt to resort to fascist tyranny will have far-reaching consequences not only in the Union but also beyond its borders and will constitute a severe threat to world peace.

The Congress considering it as their sacred duty to stop Malan tyranny, to stop Swart's Bills, to defend all democratic organisations and the civil liberties of the people, have undertaken a country-wide campaign of protest which will culminate in mass provincial conferences on Sunday, 15th February, at which the people of South Africa will demonstrate their opposition to the new onslaught. To these conference delegates will be invited from all political organisations, churches, religious and sporting bodies, trade unions, youth and student organisations, vigilance committees, advisory boards, women's organisations as well as teachers' organisations. Chiefs have also been invited.

As a preliminary to these conferences Sunday, February 8, has been set aside for holding of public meetings in as many centres as possible throughout the Union.

GOD IS LAW

Believe in God in such a time as this—
When tyrants rule the earth with brutal sway,
When death and hell hold gruesome holiday,
When wrong prevails and justice is remiss?
Believe in Christ who walked in Galilee
And talked of light, of hope, of life, of love,
Of sparrows in the care of God above,
Of certainty of truth that sets men free?
I do! Ten thousand times, I do! I know
That God is law, as well as love: that man,
In full accord with God's eternal plan,
Will reap at last in kind as he did sow,
'Tis but the harvest now, and from the sod
Leap up ten thousand arguments for God.

Deeds Required—Not Words

THE anti-Jew Bill introduced in Parliament by the Minister of Justice, Mr. Swart, have caused a stir throughout the country. The powers sought under the Bill are worse ever known even during war time. Hitler alone is known to have assumed such powers and the world knows what he did and the fate eventually he himself met with. Alan Government seems to be going the same way. Hitler's target were the Jews. Dr. Mulan's target are the non-Whites. The latter should know what is in store for them. They have so far done well in fighting non-violently against the ills suffered by them. It is a long and arduous battle entailing a tremendous amount of sufferings and sacrifices, even of being annihilated. But it is better to be annihilated fighting courageously than to live a life of ignominy. It requires some strength and courage to remain unbending and to die without taking a single life of our opponents or causing the slightest injury to them. That is the Godly way which the non-Whites have wisely chosen. To swerve from that noble path which has attracted the sympathy and support of all thinking people of the world would be suicidal. To stick to it at all costs will make the world livable for humanity—a noble cause indeed worth living for as well as dying for. If we have an unshakable faith in God there is nothing whatsoever to fear. If we lack that faith and give way to cowardice we are done for. Let us therefore be awake and alert and not be alarmed even under the direst circumstances.

The eight thousand men and women who have already undergone the rigours of prison life have won the approbation of the civilised world at home and abroad. Let us not become drunk and lose our senses. This is only the first step. We have yet a long way to go and to "pass through blood-curdling experiences. We must prepare ourselves for it.

The Government in its madness believes that the repressive measures already adopted by it has crippled the defiance movement and that what it is about to adopt will crush it. That impression is shared by a section of the South African Press and the people. The present hull has to some extent justified that impression.

Last Sunday there was a meeting held at the Trades Hall, Johannesburg, under the joint auspices of the African National and the South African Indian Congresses. Speeches were made strongly condemning the action of the Government. It was also announced that conferences of all the non-White organisations will be held in all the Provinces where decisions will be taken on the future steps to combat the situation. It will be well to remember that the time now is not for eloquent speeches but for firm and determined action. The correct thing would be to anticipate the worst steps from the Government and to be fully prepared to counteract them with double the vigour. Nothing more is demanded of the non-Whites than sacrifices of the purest type to eradicate the evil without bearing ill-will in the slightest degree towards the evil doers. It was very rightly said by one of the speakers at last Sunday's meeting referred to above that we have launched on a Holy War. That demands absolute purity in thought, word and deed. It certainly does not allow of giving way to fear, anger, hatred or malice. It demands quiet but firm determination to die with the name of God on our lips and an undying faith in Him in our hearts. May God grant us the wisdom and courage to give a fitting reply to Mr. Swart by our deeds and not words.

LAW PROFESSOR ON SAFETY BILL

PROFESSOR B. BEINART.

Professor of Roman Law at the University of Cape Town, said in a Press statement last week on behalf of the Civil Rights League that every member of the public would stand aghast at the scope of the Public Safety Bill.

The safeguards to the Minister's powers under the Bill were illusory.

Professor Beinart is chairman of the League.

His statement continued. The Government, having brought the the country to a state of nerves, now wishes to claim that South Africa is in what an English writer has described as a state of "perpetual emergency."

The Bill seeks powers for the Minister of Justice to declare an emergency or and when he, in his arbitrary discretion, deems fit. The measure prescribes no limit to or definition of a "state of emergency."

It is hardly necessary to state that the existing law should be adequate to meet any unworded situation, for a government can always take the necessary measures to ensure peace and order, even calling out the military, but with the constant safeguard that it must be prepared to answer for the necessity of its acts to the courts or to Parliament, which may then pass an Indemnity Act.

When an emergency has been declared then, in terms of the Bill, the Minister (note, not Parliament) may make whatever laws he thinks are necessary for public safety and may impose penalties, confiscate property, suspend laws including Acts of Parliament and even override them.

He may make such regulations retrospective for five days.

The safeguards to his powers are illusory. Although these regulations have to be submitted to Parliament, they cannot be done if Parliament is not sitting, which is for at least half of the year.

But the Bill goes further. It starts off by imposing a limit of one year to the validity of the proclamation but in the same breath allows the Minister to issue another proclamation continuing the state of emergency.

One wonders what the need for this Bill can be when the Government is also introducing the Criminal Law Amendment Bill authorising heavier penalties for crimes committed under certain circumstances and prohibiting support of organized breaking of the law, which action is no doubt directed at the defiance campaign.

One can only conclude that the Public Safety Bill is an attempt to carry on what has been termed "ordinary government by extraordinary means."

CANDID THOUGHTS ON NON-VIOLENCE

WE publish below extracts from an article by the Rev. Arthur W. Blaauw that appeared in the American weekly, 'The New Republic':—

I am myself convinced that any individual whose conscience revolts against certain legislation is entitled to express his conviction by refusing to obey the law if he is prepared to suffer the consequences. I am, therefore, satisfied in my own mind that there is ample ground in South Africa for peoples of all races to defy various laws on the Statute Book. As I say, it is a matter for the individual conscience, but when such a mental attitude is deliberately cultivated and trained it is natural that those who love peace above all things, and loathe violence in any form should carefully examine the organization before they give support either mentally or practically. I have, therefore, had to ask myself a number of questions which I shall endeavour to summarize as follows:

Can this movement in South Africa be called a spiritual movement, or is it merely an attempt to secure political advantage? This again is a difficult question. Twice I discussed it in the first six months of this year with Mamail Gadhil, who should be in a position to judge this issue. I gained the impression that at the beginning of this year he was very doubtful, but of late, from correspondence and articles in 'Indian Opinion,' I gather he is impressed with the movement although still critical. It is not without interest that from the beginning the organizers have encouraged the people to observe days of prayer, and although it may be possible to criticize this it must be admitted that it indicates some measure of spirituality. It has been said again and again that the campaign has broken out because the non-Europeans are desperate and have no other way of expressing the fact that they are frustrated beyond endurance. To this must be replied that frustration has either spiritual influence, or an utterly demoralizing one. If it is spiritual influence it produces character which can go to great lengths as the world knows from the life of Mahatma Gandhi and others in other places. To me indications are not lacking that this campaign in South Africa is a spiritual development but I am still waiting to see it consolidate into a steady movement educating the masses to disciplined character development.

As it seems to me the movement has grown by the spiritual force of the non-violence which has been maintained. Many who were sceptical at the beginning have stopped to think. And in many cases thought has led to personal action. It is the type of strength which grows by realization of itself; power of this nature will not be intimidated by threats of severer punishment. There is very little of accepted Communistic technique in this so it does not look to me as if the few "named" persons exercise any influence out of proportion to their numbers...

The serious charge is that there is little leadership among the Africans and that they are mainly led by Indians. This is a serious thing for anyone to say without evidence which I personally do not think exists. I know some leading Africans have refused to take part in the movement, but on the other hand many of those who are risking a good deal are men and women of high standing, and quite definitely not the type who would be influenced by anyone. It is a very serious thing in South Africa when people in responsible positions try to insinuate racial jealousies and antipathies which do not exist, or if they do, are due to other factors which can be dealt with in their own sphere. Few things are more diabolical than a whispered campaign, a practice which has become all too common in South Africa.

Has the campaign so far justified itself? From several angles I have heard that even if it should be decided to close the campaign as such and dissolve the organization, leaving individuals to do as they may decide, the sufferings of those who have been in jail and beaten are fully justified by the fact that the non-European people have realized the power they possess even without resort to any sort of violence. That worldwide interest has been awakened has also greatly encouraged them, although the more intelligent leaders feel embarrassment when some well-intended friends overseas express themselves rather crudely, and are informed by superficial knowledge of life in South Africa. However, there can be no question that non-European people in South Africa know that the moral support of a freedom-loving people is behind them in their struggle to develop

NATIONALISTS' NIGHTMARE

THE following letter by Mr. C. W. M. Gell appeared in the 'Rand Daily Mail' dated February 3. Sir—Mr W. A. Maree the Natives member for Newcastle is reported to have told the House of Assembly on January 25 that "Natal is located in the area in which India hopes to offload the surplus millions of its population."

Can Mr. Maree answer the following questions?

(1) Is it not true that immigration of indentured Indians into the Union was finally stopped by the Government of India in 1911, despite energetic protests by Natal and the Union Government?

(2) Did not the Immigrants Regulation Act of 1913, which was part of the Smuts-Gandhi agreement, finally close all other Indian immigration into the Union?

(3) Apart from the trickle of wives and minor children allowed into the Union by the first Cape Town (Malay Sastri) Agreement of 1927, when has the re-opening of Indian immigration ever been made an issue, either by the Indian Government or by our resident Indian community?

(4) As against this clear evidence of India's lack of interest in emigration of her nationals to South Africa for these last 40 years, has Mr. Maree any better basis for his statement than his own inspired guess work and the supposed interests of his party?

The unsupported statements of Dr. Malan and Dr. Doeges that India intends to use Africa as "a dumping ground for her surplus population" will convince no one but the faithful (like Mr. Maree) that, against all the historical evidence, India has any such designs against any part of the Union—Yours etc, C. W. M. GELL.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

SMUTS BY HIS SON

By C. W. M. GELL

II

IN my last article about Mr. Smuts' life of his father I was critical of the author's historical method because its inaccuracy obtrudes in a rather large number of passages. In this article I want to deal with General Smuts himself as the central subject of the book.

First, I must discuss two singular omissions relating to racial and labour problems—two of what may have been Smuts' blind spots, though the author is responsible for some of their neglect in these pages. Mr. Alan Paton has already drawn attention in the January 'Forum' to the extensive treatment of African-British relations and the almost complete evasion of all other racial problems. Not only is the Native Legislation of 1936, dealing with the Cape franchise, the Native Representative Council and the Native Trust, never mentioned; neither is the 1913 Native Land Act, the Native Affairs Act of 1920, the Native (Urban Areas) Act of 1945. Yet all these important measures were passed by a Government of which Smuts was either Premier or vice-Premier (in fact, if not in name). The Asiatic Representation and Land Tenure Act of 1946 is briefly and inadequately discussed. Nothing in the book suggests that Smuts had a coherent, synoptic vision of racial problems, such as characterized his approach to all other subjects. It is hard to say whether Smuts was deliberately blind (or rather, evasive) on racial affairs, realising their importance (if not, perhaps, their urgency) and hoping that the logic of events would eventually convince a notoriously short-sighted electorate. Certainly such a view accords with his attitude to some other matters, where patience seemed to him the better part of political wisdom. But there is no doubt that, if this was his real intention he ran the risk of leaving his party stranded in a racial crisis without (if his own deep perception of realities had been lost to it) any guiding principles on which to base its policies. This is the harvest we are reaping today. In all fairness we should perhaps allow that, if the importance of this subject should never have been in doubt, its urgency has only become apparent in the five years since General Smuts last office.

On pp. 303-7 Mr. Smuts prefaced his father's Rhodes Memorial lectures at Oxford in 1929 with a soliloquy on Native Affairs which is apparently his own. After not unfairly summarising the ambivalent attitude of the original Whites—the Bible and the iron hand—he doubts that the master-servant relationship will long be feasible now in face of a "national madness of surging unrest." He puts forward, on y to reject, a very inadequate presentation of the liberal approach and a curious, half-baked "scientific" approach. He seems to come down tentatively in favour of "the tactical approach" by which the Whites take military and economic precautions against "a day of reckoning." But, as Mr. Paton very pertinently asks, what follows next? Another day of reckoning? And another? And another?

Mr. Smuts tells us that his father looked with disfavour on "over-liberal views and was confident that the White man's intellectual and administrative superiority would enable him to live indifferently in a state of semi-overlordship over the blacks." I cannot say that this is an untrue condemnation of his father's opinions, but I wonder if Mr. Smuts has really defined them correctly. The extracts from General Smuts' lectures on the next five pages certainly suggest a broad, tolerant paternalism towards the rural Africans. But on p. 312 he puts his finger with his usual warring scum on the crux of a matter on the question of the distributed, urban African population, which he recognised to be (depending how it is handled) the creative or destructive element in the evolution of a mixed society. To this problem the quoted extracts of his lectures offer no solution, Smuts being seemingly divided in his mind between the economic inefficiency of migrant labour and the social consequences of integration.

This lecture was given 24 years ago and much has happened since. I think General Smuts' most distinctive quality was that his questioning mind was never closed upon any subject. No doubt he inherited some of the prejudices of his people and he had to bow to others with which he did not wholly agree in order to carry on the business of government. But even as he pegged Indian residence rights in 1946, he offered some sort of parliamentary representation as well. I am not suggesting that it was a fair exchange or that the Indians could do other than refuse it. I merely instance it as an example of his mind reaching forward despite its limitations and the reluctance of his supporters to some new situation. His mind was always advancing, while those of most of his countrymen were static or in full retreat. I recall that in 1917 he said that our non-European policy must be based on "the granite bedrock of the Christian moral code," which for him was liberal-humanist not Calvinist-predestinarian, and I like to think that, facing the sort of situation we have brought on ourselves today, he would have applied the following doctrine to off men (as Hofmeyr taught him) in the same manner that he applied it to the defeated nations of Europe:

"When you are up against a position as terrible in its possibilities for good and evil, you can only do one thing, even if you fail utterly. And that is the right thing, the thing you can justify to your conscience and to that of all reasonable and fair-minded people."

Smuts' other blind spot was the bread-and-butter issues which mean so much to industrial labour. He was involved in labour troubles in 1913, 1914, 1919, 1922-3 and again in 1947. On no occasion, so far as this book shows, was he really concerned with the basic causes of the unrest, and his tactics of "show-downs" and "teaching lessons" (the phrases are his son's) were both clumsy and inhumane. They helped to lose him two elections. In this respect there is a certain parallel with his great contemporary and friend, Winston Churchill. Smuts' views on the Mines and Works Act Amendment Act of 1925, which introduced the statutory industrial colour bar, is never discussed in the book nor is the Act mentioned.

It is pleasant to turn from these weaknesses to the great aspects of his unquestionably great man—one of the greatest of our lifetime. I need not dwell on his services to the Union, the Commonwealth, the League of Nations and the United Nations, since these have been frequently and deservedly praised. Perhaps Smuts was at his brilliant best in 1919. Though he failed to influence the Versailles Peace settlement decisively, he correctly prophesied where it would fail and why. Nor need we linger on the many delightful scenes of him with his family and his grandchild, which have been widely quoted by reviewers.

Rather let me close these two articles by extracting something of the basic philosophy which guided the life of this rare combination of thinker and man of action. For Smuts was a great intellectual in the best sense of the word, the only considerable philosopher South Africa has yet produced whose deeds derived their meaning and impetus from his view of life. Perhaps this is most beautifully expressed in his Recessional Address at St. Andrews in 1934 when, after some sentences of splendid world-and-life-affirmation and acknowledgement of the heroic in the human spirit, he analyses the heart of the modern problem:

"The disappearance of the sturdy, independent-minded, freedom-loving individual, and his replacement by a servile mass mentality is the greatest menace of our time. In spite of our scientific expansion, our essential human rights are contracting...The denial of free human rights must in the long run lead to a cataclysm." Later he was to say:

"The New Order can only arise under the sign of the Cross in the spirit of service and self-sacrifice, which has carried man from his brutal, bestial past to the height of his spiritual vision. Not in mastery but in service, not in dictatorship, but in freedom, lies the secret of man's destiny."

On another occasion he questioned the adequacy of the purely materialist Marxist world-view: "A house swept clean and garnished but empty of the spirit, still remains a place which seven devils may enter and occupy." He believed in the greatness of the world and the goodness of man of whom Jesus was the great archetype and forerunner. Over it all brooded, he believed, not God in the image of man, but some great Spiritual Principle or Divine Law. Though he set great store by the heroic stature of man, he sought this quality in his moral potential, not in his physical or intellectual vitality. He accepted science as "perhaps the clearest revelation of God to our age," but he fully recognised our urgent need to bring it under spiritual and ethical discipline before our own inventions destroy us. Superficially science teaches us that "our origin is an accident, our position exceptional, and our fate is sealed with the inevitable running down of the solar system...According to astronomy, life is indeed a lonely and pathetic thing in this physical universe—a transient and embarrassed phantom in an alien, if not hostile, universe."

But his holistic vision, working more profoundly, saw the essential unity of mind and matter, the human soul meeting with spiritual hospitality and response throughout a friendly universe of material organisms evolving in the fulness of time towards beauty and holiness, even to the human soul is who warned them that "it paralyses a people to live in the past." A great rationalist, a great liberal and a great dreamer of dreams. I am sorry that his son has not found room for his father's plea to South Africans to "follow the larger vision" in racial affairs, for his public acknowledgement late in public life that segregation was dead as a practical policy and for his tribute to Hofmeyr as "the conscience of South Africa." But I thank him, indeed, for the glimpse of his father stopping a friend from picking a rare flower on Table Mountain.

By JOHN GILD

"A WHITE POLICY"

THE United Party has published a pamphlet advocating immigration on a large scale. In favour of this "white policy," there are put forward a variety of arguments, all of them muddled or mischievous. The pamphlet points out that there is a danger that non-Europeans are now replacing European workers who leave their jobs on the railways and in other fields of employment. If this tendency continues, "it will make it virtually impossible to maintain the colour bar." The Europeans in this country will become a shrinking white patch in an ever larger black sea. Of necessity this must result in the employment of non-Europeans in uppermost normally reserved for Europeans.

Seldom have I read a political pamphlet more dishonest and deceitful in all its implications. Everyone knows that there are only two reasons why the United Party really wants to welcome immigrants from abroad. The first is that such people will vote for the party, not for the Nationalists. The second is that industrialists want more skilled artisans, of whom there is a shortage in this country. The obvious solution to the latter problem is to relax the industrial colour bar and to train Africans and Indians as artisans. Business men would be inclined to support this solution, but the United Party is afraid to face the immediate political consequences. It prefers to play the "clever" game of accepting the Nationalists' assumptions about race and colour and trying to beat them by juggling with words and figures. But the U uses themselves are meticulous in hiring 30,000 immigrants to South Africa every year would mean that an average of 1,000 a week must enter. That is to say, a fleet of ships carrying only immigrants and no other passengers. Where are all these people to find houses to live in? Or schools for their children? To crown the absurd argument, it is said that immigrants will create a bigger market. Have the pundits of the United party not yet noticed the ten million non-Europeans who would also like to consume goods—if they could do skilled work and so earn larger incomes to spend?

Academic Apartheid

Congress in Natal did well to devote one of its excellent newsletters to apartheid in the Universities. There is an unpleasant amount of deception in this sphere. The sorry record of the University of Natal is properly exposed. But the other English-speaking universities are not as fair as they pretend to be. Capetown declines to allow Africans to study medicine, I am told. It has some kind of private agreement with the Witwatersrand University, whereby the latter takes Africans and Capetown takes Coloureds. This apartheid within a theoretical equality is absurd. For one practical objection is that it greatly increases the high cost of higher education when a student is forced to travel 1,000 miles from his home. At the Witwatersrand University non-whites cannot study any form of engineering, or even a subject like Fine Art, where the obstacle is alleged difficulties in securing drawing masters, who would have to be non-European. Although a Chinese was admitted to the men's residence a couple of years ago, the women's residence still refuses to admit a Chinese girl.

The white students in Johannesburg and Capetown are generally against these forms of segregation; indeed, they have often displayed more liberalism than the staff which teaches them. Incidentally, it is said that the white student resistors in Duncan's hostel at Germiston are likely to get into trouble with the University, if they are convicted by the court.

Self-government For The Sudanese

A new crisis has blown up in the Sudan, one of the most advanced areas in Africa. Britain is very reluctant to relinquish control, but Egypt is forcing her to do so by demanding certain rights herself. Rather than let the Sudan fall under Egyptian influence, Britain has accelerated the Sudan's progress towards complete self-government, which has been promised in three years' time. Britain's foreign Office hoped to delay matters by claiming the right to continue to protect the primitive Sudanese tribes in the south against the advanced Northern Moslems. But now, to everyone's surprise, General Nuri has produced evidence, in the form of signed documents, that the tribes are willing to dispense with British protection and are not afraid of Egypt. The move is, of course, complicated by the British occupation of the Suez Canal zone, which is deeply resented by all parties in Egypt as a continued and unnecessary limitation on their country's independence. If Mr. Churchill and Mr. Eden are wise, they will see to it that Britain leaves both Suez and the Sudan voluntarily, while some goodwill towards her remains. I can't help noting that international factors can play a decisive part in cancelling non-western people from European domination. It was so when Britain quickly made Jordan an independent state in 1946 (to embarrass the Jews in Palestine); and it looks like being so in the Sudan this year or next.

Fact And Fiction About Race

One of the most important things today is that non-white people should have in their minds clear, scientific ideas about race. In our country more rubbish is written and spoken on this subject than on any other. UNESCO is doing a splendid job of work in publishing cheap booklets and pamphlets that tell the truth about racial myths. That is the main reason why countries like our own are so hostile to UNESCO and decline to assist its work. UNESCO's latest booklet, "What is Race?" certainly deserves a warm welcome. In less than 100 pages and illustrated with excellent diagrams, this booklet explains the facts about racial inheritance and, incidentally, exposes colour prejudice for the foolish thing it is. A team of world-famous scientists, drawn from a dozen different states, reached a set of unanimous conclusions. "There are," they say, "no scientific grounds whatever for the racialist position regarding purity of race and the hierarchy of superior and inferior races to which this leads. No evidence exists of differences in inborn mental ability. Differences between people within the same 'racial' group are at least as great as differences between people of various racial or ethnic groups."

These scientists say that they were fortunate in having as members of their team some who had made special studies of the results of inter-marriage between members of different races. This meant that the conclusion that race mixture in general did not lead to disadvantageous results was based on actual experience as well as upon study of the scientific literature. In passing, I was fascinated to read of a special school in New York for 500 gifted children. When these were finally selected, it was found that 70 per cent. were Negroes, who form just about their percentage of the total population.

For 5s. (plus 6d. postage) you can get this booklet from any bookseller or from the agents for UNESCO publications, von Schenk's Book Store, P.O. Box 724, Pretoria.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

"NUREMBURG" DECREES AND DUTCH REFORMED CHURCH

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

THE Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa are committed to the doctrine of apartheid and the injustices perpetrated by the present Government in the name of that ideology are things of which the Dutch Reformed Churches cannot substantially wash their hands. This is particularly the case at the moment when the Government have gone to the extreme of presenting before Parliament Bills—the Public Safety Bill and the Criminal Law Amendment Bill—the purpose of which is reputedly to crush the resistance movement, but which, in fact, gave the way for the recent and most painful debasement of the human personality.

The Christian Church in Germany during Hitler's rise tolerated his perverted racial laws. It refused to see in them a direct attempt to debase the human personality in the end. As a body, the Church did protest now and again, but did next to nothing to take a firm, manly and uncompromising stand against what was clearly to be a complete repudiation of everything precious and valuable in the Christian tradition. Even when the Nuremberg Laws were passed, the Church's attitude was one of passivity.

Now, this statement requires to be explained and qualified. The Church in Germany did not at such accept Nazism. It took up the attitude that it would not interfere in State matters. This meant that although it shunned Nazism it would not actively advise its members to withhold support from the Nazi Party. The enactment of the Nuremberg Laws, which completed the degradation of the Jews and gave the way for Buchenwald and Dachau and Belsen was viewed largely as a secular affair, something which the Church could not fight tooth and nail, even at the expense of having it branded and its leaders imprisoned or shot. In short, the Nuremberg Laws were not regarded as evils with which there could be no compromise.

A complicating factor was that they were directly largely against the theological rival of the Christian Church Judaism. The Jews were not Christians and very many of the Christians who looked on while the Nuremberg Laws crushed the Jews could soothe their conscience by saying that in any case the Jews repudiated Christ.

Only a few notable Christian men and women risked every danger to denounce Nazism for the evil it was. The overwhelming majority of these were thrown inside concentration camps—some died there. It is to the glory of Christendom that these few did stand forth courageously against evils which Christ would never have permitted to descend and appear.

But the majority in Germany took up an attitude which has striking parallels in the attitude of the Dutch Reformed Churches in this country. An Afrikaans pastor who would denounce apartheid without using words would certainly invite being ostracised. I have followed with keen interest Dutch Reformed attempts to build bridges between the races. Fundamentally, these attempts have been no more than efforts to get more universal acceptance of the creed of apartheid. They have not been real bridges. It is true that the Churches have tried to show up where Malan's apartheid falls short. But when Dr. Malan told the Churches bluntly that they were talking nonsense with their "Bantustan" apartheid, it is very a pity that they promptly self-peddled on this issue.

In the meantime men and women of all races who do not want anybody to dominate anybody have been slowly making their influence felt. They have done this in their own different ways, none of them co-ordinated. First, there have been the African, Indian and European republics. When the history of our times comes to be written—that is, if South Africa will survive the dark night into which it is being led by the Malanite Government—men will note with gratitude the stand taken by these people. To be a resister is to invite persecution and ruin these days. But true resisters will go through everything to save their country from the barbarism into which it is being thrown by the Malanites in the name of Christ and Western Civilization.

On quite a different plane the Catholic and English-speaking Churches have taken a stand against apartheid which, while it does not go far enough, commands respect.

These moves, coupled with others I need not mention, have thrown the apartheidists on the defensive. Because they stand for an evil philosophy they have refused to answer argument with argument and feel with fact. Because they know that the truth shall always prevail over falsehood and good over evil, they now come forth with their "Nuremberg" decrees to crush the soul out of the African people.

Far, make no mistake about these Bills. They are designed to crush the African people and reduce them to slavery. The Dutch Reformed Churches might say that these laws are matters for the State. But since the Government remain in power largely because of their support the evil things it does in their name must also be laid at their feet as well.

It so happens that in this country, as in Germany, the "Nuremberg" laws are directed against a racially different people. The average White church-goer to the Dutch Reformed Churches can see his own conscience and say that after all Minister Swart's "Nuremberg" laws are directed against a racially different people.

A complicating factor here for the Dutch Reformed Churches is the fact that the African is a fellow Christian. Although racially he belongs to a hated group, he owes allegiance to the same God and Christ whom the Dutch Reformed Churches worship. If they accept the brotherhood of Man through the fatherhood of God, they cannot successfully repel their consciences with too much harping on too racial differences.

In these circumstances a situation will soon arise when the African people will feel that there is absolutely no place for them in the Dutch Reformed Churches. Already, a trend in this direction is noticeable. In marked contrast, Roman Catholicism, which does not direct its attack against a man because his God created him with a particular colour, is wise enough to his fold thousands of Africans. It is blessing for the African people and South Africa that there are denominations, like the Catholic Church, which hold on to the ideal of the brotherhood of Man even in the face of Government fear and persecution.

As things stand Minister Swart's "Nuremberg" Decrees will become the laws of the land. The Malan Government will see them to humiliate a voiceless people. If it were not men and women like Patrick Duncan and Freda Troup, I would be saying that the "Nuremberg" Decrees mark the final parting of the ways between Black and White. But men and women like Patrick Duncan and Freda Troup have risen above the racial mist and shown that the fight between my people and the Malanites is not a racial fight. By going to prison and suffering every humiliation by our side they have shown that they realise with us that the Right is far superior values. We, who resist, truly love all our countrymen, regardless of race or colour. We would rather injure ourselves than harm them. Even when the Malanites whip us with scourges, we know they are our own consignment; every white South African like us. If they stand for tyranny and racial hatred; we are fortresses for government by consent and for the brotherhood of Man. If they make laws which make one race hate the other, we stand uncompromisingly for racial tolerance. If, in their desperation, they rely on brute force alone to keep themselves in power, we, in our strength, rely on truth and persuasion. Because they defend a basely immoral order, for them force, whippings, persecution, ruin are the things they hope to use to frighten us into submission. But because Good and Humanity are on our side, we shall not debate the personality of Man and yield to tyranny; nor shall we hate those who plan our destruction. But we shall hate evil tyranny with a determination which no power on earth can bend.

We believe that our own stand confronts the Dutch Reformed Churches with a challenge from which they dare not run away. The things for which we stand are part and parcel of the democratic and Christian tradition. The things behind the Minister of Justice's "Nuremberg" Laws are totalitarianism and are foreign to Christian civilisation. I hope that these are things are done behind the Iron Curtain at the moment and not in democratic Christian countries of the West.

Fortunately, although the minutes fly rapidly past, it is not as yet too late for the Dutch Reformed Churches to accept the African people, among whom they have laboured and set up impressive schools and missions, that they are not leading us, as the Government is doing, into the darkness of the night.

Things In General

Protest Against Safety Bill

About 200 people—most of them Natives—attended a mass meeting on the Grand Parade, Cape Town, last week to protest against the public Safety Bill. Organized by the Cape Western Advisory Boards and Vigilance Associations, the meeting passed a unanimous resolution deploring the attempt of the Nationalist Government to pass the Bill and to remove the few remaining democratic rights of the non-European community. Mr. Albe Sachs, son of E. S. Sachs, who sailed for Europe on Friday, told the meeting that his father had not run away but had gone to an important job in Europe, where he would bring the state of affairs in Africa to the notice of millions. The speakers, who numbered 11, all emphasized the belief the South Africa was undemocratic and urged that the Government should not interfere in their election of Mr. Bunting as their member of Parliament. "We elected him because he was the best man we could get," one speaker said.

Moral Re-Armament

"I want to build bridges between South Africa and India," Mrs. Marie van Selms of Natal recently told a mass meeting of Indians in the Rajaji Hall, Madras, resting place of some of Mahatma Gandhi's ashes. Mrs. van Selms, who is touring India with the cast of the industrial play "The Forgotten Factor," has given her whole inheritance to further the work of Moral Re-Armament in Africa. She apologized to the Asian peoples for her superior attitude to other races. "Moral Re-armament is a common platform on which all races can meet. It is bringing new relationships in the gold mines of Johannesburg. Farmers are giving better housing and payment to their workers," said Mrs. van Selms. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Peter Howard, author and journalist, who said: "The greatest imperialistic power in the world today is the power of materialism. This power occupies the hearts and minds of the ordinary person and the statesman. It makes us accept lower standards than we should, both personally and nationally. We judge ourselves by our ideas and our neighbour by their actions. These are the hall-marks of materialism. We need a new attitude of living that rises above materialism."

East African Students In India

With the help of a Nairobi businessman, Mr. B. R. Capila, a party of 33 students have gone to India from East Africa. The party consists of 4 girls and 27 boys. The trip has been organized by Mr. and Mrs. Gautam, both of whom are teachers. Mrs. Nirmala Gautam, an art teacher in the Government Asian Girls School, Mombasa, praised Indian art and architecture. She said "your art galleries and museums are thrilling to watch. The different wooden and stone carvings, the idols and temple towers have made us realise what our ancient culture was." The party were special guests at the Republic Day parade. They have visited Bombay, Bangalore, Mysore, Madras, Puri, Calcutta, Tananagar, Patna, Benares, Lucknow and Simla.

"Mr. M. A. Rahman, First Secretary to the Commissioner for Government of India in British East and Central Africa and his assistant Mr. Mahendar Singh arrived in Blantyre from Salisbury on 28th January. He was on his official visit to select four African candidates, two for the Government of India Cultural Scholarships and the other two for the Scholarships awarded by local donors, one by D. M. Patel and second jointly by Messrs J. S. Kumbhar and Gobindaram. During his short stay of two days he visited local schools and met leading personalities of Indian and African communities at the residence of the Hon. Mr. P. Dayaram.

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other of the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining, and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with blood-hounds, and romance. INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Dombay, February 4

INDIAN REPUBLIC CELEBRATION

THE third anniversary of the Indian Republic was celebrated on January 26 with subdued emotions due to the uneasy economic conditions of the masses, although there was the usual pomp and pageantry at the official functions. High prices, business depression and increasing unemployment are causing concern and hardships to the masses. From President down to the lowest leader exhorted the public to take a pledge to make the Five Year Plan a success, as the economic future of the country depends on it.

The President, Dr. Rajendra-prasad, in his message to the nation declared that "India will continue her efforts for world peace, but may not 'appreciate' any move that may bring danger of war near her. Obviously he was referring to Pakistan's joining the Middle East Defence Organisation in the last sentence.

He revealed that the food position was improving and the examination of the claims of refugees from West Pakistan was nearing completion and the valuation of evacuated property was also going on apace.

The people paid their homage to the Father of the Nation—Mahatma Gandhi on 30th January, the 50th anniversary of his death. Tributes were paid in glowing terms to the architect of our freedom. Thousands of men, women and children went to Rajghat in the early morning to pay respect to Bapuji. Rajghat, where Bapuji was cremated, has become a centre of pilgrimage not only for Indians, but even foreign celebrities who visit Delhi do not miss the opportunity to visit Rajghat and lay a wreath and pay respect to the Apostle of Peace. Prayers, music playing and constructive work were the main features of the day's programme.

Correspondence has been going on between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan. Although the contents of the correspondence are not revealed officially, it is learned from reliable sources that Pandit Nehru again offered to solve all the disputes by direct negotiations and make a "no-war" declaration. Mr. Nizamuddin, the Prime Minister of Pakistan, rejected the proposal to make a "no-war" declaration by both the countries till the Kashmir question was solved and suggested that all the disputes, if not solved by direct negotiations, should be referred to arbitration. But Mr. Nehru, it is learnt, was not prepared to submit any matter involving basic principles to arbitration. Correspondence is still going on but is not expected to bear fruit.

Being unable to sell cotton and jute to foreign countries, Pakistan is thinking of negotiating a five years' trade agreement with India. India and Pakistan have come to an understanding with regard to making travel conditions easy between the two countries.

In the meanwhile, Mr. G. S. Bajpai, Governor of Bombay, who will lead the Indian delegation to Geneva for talks on Kashmir with high powered Pakistani delegation under United Nations mediator Mr. Grabam, has left for Geneva. Sir Mungaiat Pakvasa has been appointed as the acting Governor of Bombay.

Justice Wadchoo, appointed by the Government of India to inquire into all separate aspects of Andhra Province, has completed his enquiry and he will submit his report in a few days. Andhra Congress Committee has presented a claim of Rs. 50 crores as compensation for Andhra from the residuary Madras State. Mr. Bhakhtavatsalam, Minister of Madras, has described this claim as fantastic and has opposed it. It is believed that the new Andhra State may come into existence by next June. Meanwhile separate budgets prepared by Madras State show that Andhra Province will have an annual deficit of Rs. 5 crores.

The Supreme Court has dismissed the appeal preferred by Syed Karim Raza against the judgment of the Special Tribunal sentencing him to seven years rigorous imprisonment in Bibi-sagar Decoy case.

Agitation continues against Sales Tax in Saurashtra. Satyagraha, which was suspended for a few days, was resumed on Saturday last. Marol has broken down and almost all the shops are now open. The merchant community seems to be tired of this fruitless agitation and their interest in the struggle is waning. There was again a clash between the agitators and the police, in which about forty people were injured. The Government released three leaders of the agitation from the jail. They are refusing to take the leadership of Satyagraha now.

Relief works are being started in famine-stricken districts of Maharashtra and Gujarat.

There has been a spate of litigation challenging the validity of one or the other Act on constitutional grounds, since the new constitution came into force. Jamindari Abolition Act of various States were challenged in various courts without success. Now Orissa High Court has held Orissa Estates Abolition Act valid and dismissed the petition of eight Jamindars of Ganjam district.

President inaugurated the Indian Academy of Dance, Drama and Music at Delhi. Two other Academies, Academy of Art and Academy of Letters will be opened in the near future.

RHODESIA NEWS

(From Our Livingstone Correspondent)

MR FENNER BROCKWAY, Labour Member of British Parliament, who recently visited Kenya, is reported by Reuters to have said that British methods against Mau Mau Secret society in Kenya might destroy the organisation but would intensify its spirit. The new emergency regulations empowering the authorities to confiscate property would increase bitterness that caused violence.

Mr. Fenner Brockway says "unless something immediate and imaginative is done to win confidence of the African people there is a danger of racial conflict from Capetown to Nairobi."

"The Labour Government" says Mr. Brockway, "had converted millions of millions of Asians in India, Pakistan, Ceylon and Burma to an attitude of goodwill. Something of that kind could be done in Africa. It had already been achieved in Gold Coast where self-government had largely been introduced."

Proceeding further, Mr. Brockway observes, "conditions vary in different colonies but in each of the colonies Britain should fix in consultation with representatives of African organisations, a target date for self-government. Britain had only to do this to win at once co-operation of African people. Such a plan would enable Africa to become a continent of racial harmony."

Central African Federation

Central African Federation conference just ended last week in London. The report was signed by Sir Godfrey Haggins Lord Swinton, Mr. Oliver Lyttelton, Sir Gilbert Reaume and Sir Godfrey Colby.

Sir Godfrey Haggins the Southern Rhodesian Prime Minister said at a Press conference: "If Southern Rhodesia cannot link politically and economically with Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, she will find herself isolated between two extreme policies—one in West Africa and the other in the South."

Mr. Roy Welensky, leader of the Europeans said "We have now reached a stage when the decision to federate has got to be taken. If this opportunity is missed, I doubt if it will ever come again."

The new Federation will group together nearly seven million people—6,500,000 Africans, 200,000 Europeans and 15,000 Asians.

Mr. C. W. Gillebrand, arbitrator in the pay dispute between the African Mineworkers Union and the mining companies awarded pay increases of from 1/2 for African miners groups and 1/8 a shift in the higher groups.

NYASA CHIEFS OPPOSE FEDERATION

CHIEF MWASE presided over the Conference of Nyasaland African Chiefs held at Lilongwe last year and at which the following resolutions were passed:

1. This Conference of Chiefs reaffirms the decision that African people of Nyasaland reject federation in principle and condemn the propaganda being carried on by the so-called Round Table talks, presided over by responsible Government officers directed at persuading Africans to accept federation.

2. This Conference deplores the fact that the Secretary for South African Affairs, Provincial Commissioners, Administrative Officers and officers of various Government departments have engaged themselves on propaganda work to persuade Africans to accept federation despite the Africans' solid opposition.

3. This Conference of Chiefs regrets to know that the Government is encouraging and making use of people of doubtful honesty to preach a new way in trying to get the Chiefs and their people to agree to federation against their free consent, and in the face of their strong and solid opposition to the whole federation scheme. As a result of this action on the part of Government, the Chiefs and their people have lost confidence in the Government of Nyasaland.

4. Furthermore, this conference of Chiefs refutes the allegations made that Nyasaland African Congress influenced and is still influencing the Chief in rejecting federation in principle, as the Chiefs themselves clearly understand the implications which federation would bring into their country.

5. This Conference of Chiefs wishes to testify that to the best of their knowledge, the Nyasaland African Congress has never engaged itself in intimidation as has often been alleged by supporters of federation in order to stop Africans to accept federation, and wishes to certify wholeheartedly that the Congress has all along been working in the best interests of Africans and peace and order of the country in general. That the Congress has not at any time indicated its intention to interfere with the existence of Chiefs or their hereditary duties.

6. That this Conference of Chiefs views with concern the actions taken by Government officials intimidating African civil servants with either dismissal or forced transfer.

7. That this Conference reaffirms their natural claim that Nyasaland is a country belonging to the indigenous people, protected by treaty with H.M.G. that no law could be enacted by any Government to entitle any other races to become lawful inhabitants of this God-given land without the express consent of the Africans themselves.

8. That this Conference demands the following constitutional changes to enable the African people of this country to have full share in the Government of Nyasaland:

(a) African members of District Councils to be elected or selected by the Africans themselves, and that the chairman be an African.

(b) African members of Provincial Councils be elected or selected by Africans and that the chairman be an African.

(c) African members of Protectorate Council be elected or selected by Africans and that the chairman be an African.

(d) African members of the Legislative Council be increased to 18, and that these members be elected or selected by Africans themselves.

(e) Africans be elected or selected by members of Protectorate Council to be members of Executive Council.

The Conference sent the following telegram to the Colonial Secretary: "Chiefs and African people of Nyasaland send their sincere and undivided loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen and the British Throne. Strongly adhere to the treaties made between Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria with the Chiefs and African people of Nyasaland. Strongly reaffirm their unanimous opposition to federation in principle. Stoutly reject further discussions on federation proposals. Sending delegation."

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

These are times that try men's souls. The Summer Soldier and the Sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the Service of their Country but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only that gives anything its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods, and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as Freedom should not be highly rated.

—Paine.

He that cannot forgive others, breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself, for every man has need to be forgiven.

—Lord Herbert.

CLASS WAR AND COMMUNISM

(Mahatma Gandhi)

SOCIALISM and communism of the West are based on certain conceptions which are fundamentally different from ours. One such conception is their belief in the essential selfishness of human nature. I do not subscribe to it, for I know that the essential difference between man and the brute is that the former can respond to the call of the spirit in him, can rise superior to the passions that he owns in common with the brute and, therefore, superior to selfishness and violence, which belong to the brute nature and not to the immortal spirit of man. That is the fundamental conception of Hinduism, which has years of penance and austerity at the back of discovery of this truth. That is why, whilst we have had saints who have worn out their bodies and laid down their lives in order to explore the secrets of the soul, we have had none, as in the West, who laid down their lives in exploring the remotest or the highest regions of the earth. Our socialism or communism should, therefore, be based on non-violence and on harmonious co-operation of labour and capital, landlord and tenant.

Ryots themselves have no greater ambition than to live in peace and freedom and they will never grudge your possession of property provided you use it for them.

All exploitation is based on co-operation, willing or forced, of the exploited. However much we may detest admitting it, the fact remains that there would be no exploitation if people refuse to obey the exploiter. But self comes in and we hug the chains that bind us. This must cease. What is needed is not the extinction of landlords and capitalists, but a transformation of the existing relationship between them and the masses into something healthier and purer.

Let us not be obsessed with catchwords and seductive slogans imported from the West. Have we not our distinct Eastern tradition? Are we not capable of finding our own solution to the question of capital and labour? What is the system of varnashrama but a means of harmonizing the difference between high and low, as well as between capital and labour? All that comes from the West on this subject is tarred with the brush of violence. I object to it because I have seen the wreckage that lies at the end of this road. The more thinking set even in the West to-day stand aghast at the abyss for which their system is heading. And I owe whatever influence I have in the West to my ceaseless endeavour to find a solution which promises an escape from the vicious circle of violence and exploitation. I have been a sympathetic student of the Western social order and I have discovered that underlying the fever that fills the soul of the West there is a restless search for truth. I value that spirit. Let us study our Eastern institutions in that spirit of scientific enquiry and we shall evolve a truer socialism and a truer communism than the world has yet dreamed of. It is surely wrong to presume that Western socialism or communism is the last word on the question of mass poverty.

INDIAN OPINION

Another Immoral Act

A SECTION of the Indian community resident in the Union is greatly perturbed over the announcement made in Parliament by the Minister of the Interior, Dr. T. E. Donges, that the Government had decided to deprive Indian women married to South African Indians and their minor children of the right to enter the Union, which they have been enjoying under the Immigration Act of 1913 and which was vouchsafed to them under the Indian Relief Act of 1914, which formed part of the Simon Gandhi Agreement and again under the Capetown Agreement of 1927. The Minister is reported to have said:

"There had been some satisfaction at the time for the Simon-Gandhi Agreement allowing the entry of Indian women and children because of the discrepancy between the number of Indian men and women in South Africa."

"With the passage of time and the entry on the Union of Indian women and children, this discrepancy had been removed."

"Since the Agreement a total of 4,929 Indian women and children had entered South Africa."

"There had been some difficulty in administering this legislation, largely in connection with the identification of Indians."

"The Government had therefore decided to withdraw this concession and to apply the normal laws of the country to the entry of Indians."

"This decision would require legislation, which would be introduced after the general election."

The Minister said the proposed legislation would be made retrospective to today.

"There had been a certain amount of illegal immigration of Indians into the Union, but it was impossible to fix the number of illegal immigrants. His department had assumed him that the number was not so large as it was sometimes supposed to be."

"It could only be controlled if there was effective national registration, and with this subject in view instructions had been given to his department that national registration in respect of Indians should be speeded up."

If the proposed legislation to effect this were passed, and it would certainly be passed if the Nationalist Government were to decide that it should be passed, Indian women and children would be affected by such legislation from February 10, 1953, since the Minister has said that it would be made retrospective to the day he made the announcement.

If such a piece of legislation were passed it would be yet another atrocious act on the part of the Union Government. What would happen to all the Indian women who have already been married and their minor children who were at present out of the Union? Must their marriages be made null and void and what about their minor children without the protection of their fathers? It is true that a large percentage of Indians resident in the Union are now able to get their children married in this country but all cannot do so owing to their religious and social customs. For instance there would be no inter-marriages between Hindus and Muslims or between persons belonging to the Madras or Bengal Province and Bombay Province. So the scope for Indians getting married to their womenfolk within the Union is not as big as Dr. Donges imagines. And of course it should not be forgotten that Indians could not marry Afrikaners or English women even if they would, so that would be a criminal offence under the Union Statute.

Dr. Donges has established no case to justify such a harsh step on the part of the Government. According to his own statement 4929 Indian women and children had entered the Union in the last thirty-nine years which is by no means a considerable number. The difficulty in administering the legislation referred to by Dr. Donges seems ambiguous. The reference is, if we may be permitted to say so, to hoodwink the European public.

Dr. Donges refers to a hard-earned "right" as a "concession." It is not a concession but an existing statutory right which the Government contemplates depriving the Indians of, which will amount to the breaking of a solemn pledge.

Dr. Donges referred to "a certain amount of illegal immigration of Indians into the Union" but we thank him for being good enough to admit that "the number was not so large as it was sometimes supposed to be." It is surely not the rule of law to penalise a whole community for the fault of a few individuals.

Apart from the practical difficulties and hardships such an act on the part of the Government would cause it is morally indefensible since it would be an attack on individual freedom and liberty—a flagrant breach of the basic principles of democracy. Dr. Donges has thus sounded a note of warning to those Indians who are still hesitant to join the present campaign against unjust and immoral laws to do so forthwith. For if they have to die in any case why not die like men rather than worms?

Port Elizabeth Riots In News

THE Minister of Justice must have drawn from a particularly rich repertoire of experiences to paint the gruesome picture he drew in his speech justifying his "Nuremberg" decrees in Parliament. He dwelt at length on the brutal murder of the Catholic sister at Port Elizabeth and on unconfirmed reports that some Africans had cut pieces off her dead body and eaten them. He showed how he had had discussions with the White clergy-men of the Catholic church destroyed during the Port Elizabeth riots and then sinisterly hinted that there is a lot more in his bosom which he does not feel constrained to make public but which persuades him in asking Parliament to invest him with the powers of a dictator.

This speech must be seen against two important factors. Firstly, in another six weeks South Africa—that is, the Whites who have the vote—will go to the polls in an election about whom outcome the Malanites are not too sure. Secondly, the Malan Government is desperately in need of material by which to justify its brutal and pagan treatment of the non-Whites before the eyes of the world.

First, for the elections. It is a deeply entrenched political tradition among a large section of the Whites here that the voters' flesh should be made to creep with hideous pictures, real or imaginary and very often imaginary, of the African people's alleged intentions towards the Whites as a group. Quite a number of elections have been won, particularly by Afrikaans-speaking members of nationalistic persuasion, this way. The Minister knew full well that by telling the screaming and gullible White voter in the country the blood-curdling things about the White Catholic Sister's death, every Whiteman, bearing a few intelligent and independent-minded, would swallow his very holus-bolus and see in every African a cannibal in Western clothes. That would pay handsome ballot-box dividends. He was not interested in the harm this would do both to the African and the White community. He was interested in preparing for the elections and creating a wave of racial hysteria which would sweep him and his party back to power.

For this reason, it is absolutely imperative that the true facts of the situation should be more widely known. Firstly, a few hours after the riots Dr. J. L. Z. Njongwe, President of the Cape branch of the African National Congress, called forth for a judicial inquiry to ascertain the real causes of the riots. There was information at his disposal which he wanted to place on record before such a tribunal.

Speaking, weeks later, at Oudendalrus, Dr. Malan rejected Dr. Njongwe's demand on the score that a judicial inquiry would be used to put all the blame on the Police. This was a very shocking admission from the Prime Minister. It was shocking also because it was an unfair slur on the judiciary itself. The Prime Minister apparently did not trust a single judge in the Union of South Africa to sift fact from propaganda and arrive at a fair and impartial assessment of the real causes of the riots. After refusing to ascertain the facts publicly, the Minister of Justice comes forward with his horror stories. Who does he think he will fool with these, except the blind whom he and the Prime Minister lead?

But in demanding a judicial inquiry Dr. Njongwe and through him the African National Congress, wanted to be given the opportunity to cross-examine some of the Government's agents-provocateurs who acted at Port Elizabeth to stir up trouble and furnish the Malan Government with exactly the type of "evidence" which Mr. Swart now bandies about as though it were proven fact! If he was as sure as he tells the country he is that all these things were true, why was he afraid of appointing a judicial commission to give his facts and evidence the substance they so visibly lack to-day?

A very significant passage in the Minister's catalogue of African "vices" is his reference to the discussion he says he had with the White Catholic Fathers outside their ruined church. According to the Minister, they told him that their church had been burnt down because it was the only one with White priests. But here again, the facts contradict the Minister's allegations. The church was burnt down long after the Police had publicly announced that they had the situation well in hand.

If, after they had restored order, the church was burnt down the obvious inference is that on second thoughts the agents-provocateurs decided, to burn the church down to make it possible for the Malanites to say the riot was an anti White demonstration.

It is also very significant that the Minister was at pains to hark back to the Catholic Church in this fight with the riots. The Dutch Reformed Church, which supports the Malan Government, is at the moment and was before the riots, on a spirited campaign to discredit the Catholic Church. The Minister must have relished the idea of heaving Catholic priests conferring to him that atrocities had been committed against their church because they were White. If they did say that, the Minister must have looked on them with feelings of mingled pity and contempt for the Catholic Church is such a determined opponent of apartheid and an advocate of racial equality that it recently appointed a Basuto and African Bishop of Leribe while simultaneously elevating an Indian to the position of a Primate of the Church!

For men who have done these things to come to me of the high priests of apartheid and tell him they had tough treatment because of their skin was only to invite him to say, "Dr. Malan and I have always told you so!"

Finally, if Dr. Malan was quite sure that no agent provocateurs had been at large in Port Elizabeth during the riots, why was he so keen to shield the Police, even at the expense of suppressing the truth? The technique is too much in line with the burning-down of the Reichstag to pave the way for Nazism's brutal laws. And the present Government rarely deviates from the political and racial philosophies it imbibed from its Nazi mentors.

In this light the blood-curdling stories about the Africans having cut pieces off the corpse of a White woman have to be taken exactly for what they are—slandorous reports whose authenticity the Prime Minister refused to establish because he did not believe them himself on the evidence placed at his disposal by Minister Swart immediately after the riots. How dark Minister Swart comes forward with such information and handy it about is though it were established fact!

Of course, all this shows up the desperate plight of the Malanites. They are so wrong in their advocacy of wicked political ideas that anything, no matter how unfounded, is good enough, if only it will paint their opponents black. There is absolutely no truth in these stories. The Government itself knows there is no truth in them and it was for this reason it refused to investigate them through a judicial commission of inquiry.

The tragedy in South Africa is that there are White people who will ignore all these facts and believe the Minister simply because he says something evil against a community which they hate. But thoughtful persons in the White camp will not have forgotten the behaviour of the Government during the riots.

FEROCIOUS POWERS

'The Cape Times' dated 19 February 3 writes the following leading article on Mr. Swart's much discussed Bill:

WE wonder why it is that the Nationalist Party continues itself unable to undertake the business of running the country without conferring on its Ministers the most extravagant personal powers. Most of the Western world has been able to deal with communism in terms of its ordinary law, its ordinary police and its ordinary apparatus of constitutional safeguards for the rights of the individual. Mr. Swart needs an Anti-Communist Act to exclude the party and to give him personally the most outrageous powers to outlaw individuals, to declare them communists, or, if "communism" is not sufficiently sweeping in its application, to declare them "statutory communists," the only adequate definition of which is a person whose political activities are displeasing to Mr. Swart. For generations the United Party and other governments have been able to maintain law and order without more than occasional difficulty. Mr. Swart produces his Public Safety Bill, a ferocious measure which clothes the Minister with far more power than is asked for by a country at war, with more power than any country outside Hitler Germany and the Iron Curtain has ever needed to deal with the most trying of domestic situations. As the Communist Bill eliminates the courts, so the Public Safety Bill eliminates Parliament. Mr. Swart can declare his state of emergency at the spirit moves him. His regulations are not really subject to parliamentary approval and the employment of the powers which Mr. Swart will force Parliament to give him could give an omnipotent politician an estate control of this country in much the same measure as was once enjoyed by Meier, Hitler and Himmler. And now comes the Criminal Law Amendment Bill.

We have studied this early example of inadequate parliamentary draftsmanship with our utmost concentration but we still hesitate to assess its effect with any confidence. On the credit side is the fact that, within its extremely wide terms, the courts are still left to determine such facts as are necessary and to impose sentences, even in this elementary requirement of modern government there are reservations. After a second offence the court, whether it agrees or not, is forced to impose a sentence of imprisonment or whipping; magistrates are given a jurisdiction of three years in goal or a fine of £300 although the wisdom of generations has hitherto limited this jurisdiction to six months or £50; and Mr. Swart takes the familiar right, at his own absolute discretion, to impose on a convicted person the most arbitrary restrictions on personal movement. On the more positive provisions of this enactment we are less confident. Two or more persons favouring the repeal or modification of any law seem to become a "protest" or a "support" or a "campaign."

On a hastily-indicated offence being committed, these two or more persons lay themselves open to the most savage penalties. We are open to correction by Mr. Swart but it seems to us that the following could be a hypothetical example of the application of his law: The United Party (which consists of two or more persons) holds a meeting at Krugersdorp to protest against the High Court of Parliament Act. Nationalist headlines break up the meeting. One or two members of the audience appear before the magistrates and are fined £3 or ten days for a breach of the peace. If the 'Cape Times,' without any reference to the going-on at Krugersdorp, were to describe the High Court Act as a political fraud, we should have committed an offence under Mr. Swart's new Bill. If our reference to Dr. Douglas's eccentric measure was construed as a "protest" we would be liable to a fine of £300, a ten-stroke whipping and three years in goal or to combinations and permutations of these punishments. If our words were construed as an incitement, we could get for the original crime—a fine of £500, a 15 strokes whipping and five years in goal.

It is, of course, easy to understand what Mr. Swart is getting at, as it is easy to sympathize with him in his attempts to deal with communists and to keep the peace. What gives cause for anxiety is the clumsiness and incompetence with which Nationalist politicians can face no problem except in terms of giving extravagant powers to its Ministers. Once an incompetent regime is set on the road of keeping in office with bigger and bigger doses of personal power there is little that can be done to save it from the fate which awaited Hitler. We would, however, appeal to Mr. Swart and his friends to look for a moment at the wider picture. We have a handful of Whites in this country asserting political supremacy over a community of 10,000,000 Blacks in a coalition of 150,000,000 Blacks. The Native Representative Council has gone and the only unopposed channel for the expression of Black grievances is threatened with extinction with the suppression of the Native's representatives from Parliament. The Natives have been told by the Nationalists that any expression of grievance is communism, and then came the Communist Act. The Public Safety Bill and now this Bill of Mr. Swart's clamp down the lid ever more firmly. With great strength and great stupidity a lid can be clamped down on a boiling kettle for quite a long time. But when it eventually blows off there is a considerable explosion. Have the Nationalists not the wit to realize that they are not bringing down these essays in police-state crudities, that they are merely being incompetent?

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

AFRICANS AND INDIANS

By C. W. M. GELL

THE discussion of some sore points in the essential solidarity of the Indian and African communities in South Africa was recently so admirably handled in these columns by Mr. Ngubane and the editor, that I only wish to deal with two points where the possibility of misunderstanding remains and which it may be easier for me who is neither an African nor an Indian (though deeply sympathetic towards both) to discuss. Otherwise I agree entirely with what was written in the January 23rd issue.

My first point is Mr. Ngubane's statement that most Africans consider the Indian merchant to be typical of his community. My quarrel here is not with Mr. Ngubane who understands very well that this is not the true position and was only reporting what his fellow-Africans believed. But I want to try and show how very little factual basis there is for this belief which is shared by many Europeans.

In 1939 Indians held 19,000 licences to trade. Only 8,000 were general dealers or fresh produce dealers—the rest being hawkers, pedlars, patent-medicine sellers etc. whom we can disregard. Out of these 8,000, about 4,000 were in Natal, about 2,700 in the Transvaal and about 1,300 in the Cape. During the war the number of Indian licences increased somewhat. I do not have the latest figures by me; but we shall not be far wrong in setting off this increase against the number of families which hold two or more licences, and accepting the above figures as representing the number of Indian families which today derive their income from keeping shops, stores etc. (This excludes shop assistants and other salaried employees, both African and Indian. We are here concerned only with families owning shops.)

A Natal University survey in 1946 found that Indian families average about seven persons. On this basis we may estimate that the shop-owning Indian families comprise about 28,000 persons in Natal (i.e. about 9 per cent of the Natal Indian population), about 19,000 persons in the Transvaal (i.e. 40 per cent of the Transvaal Indians) and about 9,000 in the Cape (i.e. 50 per cent of the Cape Indians). The total number of Indians dependent on the profits of shopkeeping, therefore, comes to about 56,000 persons or 16 per cent of the Union's Indian population. That leaves rather more than 300,000 Indians (270,000 of them in Natal) earning their livelihood in other ways—and this figure may well be larger in fact, as I have assumed for the purpose of this article that all members of a shop-owning family derive their income from the business. The sort of jobs the shopless have may be seen from pages 12-13 of Professor Burrows' 'Indian Life and Labour in Natal'; but his classification is not altogether satisfactory as the shop-owners and his assistants are lumped together under 'Commerce', 'Public Service' and 'Professional' includes doctors, lawyers, clerks and municipal cleaners, and 'Agriculture' covers large land owners, petty tenants and wage labourers.

As Bad As Africans

The Natal University survey in 1946 found that Indians in Natal rural towns had an average annual income per head of £39; but that Durban Indian labourers, who comprise rather over half the Natal Indian population, had only about £21 per head (i.e. about the same as the Africans in the rural towns). And the fact that between 60 and 80 per cent of the Union's Indians live in conditions of poverty, undernourishment, disease and lack of housing equivalent to that of the Africans in the urban areas has been very clearly demonstrated in a series of booklets issued by the Institute of Race Relations.

My conclusions from these facts are that (1) the Indian merchants are a small economically frustrated underprivileged minority of the Indian population and (2) that the identity of interests and grievances between the large majority of both Africans and Indians in regard to economic conditions and opportunities (housing, political and municipal rights etc.) is just about 100 per cent.

Nevertheless, I will be the first to agree with Mr. Ngubane that this does not dispose of the matter. If most Africans and Indians are companions in misfortune, is the small, more fortunate Indian minority pulling its weight in the common struggle of all non-Europeans for a larger future in the land of their birth? And here, I think, the honest answer must be an almost unqualified "No". It may be that the tiny African minority that has lifted itself above the rack is equally backward in coming forward, though there is some evidence to the contrary. But in any case nothing like 15 or even 10 per cent of the African population yet belongs to the better off class. The 1-2 per cent mercantile minority, however, is a significant section of the Indian community and it is not participating in its people's fight in proportion either to its numbers or its wealth.

Now, whatever Africans may have against this self-centred apathy, the less fortunate Indian majority has a great deal more legitimate grievance. We are not here concerned with over-creechy traders who cheat their clients since in almost every case the remedy lies in the clients' hands to trade elsewhere. In any case, rapacity is not the monopoly of any one race group. But we are questioning the reluctance of an upper class, which should be responsible for the leadership of its people, to commit itself unequivocally in the common cause. I do not accessarily mean that every wealthy Indian should join the Defence Campaign personally, for that is a decision that each man must take in his own conscience and no one has the right to thrust another for coming to some other decision. But there should be no room for doubt about unity of purpose in pursuit of common aims.

No New Phenomenon

This reluctance on the part of some to say where they stand is no new phenomenon. All through their history in South Africa there have been Indians who were prepared to acquiesce in oppressive or discriminatory legislation, provided that their own established interests were safeguarded. They sacrificed their fellow-Indians' future opportunities on the altar of their present profits, instead of taking their stand on principle. I imagine that Mr. Ngubane's anxiety about the Natal Indian Organisation is based upon his fear that it might be contemplating some such treachery in return for a few individual concessions. I cannot say how well founded his fear may be. But clearly the Group Areas Act is the sort of measure which lends itself to such devious negotiations.

For instance a few months ago I had occasion to speak to some of the leading Indian merchants of a small Transvaal town. While stressing that it seemed to me important for Indians not to appear to claim anything for themselves which was not equally applicable to all non-Europeans, I said that I thought they would be justified in organising themselves against the sort of Group Areas plans that are circulating in the Transvaal, because Indians have much to lose from these and Africans little or nothing (except in particular areas of the Rand.) I inquired whether they had given these matters any thought; but they replied that, though much worried, they had not yet got down to any concrete thinking. I mentioned the example of Lydenburg, where, but for their united front, the 146 Indians might by now be consigned to a site two miles out, at the town on a hill adjoining the sewage farm with their trade licences cut from seven to one. But in spite of the obvious threat of similar Group plans in other towns, I have yet to see signs of a united effort to oppose them. Each merchant seems to be too fully pre-occupied with his business and the possibility of some loophole for himself, to face the comprehensive menace to the whole commercial existence of the Indian community in the Transvaal and the Cape, where nearly one half owns shops and most of the other half work in them. That such short-sightedness will inevitably reap its own reward is no compensation to the great non-shop-owning majority of Indians who, with their African companions, are deprived of the full measure of leadership and support that this wealthier and better educated minority could and should provide.

A Betrayal

Secondly, while the deplorable housing conditions of most of the Transvaal and Natal Indians are primarily due to an increasing population being restricted to the old residential areas and built up it is aggravated by the unscrupulous manner in which some Indian property owners exploit the shortage of accommodation to fleece their Indian and African tenants. The Transvaal Indian Congress rightly opposes the Lewis housing scheme on principle; but it cannot get the full support of its own community while some unfortunate homeless are charged exorbitant sums for rent and "condos" by some of the owners of the inadequate accommodation available for Asiatic occupation. Profiteering from shortages is not peculiar to Indians—it is a world-wide malpractice. But in the present conditions of this country it is a betrayal of the non-European cause and an open invitation to the "divide and rule" mentality of white politicians.

If for no better reason than their own true self-interest, it is time for the wealthier Indians to realise that they have more to lose than anyone else by the application of Nationalist policies, that no one can help them unless they are determined to help themselves and their poorer fellows, and that no one will wish to help them unless they put their own affairs in order on a basis which earns them the affection and not (as sometimes today) the hostility of their less fortunate brethren, Indian and African. The downfall of that minority of the commercial minority which profiteers out of others' poverty and homelessness will be mourned by no one in any race group—and it cannot be long postponed by any private pact or temporary concession.

I will make my second point much more shortly. Mr. Ngubane and the editorial of January 23rd shared a common error with the editor of the 'Hindustan Times.' They talked in group or race stereotypes—of the Indians or the Africans. The argument is not really whether Africans are "mercurial" or not; but whether we should allow ourselves to think of large bodies of people, who are composed of good, bad and indifferent individuals as all proper are, as possessing group attributes. To make generalisations about voluntary allegiance—such as Roman Catholicism, liberalism etc.—is in order, for a man may renounce what he no longer believes; but no one can renounce his race group. The limits of racial generalisations must, therefore, be recognised. If I say "Africans are mercurial," I do not say "all Africans are mercurial" but that many Africans are. I have no doubt that the editor of the 'Hindustan Times' in using the phrase "mercurial Africans" in that context had in mind the past propensity for many Africans (especially in company) to become excited and violent under duress. This led him and many other sympathetic observers to wonder if Africans could achieve the restraint and self-discipline required by a campaign of civil disobedience. The non-violent success of the Defiance Campaign is a standing reproach not merely to these doubts, but to those who extended an inadequate knowledge of some Africans into generalisations about the conduct of all of them.

One further point arises out of this—that, as a people advances towards its full human status, it must also learn not to be over-sensitive about criticism. If in this instance Mr. Ngubane has possibly made rather much of a trivial remark, he is in the good company of Dr. Malan, Pandit Nehru, and many individual South Africans of all races and colours—and of other peoples the world over, not excluding Britons and Americans. I think the first rule for all sensible men of goodwill is to ascertain whether the apparently derogatory remark was in fact intended as such, or whether the speaker has merely chosen his words badly to express an unobjectionable sentiment. Secondly, after giving him the benefit of any doubt in this regard, to see whether the remark contains a truth, however unpalatable, which we should do well to ponder and correct in ourselves. Thirdly, to refute what is unjust or unjustified without anger and with moderation and dignity—sometimes with laughter and good-humoured irony. Anger, vituperation and scorn belong to the childhood of our racial history, for none is above reproach and honest men admit it. Balanced judgment and reasoned refutation come with the maturity into which our African and Indian peoples are rapidly growing.

Since the above was in print we received the following from Mr. Gell:—

Sir,—The latest available figures of trade licences (1948/9) are tabulated below as the totals of General Dealers and Fresh Produce Dealers' licences held by Indians:—

	G.D.	F.P.D.	Total
Natal	2,601	1,491	4,092
Transvaal	4,027	798	4,825
Cape	1,072	524	1,596
	7,700	2,813	10,513

Only in the Transvaal, therefore, were my figures seriously inaccurate. But the addition of perhaps another 14,000 persons to my estimate of 56,000 Indians dependent on owning shops hardly affects my argument that only a very small minority of the Indian community is composed of merchants and their families.

Instead of 16 per cent., the figure should be about 19 per cent for the whole Union and the provincial proportions: Natal 9 per cent, Transvaal 70 per cent. (I think a number of families here hold more than one licence) and Cape 58 per cent.—Yours etc., G. W. M. GELL.

THE WIDER WORLD

By JOHN GILD

COALITION between the United Party and the Nationalists remains a distinct possibility in the near future. It has already been mentioned in the London press, but our daily newspapers prefer not to discuss it openly. The pressure for coalition comes from some of the big mining companies. They want to attract capital from overseas for new and further ventures and they find investors reluctant to risk their money so long as the future in South Africa is dark with uncertainty.

Above all, business men are averse to Mr. Strydom. He could become Prime Minister at any time now. Dr. Malan is an old man, anxious to retire from politics. Mr. Havenga is not in good health and might leave the political scene at the same moment, or shortly afterwards. That would leave the way wide open for Mr. Strydom, unless the Nationalist Party could be split into two. On the other side, it is recognized that Mr. Struys obviously lacks the qualities necessary for leadership. So coalition, if it comes, would come under a new leader, either Mr. Pirow, whom the mine-owners like, or someone else. Coalition would "solve" the constitutional crisis by providing the Government with a two-thirds majority. Mr. Strydom and those Nationalists who support him would form the official Opposition. It is not a pleasant prospect. The world would be led to believe that all was now well in South Africa, but few, if any, of the recent laws would be repealed, or even radically amended.

Are The Russians Racists?

I am sorry that Mr. Gell wrote as he did in this journal about Russia and the Jews. It seems to me that, like so many others, he has failed to distinguish Russian hostility to the state of Israel from anti-Semitism. These two attitudes are by no means the same thing. When the Russians and the Czechs helped to establish the new Jewish state in 1948, they no doubt hoped that it would be friendly to them. In fact, however, the dependence of Israel on American dollars has since secured that it would side with the United States in its cold war against Russia. Today Russian policy is more interested in cultivating friendship with the various Arab states, none of whom have any fondness for their former masters, France and Britain. Now the Russians allege that some Jews, prominent in political life in Czechoslovakia, were secretly sympathisers to Israel and that, encouraged by American agents, these men were guilty of political crimes. The allegation may be untrue. Some of the evidence brought to support it looked absurd to those able to assess its value. It may well be that the Russian and Czech Communists are searching for scapegoats on whom to blame their internal difficulties. However that may be—and it is very hard at this distance to form an accurate picture of events—there are no grounds for assuming that Russia is about to embark on an anti-Jewish crusade. One of the great achievements of the Soviet Union has been to abolish racial discrimination and to strive for racial freedom. During the second world war, when Russia was our ally, everyone admitted that fact, including the newspapers now so quick to deny it. No doubt popular prejudice, as distinct from legal discrimination, has persisted to some extent against the Jews. That is only to be expected, if one understands that law alone cannot abolish racialism. It would be as if all legal colour bars were suddenly abolished in this country. Africans and Indians would, for a very long time, continue to encounter White people who had failed to adjust their behaviour and their minds to the new situation. I do not argue that Soviet Russia is a perfect country. Far from it. Its shortcomings are considerable, especially in the field of civil liberties. But nothing is gained by deluding ourselves into the belief that the Russians have suddenly become racists. Let us at least wait and see. I guess that, in a year's time, Mr. Gell will be able to view the whole affair much more calmly and to write about it in the style we normally expect from his pen.

Trade Unions

Even those with very little money to spare can improve their minds by buying an occasional book. But, on entering a bookshop, most men are bewildered by the variety and range of books facing them. Now and then I intend to recommend in this column books of moderate price that would really enlighten readers. By the way, when a useful book costs a pound, more or less, why should not two or three readers club together and buy it to share between themselves?

Trade Unions play such a vital part in political progress that we should all know something about their history and purpose. I recommend a recent small volume, "Trade Unions" by Allan Flanders (published by Hutchinson; price 11s. 6d. South Africa.) It tells you about the British labour movement, how it is organized and what it does. It is a clearly written text-book, the first of its kind to be published for years. Public libraries tend to avoid this type of book, which is another reason for buying your own copy.

THE Christian Church can never undertake to maintain silence in the face of laws which seem to it to infringe Christian principles, says a statement criticising the Public Safety Bill and the Criminal Law Amendment Bill which was issued in Capetown last week by the Archbishop of Capetown, Dr Geoffrey H. Clayton, in his capacity as president of the Christian Council of South Africa.

The Christian Council of South Africa represents nearly all English-speaking churches in South Africa except the Roman Catholic Church. A copy of the statement has been sent to the Minister of Justice, Mr. C. R. Swart.

The statement says: "On behalf of the Christian Council of South Africa, we desire to record our protest against the Public Safety Bill and the Criminal Law Amendment Bill.

"We have sought an interview with the Prime Minister in which it was our intention to make certain representations about the Bills, but the Prime Minister was not able to grant us an interview.

"We therefore consider it our duty to make public our objections on these Bills.

"The Public Safety Bill makes possible the suspensions of any Act of Parliament, with one or two exceptions, for a period of 12 months if the Governor General is of the opinion that a state of emergency exists.

"This is a great and dangerous extension of the principle of government by regulation. Sufficient cause has not been made public for such extension.

"Indeed, we have been informed by members of the Government that, as a rate among non Europeans, there has been less disorder than under the previous Government.

"We believe that Government by regulation lends itself to injustice and ought only to be resorted to in case of dire necessity. We question whether the necessity for such legislation has arisen.

"The Criminal Law Amendment Bill in Section 25 renders it illegal not only to incite persons to commit an offence by way of protest against a law, but also to use any language or do any act or thing calculated to cause any person to commit such an offence.

"It seems to us that the language of this section is dangerously vague.

"Any public criticism of any existing law might conceivably lead someone to break that law.

"We desire to say that the Christian Church can never undertake to maintain silence in the face of laws which seem to it to infringe Christian principles. If we are commanded to do so we can only say, like the Apostles, 'We must obey God rather than men.'

"But we are not only thinking of ourselves. We would urge the great importance of all citizens being allowed, and indeed encouraged, to criticise existing laws.

INDIAN OPINION

Reflections On N.I.C. Conference

WRANGLING between the Trotskyites and the Stalinists seems to have become a regular feature of the annual conferences of the S.A.I.C. and the N.I.C. This was the impression gained from the N.I.C. conference held in Durban last Sunday. It is a pity that this should be so particularly at a time when in all seriousness we should be discussing ways and means to efficiently conduct the present campaign against unjust laws. Must we be such wiseacres to dabble in international politics, as is usually done at these conferences, while our own house is on fire? Indeed nobody expects us to do so because they have far more experienced and efficient people than ourselves to deal with their own affairs. They would certainly be quite justified if we just minded our own business well and were able to set an example to them by action rather than by speech. What, indeed, have we got to do with the Anglo-American bloc, for instance, when we are confronted with the Nationalist 'bloke' which is threatening our very existence in this country? A third World-War is not going to be averted by our continuous barking. It can only be averted by our sober and determined action and our preparedness to die in our thousands for real peace in our own land and that will surely bring peace to the whole world. Is there that preparedness in us? That is the question we should all be asking ourselves in all humility and we have no doubt twenty hours of would be too short a time to solve that question.

Wasting Breath

It is deeply regrettable that we should be wasting our breath in rambling, as has been done during the last few weeks and was done at last Sunday's conference, the Swart Bull, which will very shortly become the law of the land. If a little of it were spent in finding out how we can successfully combat these measures it would have been more profitable and we might have been able to render them still-born. We have now to beware lest we may not be caught napping. If we had sufficient faith in the Divine weapon we have wisely chosen to adopt and would wield it with complete mastery, no weapon on earth would cause us the slightest anxiety. We would not be effusing trash at Mr. Swart, but we would smile at Mr. Swart and tell him in the most dignified manner: "Bravo, Mr. Swart! You may do your very worst, we are fully prepared for you, we shall prove to you that our weapon will render the worst possible weapon you may choose to use against us impotent." And surely it would, if we had sufficient faith in our own weapon. But the question is have we that faith? If we have not Mr. Swart will surely win and will deserve to do so.

Fear God, Not Man

The weapon that we are wielding reminds us every moment to have an indomitable faith in it for it is a godly weapon. It tells us: We must shed all fear of man and fear God alone, and He will rescue us. We are instruments in His hands, let us be faithful to Him and allow Him to use us as He wills. Whining or the fire of the machine guns or the bombs should not perturb us. We must quietly march onward to our goal fearless of all consequences. If we die in the process we shall have won the battle. Mr. Swart will be the loser. It is this strength, courage and wisdom that is at present desired in us and which we must strain our every nerve to cultivate. This is the Divine message to all of us from the leader down to the common man. It is quiet and determined action (that is needed, not words. Action such as we had begun the campaign with. There is no time to pause or to hesitate).

Our Motto

Truth, Love and Non-violence in thought word and deed should be our motto, not "down with this" and "down with that." If we occupy ourselves in mastering this we shall have done our duty to ourselves, to our community, to this country of ours and to the world. It requires a complete change in the life we are at present leading. If we think we can achieve the very high goal we have set out for by leading the present worldly life and by being engrossed in materialism the weapon we have chosen will fail us hopelessly. It requires a code of discipline far greater than that required in military warfare. Let us consciously remind ourselves of that. If last Sunday's conference has not brought this home to the people, and we doubt very much if it has, we must humbly say that its deliberations have been a failure and we are far from the right path. We have heard quite enough about "democracy," "democratic front" and "democratic rights." They have proved meaningless throughout the world. What we actually want and are fighting for is the abolition of all unjust and immoral laws. We want the prevalence of the spirit of "live and let live" respect for the dignity of man. If we can make our lives for this we shall have done well. One thing which has impressed us most is a passage in the presidential address, at last Sunday's conference, which we quote here in conclusion.

"While we welcome the support and encouragement we have received from outside the borders of the Union, we must at all times clearly understand that our emancipation will come from our own efforts in South Africa. Every oppressed South African must be educated by his political leaders to have faith in himself and the united efforts of the oppressed peoples to free himself, his people and his country. Our freedom cannot and will not come from the United Nations, India, Pakistan or any other outside source, however welcome and important their support."

India's Intentions Towards Africa

THERE is an unfortunate tendency among sections of the White people to mind to think with their hearts on matters involving men of colour. This national weakness is so deeply entrenched among these sections that often twists even the most upright scientific intellects and forces them to give expression to views which have no real foundation in fact.

A case in point is the statement attributed to Dr. S. H. Shafer to the effect that he agreed with Dr. Mahan that India looks forward to making Africa her colony in which to dump her surplus population. He based his belief on what he called the "appalling fecundity" of the Indian community. According to these reports he even suggested the limitation of families, presumably to avoid getting the world overwhelmed by the Indians.

But what are the facts here? Firstly, we must concede that up to the time of independence the birth-rate among India's poor was on the high side. But it compared very favourably with that of similarly placed countries in the East. And it was not something which the people of India did with any designs of world domination. The poor in India, like the poor among the Whites in Africa itself, had a high birth-rate. The poor, in every part of the world, have a high birth-rate.

After independence, however, the Government of India tackled the twin evils of poverty and illiteracy and in a few years the India has had complete control of her affairs she has made commendable efforts to raise the living standards of her people as well as spread literacy. These two processes will naturally have a stabilising effect on the Indian birth rate.

But there is more to it than just that. Most critics of India's birth rate delight in seeing only one side of the picture. None of them ever refers to the equally high death-rate among the masses of the poor.

On the other hand it is important that in making generalisations on a whole national group its traditions and outlook should be taken into account in determining whether or not it might go the way Dr. Shafer and Dr. Mahan say it will go.

A cursory study of the people of India will reveal that they are a profoundly peace-loving race. This does not arise out of any physical or other weakness in them. India has the potential to be one of the most powerful nations in the world. She has a culture which the smart minds in the world treat with respect.

Their love for peace has its roots deep in this culture. Peace is the dominant force in the Hindu way of life and it has been so for more than four thousand years. He would be held indeed who would abandon such a heritage in favour of the military aggressiveness which colonialism requires.

Nor do the statements of policy by the leaders of modern India in any way justify Dr. Sklar's belief. War, by which alone Africa can be converted into a colony, has no part in India's plans for the future.

It might be argued in Dr. Sklar's favour that peaceful persuasion might be used to capture Africa for India. That might be the case: it might not be. Probably it might be argued that nobody can guarantee what will happen in the future. But Dr. Sklar, as we are, is concerned with present realities and these nowhere give any form of substance to his charges.

What he and Dr. Malan are afraid of are the closer bonds of friendship now being forged between the people of Africa and the people of India, not in this country alone, but on the continent as a whole. But this friendship is designed to protect the man of colour against the racial tyranny to which he is subjected in this country and elsewhere. India went through centuries of racial oppression and knows precisely how it predisposes men to war. Because her whole economy is based on a stable and peaceful world order, she has the duty to ensure that nobody, no matter how white, aggressively creates—as the Malanians are doing—world conditions which will throw the world into turmoil.

India's friendship for the people of Africa is designed to strengthen the African and encourage him to grow politically until he is a free citizen able to look after his own affairs. When that time comes, the African out of gratitude given at a dark moment, will in turn advocate peace—having himself won his independence the peaceful way. India has every right to reckon that when the West goes for wars and violence, Africa will then stand by her side for peace in the world. When the western world destroys itself through the use of the atom bomb, India wants to be sure that there will be sane men in Africa who will stand by her to save the human civilisation which shall have been betrayed by the atom-bomb makers of the West.

This interest on her in it the elements of patriotism and statesmanship on the part of the leaders of modern India. And they themselves have consistently denied having any designs on Africa. If thro their history, culture, interests and declared policies do not confirm Dr. Sklar's fears, we might leave him to draw freely on speculation and the imagination to conjure up any picture he likes of India's intentions.

sion down from the clouds of unapproachable Sinai to a level where it can reasonably be discussed by mere mortals. Exactly how dangerous it is for Nationalists to emancipate themselves from Divine Right can be seen from the recent outburst of Professor H. J. Strauss in the Bloomsbury press.

"You link the franchise, the vote, the representatives of the people and the Government together. Thereby you derive the authority of the Government from the electorate, while the truth is that the Government stands in a divine capacity and receives its authority from God alone. If the individualistic doctrine of human and popular sovereignty is correct, on what grounds do we not give equal voting rights to Natives and other non Whites? After all, they too are men. Anyone who considers this logical consequence of the popular sovereignty premise will realize at once the inconsistencies in which one lands."

But the Professor is too late. The damage is already done. The Nationalist theorists are committed, if they wish to save their consciences, to a solution based in some sort on what the rest of the world recognises as Christian morality. Total partition is a morally tenable ideal. But I have little doubt that, when the practical implications of total partition really dawn on its sincere advocates, they will have to accept its impossibility. Then the real battle will begin between their consciences, their fears and their prejudices. They will then need our sympathy, understanding and patience while they struggle to outgrow their old emotional heritage.

While admiring the industry that has gone into this book and welcoming this evidence of American interest in our problems, I find it hard to see what public Mr. Dvorin has written for. The technical apparatus of scholarship—the plethora of quotations and ever-numerous footnotes—will not for the well-informed outweigh the drawbacks of a pedestrian style and lack of originality in the conclusions, even where these are clear-cut. And the uninformed will find the going too heavy and the price far, far too high for so small a book. What Mr Dvorin has attempted has been accomplished much more fluently and informatively and at half the price by Basil Davidson or Len Marquard.

Book Review

AN AMERICAN ON APARTHEID

"Racial Separation in South Africa," by Eugene P. Dvorin (Chicago University Press) £4.50.

DESPITE its extensive documentation (202 pages of text, 34 of footnotes, 10 of bibliography) this book never overcomes the two fatal defects of relying only on secondary sources unsupported by personal experience or original research and a style which is turgid and indigestible. When Mr. Dvorin writes in his introduction that "rising opposition to the consequences of the (apartheid) program has brought forth extreme circumstances from the matrix of which no South African of any race or station can remain unaffected"

I can see what he means. But such wordiness usually indicates wooliness in thought and decision, and that verdict is borne out by the author's unselective use of his wide reading.

Most of what he says and quotes is, however, more or less accurate without being the full story. In particular he relies too much on what others have said about African motives and Nationalist policies, instead of quoting their own spokesmen. And both in relation to present policies and the attitude of the Afrikaans churches he seems to have missed the significant extent to which the theorists are being driven by their consciences and their opponents' arguments to take their stand on morality (and hence to aim for "total apartheid") in the place of religious dogma and biblical fundamentalism. The importance of this is that it brings the whole ques-

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF N.I.C.

THE two Martial Law Bills now before Parliament were strongly attacked by Mr. Albert J. Lutuli, President-General of the African National Congress when he declared open the annual conference of the Natal Indian Congress in Durban on Saturday, February 27.

After stating that the non-European people under the joint leadership of the African and Indian Congresses had stood in the vanguard of the opposition to these measures, Mr. Lutuli added: "I would here like to assure the Minister of Justice that he must expect to witness continued opposition to action in these Bills even if unity and justice in Parliament were swallowed by reactionary, mad forces which seek to plunge our beloved country into the abyss and atmosphere that characterised the unfortunate Medieval Dark Ages."

Mr. Lutuli stressed the importance of the growing unity of the non-white people of the Union and said that "the assertion of solidarity and effectiveness of our stance is as prelude to a renaissance."

On the basis of giving all people in the Union equal opportunities for full undisturbed development our non-European political front seeks to reinforce and enlarge the meagre and weak democratic forces found in the Union, Mr. Lutuli added: "I must state that ours is not a marriage of convenience but a political alliance based on a common, genuine spirit of friendship between our respective communities."

The concrete proof of the vitality and efficacy of this growing comradeship was the fact that Africans had rejected the plea of expatriation of the Indians notwithstanding the deliberate incitement of Africans against the Indians by some in the Government Party and its agents in an open invitation to Africans to join in the diabolic cry.

The African people believed in a partnership in the governing of South Africa where all could play their full part. "The so-called democratic institutions given us, such as Advisory Boards, Local Councils, the Native Authorities, communal representation in Parliament, etc., are a gross insult to and mockery of democracy in that, whilst they were diplomatically presented as elementary steps to the attainment of democracy, they have proved in practice to be blood alleys serving merely as a delaying tactic to ensure the prolongation of the period of white domination over blacks."

After stating that the history of the liberation of the people from man's inhumanity to man had shown that sacrifices were necessary, Mr. Lutuli said: "Let us set our spirit and attitude our consciences with the spirit of Divine Discontent that is within us, and together with freedom loving people elsewhere serve faithfully the cause of freedom in the world in general, and in South Africa in particular, and to help our beloved South Africa to march honourably with the rest of the democratic world to the final liberation of all mankind."

Presidential Address

Dr. G. M. Nantzer, in the course of his presidential address, said: "Since our last conference, much has happened in South Africa and abroad which must engage the attention of the delegates assembled here."

We form an integral part of the liberation front in this country and we have to formulate our policy and act in unity with others so as to advance the cause of freedom in South Africa.

"In South Africa we are on the eve of a General Election, an election in which the white people will go to the polls to decide which white political party shall rule South Africa for the succeeding five years. It is usual that at election time there is increased political activity on the part of the Parliamentary parties. The Nationalists and the so-called United Democratic Front are already in the field to win the white votes steeped in colour prejudice. All the Parliamentary parties, even within the United Democratic Front, are upholders of white domination; all of them except segregation. The non-white people, therefore, can have no faith in their policies or programmes."

"The Nationalist Government has since its advent to power gone forward with its ruthless apartheid policy and today the Union is on the verge of the establishment of a full fledged fascist police state. The non-European peoples have not been unduly surprised at the feeble and ineffective stand in Parliament by the official Opposition, as there is no fundamental difference between them and the Government on the question of segregation. The United Party, in particular, has repeatedly done everything possible to impress upon the European electorate that it, too, believes in keeping the non-European people 'in their place.' Thus the Nationalists have found no difficulty in putting through Parliament, measure after measure, attacking existing rights of the people."

"It is in these critical times, more than ever before, that the oppressed people of South Africa should realise the historic role they are destined to play in making South Africa a democratic country capable of taking its rightful place in the progressive world, and freeing South Africa from the grip of Fascism."

"While we welcome the support and co-operation we have received from outside the borders of the Union, we must at all times clearly understand that our emancipation and freedom will come from our own efforts in South Africa. Every oppressed South African must be educated by his political leaders to have faith in himself and in the united efforts of the oppressed peoples to free himself, his people and his country. Our freedom cannot and will not come from the United Nations Organisation, India, Pakistan or any other outside source, however welcome and important their support."

"Once we realise this cardinal fact, that we have to strive for our freedom in South Africa itself, then it is necessary for us to have a clear policy and programme for the achievement of our objective. The present leadership of the Natal Indian Congress, for almost fifteen years now, has consistently impressed on the Indian people that colour and racial oppression in this country will be ended only with the united struggle on the part of the non-European peoples supported by those Europeans who genuinely belong to the democratic camp."

"The Natal Indian Congress has embodied in its constitution the demand for 'no restriction in Indians of the franchise on the common roll free from any special qualifications.' This object is fundamental to all national organisations of the people. There can be no compromise on it and it becomes absolutely necessary for all Congress members in all their activities to stress the fact that only when our people have the vote without any restrictions grounds of colour, will we be able to solve the many burning problems which face us."

"We can only call ourselves democrats and progressives when we believe in and fight for equal franchise rights, not only for ourselves, but for all South Africans irrespective of colour or creed."

"Any person who denies the right of the non-Europeans to have equal franchise and speaks of qualified franchise for them, by his very stand, places himself outside the democratic camp whether such person happens to be white or non-white."

"Once we are clear on the question of franchise then it follows that we totally reject an inferior status for ourselves or for any other section of the South African people. Because we stand for full democratic rights for all we cannot under any circumstances take part in any machinery set up for the oppression of our people. For this reason the Natal Indian Congress rejected the communal franchise representation and the Board created under the Asiatic Land Tenure and Indian Representation Act. It is because we stand for equal municipal franchise rights that we reject the Advisory Board suggested by the Durban City Council."

"As equal partners in the common struggle against oppression, we have a right to tell all our allies that they should pursue this policy, fully and consistently in the course of unity and national liberation. We as an oppressed group must not only oppose new attacks on us, but we must by political action strive to put an end to our present status, and march forward to liberation."

CHURCH CAN NEVER MAINTAIN SILENCE

It is by such education of public opinion that laws have in the past been improved and can be improved in the future. It seems to us that such criticism is placed in jeopardy by the language of the Bill.

"Thirdly, we desire to represent that the sentences which can be imposed under the Bill are altogether too severe.

"If a man makes a speech in which he criticises an existing law and if it is held by a magistrate that his criticism of that law was 'calculated' to cause someone to break it, he can be sent to prison for five years, be fined £500 or for receive a whipping of 15 strokes.

"If he does it twice he must be sent to prison or receive a whipping. Even for a first offence, unless he is a South African citizen by birth or descent, he can be deported.

"All these provisions seem to us to mistake of the nature of panic legislation, and like all such legislation to be not only unjust in themselves but also unlikely to produce the result intended.

Lastly, we desire to express our conviction that while it is the duty of the Government to suppress disorder and lawlessness, such repression, if it stands by itself, is no remedy for the evils of which such disorder is a symptom. And once again we beg any Government which may be in power after the General Election to call into consultation representatives of the non-European with a view to making a real attempt to improve the relations between Europeans and non-Europeans in this country.

"We beg those who are or shall be in authority in this country to act before it is too late,"—Sapp.

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of 'The Christian Century')

Rootless Afrikaners And English Colonials

SOME of the trouble facing South Africa today dates back to the Anglo-Boer war of 1899-1902. The English won the war but lost the peace. South Africa continued to be divided between the Boers (who still remember it as the "Egtpub war") and the English (who still remember it as the "Boer war"). The nation still has two capitals—legislative at Cape Town and administrative at Pretoria—and two languages—English and Afrikaans. The descendants of the Boers, now called Afrikaners, deserve the fullest understanding and sympathy, in spite of their racial arrogance.

Afrikaners have roots in no other land—something like the American Negro in this respect—whereas the English-speaking whites there often look to the British Isles, and some do not consider South Africa so much their home as a place to re-construct a bit of old England and to make a comfortable living. There are a few "poor whites" in the country today, but not as many as several decades ago when the government deliberately and successfully undertook to alleviate their condition.

A Preventive Racial War?

Because of the teachings of the Dutch Reformed Church and of the home and school, the Afrikaner often finds it genuinely difficult to understand the great movements—scientific, social, political—of the past decade or even the past century. Few Afrikaners, except those in the new trade unions or those who are products of the non-Afrikaner universities, have the background to resist their leaders' urgent pleas for the two goals of "white supremacy" and so "Afrikaner republic." While the latter concept, which carries a break with the British Commonwealth, is unknown to the English-speaking people—and to anybody cherishing a multi-racial society—most of the latter by no means frown on terrorism and the latent anti-Semitism of the Afrikaner. Many of the English-speaking people love the Afrikaner no more than the Afrikaners do (and confess that "the Afrikaner at least knows how to handle the kaffir"), and they love the Indian even less.

One cannot converse with any white South African about "native affairs" without being told that "South Africa has a unique problem." Perhaps it is unique, with its large a non-white majority which is a political minority and so small a white minority who are not colonials and are not expecting to leave the country. South Africa's position as a plural society is no doubt unique. What large country does not have unique problems? But South Africa's uniqueness does not mean that her problems, as so many of her people conclude, are "insoluble." No modern social problem is completely insoluble, not even war. Certainly their own social scientists can tell white South Africans how to solve the problems of a multi-racial society if they want to solve them. But in 1953 any solution to be acceptable to the non-Europeans and to the world must be based on the highest tenets of democracy and Judeo-Christian tradition.

While all whites in South Africa admit that widespread racial violence is a possibility, most do nothing to prevent it, however much they try to put it off until after their time. They are content to live in the present and do no more than worry about the future at their bridge clubs and bars. Indeed a few whites would welcome a severe racial clash today, a kind of preventive racial war—which like all who launch preventive wars they are confident of winning—in order "to teach the bloody kaffirs a lesson for the next hundred years."

No Crumbling Of Racial Walls

The white South African shows few signs of a sense of guilt for the damage he is doing to the non-whites, or himself and to the whole South African society. It is the conscience of his fellowmen in countries overseas which pricks him. If a foreigner dares raise questions about South Africa (as in the United States a number of times questions about the south), the thin veneer of self-righteousness that almost all white South Africans wear peels off in bitter criticism. Whether the critic stays a week, a month or a year, unless he is "constructive"—that is, basically uncritical—he "really doesn't know the native," or has been associated with "koolits, kaffirs and kooz-munists," or is an international kafferbaiter (orger lover) trying to tell me otherwise some land, no doubt in behalf of Jon Steijn. Many South Africans spend more time in criticising 'Time' and 'Life' than in attempting to correct the conditions which those magazines are so courageously revealing. In their guilt they lack the maturity to accept valid criticism.

But criticism admittedly is not enough. Most essential are solutions imaginatively put by South Africans, emphasizing co-operation, especially solutions indicating that only together can black and white South Africans solve the many urgent problems facing them, that only together can they build an abundant economy which will help all at the expense of none—at the expense of nothing except dignity, hate, civil war and revolution.

In 1944 Professor K. S. LaTourrette, in his "History of the Expansion of Christianity," said that South Africa's "discrimination and acute chronic inter-racial tensions" were, "next to the anti-Semitism of the Third German Reich, the most serious on the planet." With the Third Reich defeated, South Africa has little competition, though the racism in other parts of Africa south of the equator is hardly different in kind. But is South Africa today as bad as the Deep South was a generation ago or is still? It is hard for a white man to answer this question (and the South African Government will not easily allow American Negroes to see for themselves) but certainly the segregation in South Africa is more pervasive and more oppressive psychologically. At least in our American south today one senses that the walls of segregation are crumbling. If the number of white southerners militantly lawbreaking away is but small, there is a large body of important northern opinion plus the protection of a federal Constitution and a Supreme Court, along with increasing personal and organisational co-operation between whites and Negroes in the south, to give ground for hope of a good solution. In South Africa, however, while opinion is solidly for segregation, called the "colour bar" by some, apartheid by others. There are few constitutional guarantees to safeguard the rights of non-whites against this white opinion, and the vast majority of non-whites have no representation in Parliament.

Not only is segregation more complete all over South Africa than anywhere in our Deep South, but there are few signs of hope, except the passive resistance movement. No wonder Professor Julius Lewis, a South African liberal, wisely commented, "Among the nations, South Africa chose in the post-war period to correct the rights of non-Europeans at a time when other countries, including the colonial powers of western Europe, were conceding more and more rights to their subjects."

THE GREAT DEBATE

By C. W. M. GELL

PROFESSOR STRING-FELLOW BARR has written a courageous and sensible exposure [Citizens Of The World Doubleday, New York 43] of the Big Myth in Western foreign policy (in American particularly, but we are none of us innocent). This is the narrow vision which sees Communism merely as an aggressive power system. Mr Barr admits that, of course, that is one aspect of the Communist challenge. But to concentrate only upon it risks the Great Debate becoming shortly the Great Showdown and deliberately closes our eyes to the most pressing problem of the 20th century—the question of hunger. It is difficult for the comparatively wealthy White minority of the world's population to see the problem through the eyes of the 2,000 million or so inhabitants of underdeveloped, peasant economies in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Mr Barr has the gift of presenting us with that unfamiliar viewpoint vividly and factually. He says, when he has done

"We Americans are perhaps too rich and powerful to think Europe, stunned by her fall from wealth and power is perhaps too dazed to think with and too disillusioned. But the colonial areas (by which he means the economically as well as politically dependent) are poor enough to have to think, weak enough to have to think and have been disillusioned so long that they are used to it."

What the citizens of this modern City of the Poor want is bread and the right to earn it by the sweat of their brow. What we appear to offer them is law, order and (perhaps) security from Communist aggression. That looks to them like locking them up with their present misery, for only a small minority of rich countries think very highly of the status quo which we are so keen to defend. And we are helped by our press to consider the poorer nations not as aggregations of human personalities living on or beyond the margin of starvation, privation and disease; but as potential soldiers or suppliers of "strategic" materials in the Great Alliance against Communism. Now this, as Mr Barr cogently points, is playing straight into Communist hands, for Communism purports to offer mankind a method of conquering hunger. That it often fails to deliver the goods and has other disadvantages, which the more comfortably situated consider fatal, is irrelevant unless we put forward a positive policy of our own. If we are concerned only with power politics, the justified majority of the world's citizens will jump for the ideology which seems to them to be concerned with their hunger, poverty and hopelessness; and, whatever its other failings, Communism justifies everything by the touchstone of raising the level of material well-being. Our excessive preoccupation with the military aspect of Communism has, therefore, thrown us on the defensive and lost us the moral initiative. In this way we are responding only to one (and not the most universal) of the contemporary challenges. Mr Barr asks us to face up to the other as well, for he believes that we can meet it more efficiently and more sympathetically than the Communists and that in doing so we shall go far to mitigate the military danger.

I do not think his general argument can be denied. The answer to the challenge of Communism is not merely tanks and bombs, though these have their place, but also tractors, agrarian reform, improved yields, less profiteering in the distributive services. And I go all the way with Mr Barr in believing that, given a proper assessment of the problem and the will and imaginative vision to tackle it, the non-Communist peoples of the world, rich and poor in partnership, have the spiritual, political and material resources to make the Communist solution seem as out of date as it is often infamous. Of course, even a democratic solution involves a revolution in our political thought and systems. In particular, it is difficult to resist Mr Barr's contention that no fully sovereign national entities can be expected genuinely to co-operate internationally, since a national government is locked in one particular politico-economic system in whose stresses and strains and in the voice of whose electorate it is necessarily especially sensitive. This argument is addressed directly to the already developed nation-states of Europe and the New World. But Mr Barr has a word for those young, emerging nations who claim the right to follow the same pattern of unrestricted sovereign independence:

"If they say that they are merely going through the political growing pains that all young nations go through, we can properly reply that growing pains of that type were relevant to an earlier period of history, and that if, as they often and properly urge, it is now too late in history for nations like theirs to get on their feet by their own isolated efforts, it is also too late for them to be got on their feet by an international agency trying to satisfy nationalist plans of development."

Mr Barr traces how the cessation of Lend-Lease and the withdrawal of American support for UNRRA within two years of the war made it inevitable that the U.S.A. would have to "go it alone" to a large extent. The Marshall Plan was a most generous attempt by a national government to meet an international need, though it was largely confined to potential military allies who were by the same standard among the least indigent of the "free nations." American aid, provided by a government obsessed with "stopping Communism," has always and inevitably suffered from this bias. As Mr Barr says

"In many parts of the world Point Four has become a poor joke. For four weary years our government has made capital out of its Bold New Programme, and for four weary years so little has been done in Asia, in Africa and in Latin America. When substantial offers have been made, the offers have usually been so tied in with military assistance against Russia that the hungry billions have felt not like neighbours, but like cannon fodder. It is understandable that they should come to suspect that the only interest the ordinary American feels in them is the personal interest of man in cannon fodder."

We are familiar enough with the obverse of this, Russia's economic and military domination of her satellites. But there is more than wit in the story of the Frenchman seeking U.S. citizenship in order to have a say in the control of his own country, and in Zafullah Khan's reply to a question about the number of Communists in Pakistan: "Gentlemen, please do not press me. If I told you there were many, I would be lying. If I told you how few there are, America would have interest in us." In the last five years, the American electorate, sponsored by the most voluminous and "pressurised" press in the world, has increasingly called the tune. Mr Barr believes (as, indeed, I do) in the generosity and idealism of the American public. But he is afraid that it is just too comfortable, too glib and too insular to understand its many neighbours' real problems. He and the free world's fear of well meant, if misguided, dollar-imperialism has since been justified by the apparent success of Mr. Dulles to "get tough" not only with the Communists but with his allies. On the eve of Mr. Eisenhower's inauguration, the London "Sunday Times" wrote

"Pragmatism will replace ideology, efficiency and cost-accountancy the welfare approach. In negotiations with allies, the new Administration will be more exacting about the return it gets for its money, but less sentimental on such issues as 'colonialism.' After the humanitarianism of its predecessor, it will appear less sympathetic to the problems of others. This will, not be due to lack of friendliness towards its allies, but because of the problems it will be facing at home."

How much more urgent, therefore, has become Mr. Barr's plea for an international development authority on the lines of the Tennessee Valley Authority explicitly pledged to "the war on want." I am not sufficient of an economist to criticise his specific proposals in detail; but I do believe his suggestion contains a basis for immediate discussion and that the subject is one that citizens of the free world want to discuss more than anything else. We just do not dare let that great need go by default unheard—or watch hungry men turn in desperation to save themselves and their children by selling their souls. And I like Mr. Barr's recommendation that our planners should be "drunk" in their early deliberations and only "practical" in the later stages.

Mr. Barr speaks of South Africa as "the only country in the world with a worse reputation for race discrimination than we Americans have." He points out that "to be against Communism is no guarantee of virtue. The Nazis (and Franco, Chiang Kai-shek and Sverri) are conspicuously against Communism." He emphasises that almost all intelligent Europeans (the real article, not South African Whites) are "fellow-travellers" in the current American sense, in that they know that a large measure of State socialism is required to tackle properly effectively. Roosevelt's TVA was, of course, "socialistic." Mr. Barr deplores the identification of liberals and socialists with Communism which leads to the present American witch-hunt against all progressives—the old game of "ganging up on the extreme left" which "goes on until none but the extreme right survives." His remarks on this subject are very apposite in this country. "Few Americans (or Mr. Sverri) could pass a grade

From Our Own Correspondent

GANDHI'S CONTRIBUTION TO WORLD

NO one who has been in India and seen and felt the impact left there by Mahatma Gandhi "can doubt the power of the spirit," Mrs Eleanor Roosevelt wrote recently in her newspaper column.

Mrs. Roosevelt was commenting on a recent article by Louis Fischer, which included the following quotation from Mahatma Gandhi: "If prophesy that if we disobey the law of the final supremacy of spirit over matter, of liberty and love over brute force, in a few years' time we shall have Bolshevism in this land which was once so holy."

Mrs. Roosevelt's column said, in part "Of course, Gandhi was speaking of India, but Fischer points out he might have been talking of the U.S.A. or of any other free country."

"What he said is something for every one of us to ponder. Most of us are constantly concerned about material things, and yet the people whom we like best to have with us and who make the best impression on those with whom they come in contact are the people who rarely give much thought to material things. Their minds dwell on the deeper questions of life."

"Mahatma Gandhi often urged that we 'turn the searchlight inward.' By this, of course, he meant that we must understand our own weaknesses, our own faults, before we could conquer them. All these teachings of Gandhi are applicable to our modern way of life, just as they were in the kind of life he was urging on his people—and it was achieved without war."

I do not know that Gandhi's plans for living could be applied to modern life, but there is no doubt in my mind that the more we simplify our material needs, the more we are free to think of other things. I still think we remember our lives with too much, and that, perhaps, is the part of Gandhi's teaching that should remain with us to-day."

Gandhian Way For Solution Of World Problems

Dr. Ralph Bunche, Director of United Nations Trusteeship Council, who came to India to attend the International Seminar on Gandhian philosophy said in Bombay on January 29 that if war was to be avoided "peace must be built in the minds of peoples of the world."

Dr. Bunche who was speaking at the reception given in his honour by the Mayor of Bombay warned that a third world war would destroy civilisation.

He declared that the Gandhian way had become prophetic for the world and there was no alternative in the present critical situation but to adopt the way of non-violence.

Dr. Bunche thought that the principles on which Gandhian philosophy was based—emphasis on truth, disavowal of hatred and acceptance of non-violence—were as clear as day and "will not be misunderstood."

All problems of the world in his opinion were problems of human relations which were not insoluble. Referring to Gandhian way in this context he said that it required great trust and great faith in human beings.

Giving his impressions of the Gandhian seminar he said that it was a unique experience and he was able to understand Gandhian philosophy better through some of the close associates of Gandhiji.

Northern Indian Convention On Race Relations

To two-day Northern Indian Convention on Race Relations which ended in Amritsar on February 15 expressed alarm at the increasing interference with the day-to-day life of Indians in South Africa by the Government of Dr. Malan. The convention called upon the people of Asia and Africa to organize a united front against racial policies in South Africa.

It said that these policies were a gross violation of the fundamental rights embodied in the United Nations Charter. The Convention appealed to the United Nations to take measures to safeguard and implement its charter with special reference to human rights. The Convention congratulated the non-Europeans on their peaceful Satyagraha in South Africa. It expressed its conviction that "the complete disciplined and non-violent passive resistance must result in the end in the triumph of justice and vindication of full dignity of all oppressed people." It also supported action taken by the Government of India through the United Nations to bring about a peaceful solution of the racial problem.

Delivering the presidential address at the Convention, Mr. Chaman Lal B. Parikh observed "If South Africa does not change its policy, it may spread and destroy all that human hands have built in the past in that country."

Mr. Parikh referring to the elections legislation passed against Asians and Natives which were cutting at the very roots of civilisation.

Death Of India's Defence Minister

Mr. N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, India's Defence Minister, died at Madras early on the morning of February 10. He was 71. He had been taken ill shortly after his return from the Kashmir talks in Geneva in September 1952, recovered his health considerably and went to his home town Madras to convalesce. He has been ailing for some time and his condition became worse in the beginning of the month.

Born in March 1882, Mr. Ayyangar completed his education with a brilliant record in Madras and joined the Pachayappa College in 1904 as assistant professor. A year later he entered the Madras Civil Service. After a brief term as a member of the Indian Legislative Assembly he served in various departments of the provincial Government until 1937 when he retired as senior member of the Board of Revenue. Approaching his services, the British Government named him twice in the King's Honour List.

Mr. Ayyangar was appointed Prime Minister of Kashmir in 1937. He occupied that position until 1943, endearing himself alike to the Maharaja, the people and the nationalist leaders of the State. His experience in Kashmir was useful to the Indian Government in dealing with the Kashmir issue. He was leader of the Indian Delegation when the Kashmir question was taken to the Security Council in 1948.

When the Indian Constituent Assembly was formed in 1946 he was elected to it from the Madras Assembly. Because of his work both in drafting and finalising the Constitution, Mr. Ayyangar was regarded as one of the principal architects of the Indian Constitution. After his distinguished work in the Constituent Assembly he entered the Central Cabinet as a Minister in September 1947 and later took over the States portfolio. He completed the integration and consolidation of the princely States from the point where Lord Pethick had left it. Mr. Ayyangar became Defence Minister when the Central Cabinet was reconstituted after the general elections.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

S.A. PEOPLE'S CONGRESS

THE EDITOR INDIAN OPINION

SIR.—I sympathise with Mr. Jordan Ngobane in his anxiety that White political groups claiming to be friends of the Africans and of the African National Congress should "plot and scheme...to influence Congress policies in the direction of their own choosing." He refers particularly in this respect to the newly-formed South African People's Congress May 1, as one who participated in the formation of this organisation, reply to some of the points he has raised?

This body came into existence as a result of a meeting called to Johannesburg by the African National Congress and the S.A. Indian Congress, in which liberal and demagogically minded Whites of various shades of opinion were invited. Having misled these White friends of the non-Europeans together, the two Congresses left them to decide for themselves "what form their organisation and activity should take. The A.N.C. and S.A.I.C. therefore are not committed in endorsing everything or anything that the new organisation may do.

The meeting itself divided rather sharply into two groups—a minority who favoured a franchise for non-Europeans, and a majority who advocated complete equality. As a result of this meeting the S.A. People's Congress was formed. (The name was decided upon on the spot at the moment. Some of us think it unsuitable for various reasons, and it will probably be changed.)

The new organisation has, at least, two main functions. Firstly, by advocating without equivocation equal rights for all regardless of race or colour, it will show to the non-Europeans in this country and to the world at large that there are White South Africans who do not support apartheid and race discrimination. Secondly, it will work among Whites, trying to win sympathy for the non-Europeans in their sufferings under discriminatory and oppressive laws.

In a certain sense, then, the new organisation is not to influence the African National Congress as well as other bodies and individuals, Black and White. It hopes that the Congress will continue with its declared policy that it is not hostile to White people as such but only to unjust laws and discrimination. We wish to see a democratic South Africa in which all men and women are free and equal. The poison of race hatred is being distilled by the present governments (as by other governments before them.) If the realists have their way it will become more and more difficult to build bridges, until finally Black and White are separated by an impassable gulf. That would spell the doom of all in South Africa.

Apart from this general attempt to influence opinion, in a way in which Mr. Ngobane could not possibly object, the new organisation has no other motives, ulterior or otherwise. Mr. Ngobane has every right to reserve judgment until the "or question has shown by deed what its real purpose is." In the meantime I hope he will give us a chance.—Yours etc.,

—EDWARD ROUX

MINISTERS DISCUSS DEFIANCE

ON Thursday, February 12, nearly 70 Ministers of religion, of all denominations and races, met in the American Board Church in Deaconsfontein to discuss their attitude to the Campaign for the Defiance of unjust laws.

The discussion was opened by the Rev. E. E. Mphahane, vice-president of the Christian Council, who enlarged on the statement issued by that Council during its recent executive meeting, and which has received wide press publicity. Mr. Mphahane said that while the statement might be described as an utterance of Christian statesmen ship the practical problem which confronted Ministers in active service is what they are to say to simple Christians who come to them for advice and guidance concerning participation in the campaign, both personal and by their children.

The second speaker was the Rev. N. Mokone who returned a few months ago from a long visit to England where he was a member of a team of preachers drawn from many lands who were touring England. Mr. Mokone said that he had been occasionally asked for information concerning the campaign, its causes, organisation and so on, and he had always said that while 6,000 miles away from the scene he could express no opinion. Since returning to South Africa and finding himself confronted with just the sort of problem mentioned by Mr. Mphahane, he had thought and prayed deeply on the matter. For himself he had come to the conclusion that a Christian must differentiate between moral and active support for a movement of this nature. Being completely aware of the effect of discriminatory customs or the spiritual development of the people he felt that he could do nothing but give moral support to any who felt called to resist such laws and customs, leaving the question of active participation as one of absolutely personal decision.

The discussion lasted until late in the afternoon when it was concluded by a very able statement of scriptural references to freedom, law and order, and personal responsibility, prepared and given by Pastor George Mabile, who acted as his own interpreter in Sotho.

During the day frequent reference was made to the pastoral responsibility of Ministers today, especially in control of young people who have been taught the way of apostolic development and freedom by missionaries, and now chafe against restrictions which limit them in the exercise of that which they have been taught. There was much plain speaking, as for example when one Minister said: "We should not ask whether the defiance campaign is a Christian movement, but whether the laws are Christian." On the other hand there were not lacking several who said plainly that they considered the movement in itself misguided and harmful, while some took a sort of middle course and said that Christian Ministers have a special work of their own in personal evangelism, and that they can therefore only take one attitude to such a campaign, namely that of refusing to think or talk about it at all. Those who held the last view were mostly older Ministers.

The meeting was organized jointly by the Interdenominational African Ministers Association and the Transvaal African Clergy Association, and was presided over by the Rev. A. W. Bizali. It was agreed that the discussion had been of such value that others should be held. The next will therefore take place at the same place on Thursday, March 12.

LIFE'S PURPOSE

"Pluck this little flower and take it; delay not! I fear lest it droop and drop into the dust

It may not find a place in thy garland, but honour it with a touch of pain from thy hand and pluck it I fear lest the day end before I am aware, and the time of offering go by

Though its colour be not deep and its smell be faint, use this flower in thy service and pluck it while there is time."

—Tagore.

Man does not live for himself alone. He lives for the good of others as well as of himself. Everyone has his duties to perform—the richest as well as the poorest. To some life is pleasure, to others suffering. But the best do not live for self-enjoyment or even for fame. Their strongest motive power is hopeful, useful work in every good cause. To do our duty in this world towards God and towards man, consistently and steadily, requires the cultivation of all the faculties which God has given us. And He has given us everything. It is the Higher Will that instructs and guides our will. It is the knowledge of good and evil, the knowledge of what is right and what is wrong, that makes us responsible to man here and to God hereafter. The sphere of duty is infinite. It exists in every station of life. We have it not in our choice to be rich or poor, to be happy or unhappy but it becomes us to do the duty that everywhere surrounds us. Obedience to duty, at all costs and risks, is the very essence of the highest civilized life. Great deeds must be worked for, hoped for, died for, now as in the past.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 8TH MARCH, 1953

Threat To World Peace

THE White voters of the Union go to the polls on April 15 in an election which is as crucial for South Africa as it is for world peace.

On the homefront racial tension, generated largely by Dr. Malan's Government, has risen to heights without parallel in the history of the Union. The non-Europeans are steadily rising as one man against the racist tyranny advocated by the apartheidists. With their growing strength and unity of purpose the weaknesses of apartheid become more visible and increase from day to day. This, in turn, has driven the Malanites to the extreme of bringing before Parliament two Bills which were allegedly designed to deal with a hypothetical crisis which the Malanites believe will come about if the resistance movement is not stopped. These Bills, however, went to great extremes in concentrating very wide powers in the hands of the Minister of Justice.

For example the Minister alone can say when a state of emergency exists. After that he can suspend some of the laws of the land and take almost any action he likes almost against anybody he dislikes and still be under no real obligation to get immediate parliamentary approval of his deeds. Tyranny could not have been more firmly entrenched.

But behind this, there is a mentality which even the Afrikaners voters who did so much to put this Government in power must pause to weigh very seriously. Most of them believe Minister Swart when he tells them his tales about the non-Whites conspiring to revolt against constitutional authority. Most of them equally disbelieve charges of totalitarianism levelled against some of the Malanite Cabinet Ministers. But these charges are not just empty talk. The Ministers themselves might or might not be totalitarians at heart. But the political forces which support them and give them political power have distinct totalitarian characteristics. For example, a few weeks ago at least one prominent Afrikaner publicly reported that he had been assaulted for having changed his political allegiance.

This is not in any way an insignificant incident. It expresses a quality of mind among sections of the younger generation of Afrikaners behind the Government. Political opposition, among these people, is a crime. Those who rebel against Malanism must be punished or, which is more frequent, ostracised. In other words some of the Malanites have abandoned argument, propaganda and persuasion as the means by which to further their point of view and are tending to regard force as the only effective argument at their disposal. This is tyranny, pure and simple.

What is very striking and which confirms what the non-Europeans have always said, however, is that the totalitarianism of the Malanites knows no colour. The things that the Malanites did freely to the African and Indian yesterday, with largely Afrikaner support, they now do to their own Afrikaans people! For, since when has an Afrikaner been assaulted for changing his political allegiance? Since when has he been liable to being kicked and sjamboked to persuade him to vote for a particular political party? Strange things are happening in this country when an Afrikaner can be beaten up for his political convictions.

It is true that the Minister of Justice has warned against this type of violence. But the warning is almost valueless because day in and day out the Cabinet itself sets glaring examples of tyranny by trampling underfoot the rights of the non-Whites. The Statute Book is replete with parliamentary Acts in which the man of colour is permanently humiliated. These things must in the end have a brutalising effect on the average men who blindly follow the people at the head of the Nationale Party. And when acts of violence of the type referred to occur, the Cabinet itself must receive its full share of the blame for this.

The dominant issue before White South Africans as they prepare for the elections is whether or not South Africa will continue to be ruled by the sjambok.

For the outside world the issue is one of the extent to which South Africa has committed herself to the policy of being World Trouble-maker Number One. At the moment, the African continent seethes with discontent against racial discrimination. Malanism will fan this into open conflict between Black and White. This, in turn, will produce dangerous repercussions in many parts of the world.

It all adds up to one thing: White South Africa should not hesitate to throw out the Malanites and return to power a Government which will at least stop driving everybody to disaster.

NOTES

Cilliers Pleads For Coalition

A Plan for coalition between the political Parties in South Africa was made by Professor A. C. Cilliers, of Stellenbosch University, at a meeting of the Institute of Citizenship in Cape Town. "There are only three real problems to be fought in South Africa—the danger of over population, soil erosion and the inter penetration of the races," he said. Industrially the country can carry 100,000,000 people—but it cannot provide food for more than twice the present population. Soil erosion is the reason. "One-Party government will only make a mess of these problems. It needs both Parties. To get the wagon out of the river we must use both teams of oxen at one end of the wagon instead of one at each end pulling in opposite directions." There were few obstacles to coalition—ambition, jealousy, enmity and distrust. Ambition and jealousy could be overcome by expanding the Cabinet to 22 to include eight or 10 members of the Party not in power. "That should end the pangs of ambition suffered by certain politicians." As for enmity there was no solution but time. Distrust, too, was a serious obstacle.

Mr. Schoeman Attacks

Malan

Mr. B. J. Schoeman (Minister of Labour and Public Works) at a meeting at Pietermaritzburg expressed his acquiescence against the Anglican Bishops of Natal, Bloemfontein and Johannesburg made at Mairland that they were giving in direct moral support and encouragement to the defiance campaign. Mr. Schoeman said the Bishops had denied these allegations in letter to the English Press. He quoted from newspaper cuttings that the opposite was the case, and these cuttings supported his accusations. The Bishop of Johannesburg had said, according to Mr. Schoeman, that the passive resistance campaign was a moral judgement on the discrimination legislation. The Bishop of Natal, the Right Rev. Vernon Ison, had said that the fairest African policy for South Africa was to commence a common franchise for the non-Europeans however loaded this franchise might be. This had advocated the universal voters' right for non-Europeans, which was also desired by the participants in the defiance campaign.

Dr. Malan To Retire?

Dr. Malan will retire immediately after the election and be succeeded by Mr. Havenga (if the Nationalists win.) It is rumoured in the highest purified Nationalist circles, says Mr. D. Pirow in his latest Newsletter. "But," says Mr. Pirow, "if Mr. Havenga did succeed him, 'wild men,' of the purified Nationalists would as undermine Mr. Havenga's position that he would have to call another election within 12 months."

Parliament Prorogued To

June 19

A Government Gazette Extraordinary, signed by the Governor-General, Dr. E. G. Janzen, and the Prime Minister, Dr. D. F. Malan, announces the prorogation of Parliament until Friday, June 19, 1953. The Government intend to convene the new Parliament for two months and a few days after the General Election—if they are returned to power. "If the United Party takes office after the election it will also have to convene Parliament after that time."

Police Leave Cancelled

All police leave throughout the Union and South-West Africa has been cancelled. Police headquarters in Pretoria refuse to give any reasons for the cancellation, but it is reliably understood that it is "because of the election." This is the first time for 25 years that there has been a general cancellation of leave in peace-time in the Union. The last peace-time decision was, as far as can be ascertained, during the Flag Bill troubles in 1928. Shortly after the outbreak of war in 1939 all police leave was stopped when trouble arose over South Africa's declaration of war. The general cancellation of leave is a drastic step which is resorted to only in times of emergency. The Commissioner of Police has full discretion whether or not he takes the step. On previous occasions leave in individual divisions has been stopped when a crisis arose in a particular area, but a general stoppage throughout the country in peacetime is considered by men with intimate police knowledge to be almost unprecedented. Certainly there is no recorded instance where leave has been cancelled because of an election. It is understood that the order applied from the last week and until after election day. It has been modified slightly to allow men at present on leave to complete their holidays without being immediately recalled for duty and for those who have already spent money on planned leave to take that leave. The order was, it is understood, issued suddenly without preliminary warning on Saturday.

First Young S.A. Born

Parvex Doctor

Mr. N. J. Randers of Durban has just received a male message from his son, Dars N. Randers, that he has passed his final year in the study of medicine at the Glasgow University. Dr. W. N. Randers will be the first young South African-born Parvex doctor. Dr. Nasir and Dr. Hira Mook were the only two Parvex doctors we had in South Africa who passed away many years ago.

Fine African Gesture

For the fourth time in the last few months a party of Africans will voluntarily give up a whole day to work without pay at Don Mackenzie's TB Settlement at Batha's Hill. Thirty labourers, the largest contingent so far, visited the settlement recently and spent the day excavating roads and digging foundations. The Africans will have a collection box, heavy with their contributions, when they travel up. Every Friday, which is pay day, the box has been handed round and pennies, sixpences and shillings have been dropped in. They handed the proceeds over to Mr. Mackenzie the following day. It is not the first donation they have made from their own pockets. Since they began collecting last September they have scraped together about £25. The Africans, who are employed by an international firm of road builders, pay all their transport expenses, when travelling to and from the settlement. The firm loses them a lorry and the fuel is passed round among them to collect money for petrol and other expenses. This day's labour which they give so freely is, for them, a way of expressing their appreciation for all that is being done for non-European TB sufferers and their determination to help their own people. On a recent visit to Batha's Hill the Africans were offered tea or coffee at lunch time. "Water is enough," they replied. "We have come here to work, not to eat and drink."

Thousand Kikuyu Women

Petition Queen

A petition from 1,000 Kikuyu women was sent to the Queen last week by the women Labour M.P.s. It asked for a commission of women to be sent from Britain to investigate the "most grave and unjust situation prevailing in Kenya." In a letter to the Queen the Parliamentary members, Mrs. Barbara Castle, Miss Jennie Lee and Mrs. Alice Cullen, said: "We cannot, of course, take responsibility for all of the statements made, and some of them seem to us to be extravagantly expressed, but we do think there is a case for an inquiry by a commission of women as suggested in the document." Four grievances were set out by the Kikuyu women in their petition. They said that because their husbands had been arrested—they were left unprotected to look after their homes, children and holdings. They had become so afraid of the police patrolling the Native reserves, that they and their children slept in the bush. They were compelled to work in the police camps where, they said, the police are in the habit of beating us. "Because of collective punishment, their property and stock had been confiscated in many cases, and 'our children are left in a state of famine without support.' The petition said that children were not attending schools, "because the Kenya Government has closed our independent schools." "As women, we were very glad when we heard that Your Majesty was to reign over us and we deeply hoped that our rights as women would be preserved by you as our leader and Queen. "We hand over our troubles and difficulties to Your Majesty and ask you to remember them and to see that justice is done. We loyal Kenya African women wish Your Majesty and the Royal Family a long and prosperous life during your reign as our Queen. We ask your quick help in alleviating our sorrows."

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

WHAT IS THEIR POLICY?

By C. W. M. GELL

[IN a speech in the summer school of Cape Town University on February 20 Sir de Villiers Graaf defined the U.P. policy towards the Indians. As he is chairman of the U.P. in the Cape, his statement may be regarded as authoritative and it agrees very well with what Mr. Strauss said at Bloemfontein on November 18.

Sir de Villiers said that, if the U.P. was returned to power, it would consider holding a conference with India and Pakistan "to find out how many Indians may wish to return to those countries." This seems a rather cumbersome procedure—even if the U.P. is committed to nothing more precise than "considering." Surely the quickest and cheapest way to find out would be to ask our Indians directly? Mr. Strauss, however, was a little more definite. He is reported to have said: "All possible steps will be taken by a U.P. government to bring about a round table conference with India and Pakistan with a view to repatriating the Indians from South Africa." And Mr. Douglas Mitchell, the U.P. leader in Natal, said in Durban on January 10 that there was an agreement in 1927 between the Union and Indian Governments "by which the Indians were to be repatriated. Many went and many came back and the scheme fell into abeyance. We will have to go back and begin negotiations from that point."

There was, indeed, the firm Cape Town (or Malan-Sasri) Agreement of 1927 between the Union and Indian Governments by which the Union was to provide free passages to India and a £20 bonus to any of its Indian citizens wishing to migrate to India and the Indian Government assumed responsibility for their settlement there. Since Dr. Douglas has given notice of his Government's intention of repudiating the Smuts-Gandhi agreement as far as it relates to the entry of Indian women or children, we may record here that this right was explicitly re-affirmed in the Malan-Sasri Agreement, whose other clauses included India's acknowledgement that the Union Government was entitled to seek to establish Western standards of civilization in this country and the Union's acceptance of responsibility for the education, housing, welfare of its resident Indian population. This last clause clearly implies recognition that these Indians, who do not wish to repatriate themselves, are permanent residents of this country; and there is nothing whatever in the Agreement—a pact between two virtually sovereign states—to justify Dr. Malan's outburst at Potchefstroom only two months after he had signed the document on behalf of his Government: "The whole object of the Agreement is to get as many Indians repatriated as possible. . . . All other points were subsidiary to this. The Agreement is not an agreement in the usual sense of the term. The Union Government does not bind itself in any way with regard to future legislation, and can impose any legislation it likes in the event of the repatriation proposal not working satisfactorily." No one will enter into treaties with a Government which adopts this attitude to contractual agreements; and the Nationalists have only themselves to blame if their "pledged words" are universally regarded as worthless.

Under the Cape Town Agreement 3,250 Indians emigrated permanently from the Union in the first year; but thereafter the annual numbers fell steadily and the total for five years was only 10,733. The second Cape Town Agreement of 1932 admitted that repatriation had failed because by that time over 80 per cent of our Indians were Union born. Today the figure is probably about 95 per cent. Is it, therefore, likely that any substantial number will wish—or to "return" or "repatriate" themselves for they are Union citizens, very few of whom have ever been to India—to emigrate to a strange land, i.e. to repatriate themselves? Ask our South African British immigrants or Germans, French or Hollanders if they wish "to return home," and you will get very similar replies.

But perhaps I am wrong. Disturbed by the great increase of discriminatory measures or by the boycott advocated (not for the first time) by a Transvaal Afrikaans newspaper or by any other of the many contrivances of the Union's pledge under the Malan-Sasri Agreement culminating in Dr. Malan's notorious utterance of 1948 that "the Indians have no right to regard themselves as a settled part of the population and must be prepared to remain in South Africa under restrictions," perhaps many Indians do wish to "return" to India. But surely India and Pakistan would need to be convinced that there was a genuine demand for "repatriation" before they consented to undertake the usually unprofitable business of negotiating with the Union on such a basis? Has the U.P. satisfied itself that such a demand exists? For the party can be quite sure, even if Mr. Sreydom had not told it and his own party so at Newcastle on November 26, that neither India nor Pakistan will agree in any form of expatriation under duress.

The second point in the U.P. policy, according to Sir de Villiers Graaf, was that "while Indians continue to sky themselves with another nation and regard themselves as a part of India rather than a part of South Africa, political rights should not be given to them." And Mr. Mitchell at the end of October told the Indians that they must stop "their perpetual shouting for help from overseas." They had to adopt either a South African attitude or an Indian one. Mr. Strauss pontificated in a similar vein about their loyalty to India appearing greater than their loyalty to South Africa, which, he thought (with a sigh of relief?) made the question of their political rights "hypothetical." One might well question the wording of these phrases. Who, speaking on behalf of whom, has shied himself with whom? Unless we see descending to the level of the Nationalist nonsense about our Indians acting as agents of India's national ambition to use Natal as a dumping ground for her surplus millions, in what way precisely have our Indians manifested loyalty to India and disloyalty to South Africa (as distinct from dissatisfaction with some South African policies)? And who in this context is "South Africa"? White South Africa only?

But supposing that India abstained from expressing her undoubted right to press the Union to fulfil the obligations it voluntarily undertook in 1927 and supposing that our Indians renounced this "alliance" with a foreign power (whose validity within certain limits the Nationalists tacitly recognized by negotiating with the Indian Government in 1927 and 1932) in order to resume their so far entirely abortive, unaided efforts to secure political and municipal rights in the land of their birth by sending addresses to European politicians and interviewing such politicians as agreed to receive them, what right is the U.P. now (or has it ever been) prepared to grant them? What have our Indians to show for many years' "renouncing" from the ruling race group in South Africa? And the hollowness of the U.P. implication that only their "foreign alliance" stands in the way of increased Indian rights is completely exposed when, in the next breath, Sir de Villiers Graaf, Mr. Strauss and Mr. Mitchell like a well-drilled chorus exclaim: "By taking a leading part in the Defiance Campaign Indians are creating a state of public opinion which will make it extremely difficult for any government to afford them political rights." There you have it both ways. For, when Indians form an alliance with fellow-South Africans in the only course of positive political activity open to them, that too is considered a ground for denying them the larger rights and opportunities for which Africans and Indians are now fighting together.

It is hard to resist the conclusion that the U.P. is dissembling. The Nationalists do have the edge in consistency. You know where you are when Mr. Sreydom says "The White man will only succeed in remaining in South Africa if he retains all power in his hands." Or when Dr. Otto du Plessis says "We Nationalists believe that White supremacy must be maintained for all time." But if we honestly don't like that policy and its implications, how are we to help its proclaimed opponents to reach political and moral maturity (and political power) if their own utterances are so confused, obtuse or merely (e.g. the proposed conference with India and Pakistan) pointless?

Sir de Villiers Graaf ended his speech by re-affirming the U.P. pledge to consult African opinion and said that the party knew of moderate leaders representing African opinion whom it could consult. This might be comforting if one knew who these leaders were, whom they represented and if one was given some inkling that the U.P. contemplated anything more constructive than a slightly less aggressive application of the racial status quo. And if Africans are to be consulted, why not Indians and Coloureds too, so that we can have a real racial get-together prepared to consider, not only what the Europeans are willing to concede (if anything), but what the real grievances of each community are and how each group can accommodate itself to the needs of others, as good as it should? Only by some such process and the increasing association of all race groups in the business of government can we make South Africa a country which deservedly earns the devotion and loyalty of all her citizens.

Mr. Gild And Mr. Gell

Mr. Gild has taken me to task for "deluding myself that the Russians have suddenly become racists." He and I have, however, a large measure of common ground. We are agreed that Communism is theoretically against racial discrimination. We both suspect that the motives behind the Prague trials and the allegations against the Moscow Jewish doctors may be connected with Russian designs in the Middle East or with providing scapegoats for internal difficulties. That we should nevertheless come to widely different conclusions is partly due, as Mr. Gild urges, to lack of entirely reliable evidence (which is seldom, if ever, forthcoming from behind the Iron Curtain) and partly to a possible ambiguity in the use of the word "racism." If Mr. Gild will re-read my article of January 30, he will see that I used the word in a political sense (though I must add that it makes little difference to the victims whether the reasons for discriminating against them as a race are political or something else.) I fully concur with Mr.

Gild that Russia has eliminated some aspects of racism. But, by demanding that all its subject peoples shall unreservedly merge their distinctive identities in a monolithic Russian nationalism, it has frequently seemed to practise a rigorous type of political racism. To what extent the process that has been applied already to Ukrainians, Georgians, the Muslim peoples of central Asia etc. is now to be applied to the Jews and to what degree this will fan the flames of the anti-Semitism which has so long been latent among the peoples of Eastern Europe and Western Russia, only time will fully tell. While we await that verdict, Mr. Gild and I, respecting each other's sincerity, will no doubt continue to differ amicably about the most reasonable interpretation of current events.

paradise than the Union is today, and for the same reasons.

Federation will, however, not go through without another battle in Britain, where there is far more public interest in Africa than in the past. London newspapers have carried many letters and articles critical of the scheme and even the Conservative papers are on the defensive. Some of this ferment is due to the African Bureau (69 Great Peter Street, London, S.W.1.), a body started by Michael Scott that has attracted support from all the political parties. In its latest Information Digest, I was amused to read this quotation:—

"It will be an ill day for the Native races when their fortunes are removed from the impartial and august administration of the Crown and abandoned to the fierce self-interest of a small White population." That statement was made by no less a person than Mr. Winston Churchill! It occurs in his book, "My African Journey," published in 1901. It is still true—though I don't suppose that the author still admires its truth.

China And Her Past

The book I recommend this week is "The Making Of Modern China" by Owen and Eleanor Latimore (Ailen and Unwin, 1945). It is a short history of a great country about which we all know far too little. China is obviously destined to remain one of the great powers, whether the United States chooses to recognise the fact or not. Mr. Latimore is an American professor who knows China well and who loves her people. At this moment he is still being accused in Washington of having betrayed his own country. Americans are busy looking for scapegoats on whom to blame the failure of their policy in China. Mr. Latimore's real "crime" is that he was one of the first to admit the folly of supporting Chiang Kai-shek's corrupt government. That was years before it was finally overthrown by the Chinese people themselves. To understand the new China, we must understand its ancient past, and not least the ignoble part played by selfish profit-seeking foreign interests.

"EQUALITY"

By JOHN GILD

WHEN Mrs. Ballinger was speaking in the House of Assembly the other week, a Nationalist asked her if she stood for equality between White and Black, and she replied no. I find that reply deeply disappointing. The single word Equality can no doubt be confusing, but I wonder what kind of inequality Mrs. Ballinger wants to maintain. When people say that they want equality, it is understood that they mean equal opportunities, i.e. to education, to earn a livelihood, and to enjoy life. A few months ago Mrs. Ballinger signed a public manifesto pleading for "equal rights for all civilised people and equal opportunities for all to attain civilised standards." That is a good slogan. Why should Mrs. Ballinger retreat from any of its implications in the face of Nationalist hostility?

Liberals must beware of weakening their case any further. Now that the Communists have been officially suppressed, "liberal" is becoming, on the lips of the Nationalists, a term of abuse on a shade weaker than "Communist" used to be. Instead of asking your opponent, "Are you a Communist?" it seems that the thing to do now is to demand whether he believes in "equality"—and watch him run away.

Mrs. Ballinger is the last of the original Native Representatives in whom Africans once had faith. The way in which she has refrained from contact, let alone sympathy, with Congress in this time of crisis has already diminished her prestige. If, to addition, she is now going to stand for some kind of permanent inequality, Africans will lose their last shred of belief in the value of their White members of Parliament.

Betrayal In Rhodesia

The British Government is dealing a heavy blow to Africa in granting responsible government to the small White minority in Rhodesia. The constitution makes it clear that Britain is about to surrender all pretence of trusteeship. The White voters are assured of a two thirds majority in the Federal Assembly. Any future amendment of the constitution can be made only with the consent of the Assembly itself which is far more likely to reduce than to increase the African share of political power. As for Asians and Coloured people, their rights are not even mentioned.

Why is Britain so determined to force federation, and with it self-government, on Rhodesia in the teeth of unanimous opposition from Africans? I believe that this is the answer. If there is further delay, African political organisation and especially the African trade unions in the copper mines, will grow stronger. Once the White settlers and miners are free from restraint by Whitehall, they will soon make new laws designed to hamper African organisation of any type. I predict that the colour bars so common in Southern Rhodesia will spread beyond the Zambesi. The time will come when central Africa will no more be an investor's

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of 'The Christian Century')

II

WHAT IS APARTHEID ?

THE visitor to South Africa or the resident there, need not take lessons in the theories of white supremacy to understand the oppression every non-white lives under every minute of the day and night. There are apartheid (segregation) laws and customs regulating every aspect of living, literally from the cradle (the maternity hospital) to the grave—not to mention the post-mortem examinations which, too, can be performed in the Transvaal only by white physicians and while medical students on white cadavers.

But South Africa has its theories of segregation, for theories are essential to the masters though they make no real difference to the slaves. The masters, despite their callousness, must believe in a system, must have a faith. For many years the creed of racism was improvised by the leaders of all parties in South Africa; not until the ascendancy of Dr. Malan's Nationalists (the Nats) in 1948 were these theories tied up into an ideological package.

Studying Race Relations

Ever since the South African Institute of Race Relations was founded in 1939 with funds from the Carnegie Corporation, the South African people have not lacked it and its many factual studies. With the steady rise of Afrikaans nationalism, however, a number of the Nationalist intellectuals realised that with power came responsibility. Just before Dr. Malan came into office, the Nationalists established their own nationwide race relations organisation. It is popularly known as SABRA, which stands for South African Bureau of Racial Affairs. It is non-political, non-profit organisation and one of its purposes is laudable enough: "To encourage and work for peace, goodwill and co-operation between the various nations and races of the population of South Africa."

SABRA today has about 700 individual members, mostly Afrikaners and, of course, no Africans—and about 100 affiliated organisations, including all three branches of the Dutch Reformed Church, which on 6th February G. B. A. Gerdener of the Stellenbosch Theological Seminary (his field is missions) and its board of directors included some of the leading Nationalist intellectuals, among them a moderator of the Dutch Reformed Church, several members of Parliament, an anthropologist, the Governor-General of South Africa and the Secretary of Native Affairs.

SABRA's Alein Kamp is a new pamphlet entitled "Integration or Separate Development?" In this the SAORA intellectuals calmly assert that there are only two solutions for the racial problem in South Africa: integration or separate development. Integration will lead to assimilation. Propagation of this doctrine would lead to proposals—among the Dutch Party—tote "the political and social wilderness." Then in a moment of compassion SABRA asserts that "the integration policy is dishonest towards the Bantu (that is, the African) population, as it creates the impression that their political demands (for voting privileges) will be fully satisfied when in fact the integration supporters are well aware that the Europeans will never allow such a development to take place, since their political leadership must of necessity be threatened by it."

Thus eliminating integration as a valid alternative, A BWA begins to build a case for its solution of total separation. The SABRA professors are not racist in the traditional sense, for they never openly assert that blacks are inferior to whites. The Africans may be culturally inferior at the moment, but "in the not too distant future the uppermost strata of Bantu society will have reached the level of the lowest strata in the European society." This progress on the part of the Africans will ultimately result in one of the three possible outcomes: oppression of blacks by whites, oppression of whites by blacks or "complete equality between the two communities."

Sabra's Race Policy

At this point SABRA drugs out its solution. For the past decade or more the racial policy of the Nationalists have been popularly called apartheid, meaning "apartness" or a state of separatism. SABRA claims that the Africans and the world, misunderstood the term and thought of it as being only negative. It now prefers to use the longer but more "positive" phrase, "complete separate development" whereas referred to as "territorial separation" or "distinctive development." (This is not unlike the 19th state idea of the "Black Republic" of the U. S. Communists.) It is not, SABRA emphasises, mere "local separation" which has existed in South Africa for centuries and increasingly since 1948. Such local separation can only "postpone the evil day" of the toppling of white supremacy, and indeed by attempting to follow a policy of mere postponement while South Africans are today sacrificing their heritage for the sake of immediate gain.

The essence of the A-BWA plan is a revolutionary and explosive idea: 8½ million Africans are to be provided with "areas which must serve as national and political homes for the different Bantu communities." Knowing that its solution can be attacked from the viewpoint of practicability as well as theory, SABRA tries to muster facts and figures, but all its researches can really say is that "the separation policy is practicable provided the European population themselves desire it." In demanding sacrifice for principle, the SABRA theorists are eloquent: "Many in the European community derive comfort from the knowledge that servant boy Jim or servant girl Mary is there always at their beck and call to carry out their least wish or command, to do the dirty work and to provide labour where needed. The Europeans have built a small paradise for themselves in South Africa with convenience, ease and comfort as the chief considerations."

The Stellenbosch professors warn that it would be "preferable for the European community to rely on its own resources for labour, instead of leaving such an essential part of the national life in the hands of members of another race," but they know that even their fellow professors and predikants will not dispense with their Jims and Marys so they come up with a compromise formula: South Africa can eat its cake (keep separate) and have it (cheap, abundant labour). The Africans can live permanently in the reserves and become part of the political and social structure of their own communities and nation, and come into the white towns and white agricultural areas under a system of "migratory labour." This is nothing new, of course. Today several hundred thousand Africans are migratory labourers in the gold mines—one of the oddest chapters of industrial exploitation and social disorganisation in the modern world.

Knowing that their own plan, if viewed in terms of economics by the expert and in terms of terror by the voter, would put them also into the "political wilderness," the SABRA ideologists cast one eye at American and arrest hopefully, "It should be possible to obtain overseas financial assistance in the development of native territories." They come up with another possibility: "It should also be considered whether the Bantu communities themselves cannot be made responsible for the payment of a portion or all of the interest and redemption on such loans, (for) it can hardly be expected that the European population should for ever be prepared to play the role of economic guardian."

Plan Under Scrutiny

This plan to turn the clock in South Africa and exile 8½ million natives to the reserves is utter nonsense and can be scientifically demonstrated as such. The sober Native Laws Commission under the chairmanship of Justice H. A. Fagan studied this basic problem for two years in the famous "Fagan Report" of 1948. The commission stated that (1) the idea of the total segregation is completely impracticable; (2) the rural-to-urban movement of the Africans is a natural economic necessity which cannot be resisted, and (3) the reserves are incapable of supporting their present population, let alone providing for the vastly increased numbers that would be there if all the Africans now residing outside the reserves were to be sent back. The Commission also criticised severely the system of migratory labour.

Nobody can like this SABRA plan seriously, yet nobody took it seriously either. In the meantime, the SABRA solution has the distinct merit. The Africans now know not only how far the SABRA theorists are capable of compassion and scientific research, but how much they would ask their fellow Europeans to sacrifice for the African—with the African, naturally, contributing his share. (The Coloureds and Indians do not yet know their fate, since SABRA admittedly has had its hands full dealing with the Afrikaners.) The National Party, while it is not completely identical with SABRA, can use this plan when it is convenient—especially during the election campaign due before October 1953—for not having a fully worked-out, long-range policy. It is known, however, that Prime Minister Malan and some of the moderates—for he is a moderate on race issues compared to some of the younger members of his cabinet—have criticized territorial apartheid (they still use that misunderstood term), although the Group Areas Act passed in 1950 would be the first long step towards this goal.

Dr. Malan's Race Policy

The differences between SABRA's policy and that of Dr. Malan's National Party may be found in a booklet recently published by the State Information Office, Life and Policy of Dr. D. F. Malan. After telling how "this leader of a virile South African nation emerging into world prominence" received a Doctor of Divinity degree at the University of Utrecht, the booklet says that the National Party desires to "foster a spirit of mutual confidence and co-operation between the races." As for the non-whites, the Party "accepts the Christian guardianship of the European race as the basic principle of its policy with regard to the non-European races, and desires to furnish them with the opportunity to develop themselves in their own areas in accordance with their natural genius and capacity, and to ensure for them fair and just treatment in the administration of the country." To guard against any possibility of misunderstanding, the booklet emphasizes that the Nationalists are "definitely opposed to any miscegenation between the European and non-European races." The Party's policy is similar to SABRA's in that it favours the territorial, political and residential separation of Europeans and non-Europeans, but it differs from the SABRA plan in calling for industrial separation only "as far as possible."

In its "Programme of Principles," the National Party adds that it wishes to "protect all groups of the population against Asiatic immigration and competition, among other means by preventing further encroachment on their means of livelihood and by an effective scheme of segregation and repatriation." (The plank on "public morality," the party "recognises the duty of the authorities...to oppose all un-Christian practices in the national life, and to maintain a high moral code, at the same time taking into consideration the freedom of the individual citizen in his own sphere.")

Where Does United Party Stand?

If the racial theories of SABRA and the National Party are hardly distinguishable, one would hope to find a clear-cut difference in the programmes of the chief and only Opposition, the United Party. The latest policy statement of the United Party starts off well enough with a call for "a united South Africa nation" with "freedom and dignity of the individual." But the next point is headed "White leadership with justice" and declares that "to maintain and vindicate European leadership, the United Party stands for a fair deal under white leadership."

Supplementing this brief platform, the booklet Native and Coloured People's Policy of the United Party explains the policy in detail and makes this statement of principle: "The Party...is not in favour of a policy of equality or assimilation and stands (a) for the maintenance of a policy of racial and residential separation and the avoidance of race intermixture and (b) for the development, while taking account of the difference referred to, of the Native peoples in their own and the country's interests." There is obviously a difference in the way the two Parties, once in power, have carried out their respective policies. The Nationalists have been rigid and severe; the United Party has been more pliable and lenient. Yet both want white supremacy, whether the word used be "guardianship" or "leadership." Most non-European leaders seem unimpressed by the nuances between these two major parties in their stand on "native policy."

Of all the racial theories put forth by responsible non-European groups in South Africa, perhaps the most satisfactory is that of the South African Institute of Race Relations. One would expect the Institute to have the same relationship to the United Party as the Fabian Society has to the British Labour Party or SABRA to the National Party, but the organisation is completely non-partisan and has no direct relationship to and precious little influence on any power group.

Institute Of Race Relations

At the request of a Government Commission, the Institute recently reformulated its principles and methods. It considers a policy of total assimilation "not acceptable and equally impracticable." But if it rejects assimilation, it is believed that basic cultural assimilation is possible and desirable and is indeed proceeding apace today. This process of integration, the Institute predicts, will continue for many years. The present pattern of society exhibits elements of segregation, of inferior parallelism, of assimilation. Thus the Institute hedges a bit by stating that "for the present the welfare of the country and the maintenance of Western civilisation depend upon the continuance of European institutions and responsibility." However, it looks to "the progressive assumption by Africans of the standards of Western civilisation and of the duties implicit in the acquisition of fundamental rights as the only way, in the long run, that Western civilisation can be preserved in South Africa." The Institute concludes that "the choice for European South Africa is faith or fear, Christian democratic ideals or the fallacious and deceptive policy of apparent self-preservation in an authoritarian form based upon perpetual white domination."

Despite its severe limitations, this is one of the best policy statements coming from white South Africa. It is a pity that no political party in the country dare adopt it.

PROBLEMS OF UNION RELATED TO AFRICA

MR. ROGER BRICKHILL, Organising Secretary of the Torch Commando on the Natal Coast, who has just returned from attending the Summer School on "South Africa in Perspective" held at the University of Cape Town, and that the most profound impression made on South African students was that the problems of the Union could no longer be considered without relating them to the rest of Africa.

He told the Daily News that the discussions showed that in the Cape at least there was a greater political awareness than in Natal. There was great need for someone to take the first step in Natal in educating an apathetic electorate on the vital issues at stake in South Africa today.

He said: "For good or bad there is a new spirit among the non-whites in Southern Africa. Many States have recognised this, but in South Africa we have not only failed to go forward, we have actually gone backwards."

"Lecturers from territories outside the Union were horrified at our apparent complacency."

"One of the most interesting features of the course was the number of young people present."

The University of Natal has no extra-mural department or one might suggest that they emulate the example of their sister university."

The lecturers on the course in Cape Town included four ex-Governors from British East Africa, eight professors, Mr. Marshall Clark on Communications, Mr. Harry Oppenheimer, M.P., on mining, Dr. H. J. van Eck on secondary industry, General Theron on military potential and the director of extra-mural studies of the University College of the Gold Coast. An African from Natal, Mr. S. Ngcobo, and Mr. B. A. Naidoo and Dr. R. E. van der Ross, spoke on African, Indians and Coloureds respectively.

The course concluded with a round table discussion by Mr. Harry Lawrence, M.P., Dr. Otto du Plessis, Mr. Theo Lovell M.P. and Mrs. M. Ballinger, M.P.

Among persons attending were Americans, British, Rhodesians, Australians, Swiss and Chinese. Mrs. J. G. N. Strauss, wife of the Leader of the Opposition, also attended. A group of Natal Torchmen who were granted burials by the Natal Coast Region of the Commando were also present.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

AFRICANS AND GENERAL ELECTIONS

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

WHILE South Africa goes to the polls on April 15, both the White politicians and newspaper commentators have told us that the election will be one of the most crucial for South Africa. And crucial it will be, for if the Malanites are returned to power they will take that as endorsement of their racial tyranny, their contempt for the Rule of Law and their attacks on the Judiciary. That, in turn, will embolden them to resort increasingly to harsh and tyrannous measures to silence by force non-European demands for an effective say in the Government of the land.

What lies in store for us, as well as for every democrat, for that matter, from the Malanite rule is crystal clear. The man of colour can expect no quarter and himself has appreciated this so keenly that he is now more determined than ever to fight on ground.

What is generally not understood is what will happen if the United Party is returned to office. There is a hazy idea that Mr. Struys would not be as bad as the racial fanatics who rule the country to-day. On the face of it, the United Party is not as fanatical in its hatred of the man of colour as the Malanites are. This does not absolve it of any love of justice for the man of colour. The economic and political interests served by the United Party are such that this Party can antagonise Africans or world opinion only up to a certain point and not beyond. For this reason the United Party feels constrained to advocate a policy which, when contrasted with Apartheid, appears slightly conciliatory.

But the attitude of the Party towards the anti-defiance Act alone clearly that when it comes to the fundamental question of race, it is not much different from the Malanites. A closer examination of the Party's decision not to fall into the Malanite "trap" set by the two Acts reveals two things. Firstly, the United Party realises that in recent weeks there have been significant secretions of strength to its side. The odds between it and the Malanites, at the time of writing, are about even. This mild change in White opinion creates, for the United Party, the possibility of being returned to power. If that happens the Party feels inwardly that it would be powerless to settle the racial crisis in an honourable and democratic way. Although Mr. Struys has been loud in announcing that he will consult with the leaders of the African people he has scrupulously avoided saying precisely what the basis and scope of those consultations will be. His reluctance to speak his mind more freely might be a tactical over-election attitude. Be that as it may be. But coming as it does from one who might form the Government on April 15 and against the background of the fact that his attitude towards the defiance campaign has much in common with Dr. Malan's, it confirms African fears that Mr. Struys and his Party have no better solution of the racial problem than the sabotage and persecution legalised by the Swart Act.

Secondly, the United Party might be realising that it could not afford to violate the Constitution or treat with contempt the Rule of Law when it has had to say so much in defence or praise of these. It might have felt, when Minister Swart came with his two Bills, that he would do the dirty political work and draw world opprobrium on his political head only to leave the United Party with exactly the tools it required to crush the resistance movement.

I wish I could be proved wrong in seeing United Party policy in this light. Unfortunately there are obstacles (such as which one cannot think). These confirm African fears that once in power, the United Party's severity against non-violent agitators for reform will differ from Minister Swart's only in degree.

It is against this background that the present attitude of the African National Congress has to be seen. In a series of well-attended provincial conferences last month the Africans decided to wage the struggle with renewed vigour. There was keen appreciation of the fact that in some circumstances the two Swart Acts necessitated the employment of more effective tactics in the day-to-day non-violent struggle to free South Africa from the tyranny of race. Suggestions were even made of a stoppage of work.

Against the background of these conferences the leaders of the resistance movement met in Johannesburg, towards the end of the month and agreed on a course which should make every thoughtful White voter realise the dangers to which Nationalism has already driven South Africa.

The leaders of the non-White people realise that the struggle will have to be a long and costly one. But this has only steeled their determination to fight with renewed strength. They have not been deterred in any way by the Swart Acts. Their national organisations might be banned; a state of emergency might be declared and the leaders of non-White opinion jailed. But the struggle will go on.

From this angle the return to power of the United Party will not be something which the African National Congress will welcome with whoops and cheers. The leaders of the African National Congress have prepared themselves in such a way that whether Struys or Malan is the next Prime Minister should not be a point which affects their struggle very materially.

The African National Congress has everything faith in the strength of its followers to ensure respect for their wishes in the end. While it has shown that it welcomes within the fold of its allies genuine democrats from every racial group, it does not believe the United Party, for example, to genuinely democratic.

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Bombay, February 18

THE South African Government's Bill to amend the Criminal Law and to acquire wide powers to crush the Civil Disobedience campaign in the Union and the harsh punishment meted out to Mr. Mahatma Gandhi and Mr. Duncan has been severely criticised by Indian newspapers and politicians. The cancellation of the Gandhi Smuts agreement, in which Dr. Malan was also a party as a Minister, has also provoked harsh comment. The comment in the 'Times of India' is typical of the general tone of the criticism. The paper writes: "Even a maniac would shrink from the kind of terror which Dr. Malan seeks to institute in South Africa. That his Government would ask for wide powers to suppress the resistance campaign against apartheid laws was known for a long time. But the provisions of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill published this week are so savage that even those who have known the record of the Malan Government have been taken aback by it."

The drastic penalties provided in the Bill indeed show that Dr. Malan wants nothing less than the total liquidation of the African National Congress as well as the South African Indian Congress and every other organisation that dared to raise its voice of protest against oppressive laws. It is not surprising that the provisions of the Bill have alarmed even white Opposition parties. Whether the opposition to the Bill will be strong enough to make itself felt is doubtful. But what is not in doubt is the fact that the South African Government's hysteria has reached a point where it threatens not only to destroy the last vestiges of democracy in the country but also to injure the interests of the white population."

President Dr. Rajendraprasad also referred to this in his inaugural address to the Indian Parliament. The Government of India is considering steps to be taken in this regard and their decision will be known soon.

The well-known Gujarati writer and Gandhian leader Kaka Sahib Kalelkar expressed his intention to pass his last years in Africa. He declared in an address at Bombay that, "following the noble philosophy of Mahatma Gandhi, Mr. Mahatma Gandhi and his associates are struggling to get justice for the Africans. That some religious-minded Europeans have also joined the struggle is a happy augury."

The agitation against the Sales Tax Act in Saurashtra has heated up and Praja Parishad has officially decided to call off the struggle. Saurashtra Government has released all the persons arrested in this connection.

The Government of India has struck a major blow to Praja Parishad agitation in Jammu by large-scale arrests of its supporters and sympathisers in Jan Singh, Bhandu Mahasabha and R.S.S. in Delhi and Punjab. Agitation to merge Jammu completely in India and apply all the provisions of the Indian Constitution to it, have been going on for months. But the Government of Kashmir are determined not to bow to this agitation.

In Hyderabad Shri Ramakrishna Rao's Ministry has resigned. After Pandit Nehru's criticism of the number of Ministers, it was decided to reduce their number and re-allocate the portfolios. Mr. Rao is given the task of forming the new Ministry.

Saurashtra High Court has upheld the sentence of six years imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 2000 awarded by a lower Court to Prince Nirmalkumar of Bhavnagar in the Rib Decoy case.

The Government of India has decided to start a Television Station as an experimental measure. If this measure proves to be successful, then other stations will be opened.

All Sane Men Mourn Stalin's Death

Real Peace

If we are to reach real peace in this world and if we are to carry on a real war against war, we shall have to begin with children; and if they will grow up in their natural innocence we won't have to struggle, we won't have to pass fruitless idle resolutions but we shall go from love to love and peace to peace until at last all the corners of the world are covered with that peace and love for which consciously or unconsciously the whole world is hungering

—Mahatma Gandhi.

MARSHAL Stalin, Russia's great leader, died on Thursday night March 5. May his soul rest in peace. Though there have been some unbecoming remarks made about him by people who should know better, we shall record here tributes we take pride in associating ourselves with.

Mr. Nehru (India): "A personality of exceptional gifts and great achievements. The history of Russia, and indeed of the world, will always bear the impress of his endeavours and accomplishments."

Mr. Clement Attlee, Leader of the British Labour Party: "There will be world-wide sympathy with the Russian people at the loss of a great national leader who, by his courage and tenacity, brought his country through the perils of the second world war, and played a great part in defeating the Nazis."

Mr. Trygve Lie: "On those occasions on which I had the honour of meeting Mr. Stalin, I have been deeply impressed by the qualities which made him one of the outstanding statesmen of our time."

Mr. Lester Pearson, President of the General Assembly of the United Nations: "With Marshal Stalin's death the United Nations had lost one of its founders, and the Soviet people had lost the man who was their indomitable leader in the struggle against Nazi aggression."

Mr. Sydney Holland, Prime Minister of New Zealand: "Stalin's death had removed from the world scene at a critical time one of its most powerful leaders, one whose influence and achievements have been of profound significance in our times."

"We remember him today and honour him as one of the great war leaders. We recall how he rallied his people when they were almost overwhelmed, and how he led them from the brink of disaster to march alongside British, American and Allied forces to share in the decisive victory which they won over the forces of Nazism."

The Dean of Canterbury, Dr. Hewlett Johnson: "With the death of Joseph Stalin a great figure passes from the stage of history, a death mourned as of a father by 200,000,000 in the Soviet Union, and as a liberator, friend and prophet by 800,000,000 from Prague to Peking, and hundreds of more beyond."

"I vividly remember Stalin as I met him and remember our long conversation. He was calm and composed, friendly and approachable, simple in manner and direct in speech, untouched by the slightest suspicion of pomposity."

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 13TH MARCH, 1953

Marshal Stalin

FRIDAY morning March 6 brought the shocking news of the death of Marshal Stalin. It is a loss not only to Russia but to the whole world of a great man. He was not a man to be spitted upon as some who ought to know better have done unbecomingly. We heartily join those who have paid the dead man the tribute he well deserves. Though the world has unfortunately not yet won the peace who can deny that a large share of the credit goes to Russia led by Josef Stalin for winning the last war. Is it to be forgotten, so soon how the Russian men and women bled in their millions to save the world from the Nazis? And would the Russians have been able to do so had it not been for Stalin's great personality and power? We must reverently bow to it though we may not agree with his methods.

It is utterly foolish to think that Communism is dead because Stalin is dead. It is just as much as to say that the Nationalist regime will die in South Africa if, God forbid, we were to lose Dr. Malan. There was nothing evil about Communism as such. All those who are suffering under the heels of capitalism are, at heart, virtual Communists. What is objectionable is the way it is brought about and is being turned into another form of imperialism. Nothing achieved by violence will live long. The last war should have brought this lesson home to the world which unfortunately it has not done. It only shows that the world is in for darker days than it has passed through, which means that the world will come to an end. The world will be saved not by cursing Nazism, Communism or any other 'ism' and those who gave birth to it. It will only be saved by reflecting on the causes that gave birth to it and by acting speedily for the removal of those causes. Hitler was cursed, Stalin was cursed and they have gone. To-day Dr. Malan is being cursed. He too will go but there will be no peace until and unless the causes that brought them into being are removed. Those causes are selfishness and greed. Were it not for the selfishness and greed of the two and a half-million White people of South Africa who have assumed power to rule over four times their number according to their will; were it not for the selfishness and greed of the capitalists who hold a monopoly of great industries and wax fat on the sweat and blood of the millions who have been kept as serfs by man made laws utterly disregarding the law of God, were it not for the individual landlords who own vast tracts of land and think they are lords of all they survey, and do not think for a moment of the millions who have no land at all and are not prepared to part with an inch of their land, South Africa would have been a land of peace and contentment with no "problems" to speak of. So Hitler, Stalin, Malan are the products of our misdeeds. They may disappear in person but that does not mean that their spirit will not prevail. It shall prevail more forcibly than ever even as Hitler has passed away but, Nazism has become all pervading. Let Marshal Stalin's life therefore be a lesson for us all. Let us imbibe all the good in him and discard all the bad. Peace be to his soul.

NOTES AND NEWS

Confusion Over New

Group Rule

The Durban City Council's Group Areas proposal have been confused by the Government's latest directive which insists that African workers in urban areas must eventually be housed in areas specially set aside for their occupation. Extensions to African compounds outside these areas are not permitted. This may mean that larger African residential areas will have to be provided, involving, possibly, encroachment on proposed European and Indian areas. In a report to the General Purposes Committee of the Durban City Council, Mr. E. Havemann of the Technical sub-Committee on Race Zoning, says that the race zoning plan was based on the assumption that a substantial proportion of the annual increase in the African labour force would be housed in industrial and commercial areas. "It is not quite clear whether the term 'areas specially set aside for African occupation' includes Municipal hotels in industrial areas, but it seems quite clear that it does not include employers' compounds," he said. In a circular letter to municipalities, the Secretary for African Affairs, Dr. W. W. M. Eiselein, has said that while the use of existing accommodation outside African areas need not be curtailed for the present, local authorities should not permit extensions to them, or the erection of any new accommodation.

Whites Against African

Portmen

The immediate dismissal of all non-Europeans doing the work of European portmen is demanded in a resolution passed by the triennial congress of the South African Postal Association which closed recently in Durban. Mr. T. P. van Nierkerk, secretary of the association, said last week, "The employment of non-Europeans is causing resentment and dissatisfaction. Only the fact that they have worked separately from the Europeans has, so far prevented trouble." He added: "We feel that the use of non-Europeans as portmen will lead to 'cheap labour.' Improved working conditions and salaries and not 'cheap' non-European labour were the solution to the shortage of staff. The Association would ask the Department to raise the commencing basic salaries of portmen from £165 to £240 a year, and to promote them to the grade maximum of £400 a year in seven instead of 12 years. Another grievance was excessive over-time. Due to lack of supervising officers recruits were not being properly trained. So serious was the staff position that portmen promoted to sorters could not take up their new duties, in some cases even five months after promotion.

Clinic For Non-European

The Newcastle and District Indian Child Welfare Society has just opened a clinic for Indians, Coloureds and Africans. The society hopes to obtain Government recognition and assistance. The clinic hopes to check the numerous diseases caused by under-nourishment and poor hygiene, as well as providing pre-natal care and advice.

Might End Colour Bar

When the Labour Party was returned to power again, it might well give early consideration to ending the colour bar in Northern Rhodesia, said Mr. John Dugdale, former Labour Minister of State for Colonial Affairs, in the House of Commons. That might also have a considerable effect on Southern Rhodesia, he added.

African Nationalism Scram Huggins

The Prime Minister, Sir Godfrey Huggins, addressing a meeting on federation in Bulawayo said that he wished to see the Rhodesias and Nyasaland as one strong British Government, because of the great surge of African can nationalism all over Africa. "In those countries ruled by Britain where there is no European settlement, there will be African States in 20 years—probably British, but ruled entirely by Africans," he said. "We have to rescue our own northern neighbours." It was no use scoffing at this growth of African nationalism. It was one of the most serious things that had ever happened, and it had been planned by the previous Government in Britain.

Viewpoint On Federation

The following letter by J. Boxwell of Isipingo, appeared in a recent issue of the 'Natal Mercury'.

Sir,—Mr. Heaton Nicholls is in favour of federating the Rhodesias and Nyasaland and "maintaining European hegemony (a polite word for domination) to the Congo, Tanganyika and possibly far beyond." History has shown that European domination implies overwhelming voting power in favour of the White race; the distribution of land according to the will of the European; discrimination in educational facilities, and cheap African labour for mines and farms—a privileged position for the European and arrested development for the African. To extend this system against the declared wishes of the huge majority of an awakening African population would be an act of criminal folly. If the British Parliament passes Federation in the North, on what leg will it endeavour to stand in the case of Swaziland, Basutoland and Bechuanaland?

B.Ed. Degree For Non-Europeans

Non-European students will this year for the first time be able to take the B.Ed. degree at Sastri College and another degree in remedial education for teachers who will have to instruct backward or handicapped children. This was revealed by Dr. Mabel Palmer, organizer of the non-European section of the University of Natal, who said the B.Ed. degree was a post-graduate course only open to people who had a degree and five years' teaching experience. Dr. Palmer said there were at present 198 students at Sastri College comprising Indians, Africans and Coloureds, and most of them were studying for their B.A. degree. About 100 of the 198 students were studying part-time, and a considerable number of these were already engaged in teaching and were working to increase their qualifications. Although a course was being held for the B.Com. degree, Sastri College would not offer a first-year B.Com. course this year unless one more student came forward to bring the number of the first-year class up to 10. Dr. Palmer said that only a small number were studying for their degree in Social Science because of the very small salaries offered by the Government to non-Europeans with the B.S.S. degree. Dr. G. W. Gale, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at the non-European section of the University of Natal told the Press that about 60 non-Europeans were studying medicine at the university.

New £35000 Indian School In Durban

The foundation stone of a Government Aided Indian School purposed to be built by the Surat Hindu Association at a cost of £35000 in Prince Edward Street, Durban, was laid by the Administrator, Mr. D. G. Shepherson on Thursday, March 5. Glowing tributes were paid by various speakers to the Education Department and the Provincial Administration for the help they were going to the matter of Indian education. Tea and refreshments were served after the termination of a very pleasant function.

Indians In Foreign Firms

A memorandum prominently displayed in newspapers in New Delhi recently described the 1,200 foreign undertakings in India as "miniature South Africa." This was the latest development in the campaign for the "Indianisation" of British and other European firms in India. The memorandum, said to have been drawn up by Indian executives working in foreign firms, has been circulated among members of Parliament in Delhi. It alleged that foreign firms practised ruthless and sordid discrimination against Indians employed by them, and that Europeans were appointed to senior posts over the heads of Indians. A questionnaire was circulated by the Government last year to European firms in India asking for details of the number of Indians employed at different wage levels. Replies have not yet been made public, but a recent report, believed to have been officially inspired, stated that answers showed that more than 75 per cent of senior posts in these firms, with emoluments of above £900 a year, were held by foreigners. In junior posts, worth between £250 and £900 a year, about 90 per cent. were Indians. The Government is now deciding what action to take on the "Indianisation" of higher categories, but it is expected the question will be settled amicably between the Government and the foreign business interests.

KASTURBA GANDHI GOVERNMENT-AIDED INDIAN SCHOOL

OPENS AT PHOENIX SETTLEMENT

SOME two years ago a private school was started at the Phoenix Settlement with five pupils in Mahatma Gandhi's cottage which is known as "Sarvodaya" (Welfare of All). The number of pupils rapidly grew up to over a hundred and fifty. We were struggling with the school with the meagre resources at our disposal.

Later we negotiated with the Department of Education intimating that it was desired to establish a school here in commemoration of Kasturba, wife of Mahatma Gandhi, in terms of the Phoenix Settlement Trust, and applied for aided status to be given to that school. The Department was very sympathetic and agreed to grant aided status to the school provided the rules and regulations pertaining to such a school were complied with. "Sarvodaya" was found too small to house so many children and a proper building had to be built before such grant could be given. The matter was informally put before a few friends who had one day come to visit the Phoenix Settlement and they were very kind to donate a sum which amounted to about £275. It was felt then that a temporary wood and iron structure could be built at a cost of £300 to provide the immediate need. Plans were made, submitted to the Department of Education and were passed.

New developments had then taken place. Nine years ago a fund was collected in the Transvaal to raise a memorial in honour of Kasturba Gandhi at Phoenix. This fund was however lying dormant all these years the donors having done nothing about it. When the news of the above school was mentioned to them they were once again aroused and decided to donate the sum which amounted to nearly £4,500 to Phoenix for the accomplishment of the desired goal. The Department of Education with the consent of the Provincial Administration have now very kindly agreed to give a fifty per cent grant on the permanent school building to be built in memory of Kasturba Gandhi and to give it aided status.

What was supposed to be a temporary structure has now become part of the permanent building with two class rooms already built. We are happy to announce that the school consisting of 152 pupils which is being conducted in these two classes plus two rooms in "Sarvodaya" was officially opened on Wednesday, March 4, with Mr. S. S. Maraj, son of Mr. S. R. Maraj, well-known of Verulam, as acting Principal.

We hope to have a formal opening of the school building when the structure is completed.

We take this opportunity to express our grateful appreciation to the Department of Education as well as the Provincial Administration for their very kind assistance and support in making this project a success.

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of 'The Christian Century')

SIGNS OF DETERIORATION

SOUTH AFRICA has been described as a colonial nation maintaining its colony with a its borders—a nation of 2½ million whites encompassing a colony of 10 million non-whites. Subject peoples, the non-whites have no real citizenship and less grounds for hope than in many of the colonies in Africa. Even the few rights they have had are diminishing. From the Cape of Good Hope to the Limpopo river, there are multiple signs of deterioration.

A symbol of the oppression dealt out to these subject peoples was furnished by a Johannesburg newspaper in mid-July when—probably by inadvertence—it carried the two following stories in adjacent columns: "Ill-Treated Animals Fined £55. A coloured man, William Mulder, was fined £55 with the alternative of six weeks' imprisonment with hard labour when he pleaded guilty in the Roadport magistrate's court of ill treating a horse and a mule." The other story "Bully at Assault on Native Fined £20. A constable stated in Roadport magistrate's court that a mister, William P. O. Prinsloo, brought a Native to him with his hands bound with wire, which was also tied to his neck. The Native was bleeding from the mouth, nose and ears. It was alleged that Prinsloo had hit a Native, Daniel Mthang, who was in his employ, with his open hand and fist, and with an iron pipe on the head. Prinsloo was fined £20 with the alternative of a month's imprisonment."

Signs of deterioration are to be seen in at least three areas: in the treatment of the non-Europeans (not only since 1948 when Dr. Verwoerd came to power, but for decades before when Jan Smuts and the United Party were the rulers), in the matter of civil liberties, and in the relations between whites and non-whites on a leadership level.

The history of South Africa in the last three centuries of "keeping the buffer in his place" has been for many years in the rural areas and native reserves; but as gold mines needed labour and as urban life developed Africans increasingly came to the cities. The mines developed the compound system, where men live for months without their families. Basil Davidson in his perceptive new book, Report on Southern Africa, writes that these modern mine compounds contain "all the elements of Orwell's hell—not slavery in the old sense, no—but intelligent, hygienic totalitarian slavery." The Africans who came to the cities for domestic work and unskilled jobs were soon herded into segregated "locations." A few locations have been built by municipalities and may be tolerable—within the intolerable context of segregation—but many are shanty towns, as bad as the worst human housing anywhere in the world.

One of the most oppressive evils of urban living in South Africa is, for the African male, the pass system. A pass is one of several types of documents which must be carried for lawful movement and must be produced on demand. The first pass law was introduced in the Cape in 1769, when slaves moving between rural and urban areas had to carry passes from their masters. Today there are many laws of this kind and the ordinary urban African must generally carry at least four passes. Certain Africans—clergymen, teachers, chiefs—can apply for exemption from passes, but they must then produce an exemption certificate instead of a pass. A pass allowing an African to travel outside the location evening curfew (often 7 p.m.) is called a "special". It is possible for an African employer who does not have an exemption himself to write out one for himself. But since he would commit an offence if he did not carry a "special" after curfew, he has to apply each time to the police.

There are several "historical reasons" for the existence of passes, such as the regulation of the urban labour supply and the reduction of crime. Yet any African possessing a crime could obtain a valid pass. Post-Europe, which does not have curfew passes, has the lowest urban crime rate in the Union. In obtaining a valid pass, the African must often stand in queues for days. Even if his passes are in order he runs constant harassment by the police. At least 10,000 persons are convicted monthly for violating the pass laws. A committee studying the social and economic conditions of the Africans in 1948 called the whole pass system "a harassing and constant interference with the freedom of movement of natives which gives rise to a burning sense of grievance and injustice." A new Union-wide pass system is being adopted which may simplify matters somewhat, but it will not give the African the freedom of movement to which anyone in a non-totalitarian society is entitled as a basic right.

Poverty, Disease And Death

If passes were completely abolished, the African would still face a life of poverty and its social consequences, especially disease and crime. Non-Europeans who constitute four fifths of the population of the Union, receive less than two fifths of the national income. The poverty in the rural areas is unbelievable, the yearly cash income being less than the equivalent of $15. In the gold mines, the average cash income for a daily is about 32 cents, and the average monthly income in cash and kind about £5 or $15 (an increase of only 66 during the past 6½ years). In the cities, the cash income might be as much as £6 or $17 a week. During World War II the average net income for Africans was less than 10 per cent. of the income of Europeans.

The death rate for Europeans is less than 10 per 1,000—as low as any in the world—but for non-Europeans it is double that. The infant mortality rate for Africans is not less than 150 per 1,000 live births, and in some areas as high as 600 or even 700. While the incidence of leprosy is lower than in any other African territory, the incidence of syphilis and tuberculosis is probably higher than in any other country in the world that claims to be civilized. Both these conditions are due to the effects of debilitation and of urban living in a disorganized society.

The crime rate among Africans in urban centres is also among the highest in the world. This is not only crime directed against white persons and white-owned property, but equally against Africans, coloureds and Indians. It is hard to exaggerate the level of crime that exists in large cities such as Johannesburg, although it must be added that there are whites who have lived there for years unharmed and unmolested and who feel that the reports on crime have been overemphasised. Less has been said about the Africans' fear of their fellows. For some years teen-aged tsotsis (a Bantu translation of "sunt-suiters") have menaced the Africans in their locations. Just now outside Johannesburg a notorious gang called the "Russians" are terrorising 1,300 of their fellow Africans and driving them out of their shanty towns into a miserable squatter camp near by. The only conclusion to be drawn about crime in South Africa is that, as in urban areas anywhere, much of it stems from defiance toward a society which does not fulfil basic needs. To attach a racial label to it is sociologically inaccurate and not practically helpful.

Nationalists Bolster "Apartheid"

The coalition of the National and Afrikaner parties came to power in May 1948 with a majority of only five seats in the House of Assembly. Indeed, because of the weighting of rural votes, they actually had 122,000 fewer votes than their opponents. Immediately Dr Malan began to fulfil his pledge "to protect the European population of the country as a pure white race." Legislatively and administratively, the pace of apartheid quickened. One of the first measures to be passed was the Mixed Marriages Act of 1949, which prohibits marriages between Europeans and non-Europeans. (From 1925 to 1936 there was an annual average of 461 mixed marriages.) This was really an extension of the 1927 Immorality Act, which prohibits extramarital intercourse, but not marriage, between Europeans and Africans amended in 1951 to include Indians, Coloureds and all other non-Europeans.)

The definitions in the 1949 Act are as involved as they are tragic: "Any party to such marriage professing to be a European or a non-European, as the case may be, is in appearance obviously what he professes to be, or is able to show, in the case of a party professing to be a non-European, that he habitually consorts with non-Europeans as a non-European." This does not quite match the genetic precision of Hitler's Nuremberg laws, but it is just as pernicious. Already a white Roman Catholic priest has been prosecuted for conducting a marriage ceremony between a white man and a woman whom he honestly believed to be white. The Supreme Court vindicated the priest, asserting that where a person's race is in doubt, his way of life is a better test than her appearance.

Putting New Fears Into The African

In the 1950 session of Parliament, the Nationalists passed two important Acts to bolster apartheid. One was the population Act, which set up a register of the population and called for the distribution of racial identity cards. A provision of this Act makes it impossible for any common informer to object to the racial classification of any other individual. Also passed was the notorious Group Areas Act, which grants the Government wide powers to declare any given urban area inhabitable only by a given racial group, thus compelling the population in possession—usually non-European—to move to newly developed areas, often in distant suburbs. It is doubtful if more than a token beginning can be made to implement this Act, but it puts new fears into almost all unrooted non-Europeans who now own property, however modest.

The 1951 session of Parliament passed the Native Building Workers' Act, which prohibits the employment of Africans on skilled building jobs in areas not exclusively inhabited by Africans. It also passed the Native Authorities Act, which abolished the advisory Native Representative Councils—in any case defunct—and substituted a system of administrative control by tribal chiefs—a sure method of preventing progress. Administratively, the Nationalists especially in the post-war years and on roads (there are now two separate ramps at the large Johannesburg station). They are cutting off traditional subsidies to those adult education groups which held public functions open to mixed groups. The Minister of Education recently declared "Unless we as a nation address to apartheid there will be no subsidy from the state, not a penny." The Minister of Native Affairs referred to see a mixed deputation from the Institute of Race Relations and demanded to talk to the one African in the delegation separately from the others. School feeding funds for non-Europeans have also been decreased as a way to teach non-Europeans more self-dependence.

Since Dr. Malan was elected as a platform of Afrikaner nationalism along with racism, he has systematically tried to enhance Afrikaner culture as well as to retreat his party in power. The first step was the passage of the Citizenship Act of 1949, which increased the requirement of residency in the Union from two years to five before a person could qualify for citizenship. Since the low percentage of immigrants had been British this at least retarded the rate of non-Afrikaner voters on the rolls. In general, the Nationalists are in a dilemma about immigration: they desperately want more white settlers, but not from the British Isles because these will be English-speaking, and not from the Continent because these may be Roman Catholic instead of Dutch Reformed.

United Nations Flouted

In 1950 the Nationalists flouted their debate of the United Nations by incorporation the mandated territory of South West Africa into the Union and giving the white residents a disproportionately large representation of six seats in Parliament—which promptly went Nationalist. In October of that year Dr. Malan announced that the Coloureds, who have had the vote in Cape province since 1853, would be taken off the common voters' roll and put on a separate roll and then be represented by separate white members of Parliament. This was a racial measure in that it was a logical extension of apartheid in Parliament, but the motive was also political, since the Nationalists stand to gain at least five seats in the Cape province because the 50,000 Coloureds affected have sided with the United Party and have held the balance of power in as many as twelve parliamentary constituencies.

The Coloured vote on the common roll is safeguarded in the so-called entrenched clause of the Act of Union and can be suspended only by a two-thirds vote of Parliament. If the Nationalists could have mustered this majority, there would probably have been little reaction among the whites, for in 1936 the Smuts regime took the Afrikaners to the Cape (the only Province where they had any representation at all) off the common roll by the same procedure, but with a two-thirds majority. Since Dr. Malan did not have the two-thirds vote, he said he would enact the legislation anyway, asserting that the entrenched clauses were superseded.

This gave the opposition party a strong argument which, as the whole world knows, they used wisely. The Appellate Court (the Supreme Court of South Africa) unanimously ruled that Parliament was not supreme above the entrenched clauses and invalidated the parliamentary action in removing the Coloureds from the common vote. Malan's answer was the enactment, still by a persistent small majority, of the High Court of Parliament Act, which makes Parliament itself the final arbiter of its actions. On August 25 the High Court of Parliament (with the United Party members abstaining) sat to judge the action of the Appellate Court. This impasse between the highest legislative and the (heretofore) highest judicial arm of the Government will probably not issue in civil war or lead the province of Natal to carry out its threat of secession, but it is starting South Africa and the world to the lengths that the Nationalists will go for the sake of both principle and politics.

Next Steps In Degradation

The next steps of the Nationalists in the degradation of their democracy are not difficult to predict. Indeed they have been repeatedly announced. One step might be agitation to enthrone Afrikaners as the one official language through repealing the remaining entrenched clause in the Act of Union which gives equality to English and Afrikaners. Another step might be the creation of a South African "republic" and all that that implies, substituting a president for a governor-general—a president "directly and only responsible to God, never and against the people for his deeds in the fulfilment of his duties."

If the lot of the non-Europeans is daily growing worse, the efforts to reverse the trend are retarded partly because of a similar deterioration in civil liberties. Passports are being denied to politically minded South Africans, both European and non-European, who desire to travel abroad. Visas are denied "undesirable" visitors, such as a Scottish girl who came to Cape Town recently to visit a Coloured family. The British Medical Association had to cancel plans to hold a conference with South African physicians when the Government refused to promise to admit delegates irrespective of race. Other important international conferences scheduled for South Africa have likewise been cancelled. The plainclothes C.I.D. makes raids on political groups. There is, however, only a spotty censorship of imported literature, and many magazines and books very critical of South Africa are openly on sale at bookstores.

The Communist Smear

which was amended in 1951 to make it retroactive to a time before the Act was passed. The Government is given the power to label an individual a Communist. The definitions are very broad, one being "a person who aims at the encouragement of feelings of hostility between European and non-European races of the Union." Persons named under the Act are prohibited from holding public office and can be prevented from attending political gatherings of any size. Already more than 300 individuals, more than a third of them non-whites, have been named under this Act, and several have been tried for violating its provisions, including Sam Kahn, the only Communist member of Parliament. In its administration the Act has been extended to name non-Communists who have been effective critics of the Government. The longtime secretary of the Garment Workers' Union, S. A. Sachs, whose real crime was inducing hundreds of Afrikaner women to join the same union as non-Europeans, was relieved of his union position by the Government and forbidden to attend public meetings. He attended two rallies and has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labour. The Act undoubtedly will suppress some Communism, but the Communist Party of South Africa was dissolved just before the Act was passed in 1950, and the real victim is civil liberties, especially the rights of free speech, free assembly and free press.

A real sign of deterioration is the gulf between white and non-white in South Africa. All evidence points to an unwholesome widening of this gap. Beginning in 1921, a number of so-called joint councils were established in the urban centers—the Johannesburg Joint Council of Europeans and Africans, the Indo-European Joint Council of Pietermaritzburg, and so on. Many such councils still exist but most have lost their effectiveness, partly because the non-Europeans have seen no progress and have concluded that such activity is a waste of time. Also, the number of whites who will work with non-Europeans in the field of courageous social action—philanthropic social service—is surprisingly small, though it fairness it must be recorded that there are a few. The problem is that most of the whites who still want to cooperate are too moderate even for more moderate non-European leadership.

The result is a re-inforcement

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

THIS MYTH OF ORIENTAL FECUNDITY—I

By C. W. M. GELL

THE principal of Natal University, Dr. E. G. Matherbe, made a speech in Durban on February 20 in which he acerbically warned the White races that Asia's demand for equal human status was inevitable. He also spoke of the problems of poverty and population in words which, taken out of their context (as they almost certainly have been in the brief press reports), might give a false impression of the complicated economic and demographical forces at work. Dr. Matherbe is reported as saying: "If Asia is not to overwhelm the rest of the world with a vast flood of population and poverty, Asia must live up to its responsibilities and learn the sort of thing we have learnt in the West, which is how to maintain a roughly stationary population." He added that the people of India, many of them already on the verge of starvation, would become poorer and more wretched "unless the fecundity of its teeming millions was curbed."

I am sorry that these extracts from Dr. Matherbe's speech have been circulated in a form which revives echoes of that unhappy phrase—"explosive fertility"—in the Report of the Commission of Inquiry into the Durban riots and which thus seems to lay the blame for a very complex situation on only one of the many causes at work.

I think the first errors to eradicate from this all too popular approach to the problem are the fallacious legends of some special oriental philo-progenitiveness, Eastern sexuality or pagan addiction to polygamy or promiscuity. At the same time the figures will eliminate the comfortable but equally fallacious myth of European sexual restraint or skill in birth control.

During the last 300 years the world's population has increased fourfold, from some 600 millions to 2,410 millions. In the 200 years between 1715 and 1941, however, the populations of India and China increased threefold while that of Britain, despite heavy overseas emigration, increased over fivefold. In 1894 Germany's birth rate of 36 per thousand exceeded India's of 34. India's rate of increase today, which produces the alarming net annual increase of nearly 6 millions for the whole sub-continent, is about the same as Holland's. At 1.4 per cent per year, it is lower than the annual rate of natural increase (1.6 per cent) of our South-African European population, although the latter is presumed to "have learnt how to maintain a roughly stationary population."

These figures support what is indeed the truth, that Asia's present problem is not that we Westerners have gone through and are still to some extent going through. It is not a problem of birth rates but of death rates. What has been primarily responsible for the tremendous spurt in the world's population these last 300 years is the spectacular drop in death rates, not a comparatively small increase (and in some cases an actual decrease) in birth rates.

And the first of the several special factors which has enabled the West to deal with its consequences more easily than the East can today, was that the impact of a falling death rate was more gradual in the West. The medical and sanitary improvements, which were chiefly responsible for curbing the mortality (particularly the infant mortality) rate, were introduced piecemeal in Europe over the last 300 years. They have been applied in the East, principally by the colonial powers at first, only during the last 100 years and particularly during the last 50 years, when new drugs and methods of mass application have made them suddenly and enormously more effective. It is often said that the Western imperial powers have added to Asia's difficulties by curbing the wars and other disorders which used regularly to reduce the surplus population. But Western colonialism was seldom so peaceful as it claims; and it was not the battles but the epidemics accompanying the campaigns and rebellions that used to carry off millions. Wars have only become significant instruments of human elimination by actual combat and direct martial devastation in our own lifetime. It is the very recent diminution in the mortality from malaria, typhus, plague, cholera, small-pox etc. that has revolutionised the population problem, both in war and especially in peace. (The suppression of the slave traffic in Central Africa perhaps more nearly justifies the imperial claim, but has been offset by the introduction of T.B., V.D. and alcohol as the staple item of trade and revenue).

The second factor favouring the West was that the medical inventions were themselves a by-product of that great social re-organisation known as the Agrarian and Industrial Revolutions; so that, as the population began to swell, more efficient farming was increasing the productive capacity of the land and expanding factories were there to absorb (however inhumanly at first) the landless. By contrast, Asian death rates have suddenly diminished while a peasant economy—disorganised by contact with an alien culture and law (as in India) or by continuous civil and foreign warfare (as in China) or by both (as in contemporary Burma and Indonesia)—was disintegrating but had not yet been replaced and while the factories to absorb the surplus and the landless were mostly still to be built. And the opening of Asian countries by railways and roads to a free flow of goods, which was one of the most marked results of the Western impact, has certainly reduced the areas and severities of actual famine at the cost of lowering the general ration of food available throughout the country. In the old days famine meant death to many in the affected areas from starvation and epidemic. Today it means a widespread tightening of belts and lowering of vitality where at the best of times there is little margin for this. In its drastic but effective way, the old system operated Malthusian checks which the new uniformity of sub-standard diet does not. It served a social purpose in the insular peasant economy which is going unfulfilled today except as a deliberate instrument of policy in totalitarian states. And the alternative method of purchasing food elsewhere, if it can be afforded and obtained, means using up precious capital that would otherwise go into development or education.

The third special factor which helped the West was that Europe began its population spurt from a much lower basic ratio between population and cultivable land than has Asia. No, only was there proportionately much more room for expansion within the boundaries of the various European countries, but by her superior technology and adventurous aggression Europe carved out for herself population outlets in her empires overseas. And even when the imperial process, which peopled the Americas, Australia and in a much lesser degree other climatically less congenial colonies with exotic Europeans, had more or less finished, the fantastic expansion of the United States economy during the last seventy years continued to provide a refuge for Europe's "excess millions." The U.S. population rose from 5 millions in 1680 to 147 millions in 1948 and much of the amazing performance was due to heavy immigration from Europe. Now that it has been greatly curtailed, many European countries are finding their "secondary" much more of a burden than Dr. Matherbe's comments suggest. By comparison the 10 million Chinese expatriates in S.E. Asia, the nearly 2 million Indians in Malaya, the nearly 1 million in Burma (both emigrant communities much reduced today from these pre-war figures) and the half million in East and Southern Africa afford little relief to those two great countries' domestic problems. These and all other emigration outlets are virtually closed today.

Fourthly, Western military power ensured Europe's expanding economy of a steady supply of raw materials for her factories and a ready market for her surplus industrial production, thus enabling European factories to work at their most profitable rates. This led in turn to an astounding rise in the national incomes of the West which, in the most favourable cases, overtook and far surpassed the increase of the population. It was not merely a question of "explaining" colonial territories—this was by no means the rule and great wealth and profit often accrued to the imperial power and the colonial territory without any of the cruder methods implied by that meaningful term. But it was rather the result of an exceedingly fortunate historical break by which all these favourable factors worked at the same time in the same direction. And it was only after national standards of living had increased enormously that the birth rates of some Western nations fell away to such an extent that some sort of population stability was achieved. The West has by no means fully learnt to "live up to its responsibilities" in this matter and, where it does appear to have done so, the result was somewhat fortuitously achieved.

of the iron curtain between the races in South Africa, with the non-Europeans retiring more and more to the location to engage in African National Congress activity, and the whites doing nothing or at most working with such groups as the Civil Rights League (a small body roughly akin to the American Civil Liberties Union) and the fact-finding but basically non-political South African Institute of Race Relations. For whites and non-whites alike, there is no non-partisan home between the Civil Rights League and the African and Indian National Congress, and no political home between the United

Party and the remnants of the self-liquidated Communist Party. There lacks are serious. There is little immediate prospect for the emergence of salient leaders—outside the Congress or the Institute "liberals"—who would be capable of building either political or non-partisan bridges across this frightening gap. To be relevant and effective, such new organisations need to be large, but they must be courageous and strictly non-communist. One attempt was made several years ago in the Campaign for Right and Justice. But this failed, even under the leadership of the Rev Michael Scott.

DR. MALAN SEEKS APARTHEID MANDATE

IN view of the new and dangerous situation that had arisen, the Government would ask the electorate at the forthcoming general election for a renewed mandate for their apartheid policy, the Prime Minister, Dr. Malan, said at a meeting in the Stellenbosch Town Hall on Thursday night. By that the Government would stand or fall, he said.

The most important and urgent issue was undoubtedly the Colour question, he said. There were only two alternatives—equality or apartheid.

The White races in South Africa were not settlers, but a permanently established people. 'They must live here as a White race and maintain themselves as such, whatever the cost, or they must die here in dishonour or in honour. They choose the latter,' he said.

The Prime Minister appealed to the electorate to support the Government in its apartheid policy and ensure the Government a resounding victory. This, he said, was the only effective answer that could be given the slanderers and meddlers abroad, to the United Nations, to Russia, to India and not least of all to the defiance campaign in South Africa.

The Prime Minister said the most important and most urgent issue of the election was unquestionably the Colour problem.

'A stage has now been reached where South Africa is forced once more in that regard to decide its course. And it must be a definite course, so definitely and unambiguously defined by the people themselves, that it will not be gone back upon again. Indecision at this stage is fatal.'

'There are only two courses from which to choose which sooner or later must lead us to one of these two termini: equality. That is to say, the removal of all Colour discrimination, or apartheid, which seeks to allow and encourage on both sides of the Colour line free natural development in accordance with capacity and level of civilisation. They are not parallel, but directly opposite courses, the one preferred by the Nationalist and the other by the Liberalist. Between the two no middle course is possible, as is being advocated by the Leader of the Opposition.

'South Africa has remained too long in the labyrinth of uncertainty and indecision. And in the meantime the problem has increased hand over fist in extent and gravity, so that it has almost become too late for a solution. This is definitely our last chance. The forces against us have increased. The Communist has been busy continually and mostly underground, with his mischief-making both within our boundaries and throughout the whole of Africa.

Both the previous Government and the present Government have been seriously warned about this in Police reports. The unfortunate and unrealistic Gold Coast policy of the previous British Government has understandably also had its repercussions throughout the whole of the African Continent right up to Nyasaland and the two Rhodesias, and it has undoubtedly also had its influence in South Africa.

'The meddling and aggressive United Nations which was intended to help to preserve world peace has by the creation of a so called world opinion, energetically co-operated in inciting unrest and even revolt among the most primitive races. And in our own country the Liberalist element has more and more blatantly proclaimed that Colour discrimination in any form means nothing less than inhuman oppression.

'Obviously this has not fallen on deaf ears among the non-Europeans. They have been aroused to assert that even in their most extravagant demands they enjoy the support of the whole world, and even of all Europeans who support the Opposition parties and who are opposing apartheid.

'The demand that the White man must quit Africa has increased. A bloody scene followed in Kenya, and in our own country organised resistance movements resulting in some places in murder coupled with the most horrible and most barbaric atrocities.

'The Opposition attributes it all to deteriorating race relations for which the Government and its apartheid policy is said to be responsible, conveniently, and close their eyes to the fact that even during the regime of the previous Government with its anti-apartheid policy the same demands were made.

'They forget that General Smuts himself was violently attacked at U.N.O. because of his alleged policy of racial discrimination, that he had had to stand alone against a united and hostile front and that in spite of his worth to the organisation he was humiliated before the whole world.'

A fact which should not be lost sight of was that the land which had always belonged to the Natives as their traditional land, together with land which was later bought at State expense from Europeans and added to it, in the Union and in South West Africa, comprised an area of about 400,000 square miles—an area twice as big as France and seven times as big as England. The area included some of the very best land settlement areas of the country.

Another fact which should not be forgotten was that the Europeans in South Africa, unlike those in many other countries of the world where Europeans and non-Europeans live together, had established themselves permanently in South Africa.

'Apartheid is accepted even in Europe and throughout the world as being natural, obvious and right. And now we rightly ask why must it then in South Africa be regarded and condemned as a mortal sin?

'In spite of the all too outspoken episcopal wisdoms and authority the National Party's apartheid policy is no un-Christian. It is true that every Christian will readily accept the doctrine that all men are equal before God and therefore must be regarded and treated as human beings with human rights. But apart from the fact that it is difficult to see how that can be applied to equal franchise, the matter can certainly not end there.

'Apartheid is based also on another divine creative deed which they apparently ignore altogether, namely, on the natural differences between race and race, colour and colour, comprising as a rule also difference in nationhoods, languages and culture. Lack of appreciation of this last fact is, as a rule, as fatal as lack of application of the first.

'Apartheid as it appears from everything is no policy of oppression, neither in principle nor in its historical background, nor in its existing or proposed application.

'In South Africa the Natives are just as sure of their areas as any separate people in Europe. And in regard to assistance, the Europeans in South Africa stand far above any other nation in the world. For education, health and other social services they spend on the Natives seven times as much per capita than even the strong and liberal Britain does on Natives in her African territories and her Protectorates, including the Rhodesias.

'I have for the past 34 years been a Member of Parliament uninterceptedly, and for the most part in a more or less leading position, and I ought therefore to know how the word 'apartheid' arose and why. The fact is that there is no difference in meaning whatever between 'segregation' and 'apartheid.'

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

DR. MALAN APOLOGETIC ON APARTHEID

By JORDAN K. NGUMANE

THE Prime Minister was in an apologetic mood when he put up the case for apartheid at Stellenbosch on Thursday a fortnight back. His speech lacked that aggressive dominance which characterised his more confident statements of policy in the past. For an arch priest of apartheid his tone was in certain respects even conciliatory.

Now, nobody must read in this the hint that Dr. Malan has in any way abandoned his unshaking apartheid. What he happened clearly, both from the tone of the address and its subject matter, is that the apartheid-ers are on the defensive on both the internal and external frontiers of their apartheid policy. And this is a thing which should be Dr. Malan's case is intrinsically bad.

Right through his address, which was of major importance because it laid down the party line during the election, the Prime Minister is not reported to have done much by way of showing precisely what apartheid had achieved. In fairness to him, he took up a defensive attitude on all the three subjects—economic affairs, apartheid and sovereignty—which he discussed and which would be the major planks on the National Party platform. On the rising cost of living he, in effect, told the South Africans to thank their stars that they were not as badly off as people in other lands. No Government, he confessed, could have fared much better.

On the sovereignty issue, that is on the Malacca war against the Low Countries of the Land, Dr. Malan merely asked the White voters to trust his gavel.

It was the apartheid issue that he dwelt at length. He was a defensiveness which requires closer examination. Firstly, he said, his party would not have a new manifesto. It would ask the electorate for a new mandate endorsing the Government's apartheid policy. Let him state his case as reported in the Press:

"Apartheid seeks to encourage on both sides of the colour line free natural development in accordance with capacity and level of civilisation. Apartheid is both in conception and in application, not a specifically South African product and far from evil, something created by the National Party for political purposes. . . . Apartheid is accepted even in Europe and throughout the world as being natural, obvious and right. And now we rightly ask why must it in South Africa be regarded and condemned as a mortal sin. . . . Apartheid is no policy of oppression, neither in principle nor in its historical background, nor in its existing or proposed application. . . . Apartheid creates friendship and co-operation. . . . It indicates a separation without alienating necessarily legitimate and desirable contacts in both directions. Although it places reciprocal restrictions on both sides, it also serves as an effective protection against violation of one another's rights. It is the best guarantee for friendship and reciprocal helpfulness."

Unbelievable

My own experience as an African makes it impossible for me to believe the things Dr. Malan wants me and I suppose the world, to believe about apartheid. Anybody reading these passages from his Stellenbosch speech would wonder if it was not one of the locusts of Race Relations Liberals speaking for the National Party. At this very moment, making plans to rob the Coloureds of their right to "free natural development" by seeking to strike them off the common roll and giving them a fixed, permanent number of representatives in parliament, who most be Whites and whose numbers will not increase fairly as the Coloureds' capacity to administer their own affairs increased. By blocking Coloured development in this unnatural way Dr. Malan says apartheid promotes free natural development to all races!

He claims that apartheid is not a specifically South African creation. He is probably right. Race-hatred took a noticeably violent form in Germany only a few years ago. It was in Europe that pogroms were regularly organised against the Jews.

But this is not what the Prime Minister has in mind. He says Europe's map is divided into a number of sovereign independent states. A citizen of one is a foreigner in the others. But what the Prime Minister does here is to confuse nationality with race hatred. It is true that a Frenchman is treated as a foreigner in Holland—that is, if he has no desire to conform to the demands of Dutch citizenship. The door is always open for him to become a Dutchman, by the simple process of naturalisation. And, if he does not avail himself of this opportunity, nobody constrains and insults him in public places by putting up notices declaring "No Frenchman Allowed Here." He can go into any railway coach; any hotel; live where he likes so long as he complies with Dutch law.

Fundamental Difference

In South Africa, it does not matter how much of a Christian and civilised human being an African might be, public notices will loudly proclaim "Natives And Dogs Not Allowed Here." He will be permanently tormented and humiliated in the land of his birth and he made to feel by every means possible, that he is a hated inferior by the White Herrenvolk. This is the fundamental difference between the sense of nationality we see in Europe and the race-hatred for which apartheid stands. Both have nothing whatsoever in common. The intensest sense of nationality can have no race-hatred whatever whereas apartheid cannot thrive without its entire principle of race-hatred. When Dr. Malan says European nationality is synonymous with humane apartheid, he is confusing two different and unrelated concepts.

He goes farther. He wants to know precisely why apartheid is condemned as a mortal sin. The answer can be given readily. Apartheid stands for white supremacy, that is, the concentration of all political power in white hands. It denies the African the right to determine his own life. If it does not, apartheid should be working towards giving the Africans land they will own and run as their own country, land where they will be completely independent and sovereign; free to declare war and make peace with any other country in the world. If the apartheidists are honest in their talk about natural development this is the goal they should be talking about.

But there is a deeper reason why apartheid is a mortal sin in this country. By denying the African the right to influence legislation in a way to improve his own economic and living conditions it creates situations like the one revealed in a recent Institute of Race Relations survey. A team of experts was appointed over three years ago to investigate infant mortality among all the racial groups of South Africa in the larger cities of the Union. This is what these illustrious experts discovered (The mortality figures given are per thousand live births): Johannesburg: European 31.9, African 232.0, Coloured 85.51, Asiatic 75.12.

Port Elizabeth: European 32.34, African 181.37, Coloured 85.23, Asiatic 75.47.

Maryburg: European 23.9, African 273.8, Coloured 110.1, Asiatic 55.3.

Banoni: European 29.48, African 112.25, Coloured 126.05, Asiatic 57.96.

Port Elizabeth: European 37.76, African 174.85, Coloured 162.67, Asiatic 49.59.

According to these figures the average infant mortality rate for the whites in the larger cities is about 25-31 while that for the non-whites as a group is 149.7 per thousand live births. The figure for Africans alone is considerably higher, of course. This state of affairs is possible because political power is concentrated in white hands. The non-whites cannot influence legislation in the direction to reduce their high infant mortality rate. This is so because apartheid denies them the right to an effective say in how their country shall be governed. Because of this apartheid in its form, is directly responsible for the death of little non-whites in such large numbers. And that is precisely why we condemn apartheid as a mortal sin: it murders too many non-white babies!

Policy Of Oppression

Apartheid, contrary to the Prime Minister's claim, has proved that it is a policy of oppression. Its historical background leads us back to the slave days of the Old Cape Colony. When British liberalism abolished slavery, the Voortrekkers were so incensed about this that they left the Cape and drove into the hinterland where they continued to treat the man of colour either as their natural slave or inferior. As for its present application—you oppress a man when you deny him the right to say how he shall live and claim that you alone can look after his affairs better than he can and then proceed to impose a police tyranny over him, lock him up in rural locations with rigidly controlled entry and egress and urban ghettos where he has to live with his one over eighteen years of age. When you do that to a fellow human being, I repeat, you oppress him.

At least most Indians and most Africans raised their eyes in surprise to read that apartheid creates friendship and co-operation. A brief catalogue of incidents since 1948 will be revealing: 1949—Toda Afrikaans state. 1950-52—Apartheid Court declares on two separate occasions that the Government acted in good faith in the enforcement of which

South African society is based; Mr. Struensee and the United Party boycott the so-called High Court of Parliament; riots at Port Elizabeth, East London, Kimberley and Durban.

In addition the resistance movement is a striking reproach of the existing capitalist apartheid. If apartheid had been as friendly as Dr. Malan claims, there would have been no resistance movement. Even the white community is torn sharply into two groups. Dr. Malan calls that co-operation!

During the period 1918-53 blood was shed in the Union, racial strife intensified and social unrest stirred on a scale without parallel during any similar, peace-time period in the history of the Union. And apartheid was overwhelmingly responsible for this. Dr. Malan, in spite of this record, argues that all this was proof of the fact that apartheid held by a guarantee of friendship and co-operation towards co-operation. Comment is superfluous.

The lesson before the white voter is whether or not these things shall be continued and South Africa set firmly on the road to final road to disaster. Those who say South Africa must be destroyed will vote for the Melanites. We trust some men and women in the white camp—and may they be in the majority—will teach the Melanites that South Africa will have no more of the evil tyranny, a taste of which they gave South Africa simply in the years they were in power.

ANOTHER KENYA AFRICAN LEADER ARRESTED

AS the forth-month trial of Jomo Kenyatta and five other Africans on Mau Mau charges neared its end on Monday, the Government dropped a bombshell by arresting Kenyatta's successor as president of the Kenya African Union. He is Mr. F. W. Ododo, who is one of the African nominated members of the Legislative Council. It is officially stated that "before taking this 'serious step' the Governor, Sir Evelyn Baring, had satisfied himself that Ododo had been attempting to spread its violent methods into the Nyanza province."

An official statement says that "information received shows he has threatened a number of loyal Africans with the same fate as has been suffered by some law-breaking Africans. 'For reasons of security it is impossible to disclose the sources of this information. It must be emphasized that this action is taken against Mr. Ododo personally because of his connection with, and advocacy of, the violent attainment of certain objectives. It has not been taken on account of any political views he may hold or express, or his legitimate activities as a Member of the Legislative Council, or representative of the Africans of Nyanza.'"

Ododo's last public function was on Friday when he married Mr. D. N. Pitt, Q.C., defence counsel in the Kenyatta trial, with a monkey as cost in the presence of 3,000 Africans. This was described as a token of appreciation of Mr. Pitt's services for the Africans.

Dr. H. Bunsen Singh who recently passed his medical course at Glasgow University has returned to Durban. A welcome reception was given in his honour by the Springfield Hindu Sabha, he being a resident of Springfield.

AID NEEDED FOR INDIAN GARDENERS

MORE than 1,000 Indians whose market gardens were washed out in the January floods at Sea Cow Lake, Durban, face starvation.

Food is not coming in fast enough, says the South African Institute of Race Relations, which appeals most earnestly to Durban people and business firms to give immediately £5,000 worth of goods and £5,000 worth of fertilisers and seed, to relieve the very pressing distress in the area.

At the last distribution of free aid, only 20 families out of 210 could be helped—there was no more aid to go round. Basic foods, such as maize rice, peas, beans, sugar, oil and tea, were issued. At the previous allocation, on February 14, only 75 out of 200 families applying for aid could be helped.

The institute notes that a panel of doctors has been formed to give advice and help these needy in the distressed area.

So far, about 75 per cent. of the help given has come from the Indian community itself. At the last institute meeting in Durban, concern was expressed at the slowness of the response to the appeal for funds and food to relieve the distress and to enable the flooded-out market gardeners to rehabilitate their land and to replant crops without delay.

Food parcels have been given to those whose food stocks were already exhausted, but it appears now that not only are these relief stocks exhausted but that many families who had been holding out have now exhausted their own stocks. Altogether, 1,215 people were affected.

It is now urgent, says the Institute, that immediate help be given on a generous scale by the rest of the City. Damage estimated at £13,000 has been done at Sea Cow Lake, and rice, maize, rice, oil, beans, dholl, flour, sugar, tea, etc., worth £5,000—or the money to buy this food—is urgently needed, together with another £5,000 to buy fertilisers and seed.

The Durban City Treasurer has agreed to act as treasurer to the fund and cheques should be sent to him, made out to the Sea Cow Lake Flood Relief Fund. Those able to make larger donations of food, fertiliser or seed should get in touch with Councillor Mrs. Mary Asher or with Miss Webb at 7 Woodlands Road, Glenwood.

A depot for receiving such gifts has been set up at the Victoria League in Mercury Lane, but so far only a little sugar and some clothing has been received. The fund at present has little more than £100 to buy food for allocation.

Prime Minister Nehru Clarifies India's Foreign Policy

REPLYING to the Debate in the Council of States on the President's address at the joint session of the Indian Parliament Prime Minister Nehru clarified India's foreign policy. He said, "We have a strong desire to prevent catastrophes happening in the world, wars happening in the world and where possible to help in the general progress of humanity."

Mr. Nehru said that the policy that had been followed had been of friendship with all countries of the world. "We can say with confidence that there is no country which is really hostile to us. Some may be more friendly some a little less friendly."

Mr. Nehru said a country's foreign policy was a combination of a number of foreign policies apart from general outlook. In regard to different countries they had to deal with different circumstances. Generally speaking India's policy was continuation of what they had thought of during their struggle for independence though it had to be varied according to circumstances, he said.

Speaking of India's independent approach to world affairs Mr. Nehru denied the charge that India was tied to the Anglo-U.S. bloc. He said, "Tying up means giving up one's sovereign independent right of having a policy and following somebody else's policy. I do not think that any self-respecting person would like to say about his country that it should just follow someone else's dictates. It does not need much argument in the Council or outside in the country to justify that India is not tied up with any bloc."

Mr. Nehru referred to the method India had adopted for pursuing its policy and said, "We have tried not to join the new diplomatic game of shouting, defaming and cursing other countries. That does not mean we agree with what they say or do. We do not go about merely running down other countries even though we may think other countries are wrong."

Mr. Nehru referred to fear psychosis which had a terrible grip over the largest and biggest countries. He pointed out that India was less influenced by this fear psychosis.

Referring to talk of a third force Prime Minister Nehru said, "I am not able to understand what exactly it means. If it means something like a power bloc or military bloc then I just do not think it is possible apart from the fact that I do not consider it desirable. For a number of countries in Asia to club together and call themselves a third force or bloc in the military or other sense has no meaning whatsoever."

But in another sense, Mr. Nehru said, the idea could have some meaning. He preferred the term "third area" which "does not want war and positively which works for peace and co-operation with each other." He said, "Let us by all means work to bring together as many countries as possible who do not wish to encourage any tendency to war who wish to work for peace and who do not wish to line themselves with any bloc."

The biggest room in the world is the room for improvement.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 20TH MARCH, 1953

Travesty Of Justice

ON February 10, the Minister of the Interior, Dr. T. E. Dönges made a statement in the Union House of Assembly that if the Nationalist Government came into power after the Elections he intended introducing legislation prohibiting the entry of wives and minor children of Indians born and domiciled in the Union and that such legislation would be enforced retrospectively from February 10, the day on which this statement was made. This would of course mean nullifying the Smuts-Gandhi Agreement of 1914, which has been known as the Magna Charta of Indians of South Africa. For a solemn undertaking had been given under it that such Indians as stated above would be given the right to introduce their wives and minor children into the Union and that it would never be interfered with, and nullifying also the Capetown Agreement of 1927 under which a solemn undertaking had been given that the right of Indians born and domiciled in the Union, who wished to adopt the Western standard of life and to remain part of the permanent population of the Union, to lead a happy family life would be vouchsafed to them. It would mean a barefaced insult not only to the Indians of South Africa but to the whole of India. But the matter does not end there. A mere statement of a prospective legislation appears to have become the law of the land. Hitherto we have heard of a legitimate rights of a person being abolished by the stroke of the pen, but now under the present Government it can apparently be abolished by the mere word of the mouth.

There are many Indians born and domiciled in the Union whose wives and minor children are in India. The right of entry of a wife domiciled in the Union is never lost as long as her husband has not lost his domicile in the Union. Yet such women and their minor children and newly legally married wives of such persons are already being refused entry into the Union by the Immigration authorities, on instructions from Pretoria, we are told. Under the Immigration Act Indians desiring to introduce their newly wedded wives into the Union have to apply for a D.I. 91 form which after being duly filled in India has to be sent back to the Immigration authorities in the Union and upon that the authorities authorise the Passport authorities in India to grant passports to intending passengers. These things are done as a matter of course and so far there have been no difficulties. But since February 10, the day on which statement referred to above was made by Dr. Dönges, D.I. 91 forms issued even before that date are held up by the Immigration authorities and none are being issued since that date. Several such women, whose passports had been issued have arrived in the Union and we understand they have been allowed to enter on temporary permits. These women will be put to all the inconvenience and unnecessary expense of fighting their cases in Court which from an ordinary common-sense point of view must decide in their favour since there is no law in existence to prevent them from entering into the Union to join their husbands with their minor children. If this is not high-handedness, a travesty of justice, one would like to know what it is.

There is an election fever today throughout the country. A White Parliament will be established by a White electorate. Four times the number of non-Whites have practically no say in it all. That is why it makes it so convenient for a power-mad minority to disregard the sentiments of a voiceless and voiceless people and trample under foot their legitimate rights. Such a "democracy" may well be called "mobocracy," which eventually must lead this country and the world to disaster.

Hospitals And Colour Bar

EVERY non-European public man, at least, should make it a point to read the report of the Commission appointed some time ago by the Natal Administrator to inquire into the hospital services available in the province. The report is of particular interest to the non-Whites because it places the colour bar exactly where it belongs—on the scrap heap.

It starts by making the bold recommendation that non-White doctors should be appointed to any post for which they might be qualified in non-European hospitals. It urges that restrictions should be lifted as quickly as possible at King Edwards VIII and that every endeavour should be made to bring this about in as complete a form as possible by the end of 1953.

The report then tackles the White nurses who refuse to serve under non-White doctors. These, it says, should be offered the opportunity of transferring to other hospitals without any loss of advantage. Provincial policy, the report says, should be to staff non-European hospitals with non-White staff and where White nurses are employed, they should be people willing to work under non-White doctors.

The report is of very great importance for two very good reasons. In the first place it makes practical, commendable recommendations for combating the disaster to non-White health. One of the greatest aids to disease is the shortage of doctors and nurses among the non-Whites. Up to now, a hospital like King Edward VIII could prefer to carry on with less doctors than it requires so long as White doctors were not available. And, even where the Superintendent were willing to call in non-White doctors the White nurses could effectively veto his decision and prevent non-Europeans from giving much-needed help to men of their own race in a non-White hospital.

If the recommendations under review are accepted—and they stand a good chance of being accepted by the practical and intelligent men on the Provincial Council—they will reverse this state of affairs. Natal non-Whites will have all the doctors they can have at the moment and more in the years to come.

The second good reason is that the report deals the death-blow to a particularly vicious and senseless form of the colour bar. And, by doing that remove an unpleasant blot on the name of our White countrymen and reveals them in light where they should be; where they should be seen as men and women who reason and have a good measure of goodwill.

The report, if its recommendations are applied, will place Natal in the position to show the rest of South Africa that colour prejudice can be removed from our national life and that this will not in any way endanger anybody—least of all, the Whites. On the contrary, the abolition of the colour but in the field under discussion will bring about a good deal of goodwill between White and non-White. And that is precisely what wise statesmanship and a sound national policy should aim at producing.

The non-Whites, for their part, will always be ready to show that when it comes to serving mankind, they are just as good, as loyal and as proficient as anybody else. For, what the non-White people demand today, is not that the Whiteman should be humiliated and destroyed. They demand the right to serve their country in every field where they are best qualified to serve—be it in Parliament, the Cabinet, the mines, industry or in the hospitals. This is a demand which no just man can refuse and lay his hand on his breast, satisfied that he has done the right thing.

We look forward to seeing these recommendations implemented with the minimum of delay because they are so epoch making in the present, unhappy times.

great desire that the present position should continue and that they remain a British Protectorate."

Kikuyu Flee To Uganda

The Uganda Government announced that an increasing number of Kikuyu have been entering the territory recently from Kenya. The announcement accompanied the publication of a Bill designed to give the Government control of these immigrants by amendment of the Immigration Ordinance.

Hitherto Africans from all parts of East Africa were entitled to enter Uganda freely. The new Bill, which will be discussed on March 27, gives the Governor power to declare any class of Africans outside Uganda subject to the Immigration Ordinance, which means they must register entry into Uganda and may be refused. The Government intends to prove completely that they are desirable immigrants. The Bill will be effective for one year initially and will be subject to annual renewal.

NOTES AND NEWS

Plan For Better Race Relations

Relations

THE European public in South Africa should be re-educated about race relations as soon as possible, said Mrs. H. M. McGrath, first vice-president of the Johannesburg branch of the National Council of Women, speaking at a branch meeting. "The times we live in are dangerous, and the small band of Europeans in South Africa are all groping to find a solution." She said that when there were two cultures one in advance of the other, the latter invariably disintegrated. South Africa had gone on too long hoping that the problem would sort itself out. Ways and means had to be found to make a contented African urban population, and the fact that women and children had been eliminated from African urban life was "sowing the seeds of the most depraved form of immorality." Mrs. McGrath said the defence campaign did not include lawless people. The Secretary-General of the World Committee of Churches had said that for the African to try to improve his position "is some form of resistance." Social and residential segregation was morally defensible, but economic segregation was not. The institution of migratory labour wrecked African family life. "To start on the right path to race relations, the European people must have a recognition of human dignity, irrespective of colour or race. We must search our hearts for our own personal frame of mind."

Dr. Limbada's Expulsion

The Natal Indian Congress in a Press statement stated Congress lodges its strongest protest at the action taken by the Minister of Justice against Dr. A. I. Limbada of Dundee prohibiting him from attending gatherings and preventing his leaving the Dundee district. The Minister has taken action under the Riotous Assemblies Act and the Suppression of Communism Act, measures which make serious inroads on the liberties of the individual. The Natal Indian Congress does not subscribe to the views of Dr. Limbada who has been expelled from Congress because of his violation of Conference Resolution, but Congress firmly believes that every person in South Africa has the right to freedom of movement and to free speech. Since that fundamental right of Dr. Limbada has been attacked Congress voices its opposition to the action taken by Mr. Swart. The Minister of Justice has imposed restrictions on a large number of peoples in South Africa and Congress reiterates its demand for the removal of these restrictions.

Own Indaba

Mr. D. J. Potgieter, Nationalist candidate for Vryheid, told a meeting on the steps of a farmhouse at Gluckstad that total separation of the European and non-European races was the ideal of the Nationalist Party. Asked what would happen if it was found that an area set aside for a particular race was too small, Mr. Potgieter replied: "Once you have given them the area, it is their own indaba if the area becomes too small."

Basuto Against Incorporation

The Bishop of Basutoland, addressing a meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, said that it was the desire of the Government of South Africa that Basutoland should be incorporated within the Union. "From my experience of the Basuto people during the last two years, he said, 'I would say that, if not 100 per cent. at least 99 per cent. of the people living in Basutoland are against any incorporation of their territory within the Union. It is their

"RACE RESTRICTIONS SHOULD BE LIFTED"

BECAUSE of the urgent need for medical aid among the very large non-European population of Natal here should be no restriction on grounds of race in any non-European hospital still to be opened.

This is one of the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry into the hospital services of Natal, contained in a report tabled in the Natal Provincial Council.

The report continued: "From the opening of any such hospital, non-European medical practitioners shall be eligible for any appointment for which they are duly qualified."

"Restrictions should be lifted as rapidly as possible at King Edward VIII, and every endeavour should be made to bring about this change as completely as possible by the end of 1953, by which time the presence of students of the new non-European medical school must be faced."

"In other Provincial hospitals the rule for the time being should remain as at present (i.e. within the discretion of the Medical Superintendent.) At the end of five years this position should be reviewed."

"Nurses who are unwilling to accept the position at King Edward VIII should be offered the opportunity of transferring to another hospital without loss of salary, seniority or status."

"Provincial policy should be definitely to staff all non-European hospitals as rapidly as possible with (a) non-European staff (b) European nursing staff who have no objection to working with non-European medical practitioners."

"The question of special allowance for such European nurses should receive consideration. In the meantime there should be propaganda and endeavour to make the change as harmonious as possible," says the report.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

THIS MYTH OF ORIENTAL FECUNDITY-II

By C. W. M. GELL

MY article of last week suggested that the growth of almost all modern populations passes through three phases: (1) the primitive stage of high birth and high death rates in which the Malthusian checks of famine, disease and periodical disasters more or less operate to maintain a stable population whose growth (if any) takes place at a manageable rate even for undeveloped economies; (2) a period of slightly increased birth and vastly reduced death rates due largely to the impact of medical and sanitary measures, which leads to a tremendously fast increase in population; (3) a period, which of course can only be reached where the standard of living has risen even more than the size of the population, when economic factors begin to operate towards reducing the birth rate and thus contribute towards a more stable population.

What I have just written and what I wrote last week are necessarily simplified accounts of very complex processes. The general lines of these processes are more or less agreed between the experts subject, as all generalisations are, to many qualifications in particular cases. But the experts by no means yet agree as to what causes these processes to operate when and as they do—in particular, there is no certainty yet as to exactly what factors really operate to reduce the birth rate in settled and developed economies where the stability (of which Dr. Malherbe thought we Westerners had learnt the secret) is at last precarious and liable to sudden reversal by a Hitler falling for more herrenvolk as "cannibal-fodder."

Two things can, however, be said with reasonable accuracy. First, that poverty and high fertility always go together, the latter only leading to sharp population increases where factors are simultaneously operating to reduce the death rate. Perversely enough, a high incidence of disease also seems to stimulate reproduction. Secondly, that falling birth rates are only normally achieved voluntarily where a high level of material prosperity and political stability have been reached. One may confirm these two conclusions from a study of European populations where the various emotional interpretations so commonly applied in Asian problems are not involved. Such study shows that high fertility even still remains in poor rural economies (such as Spain and South Italy, where it is no more due to "Latin sexuality" than Asia's difficulties are due to the unconfinement of Asians) and that population stability has been best achieved in the wealthiest communities (Britain, France, Scandinavia)—but even there, primarily among the leisured classes. Significantly enough, the poorest classes of Britain, France etc. demonstrably authorized the middle and upper classes.

Coming back to Asia, no one with personal experience will deny that a reduction in the birth rate would contribute to the raising of the standard of life. India's Five Year Plan hopes to increase the national income by £750 millions or about £2 per head from the present level of about £10 per head per year (cf. U.S.A. about £500, Britain about £250, British Dominions and Scandinavia about £200, Western Europe £130, Russia and European satellites £100, Japan £30, China and S.E. Asia perhaps £11). But two-fifths (or 16%) of that £2 will be swallowed up in feeding the extra 2½ million mouths by the end of five years. India is proceeding on the assumption that the first task is to put her agriculture and land reform on a sound basis. At present she is a food-deficit area. That must be overcome and also the peasants shown that by the use of improved seeds and implements, by co-operation and the consolidation of holdings fewer hands are actually needed to produce more food. In all peasant economies unpaid family labour is a much prized asset which itself contributes to the vicious circle of poverty and high fertility. Secondly, India is laying the basis of an industrial revolution to follow her agrarian one and absorb the surplus labour not needed on the land. If her hopes are fulfilled, this first plan will lay the firm foundation for much faster progress in subsequent plans. To my mind, the first right to treat population control as a necessary but subsidiary measure which will only become fully effective as the standard of education and living rises. This order of priorities recognises that population increase is not but only one—even if the total numbers involved look so spectacular in countries the size of India and China—of the causes of the present Asian crisis, that it is a symptom as well as a cause of a very complex situation.

In conclusion I will draw attention to the astonishing extent to which this whole demographic process is presented in miniature in South Africa. Discounting White immigration and an error on the Indian returns for the 1946 census, the rate of annual increase of our various race groups during 1946-51 was: Europeans 1.6%, Indians and Coloureds 3.8%, Africans 1.8%.

The latest vital statistics (1949) show per thousand population:

Birth Rate: Europeans 26.9, Indians 41.4, Coloureds 46.4.

Death Rate: Europeans 9.1, Indians 12.3, Coloureds 23.1.

Rate of Increase: Europeans 17.8, Indians 29.1, Coloureds 25.3.

No comprehensive figures are available for Africans.

Now, Dr. Malherbe quite correctly included our European population in South Africa among the "few of the West who have learnt the lesson of how to maintain a roughly stationary population." With a low birth and low death rate the Europeans are clearly in population phase (3). Thus we should expect from people whose average annual income per head is somewhere between £200 and £300—a healthy and wealthy race group displaying all the obvious symptoms of a class anxious to preserve its economic prosperity (e.g. low birth rate, industrial colour bar, reluctance to allow immigration etc.) Last week I listed four special factors which enabled the West to meet and largely overcome its population troubles—the gradual impact of modern medicine, industrial and agrarian revolutions concurrent with falling death rates, plenty of room for expansion, steady supply of raw materials and open markets in dependent territories. All these four factors have operated conspicuously in favour of the Europeans in South Africa, where abundant gold and diamonds (followed by platinum, chrome, asbestos and other minerals in almost unlimited world demand) rescued a backward, pastoral economy from the stagnation which some still wish to revive and where a good supply of cheap non-European labour more than made up for some raw material shortages.

The two small minority groups of Indians and Coloureds, comprising just over ten per cent of the population, have an annual average income per head ranging from about £20 among the Durban Indian labourers to £50 or so among the wealthier commercial classes. (These average figures naturally exclude the really rich merchants whose incomes per head of family may run into several hundred pounds, just as the European averages excluded those whose incomes per head may run into thousands.) Both because Indians and Coloureds are rather better off than the bulk of the Africans and more especially, because they are principally urban communities, they have been able to obtain some of the benefits of modern medicine. This has lowered their death rates. But the main body of both groups is kept close to destitution by the industrial colour bar and its ramifications on the one side and the competition of the more numerous urban Africans on the other. Poverty, malnutrition, disease, homelessness and other degrading consequences of their thwarted lives help to maintain the high fertility rate that we should expect to find in such conditions. The result is that Indians and Coloureds are sort of indefinitely suspended in population phase (2); and it all becomes those who are responsible for perpetuating the unfavourable economic and social conditions in which the "explosive fertility" of the victims.

The condition of the Africans is a complicated one about which hard facts are difficult to obtain. Clearly the urban workers live under similar conditions to Indians and Coloureds, with the additional handicaps imposed by influx control and the migrant labour system. These probably operate to check fertility. And, despite honourable local exceptions, little has yet been done to apply modern medicine and sanitation to the more than two-thirds of the African population that still lives scattered in the rural areas and Reserves. Some hospital and dispensary facilities for Africans are even more scarce proportionately than for Indians and Coloureds. T.B., V.D. and infant mortality exercise their benign Malthusian effects on a pretty widespread scale. My own conclusion is that by and large the African community is still in population phase (1).

But the conscience of mankind will not allow it to remain there. Medical and other welfare measures will reach out to Africans, however slowly. Even if all our Europeans were thoroughly callous, which despite some public utterances they are not (though over-sympathetic about their responsibilities), they could not finally allow Africans to die out from T.B. without endangering themselves and their labour supply. So that one day on all our attack on the African death rate is inevitable and then this country will face its real population problem. It will dwarf the present outcry against "oriental fecundity" on our midst. And there is no escape from that problem by pretending it is not coming or that we can avoid extending welfare measures to Africans. That is the way of our indigenous bird, the ostrich.

We shall need to face it as a white people sincerely seeking to

If the standard of living of all sections and classes so that we may hasten the transition from phase (2) to phase (3). For I agree with Dr. Malherbe that rapidly expanding majority population, denied both geographical surpluses and economic advance, will seek one of these solutions by violence if all other alternatives to increasing misery are closed to them. That is as true of Asia today in world politics as it could be true of South Africa tomorrow in the sphere of race relations and equal opportunity. There had to be either revolution against squalor and undernourishment, assisted by the wealthy and more fortunate, or the undernourished and overfed will eventually join the ranks of those who preach class warfare as the only alternative to mass starvation. Who could blame them?

By JOHN GILD

THE CHOICE

AN unusually fair-minded article on the passive resistance campaign, by the Johannesburg correspondent of the conservative London weekly, 'The Economist,' in the issue of March 7, concludes: "The resistance leaders would like to see the United Party win the elections in April. If, however, the National Party is returned to power they will face a crisis. They will then have to choose between calling the campaign off and going to prison for years. Whatever their choice may be, the result cannot be as bad as non-European unrest. The real danger is that repressive measures will merely drive the unrest underground, to reappear in the form of violence. For South Africa, the choice may be not between violence and passive resistance but between reforms and the emergence of a South African Mau Mau." Here is recognition of the possibility that if Congress were destroyed or seriously undermined, the alternative opened up would be political terrorism. All who realise the folly of isolated acts of violence must hope that that situation will not develop.

Law And Disorder

"Law and order are no doubt admirable things in their way, but they should not be bracketed together because the worse disorders that ever occurred in the world were due to laws, unjust laws." I was delighted to find this quotation in Hansard. The words came from a member of the British House of Commons, Henry Labouchere, who was an Independent 60 years ago. They were quoted to the House of Assembly last month by Mr. Leo Lovell. Mr. Lovell is, incidentally, one of the half dozen best men in the House. An attorney from London, he took a leading part in the Labour Party's fight against the Swart Bills. The Labour Party deserves great credit for its strong opposition to the Bills. It also deserves praise for improving its official policy towards non-Europeans. In January last at its annual conference in Johannesburg, the Party adopted this new policy. As I read it, the Party now stands in effect for the abolition of the p. s. laws. It also stands for the extension of the present system of communal representation. Ten members would be elected by non-Europeans (Does this include Indians?) who have passed Standard VI. I wish the Party had taken its courage in both hands and come out in support of a non-racial franchise on a common roll. That principle is now favoured by the white liberal groups recently formed in a few centres. Sooner or later these groups must make common cause, if not an alliance, with Labour if a few seats are to be wrested from the United Party.

Only Two Worlds?

American foreign policy is beginning to get tough. Stalin's death is likely to accelerate this tendency because the Republicans will tell themselves that Russia is now more vulnerable to attack. Never in human history has war by a great power been so openly prepared over so long a period against another great power. For that reason alone the coming war may be known as "the cold war." Mr. Dulles urged Congress last month to pass a resolution supporting the doctrine of liberating the enslaved people on the Soviet borders. This mischievous doctrine has alarmed a substantial section of public opinion in Britain. Having been badly weakened by two world wars, Britain is hardly eager to take part in a third, which might well destroy the British Isles. There is another aspect, too. It is well put by 'The New Statesman': "Mr. Dulles seems not to have considered the fact that his doctrine would automatically break up the British Commonwealth. India, Pakistan and Ceylon are resolutely anti-Communist, but they are also utterly opposed to an anti-Communist crusade. Mr. Dulles's picture of two worlds and no more than two worlds is a myth. If indeed the world were to divide into two warring camps, the fight would not be between a Free World and the USSR, it would be turned into a racial war in which the coloured peoples would do to the Soviet Union for support." If this prediction is sound, it is simply an additional reason why we must not allow "peace" to become an obscene word.

Witch Hunt At UN

Mr. Trygve Lie has behaved abominably in failing to protect American members of the UN Secretariat involved in the current witch-hunt for alleged communists. The atmosphere in the United States has been going from bad to worse. There are plenty of people, many in high places, who look under their beds every night for "communists." That is bad enough, but what is much worse is the effect of the campaign on UN. The Charter expressly lays down that international civil servants are expected—and indeed they take an oath accordingly—to serve UN and not the country they come from. Now the Secretary-General has dismissed a score of Americans who declined, before an American inquiry, to answer the question whether they had in the past ever been connected with the Communist Party. Those hauled before the committee of inquiry defended themselves by claiming the protection of the Fifth Amendment to the American Constitution. This says that no person can be compelled to answer any question that might involve him in a criminal case. The United States Supreme Court has itself held that the assertion of this constitutional right is not equal to an admission of guilt. On the contrary, in one of its most famous decisions the Court described the right as one "of great value, a protection to the innocent, though a shelter to the guilty, and a safeguard against heedless, unfounded or tyrannical prosecutions." Once a man answers the question, experience shows that he can get himself deeply involved with countless other issues and will end, like Professor Owen Lattimore, by facing a charge of perjury. So lawyers advise their clients not to answer the question. It is for this refusal, i.e. for exercising a right assured by law, that Mr. Lie has dismissed twenty of his staff. The morale of the rest of the staff was shattered. Nor is that the end of the matter. All Americans at UN are now under the most severe inquiry about everything they ever did. It is grim to see UN deny to its own staff the human rights it has in theory proclaimed for all mankind. Let it be clear that this tragedy is directly and admittedly due to American pressure which seems to be blind to everything but American interests.

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of 'The Christian Century')

IV

UNDER THE SOUTHERN CROSS

OF all the institutions in South Africa dealing with racial problems the Christian church is the greatest disappointment without also being, as in America, the greatest hope. This concern by the South African church for the status of the African and other non-white peoples has not been exactly dormant, the church outside the mission field has produced few results or even symbols of effort—except Michael K. Osei, and he is denounced by most churchmen in South Africa almost as much as by all politicians.

The four largest denominations in South Africa are the Dutch Reformed, the Anglican (called the Church of the Province of South Africa), the Methodist and the Roman Catholic. There are almost twice as many white South Africans as the Dutch Reformed Church as in all other Protestant churches together. Of a total of 1,800,000 members of the Dutch Reformed Church in 1946, 1,278,000 were Europeans (white), 267,000 Africans and 200,000 Coloureds (half-caste mixtures). The Church of the Province, with a total of 1,114,000 communicants, had only 375,000 Europeans and 184,000 Coloureds, but 553,000 Africans. The Methodist churches had 1,000,000 African members of a total membership of 1,379,000 with only 785,000 Europeans and 90,000 Coloureds. The Lutheran, Presbyterian, Congregationalist and Baptist had in 1946 a total membership of 465,000, 264,000, 215,000 and 100,000 respectively. In addition, there are an estimated thousand separatist churches of Africans with an estimated membership of at least three-quarters of a million.

Of the non-Christians there are 500,000 Jews, and at least 153,000 Hindus, 57,000 Mohammedans, including the Indians and the Cape Malays, and 1,392 Buddhists. These figures do not include almost half of the 8.5 million Africans in South Africa who are classed as "heathens" in the religious census.

Dutch Reformed

The powerful Dutch Reformed Church in South Africa has three branches and its own missionary movement. The smallest, with 76,000 adherents, is the Gereformeerde Kerk van Suid-Afrika. It is the most conservative and separated itself from the larger Dutch Reformed body in the Cape Colony in 1859. The Nederduitse Hervormde Kerk, with 127,000 adherents, was the first state church in the Transvaal and initially looked to Holland rather than to the Cape for guidance. The principal "Dutch" church is the Nederduitse Gereformeerde Kerk (N.G.K.) with more than a million European adherents and with separate synods set up for each of the four provinces of the Union.

The Dutch Reformed Church is based upon Calvinism with its strong emphasis upon predestination. As the Boers—descendants of the early Dutch, French and German immigrants—left the Cape, beginning in 1835 and trekked northward across the veld with their Bibles, their experience in overcoming nature and the hitherto seemed similar to the Old Testament experiences of the Israelites. They considered themselves and their white race as the elect and the republic they were founding as the Promised Land. Their new Jerusalem was under divine destiny and they were the superior race. In the intervening century, the Dutch Reformed Church in South Africa has been pretty much oblivious to advances in science, politics and theology.

When the Voortrekkers established the Transvaal Republic in 1858, an article in their constitution clearly stated, "The people will permit no placing of coloured inhabitants on an equal footing with white, neither in church nor in state. During the previous year, the Cape Synod decided that "the congregations already established or still to be established from amongst the heathens shall enjoy their Christian privileges in a separate building or establishment." In 1881 the Dutch Reformed Mission Church was organized and ever since the work with Africans and Coloureds has been on a separate basis with the minimum of contact even among the clergy.

Close To Its People

The Dutch Reformed Church has always been close to its people, never more so than during those years after the defeat in the Anglo-Boer War (1899-1902) when the church played a tremendous part in the development of Afrikaner nationalism and the Nationalist Party. It is no accident that Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan is a Dutch Reformed predikant (pastor). He studied theology at Stellenbosch University near Capetown and then went to Utrecht University in Holland for further theological studies, writing his thesis on "The Idealism of Berkeley." On his return to South Africa in 1905, he served several churches before becoming editor of the Nationalist newspaper, Die Burger. He has never lost his Calvinistic orientation, his first editorial being entitled, "For the glory of God," and his first important achievement as a politician being the formulation of a new clause in the Union's constitution reading, "The people of the Union acknowledge the sovereignty and guidance of Almighty God."

Quite independent of Dr. Malan, the various synods of the Dutch Reformed Church have emphasized the doctrine of separation under God. In 1941 the Lydenburg Ring of the church urged all parents and students not to support the Witwatersrand and Cape Town universities as long as they continued to grant African students "privileges which would inevitably lead to the complete abolition of the colour line and the encouragement of miscegenation." In 1942 a synod in Pretoria protested against the proposed arming of African soldiers in the event of an attack by Japan, asserting that to arm non-Europeans was "contrary to the principles of the Word of God which are based on racial separateness." A decade later the Pretoria synod criticized the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, asserting that "everyman should be treated according to what God ordained him after the pattern of inequality which He himself created."

Dutch Reformed Racial Policy

In order to make a decisive collective judgment on racial policy, a congress of the Dutch Reformed Federated and Mission Churches was held in Bloemfontein in April 1950. Four hundred predikants and laymen were present, but all white, since "we as whites were not agreed among ourselves." While the papers presented at this congress and the findings have not yet been fully published in English, the printed summary indicated a clear endorsement of social, industrial and territorial apartheid, and for political reasons. This emphasis on territorial segregation was even too strong for Dr. Malan who later criticized it as follows: "What they, the Dutch Reformed churches, resolved was that we should have total or complete apartheid. Well if one could attain total territorial apartheid, if it were practicable, everybody would admit that it would be an ideal state of affairs. It is not practicable and it does not pay any party to endeavour to achieve the impossible."

There are a few Dutch Reformed pastors and laymen who, more from principle than practicality, disagree even more strongly with total apartheid than Dr. Malan. Some are members of the South African Institute of Race Relations, yet the full weight of the Dutch Reformed Church is behind the racism of Dr. Malan and his Nationalist Party. Prof. G. B. A. Gerdeener of the Stellenbosch Theological Faculty is president of the South African Bureau on Racial Affairs (SABRA) which is a front of Afrikaner racist ideology. The committee on race relations of the Cape Province synod in 1951 candidly stated, "Whatever all of us, Afrikaners, as well as English-speaking people, practice racial segregation, let us also honestly profess it." The good predikants and their parishioners honestly profess segregation, practice it, and justify it abundantly by quoting Scripture.

The Nationalists in their political activities try to appeal to religion whenever it suits their purposes. In 1948 the platform declared, "The Party wishes all non-Europeans to be strongly encouraged to make the Christian religion the basis of their lives and will assist churches in this task in every possible way." The Party, however, warns "Churches and societies which undermine the policy of apartheid and propagate doctrines foreign to the nation will be checked." The Nationalist's secret society, the Broederbond, also appeals to religious impulses, as in its statement issued in 1944: "The Afrikaner Broederbond was born out of the deep conviction that the Afrikaner nation was planted in this country by the hand of God and it desired to continue to exist as a nation with its own character and calling."

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

DRC AND CONFERENCE OF CHURCH LEADERS

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

ACCORDING to Press reports the Federal Missionary Council of the Dutch Reformed Churches already has sent out preliminary notices to heads of the Protestant Churches, prior to inviting them formally to a conference of Church leaders and representatives which, it is proposed, will be held in Pretoria on November 17, 18 and 19, 1953.

It will be remembered that not very long ago the Dutch Reformed Church decided to convene this conference. The preliminary announcement indicates that arrangements for its session are already far advanced. This is something for which to be truly grateful, coming as it does from the DRC, which most non-European regard, rightly or wrongly, as largely in sympathy with the apartheid policy of the Malan Government.

The preliminary announcement suggests that invitations should be sent to the heads of all leading Protestant Churches and Missionary Societies in South Africa and that bigger ones should be asked to send three and the smaller ones two representatives each. These Churches are said to be about twenty-five in number. Emphasis is laid on the need for the heads of these Churches and Missionary Societies attending in person where after this is possible rather than sent deputies.

The objects of the proposed conference are, in the words of the preliminary announcement: "To bring together the leaders and representatives of the Afrikaans-speaking and English-speaking Churches and Missionary Societies in South Africa for informal consultation and, if possible, agreement on fundamental Christian principles with a view to united planning and action, more particularly in matters relating to the extension of the Kingdom of God amongst the non-European in South Africa and, especially, to create a sense of our unity in Christ."

The general subject of the conference will be: "The Application of Christian Principles in our Non-racial Land." Owing to its restricted title, it is probable that the conference will focus on the application of Christian principles to the non-racial issue. It is difficult to see how the conference will do more than be a useful reminder to the Whites that they are Christians and that they should not forget the non-Whites.

Afrikaans and by all, unitedly, as Christians.

Such a conference may very well turn South Africa away from the path of disaster to a better and nobler future worthy of its people and of its culture and beliefs. If it starts with the right foot forward. The IF is a very big one for although on the face of it the conference is a genuine Christian attempt to bring Christian unity to bear on a situation in which Christ's teachings are perverted in parliamentary enactments, the action itself is a far too vague and precisely who shall be allowed to attend.

I must explain before proceeding further that this article is written exclusively with the desire both to encourage the conference's sponsors in what I genuinely believe to be a good step in the right direction as well as to make constructive criticisms and suggestions which might help them in reaching the end they say they have in view.

First of all, it is a matter for regret that the announcement proposes limiting the invitations to the Protestant Churches. There might be very good reasons for this—the most important of these being that as a first step the Conference would more readily agree on fundamentals, composed as it will be, of men of Protestant persuasion. If it is a first step, that is, something which might pave the way for a later conference of all Christians, including the Roman Catholics, to "create the sense of our unity in Christ, men of Goodwill will wish them all possible success.

But then, if the conference might be the beginning of a campaign against Roman Catholicism—which is doing magnificent work in its own right for which the cause of Christ in this country—the foundations on which the conference shall have been established that be so. (I was brought up a Protestant and now a Protestant and have no occasion of any sort with Roman Catholic Church.)

Secondly, the announcement mentions "leaders and representatives of the Afrikaans-speaking and English-speaking Churches and Missionary Societies." There is a disturbing ambiguity in this. The leaders of these groups are very largely Whites—at least this is the case in the Afrikaans-speaking Churches. The phrasing of the expression under discussion does not make it clear beyond all shadow or doubt whether the conference shall be exclusively White or non-White.

shall be invited. One wishes that point were made quite clear for as the composition of the conference depends, not only its own success but the effect its decision will have on the country and on the world.

The English-speaking Churches and Missionary Societies count a number of distinguished Africans among their leaders and representatives. Mr. Albert J. Luthuli, for example, is an outstanding leader in his Church as well as a very important member of the Christian Council of South Africa. By a singularly happy coincidence Mr. Luthuli is (as Congress President-General) at the same time the most important leader and political spokesman of the Union's ten million Africans. If, because of his colour, he is debarred from the conference, the conference will be robbed of the wisdom, knowledge, experience and guidance of a man singularly equipped in these unhappy times to help in the creation of "a sense of our unity in Christ."

There are two other reasons against making the conference a Whites-only affair. The exclusion of the non-Whites will leave most people with the suspicion that the conference is a sinister apartheid move to create White political unity under the guise of working for Christian unity. White political unity advocated by apartheid is an evil thing because it will be based on race and for this reason will corrupt Christian teachings.

Secondly, the proposed programme will discuss subjects on which the African alone can speak with authority because of his intimate knowledge of the conditions under which he lives. To discuss what the African Christians can do to strengthen Christian unity where apartheid has sown hatred and division without him would not make much sense.

The third criticism is that the preliminary announcement does not mention the Indian and Coloured Christians. The subject to be discussed at the conference affects every South African, regardless of race. We might leave the politicians to split hairs in efforts to explain away their desire to drive a wedge between the Africans and the other non-Whites. But such political tricks have no place whatsoever both in the hearts as well as in the programmes of Christian men and women. To avoid every possible cause for misunderstanding, it would be a genuinely good thing both to mention Indian and Coloured Christians in literature on the conference, as well as to invite them to attend, if they so desire.

The Dutch Reformed Churches are in a very unfortunate position vis-à-vis the non-Whites at the moment. They are believed to be somewhat behind the tyranny and trade racial policies of the present Government. And very many (even they might do inadvertently, with no desire to hurt the non-Whites) are often read as apartheid mischief. Men of goodwill every where will want to see the conference go as far as it can in creating, at least, Christian unity among all our racial groups. That is why we seem a little conspicuous about the things which, in other times, would not receive the attention they now deserve.

ENTRY OF INDIAN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

THE following letter by Mr. C. W. M. GILL appeared in 'The Star' (Johannesburg) dated February 28:-

Sir,—I am grateful to your Research Bureau for answering my question as to the clause of the Immigration Regulation Act of 1953 which permits the entry of Indian women and children.

By introducing the irrelevant subject of polygamy (which has never been an important matter among our South African Indians with their adverse masculinity rate) your Bureau has, however, managed to obscure the fact that the "rickles" of Indian women and children only assumed noticeable proportions after their right of entry was explicitly re-affirmed by the Malan-Sasiri Agreement of 1927.

Even so, the actual figures (as supplied by the Commissioner for Asiatic Affairs, Pretoria) for the last twenty-five years of 7,949 women and 9,138 children conclusively prove that this small concession has played no significant part in the growth of the Indian population.

The reason that so few Indians have availed themselves of the concession is not the safeguard against polygamy but the expense of bringing wives from India. Contrary to popular belief, only perhaps fifteen per cent. of our Indian population is fairly well-to-do. It is not, therefore, surprising that imported wives have averaged only 314 a year.

The Nationalists' intention of repudiating soother clause of a pact negotiated between two virtually sovereign states conforms yet again to the pattern of so much of their racial legislation—the infliction of small, vote-catching injustices on politically impotent non-Europeans that contribute nothing to the practical solution of the problems they profess to tackle.—Yours faithfully, C. W. M. GILL.

THE LATE MISS MARGARET B. WILSON

(By Rev. B. L. E. SIGAMONEY)

MISS MARGARET B. WILSON, a great Missionary worker, died at her home at Branton, Somerset on December 9, 1952 in her sleep. Her brother who was at one time Archbishop of Lilome in Central Africa, died a few weeks before her.

Miss M. B. Wilson came out as a Missionary in 1913 to the Africans at St. Aidan in Ladysmith where she was associated with the late Miss Cook. Miss M. B. Wilson's great work was among the Indians.

In 1913 she became Headmistress of the St. Aidan Indian Girls' School at Geydenham where she did magnificent work. Every home of the children at her school was regularly visited, and through her influence secured many to Christ. She went to England and on her return stayed at St. Aidan's Hospital, corner of Leopold and Orama Streets with that great Missionary lady Miss Olive M. Cole. She now did purely Missionary work visiting Indian Christians living at Westworth and Clairwood. She used to trudge along on the sandy paths under the burning sun, having for her lunch bananas and monkey nuts as the late Mahatma Gandhi. She made herself as "one of the people." In 1920 there was the strike of the Indian furniture workers. Hundreds of them were out of work. She assisted in helping to feed them. The Mission did not pay her for this work as she did this in an honorary capacity.

Living at St. Aidan's Hospital, which was in the heart of the Indian quarter in those days, she carried out her arduous Missionary work, taking Christ with her to the humblest of Indian homes, be they Christian or not, manifesting Christ's love, thereby drawing many to our Lord. She resigned because she could not get on with the then Head of the Indian Mission Rev G. Hetherington who was very difficult in spite of his brilliance.

The late Bishop Lee offered her work at Ekhawa where she took charge of the Hostel of African Women. A lady of great humility and culture was now living in a corrugated iron building hearing the heat of the day with her genial Christian disposition, travelling as far as it was possible to follow her calling.

Her brother who was a Missionary priest at Lilome was invalided home and she went back to England to keep house for him while he was vicar at Branton. Her outstanding quality was her great love for the non-European people of South Africa. She spent almost all her wealth in helping many, and she was responsible for more than one non-European being trained for the Christian Ministry.

Her father was a great Coal Mine owner in Alfreton in Derbyshire where she was brought up in the lap of luxury but she gave it all up to sleep in a tin sheet and live on the simplest food that the Africans ate, all because the call had come to serve.

The writer was very closely associated with most of her work in Durban and I am of the opinion that people like Miss M. B. Wilson have done a great deal for racial harmony in this country and have by their very lives preached the Gospel of Love in South Africa. I have seen her home in Alfreton where I lived with her family, and therefore I know what she gave up to answer the great call of Love to work in Natal among non-Europeans. There are hundreds of non-European girls and boys who were taught and influenced by her life, and today occupying important positions in Natal among non-Europeans. While in England she was on the Committee of the B.P.C. Society serving the non-European overseas.

OBITUARY

The many friends of Mr. B. Farmer, well-known resident of Durban, will deeply regret to learn of the death of his beloved wife who went unconscious on Sunday, March 13 and passed away on Wednesday. It was a great tragedy none hardly a month ago Mr. and Mrs. Farmer had celebrated the golden jubilee of their wedding amidst great happiness and joy. The large number of people who had shared Mr. Farmer's greatest happiness in life was present at the funeral which took place at the Blairwood crematorium on Thursday afternoon to share the greatest grief in life. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mr. Farmer and the bereaved family.

THE INVITATION

By Mr. BRIAN COX

*You could do much to make me move
The heart of the wine world to love
You whose warm smile enriches earth
In times of rainlessness and dearth
Could aid me to inaugurate peace
Because through love of all mankind,
Leaders to living men stay blind,
Using the ruinous bombs have made,
I've could build, proud and unafraid,
A house of fame threatening the skies
With terror of unknown surmise.
Then we could in fulfilment rest
And with glad hands greet the oppressed Serve their sad need with all our might
And round with splendour their long night.*

A Statement On The Racial Situation

By The Religious Society Of Friends (Quakers) In Southern Africa

AT the Yearly Meeting of our Religious Society, which was held this year in Cape Town in January, we gave much consideration to the problem of race relationships in this country and to the Defiance of Unjust Laws Campaign. While we were in clear agreement that, as a religious society, we could not support the Defiance Campaign, we were united in a keen desire to express our deep sympathy with the non-Europeans in the frustration of their legitimate aspirations by unjust racial discrimination by the White population, which is in a minority in this country.

Though a very small body in South Africa, we belong to a World wide Christian Society which welcomes people of all races in full and equal membership, and has always tried to stand firm in its testimony against violence, oppression and racial discrimination.

The building of a Christian social order in this country demands that we pray and work more vigorously for the overcoming of mutual fears, misunderstanding and prejudices, as well as the progressive removal of discrimination and development of fuller participation by the non-European in the life of the community.

We wish to share in the protest made by other Christian and liberal groups against the Public Safety Act and the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and strongly urge instead the opening up of channels of consultation and understanding to remove the causes of tension. In the absence of any effective constitutional means for the non-Europeans to make their protest, we feel strongly that means must be found, and found quickly, within the law, whereby the voice of the non-European shall be heard and heeded. We shall give our utmost support to any and every effort to find such a means of expression for the non-European community, and we appeal to all people who desire a just outcome of present difficulties to do the same and to lose no opportunity of stimulating a closer approach of one racial group to another.

We believe that God's love is the unassailable possession of all Mankind and that God would draw all men equally to Himself. All laws and regulations which prevent or hinder this free development of human personality towards the Father are, in our view, immoral, and detrimental to the good of the country.

Determination to maintain the supremacy of one ethnic group over another by the imposition of unjust restrictions and the deliberate limitation of economic opportunity seems to us to be wrong and bound to fail. We believe rather as humble disciples of our Lord Jesus Christ that the well being of the community can only be built, in this or any other country, on the full recognition of the truth that in God, all are one.

ROGER C. CARTER,

Signed on behalf of the Southern Africa
Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 27TH MARCH 1953

Another Nail In The Coffin Of Apartheid

THE Appellate Court judgment in the case of the Attorney-General vs. George Lusa, delivered by the Chief Justice Mr. Justice Centlivres at Bloemfontein on Monday is another nail in the coffin of Apartheid. If this judgment is respected, as indeed it should, it will have far reaching effect. Wherever there is Apartheid it should be applied equally and impartially, which can and will never be done in a country governed by and for a small minority only in utter disregard to the rights, interests and aspirations of a vast majority. Dr. Malan's Government we fear, will see in this judgment the justification more than ever to uphold the High Court of Parliament Act, and the vital necessity of abolishing the jurisdiction of the Courts.

There is no gainsaying the fact that facilities provided for the non-Europeans on railway stations and on trams are hopelessly inadequate, and the partiality and inequality with which they are provided are glaringly evident. If justice is to be done the present whole system will have to be reversed, and no government holding the idea of White supremacy, least of all the present one, will ever be prepared to do so.

This is a rare instance in which from the lowest to the highest court of the land has decided against the Government on the vital matter of race relations in South Africa.

It was General Smuts who once said that the days of segregation were over and that we must think not in terms of two and a half million Whites but a population of twelve million and afford them equal opportunities to develop the best in them and provide them with equal facilities in all avenues of life.

This is the lesson that should sink into the rulers of this country and then there will be no fear of Communism and no fear of one race swamping another. White supremacy and White civilisation (if there is such a thing) of which so much fetish is being made in South Africa can only be maintained by its merits, not by inflicting it by force.

An Appeal To Indian Women

SPEAKING in Maritzburg last week Mr. J. Leslie Smith, M.E.C., appealed to the Indian community to encourage its women to come forward and offer their services in the nursing profession. Indian nurses to-day are almost non-existent, he said, and this leaves a great burden to be carried by European nurses. In recent years, it must be said to the credit of our women, there has been a considerable advance in their education. There was a time when women had to be goaded to come out from the purda and educate themselves. To-day the purda seems to have become a thing of the past and young women are to be seen in schools, colleges and universities vying with young men in academic careers. This is all to the good. But there seems to be a tendency both among young men and young women to take up studies which will profit them materially. Teaching and medical professions seem to be the two most profitable ones and therefore most of our young men and women are inclined to go in for them. The time has come however when we must view things not only from a materialistic point of view but from a humanitarian point of view—how to be of service to mankind. Nursing is a profession in which a dual purpose is served. It is the highest form of service and at the same time it is a source of income, though, perhaps, not as easy as others. But benevolence surely should at all times have the first priority. We would certainly therefore wholeheartedly endorse the appeal made by Mr. Leslie Smith to our women to take up the nursing profession. We do hope it will not go unheeded but that it will be given the serious thought it merits. We know that there is a certain amount of prejudice against nursing as being a low occupation. It is an utterly wrong notion based on ignorance. It is the noblest profession. Be it remembered that every mother is a born nurse. Which male or female could live without the blessings of a mother? Therefore to be a nurse is to be a mother.

NOTES AND NEWS

Death Of Queen Mary

As we go to Press the sad news of the death of Queen Mary, the Mother Queen, which took place on Tuesday, arrived. We join the whole country and the Commonwealth in mourning the great loss and share the deep grief of the bereaved Royal family and the people of England. May her soul rest in peace.

Workers For Racial Harmony

An appeal for "Godly men and women, inspired by unselfish love for their country" has been launched by a group of Africans and English-speaking South Africans, headed by a Johannesburg business man, Mr. Magnus Paddy. These people will form a specially-trained panel of guest speakers throughout the country, and will be invited to lead small discussion groups in their area. The groups will study and discuss methods of improving relations between the various language groups in South Africa. Coming as it does at a time when the most serious legislation ever to come before Parliament has been passed, the appeal represents a genuine attempt to excite nation-wide interest in public affairs. The speakers will operate on a purely voluntary, unpaid basis and they will sponsor no particular political party or creed. They are to keep discussion on a realistic and non-coercive plane, and they will avoid recrimination and blame. Their sole object will be to stir citizens into healthy discussion and action.

Free State Sees African Lawyer

Legal history was made at Bethlehem last week when for the first time an accused was defended by an African attorney. Mr. O. Tambo, of Johannesburg, appeared for an African, Richard Machingo, of Johannesburg, charged with having used language or behaved or acted in a manner calculated to cause Africans to resist and break the law or to prevail upon them to obstruct administration of justice. The charge arose from a speech made by Machingo in Bethlehem Location on February 25.

APPEAL COURT JUDGMENT ON RAILWAY APARTHEID

THE Appeal Court in Bloemfontein on Monday dismissed with costs the Appeal of the Attorney-General of the Cape Province against the acquittal of a African George Lusu, on a charge of refusing to leave a European waiting-room on the Cape Town railway station when asked to do so by a constable.

A Cape Town magistrate had discharged Lusu on the ground that as the total area of the waiting rooms for Europeans set aside on the Cape Town railway station was greater than that set aside for non-Europeans, and as the facilities provided in the waiting rooms for non-Europeans were inferior to those provided in the waiting rooms for Europeans, there had been unequal treatment of the two races and that the Railway Administration had, therefore, not acted as required by the Railways Act of 1916.

On appeal to it, the Cape Provincial Division of the Supreme Court confirmed the Magistrate's decision. Both in the appeal to the Cape Court and the Attorney-General's further appeal to the Appeal Court, the Magistrate's finding that there had in fact been unequal treatment of the two races in the matter was not in dispute, the appeal being solely on the question of the law applicable.

Confirming the lower court's view of the law, the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Gubbins, said that the exercise of the powers given to the Railway Administration by the Railways Act of 1916 could and should be exercised without the inevitable result that members of different races were treated on a footing of partiality and inequality to a substantial degree.

The Chief Justice said that if the Crown's contention was correct, namely, that the Railway Administration could subject the two races to partial and unequal treatment in the matter even to a substantial degree, it would follow that the Administration could under the relative sections of the Act reserve conveniences on railway premises for members of a particular race only and provide no conveniences for members of any other race.

In his opinion this could not have been the intention of Parliament for, as stated in Abdullah's case which dealt with reservations on trains for Europeans and non-Europeans respectively, the State has provided a railway service for all its citizens irrespective of race and it was unlikely that the Legislature intended that users of the railways should, according to their race, have partial or unequal treatment meted out to him.

Mr. Justice L. Greenberg, Mr. Justice O. D. Schreiner and Mr. Justice O. H. Hoexter concurred.

Mr. Justice F. P. van der Heever delivered a dissenting judgment saying that considering the multitude of activities in which the Administration was authorised to engage in on business principles and the diverse objects to which railway premises might be devoted he could not imagine that it could possibly have been the intention of Parliament to entrust the Administration with a power which it must either refrain from exercising or exercise in a manner which would satisfy the reasonable requirements of all sections of the community, but have no relation to the economic consequences or to the value of any particular section as a clientele.

THE SOCIAL CAUSES OF MAU MAU

By FENNER BROCKWAY, BRITISH M.P.

FIFTEEN years ago Jomo Kenyatta, who is now being tried on the charge of the "management" of the Mau Mau, was a student at the London School of Economics.

For his degree thesis he wrote a study of the life of his own tribe, the Gikuyu. It was of such interest and value that Professor Malinowski recommended it for publication and wrote an introduction. It appeared just before World War II under the title "Facing Mount Kenya." Now it has been republished by Secker and Warburg (18s.).

I read this book when it first appeared. I have re-read it now, and I am impressed, by the light it throws on present events in Kenya, in an anthropological rather than a political sense.

When Leslie Hale and I visited Kenya recently, the economic and psychological causes of African discontent were immediately evident to us. No one (except, perhaps, Mr. Lyttelton) could fail to understand the effects of land hunger and the colour bar. But it was some time before we understood the social background of the frustration. When we did, it appeared as the deepest mal-adjustment.

In a sentence, the British administration has destroyed the old tribal life of the Gikuyu (or Kikuyu, as they are more often called) and has failed to provide a satisfying substitute.

"Facing Mount Kenya" is not propagandist, though the author's passion for the freedom of his people sometimes breaks through. It is an objective picture of the earlier social pattern and custom of his tribe. Kenyatta does not hide practices which are revolting to most Westerners. These serve only to emphasise the disastrous disintegration of tribal life which has occurred.

This is the essence of our failure in destroying the democratic expression of the tribe, we have driven back part of it to the evil things reflected in Mau Mau.

The basic structure of the tribe was in the community of the family, the age group and the clan. Each formed a conscious community. The family farmed together until it became too large then the third or fourth generation started a new family farm. The boys and girls of the same age remained a closely-knit group all through their lives, passing from adolescent ceremonies to growing responsibilities. The clan was administered through an elected Council of Elders, which had the duty, with the mothers, of teaching the youths their social duties and of settling disputes between individual members. This threefold community consciousness was the dynamic life of the tribe.

Now it has gone—or is going. Family unity has been destroyed by land hunger. There are only narrow strips of earth for the sons, there is no new land to which they can go. Age group unity has been lost in an unhappy division between the European colonists and the independent African Church. (The division occurred about women's circumcision. On this issue my sympathy was with the European missions, but they were foolish in thinking this deep-rooted tribal custom could be ended suddenly by exclusion from the Church. The Church Missionary Society were wiser than other missions.) The clan Council of Elders has been replaced by British District Officers and British-selected Chiefs administering a much wider area, and District Councils with very limited powers. For local democracy expressing the life of the people has been substituted bureaucratic officialdom expressing the life of the people.

Of course, this is only one side of the story. British Administration has ended the tribal wars. It has saved the lives of thousands of infants and prolonged the life of thousands more by its new ideas of hygiene and health. But its success in these directions has aggravated the land problem by the resulting increase in population. And its provision of education has not been sufficient to remove the hold of witchcraft and oaths, whilst the social, economic and political injustices of which we have been guilty have repulsed any African desire to co-operate with us in new ways.

The consequence has been that parts of the tribe denied community democracy, have reverted to the bad in its own past.

The solution is to give the tribe the opportunity to establish a new and satisfying life. In concrete terms this means the rectification of clan and tribal democracy, meeting the demands of land hunger, restoring modern farming on a co-operative basis, removing other desperate economic grievances, providing universal education, ending the humiliation of the colour bar, and moving towards full racial equality, social, economic and political, so that injustices can be removed constructively.

Then, and then only, will the urge to relieve frustration by violence be removed. Then only will an adjusted new society be evolved.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

THE CHOICE BEFORE SOUTH AFRICA

By C. W. M. CELL

(By Courtesy of 'New Republic' dated 9.2.53)

IN May and June, 1952, the Union of South Africa seemed close to civil war between its White factions over the Milner Government's attempt to abrogate the Constitution and rig the vote. That danger temporarily receded when Dr. D. F. Malan accepted the final unanimous verdict of the Supreme Court on November 13 that his "High Court of Parliament" was illegal and unconstitutional.

The constitutional issue is not, however, dead. The Nationalist election programme will ask for a mandate to "establish the sovereignty of Parliament over a Court of five paid officials." Since there is no prospect of their obtaining a two-thirds majority, the Nationalists, even if successful, will still be blocked by the Constitution and the Courts from eliminating the Coloured vote and the Native Representatives, and thus finally creating their one-race, one-language, one-party republic. But Sen. H. F. Verwoerd, the Minister of Native Affairs, has specifically promised that his party will go ahead with or without a two-thirds majority. Sometime, therefore, the Nationalists will try to get around the entrenched clause of the Constitution by creating 50 new senatorships to be filled by government nominees, or by introducing legislation to abolish the taxing rights of the courts. But whatever they do will be a breach of the law and the Union compact; the White Opposition will be back where it is today, ready to resist illegal measures by every legal means and to meet force with force if the government tries to impose invalid legislation.

This is an important matter, as all recent European history will show, but it is subordinate to the other question which now dominates the South African scene. The argument between the White parties is not dictatorship versus democracy, but whether political supremacy shall be vested in the whole White community or in the Nationalist section only. Africans number about 64 per cent of the White population. In 1948 only 45 per cent of the almost all-White electorate voted Nationalist. But if the Coloureds can be eliminated from between five and 20 marginal Cape seats, if the three Native Representatives are abolished, and if the emotional appeal to racial and historical grievances wins over a little more of the non-Nationalist African vote, Nationalist strength in the over-represented countryside will be able almost indefinitely to defeat opponents whose strength lies in the under-represented towns; trifling adjustments to the electoral laws would then make the Nationalists "election-proof."

Yet since many of their own supporters hold serious misgivings about abandoning the Constitution and the rule of law, the Nationalists will keep these ultimate political dangers relatively in the background during the coming election campaign. They will concentrate their chief offensive on the colour question, for which Dr. Malan set the stage at Odendaalsrus on November 14.

In April the people will be asked whether, in view not only of the internal disturbances, but also in view of interference in our domestic affairs from abroad, the country should have a weak or a strong government. In other words you will be asked whether you are prepared to commit national suicide.

The real issue is domestic. Their visible symptoms are the Defiance of Unjust Laws Campaign and race riots. The Defiance Campaign began quietly on June 26. It was organized by the third African National Congress and the S.A. Indian Congress as a protest against four discriminatory laws passed by the Nationalist Government and two sets of regulations, most of which have been in force for years but which have been administered by the Nationalists with an arrogant severity not previously practised. Two of the four laws and most of the regulations are substantially supported by the White Opposition, although it would apply them less aggressively than the present government. As the campaign has progressed, it has become clear that the non-European peoples are in fact protesting not merely against the laws which Defiance is ostensibly aimed at, but against the general principle of discrimination based solely on grounds of race or pigmentation.

The Defiance Campaign has proceeded with a dignity and restraint, even sympathetic observers did not believe possible. By the end of October, over 7,000 Africans and Indians had deliberately broken petty segregatory laws. Arrested and fined, they have gone joyfully to prison rather than pay. Some juveniles have been caged. With very few exceptions, the crowds of non-European onlookers at Defiance demonstrations have been cheerful and pacific, contrasting favourably with the impatience of the police and their ready resort to harsh charges. Despite some ill-treatment in the prisons (usually explained away as "falling against the table in the charge-office" or "slipping on the stairs leading down to the cells,") volunteer passive resisters come forward in increasing numbers.

On October 18 the first riot occurred at Port Elizabeth, it was followed by others at Johannesburg, Kimberley and East London during the next three weeks.

The ascertained casualties were six Europeans murdered by the mob, 31 Africans killed and 136 wounded by the police. African casualties are often higher than the official figures. Several hundred thousand dollars worth of property was destroyed.

Now the government, which has consistently encouraged the police to deal firmly and forcibly with non-Europeans, has refused to hold judicial inquiries into the cause of these riots, because it wishes to avoid public examination of police methods and is anxious to put the blame on the Defiance Campaign without having to prove its allegations. But none of these riots arose out of Defiance incidents, and it does appear that two, possibly three, of them were sparked off by provocative police action. It is, of course, possible that the riots were deliberately engineered by Communists, but on available evidence that seems improbable. They seem to have been genuinely unpremeditated though certainly indicating a degree of racial tension even yet not fully appreciated. But there must always be a risk that continued White intransigence, the government's refusal either to meet or even acknowledge the moderate non-European leaders, and the maximum use of repressive force without any judicial attempt to discover the causes will so aggravate racial tensions that leadership of the masses may pass from liberal democrats to racial extremists, demagogues and criminal gangs.

The Nationalist Government seeks to meet the moral and political challenge of the Defiance Campaign by a uniform application of strong-arm methods. The Minister of Justice is itching to bag passive resisters and the government talks of introducing measures similar to those used in Kenya against the openly terrorist Mau Mau.

As the Minister of Lands, J. G. Strydom, said on September 13: "The White man can only succeed in staying in South Africa if we keep all power in our hands." Fortified by religious dogma and scriptural sanction, the Nationalists identify the main tenance of "White civilization" with the survival of a "choosen" White race. Their programme for South Africa is to retain exclusive White political control of the "European economy." Non-European unskilled labourers will be treated as temporary migrants in the "European areas" without rights or hope of better paid employment, but they will be allowed "the fullest development in their own sphere." Since, however, this sphere comprises only 12 per cent of the area of the Union and cannot today support its 3.5 million inhabitants (about 40 per cent of the African population), there is no possibility whatever that it will be able to accommodate the whole (or even the majority) of an estimated African population of some 20 millions in 50 years' time. In this sense, apartheid is a political fraud, tempting the African with an illusory home where (subject to overriding White control) he hopes to be his own master and justifying the European in his permanent denial of any rights to "temporary African migrants" in the remaining nine-tenths of the country.

In fact, although Nationalist policy is gradually to return the African population to its overcrowded and overgrazed rural reserves, more Africans have settled in the "European" urban areas during the last four years than in any other comparable period. Nationalist apartheid, therefore, differs little in practice from the policy of the Opposition which is to encourage the integration of non-European labour into the White economy, subject always to White political supremacy (camouflaged as "White leadership with justice"), the industrial colour bar, residential, social and sexual segregation compulsorily enforced by law. That is to say, all European parties wish to retain a supply of cheap labour for their comfort and convenience without making any concessions.

The Opposition parties certainly avoid the cruder excesses of the Nationalists. But faced with an organized agitation by Africans and Indians and with the grave possibility of further violence, offered the choice between a government consistently dedicated to maintain full-blooded White supremacy by force or an Opposition which promises a somewhat diluted version of the same policy, the floating White voter will only too probably take the short-term view of his own self interest and put the Nationalists back in power in 1953. He will see, as Nationalist speakers are already pointing out, that consultation means concessions or is meaningless. He will believe that he is voting against "national suicide."

A Nationalist victory in April will be a calamity for the Union, all Africa and the free world. It may precipitate civil war between the Whites over the Constitution. It will almost extinguish hope of ever achieving honourable compromise between the various races. With little hope of a peaceful solution, the White one-fifth will be committed to a desperate rearguard action in which time, numbers and world opinion will be against it. The present Defiance Campaign might be crushed. But it has started something which will recur again and again with increasing bitterness and force, until non-Europeans are treated as persons capable of cultural advance and civic responsibility to which they must be admitted as they individually attain to civilized standards.

And even if I am wrong about the election, even if the Opposition wins in April, nothing will be gained but a brief respite. The Congresses have promised in concrete Defiance, whoever wins, until agreement is reached to end racial discrimination. Since the Opposition is not explicitly committed to the Nationalist Herrenvolk ideology, compromise will become possible. But racial prejudice and group interests leave little room for the substantial concessions which alone would offer the non-Europeans a ground for loyalty and a source of hope. If no White party will offer mutual respect and equal opportunity, can Defiance avoid becoming a bribe to Whites?

Neither party is fighting the election on a programme which has the slightest chance of winning non-European consent and co-operation, without which no policy can any longer be implemented. Both parties probably realize this, but dare not risk losing immediate White electoral support by abandoning traditional attitudes. When the election is over, there will be a government pledged either to apartheid without real separation or to economic integration without political and social concessions. Both these policies amount to an attempt by the White minority to perpetuate its position of privilege and profit against the logic of facts, the demands of conscience and the trend of world events. If neither party nor the White electorate will move from these positions, South Africa will become untenable for Europeans within this century—and how much else of Africa too?

Yet influential minorities within each White group are becoming articulate, arguing that the traditional policy is physically impossible, morally indefensible and economically disastrous. A small section of the Afrikaans intelligentsia and of the Ministry of the Dutch Reformed Churches suggests that, since a White minority will never make concessions to a Coloured majority in a mixed society, apartheid must lead on to complete territorial partition and the elimination of non-European labour from the White economy. On the other side, liberal opinion is preaching the doctrine of equal rights for all civilized men and equal opportunities for all races to become civilized. Neither policy is its present form would meet non-European demands, but either could become a basis for fruitful discussion, if the Coloured peoples were convinced the Whites meant business.

The only hope of avoiding disaster is that either or both of the main political parties declare for one or the other of these goals soon after the election. Partition involves immense, probably crippling, economic and territorial sacrifices by both White and Black. The liberal solution demands the sacrifice of racial fears and prejudices, and a colossal act of faith on the part of a numerical minority that those whom it has long oppressed will not return the compliment when in a position to do so.

The fervor with which the Nationalists dissociate themselves from total apartheid and the Opposition clears itself of any truck with equality, whether immediate or ultimate, supports the view that the Whites will continue to play for time in the face of disaster.

Things In General

African Worker Defended

A STATEMENT that pick and shovel work is the "natural work of the African" is wastefully inaccurate, maliciously ignorant and dangerously imprudent, says an editorial in the March issue of 'South African Industry and Trade.'

The editorial continues that even the most desperate need to take in every possible vote could not excuse the reckless irresponsibility of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Ben Schoeman, in making such a statement at an election meeting at Worcester.

"The experience of the last 20 years—and more particularly the last 10 years—has proved conclusively that the African is capable of something very much more than 'pick and shovel work,'" continues the editorial.

The African had proved himself capable of doing a whole range of semi-skilled, or even skilled, jobs in a wide variety of industries. There were thousands of industrialists who could tell Mr. Schoeman that without the adaptability and capability of these African workers, their factories would be deserted.

"If overseas investors and South African industrialists had to read that 'Africans were capable of only pick and shovel work' £50,000,000 would never have been invested in this country's textile industry," states the editorial.

African labour was of growing importance to South Africa's industry.

The volume of employment and the volume of skilled work open to Europeans in South Africa was absolutely and indissolubly dependent on the numbers and the growing skill of the African workers.

"For the Minister of Labour to try to scare a rural election meeting with the idea that African workers take away employment from European workers, exceeds the bounds of electioneering irresponsibility."

African Leaders To Discuss Federation

It was announced in Salisbury that the African leaders of Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland will meet at Fort Jameson, Northern Rhodesia, on March 27 to discuss Central African Federation. The Africans of all three territories will abide by any decision which is taken at the conference, according to African newspapers. Mr. John Fauter, Under-Secretary for Commonwealth Relations, told Mr. John Dugdale, former Labour Minister of State for Commonwealth Relations, in answer to a question in the House of Commons, that the Government would not seek Parliamentary approval for the holding of the referendum in Southern Rhodesia or Central African Federation. Mr. Dugdale had suggested that such Parliamentary approval was necessary, "since the Constitution of Southern Rhodesia contains no provision for the taking of a poll to decide upon the alteration of the Constitution."

India To Have Uranium Plant

The Ministry of Natural Resources and Scientific Research has announced that a uranium processing plant to provide cheap power for industry would be built in the Republic of India.

Book Review

Behind the Racial Tension in South Africa: By Quintin Whyte. Published by B.A. Institute of Race Relations. Price 2/-

In this booklet, the Director of the South African Institute of Race Relations, Mr. Quintin Whyte, outlines the various group attitudes to South Africa's gravest problem—its thinking on Colour lines—and perhaps for the first time, answers the particular forces which each of these groups or sections brings to bear upon the situation.

Having arrived at his estimate of the nature and power of the various forces at work in South Africa, Mr. Whyte concludes that "within each group it is really a conflict between emotion and reason and as between groups it is a conflict of emotions... If emotion is to rule on both sides it will be emotion against emotion and black against white. If reason is to rule or even condition emotion, then there is a basis for agreement and solution."

"One would say that the biggest factor is time. Should South Africa move towards an authoritarian state—an emotional decision South Africa will see bloodshed and revolution. If however the time granted, there will be accommodation and resolution of racial difficulty and tension."

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of The Christian Century)

OTHER PROTESTANT CHURCHES

THE Protestant churches in South Africa, other than the Dutch Reformed Church, have taken a less racial attitude toward the non-European Aliens. Other denominations have issued statements from their national councils or bodies (which have long since been independent of overseas control) denouncing various aspects of apartheid. There is little evidence, however, that these statements have reached many white clergymen, let alone white laymen. These national church meetings have usually been attended by a composition and leadership, and a central chairman of the Congregational Assembly was a coloured man.

If on a denominational level many of the Protestant groups have begun to become interracial, most of the theological schools are still separate. Not only are the Dutch Reformed sometimes separate, but there are different theological schools for whites and non-whites in the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches. One bishop explained the apartheid on the grounds that since theological students would object, while another bishop said that there are separate semaries because African theological students require different diets.

Most of the Protestant churches, except the Dutch Reformed Churches which withdrew in 1947, are bonded together in the Christian Council of South Africa, founded in 1948 with the help of John R. Mott. Early in 1949 the Council published after Dr. Mott's presidency to power—statements by its constitutional denunciations entitled "The Church as Judgment on Apartheid." The council sent a copy to Dr. Mott, asking that he receive a deputation from his fellow clergymen. The Prime Minister's secretary replied that Dr. Mott disagreed with segregation—the doctrine as well as the racialist policy of the country try as usual, anti-Christian and immoral and therefore he declined to grant an interview to representatives of the council.

Christian Council Against Segregation

A few months later, in July 1949, the Christian Council called a conference on "The Christian Church in a Multi-racial Society." One hundred Protestants of all races and all denominations—except again the Dutch Reformed Church—attended the same for three days. The conference statement, an important document attested that "segregation of South Africa is not apartheid but segregation coming through terrorism. The conference mildly suggested that it believed in the sovereignty of God every bit as much as the Prime Minister who on a world-wide broadcast upon receiving office said that he and his Ministers held all their decisions on the belief in the sovereignty of God." In 1951 the Christian Council endorsed the battle of the texts by publishing the report of its commission to investigate the teachings of the Bible on racial questions under the title "Race—What Does the Bible Say?"

On the parish and individual level, the Protestant churches do much sincere work for and with non-Europeans. Hundreds of thousands of pounds are spent yearly for mission work among the Africans and other non-Europeans (the kind collected in 1947, the Mixed Race Laundry). (Alan Paton is a prominent Anglican layman.) Notable is the work of such Anglicans as Fr. Trevor Huddleston among the Africans in Johannesburg and Fr. R. D. Hudson among the Coloureds in Cape Town. Yet the Protestant church is so pre-occupied with the day-to-day ameliorative task of alleviating suffering and dispelling ignorance that it does not appertain enough of its time or money for more prophetic work in order to achieve its highest ideal on earth in South Africa. Even the tiny Quaker and Unitarian groups in South Africa are doing nothing like their counterparts in America.

The sophisticated non-European groups in South Africa do not regard the Christian church as an ally—even though they may be indebted to a mission station for their education—and they look upon it with some scepticism and identification by white clergy and laymen with their various political movements, one of the main European testament clergy are much more friendly with some of the militant movements, such as the African National Congress. It may perhaps be kept the leadership and direction of their people. The time may soon come when members of Africans who are Protestant clergymen will go to jail for their political convictions.

In 1914 Mahatma Gandhi was barred from attending a church in South Africa where he wanted to hear C. F. Andrews preach. Almost four decades later non-Europeans are still being barred from South African churches, although occasionally non-Europeans are admitted to churches of all denominations. In a few churches, non-Europeans attend regularly with Europeans, especially the members of some Roman Catholic churches. The Roman church generally has a better reputation in race relations than the Protestants. There are over half a million Catholics, including 107,000 Europeans, 507,000 Africans, 10,000 Coloureds and 1,000 Indians. In June 1951 the archbishops and bishops of the so Catholic dioceses in South Africa and Southern Rhodesia issued a cautious statement asserting that colour discrimination is "an offence" and suggesting that "justice demands that non-Europeans be permitted to evolve gradually towards full participation in the political, economic and cultural life of the country. The emphasis on gradualism—not confined to Catholic statements but in one form or another usually found in most church resolutions—makes the Christian church no real threat to the white supremacy of the land and therefore no real friend to the oppressed non-European.

The modern antiseptic Dettol is clean and powerful—a destroyer of germs—in the households of Southern Africa it is the chosen weapon of defence against septic infection. But as gentle to Dettol as human skin, on pillows, and oint and clean, that it might almost have been made especially for a woman's personal use. 'Dettol' is non-poisonous, disinfectant, agreeable to smell; a clear clear fluid that stains neither skin nor the cloth.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

MR. BHENGU WRITES TO MR. NEHRU

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

ACCORDING to a note sent to the African Free Press Mr. B. B. Bhengu, who styles himself President of what he calls the Rasta National Congress has sent a letter to the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Nehru, asking him to use his influence in persuading the local Indians to emigrate from South Africa to India.

According to these reports, he added that if the Indian Government can agree to accept the emigrants from South Africa his organisation would have at its disposal about £50,000,000 to assist the Indians from the Union in sailing down to India. At the time of writing, it is not known if Mr. Nehru has replied to Mr. Bhengu's letter.

The very act of writing to the Indian Prime Minister on a matter which the Union Government officially regards as essentially domestic is significant. It shows up the desperate position in which the Malaites find themselves in connection with the Indian problem.

On the one hand the Malan Government insists that the Indian problem is essentially a domestic matter and that neither the U.N.O. should interfere in it. Neither the Indians here nor the Indian Government nor U.N.O. has denied that the problem is primarily one of racial treatment within South Africa. But this readjustment is possible only when the Union Government complies with the terms of special international agreements in which it agreed to better the status of the local Indians in clearly defined ways. If it did that, then India would lose part of her right: say her duty to have a say on the treatment meted out to people of Indian descent here. Instead of acting in terms of its moral and legal obligations, the Union Government has systematically violated them and left the Indians with no choice other than to go to India and ask her to force South Africa to act in accordance with the terms of her agreements. As long as the local Indians do not have the political power to protect themselves against Malaitism, India will remain a crocodile, especially for part of the Indian's welfare, in terms of her agreements with South Africa.

The Union Government tries to run away from its obligations here by shouting about its services whereas India is doing no more than insist on what was recognised by Dr. Malan himself as the Indian Government's responsibility. For this reason, the Union Government cannot go to the Indian Government and make the absurd demand that it has indirectly made through Mr. Bhengu.

Against this background, Mr. Bhengu's letter to Mr. Nehru is no more than one more crude form which Dr. Malan's peculiar diplomacy assumes when cornered. Neither Mr. Bhengu nor the African people had anything to do either with the importation of the Indian labourers or the agreement with the Indian Government. For him to intrude into an affair which belongs to Government is a little too impertinent.

We do not want to deny Mr. Bhengu the right to air his views or to the Indian Government to his way of thinking. But we do not want him to distort known facts and create the impression that he speaks for the African people; or, for that matter, even for a substantial minority of these people. He speaks, firstly, for himself secondly, for his Malaita political bosses and, thirdly, for one or two misguided Africans near him. He is not in any way the spokesman of the African people. The recognised and constitutional spokesmen of the African people in these matters is Mr. Albert John Luthe, President-General of the African National Congress.

Mr. Bhengu says he has at his disposal about £50,000,000 to finance the repatriation of South Africa's Indian minority. It would be interesting if he would tell his own people, for whom he claims to speak, where he got this money from when he has not been heard to say anything about contributing towards the establishment of states for his people, among whom the infant mortality rate is some times as high as 500 per thousand live births. If Mr. Bhengu had so much money at his disposal and so much concern for his people why is it that he has not spent a fraction of it on very many projects and organisations at present working for the real good of the African people?

It is quite possible that he hopes to raise this vast sum from his race-hating friends in the Malaita camp. If that is the case, it is time the White voters of South Africa demanded to know precisely how this amount shall be raised when African hunger, for example, is so close to famine.

All this leads to one conclusion. Mr. Bhengu's proposals are as naive and unrealistic that nobody should be surprised if the Indian Government ignores them. Mr. Bhengu's political masters know that his proposals would cut no ice with India. But the propaganda value of a letter by an African to Mr. Nehru, demanding the repatriation of the Indians, is immense—particularly if it is to be used at the United Nations to neutralise world opinion which has been slowly solidifying against South Africa's racial policies.

At the moment the Union Government is very much hard-up for ammunition against the sympathy shown by the world with the non-white people's struggle against Malaita tyranny. Mr. Bhengu's attempt to dabble in international diplomacy is but a Malaita stunt to give the Government something on which to hang at the United Nations when next their evil racial policies are debated.

But the proposals are also disastrous for internal purposes. They are being given very wide publicity at the moment in very many parts of South Africa. The idea is to drive a wedge between the Indians and the Africans and boost up Mr. Bhengu as the politically powerful man who can drive the Indians out of South Africa. Racial prejudice is deeply ingrained among large sections of all the people of South Africa. The Malaites reckon that because this is the case, the political race-hatred which Mr. Bhengu stirs on the political front will divert attention from the political targets which the united non-white front has set itself and neutralise its strength in racial questions. This will ease the pressure on the Malan Government from both the outside world and the non-whites here. That will be relief for which every Malaita desperately yearns.

Both Mr. Bhengu and his Malaita mentors should have realised by now that the Indian problem will not be solved by appeals to Prime Minister Nehru to ask the local Indians to return home. If Mr. Bhengu wants to persuade the Indians here that it is good for him and for them to return to India, he should go to them and discuss the matter fully and freely with them through their leaders and organisations. If they want to return to India, nobody can stop them effectively. If they do not want to go nobody, not even Mr. Nehru, will force them out of this country. And if the principle of compensation is what Mr. Bhengu and his white friends have in mind, Mr. Bhengu can start by trying it against those who make the laws which enslave every man of colour. The Indians do not make the laws which humiliate us in our land. It is the Malaites who do.

World opinion outside South Africa might take Mr. Bhengu's correspondence seriously. That must certainly be done, if to appreciate the extremes of desperation to which the Malaites will go in stirring up hatred between the Africans and the Indians. Otherwise Mr. Bhengu's activities are only of national value—for the simple reason that he has no following worth to bring about.

Some time back Malaita Orkney Ministers claimed on his behalf that in Natal he was supported by 2,000,000 Zulus—that is, just about the entire African population of Natal, including men, women, infants, lunatics and convicts.

I have personally made efforts to find out to what extent Mr. Bhengu is supported by the African people. The conclusion I have come to is that he has no following worth talking about. It is true that he travels widely over Natal and the Eastern Transvaal preaching openhanded. It is true also that the facilities he enjoys for meeting tribal chiefs are not given to any other African. But I have also met some of the chiefs he claims to have behind him and the reply they gave was either that they had told him to return to them when he brought along Mr. Albert John Luthe or they politely sent him away and avoided placing him in the position to compromise relations between them and their Native Commissioners.

As for the meetings he has held publicly—it is very strange that he is not known to have held a single one which was a success. An organisation with £2,000,000 to throw away should have performed better.

In an endeavour to find out the truth and nothing but the truth, after Mr. Bhengu had told the 'Natal Mercury' that he would be going to U.N.O. to demand the repatriation of the Indians, I wrote to that paper asking him to tell the readers precisely who the leaders of the Rasta National Congress, its Secretary its Treasurer, are. I wanted to know, also, where the organisation's head office was, who its members were, its activities and whether or not its organising books were open for public examination. Mr. Bhengu did not reply. The questions stand unanswered to this day. If Mr. Bhengu was all that he claims to be politically, he should have asked us that question to let the world know how representative he is.

Pakistan News

Karachi, February 1953.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

It cannot be said that the year 1953 has opened as propitiously for Pakistan as previous years and several problems engage the deepest attention of the country.

The 7th January saw the beginning of a brief period of civil disturbance in Karachi which caused loss of life to at least eleven people and injury to about sixty more, apart from injuries to policemen.

This affair, which lasted for three days, began with a procession of students who went to the residence of the then Minister of Education to lay their grievances before him. The Minister was absent, but his wife met a deputation of the processionists. The students did not disperse when asked to do so and the police considered it necessary to use tear gas and charge with lathis.

On the next day the students conducted a demonstration of indignation against the police and tamper became spirited. Unfortunately the rill-rall of the city (who see in such occasions an opportunity for plunder) took a hand. The affair degenerated into violence; the police, after beating with the situation with considerable pain, were obliged to open fire and it ultimately became necessary to secure military aid.

On the third day two more shops were broken into and looted and there was some brief exchange of shots. Two or three liquor shops were also attacked and the contents smashed up, but by this time the authorities were in full control of the situation and with the declaration of a curfew, strictly enforced, the city was restored to its normal calm. The Chief Commissioner of Karachi said the disturbances were inspired by communists which the student bodies have denied, but it is believed that at the inquiry which is to be held very shortly into the whole matter, he intends to produce establishing a communist connection.

An initial difficulty was that the public, while disliking the lawlessness caused by this riot as well as the bad name which follows in the wake of such events, sympathised with the students whose grievances were considered to be genuine and reasonable. The former Minister of Education cannot blame anyone since, for some time, he had deferred meeting the students' representatives who desired to explain their complaints which are of long standing and which related to substantial matters such as excessive fees, inadequate hostel arrangements and medical facilities, difficulties relating to procurement of textbooks and some other points of similar weight. It is also possible that on the first day the police were unnecessarily severe.

Seeing that the Minister in charge of education at the time was holding in addition the portfolios of Commerce and Economic Affairs, it is probable that education was not receiving the attention it deserved. This was a pity and a mistake for education is among the first necessities of Pakistan where the number of trained men and women is deplorably small.

The Government has accepted the students' complaints and has appointed Dr. Mahmud Hussain, himself a scholar, as the new Education Minister. It is much to be hoped that a more energetic policy will be pursued towards this vital subject upon which the future of Pakistan very largely depends.

Foreign Policy

In the sphere of foreign policy there has recently been a good deal of talk, all seemingly premature, on the subject of Pakistan's joining the Middle East Defence Organisation. So far nothing concrete has emerged and there have been demands in several quarters both in Pakistan and elsewhere, but on the principle of there being no smoke without fire, a day may not be far distant when something will have to be written about it. It would be an important enough subject.

Relations will doubtless be interested to know that at a recent meeting of their fraternity in Jaipur, a contingent of Pakistanis, with their ladies, were present. This is yet another instance of the fact that relations between Indians and Pakistanis do not consist only of bickerings and they are able to meet on common ground with pleasure and satisfaction.

The Proposed Constitution

The report of the Basic Principles Committee, appointed to examine and advise on the question of a constitution for Pakistan, has been published. It is a document of great importance, but its contents have not met with universal approbation.

It consists of two parts, the first laying down the principles by which the policy of the state should be guided and setting out a procedure to prevent enactment of legislation which is repugnant to the Quran and the Sunna. That part also directs that all forms of alcohol drinking, gambling and prostitution should be prohibited and usury should be eliminated as soon as possible. There is a further recommendation that steps should be taken to bring the existing laws of the country into conformity with Islamic principles and to give legislative effect, as far as possible, to the injunctions of the Quran and the Sunna.

It is provided that boards of Ulama should be appointed to advise the Head of the State and the Heads of Units on the question of repugnance to Islam of any proposed legislation. Objections taken by members of the legislatures to bills (other than money bills) on the ground of such repugnance will involve reference to the Ulama. If they unanimously support the objection, the bill must be returned to the legislature.

The second part of the report is more or less a draft constitution and under it, the political structure of Pakistan will be a federation of units (i.e. the former provinces) republican in nature. Since the publication of the report, it has been announced that the Prime Minister himself will propose an amendment to it by which Pakistan will become a republic, the question of remaining within the Commonwealth being left for decision later.

The Head of the State must be a Muslim and he will be elected for a term of five years at a joint sitting of both Houses of the Central Legislature. The two Houses comprise an Upper House consisting of 120 members elected by the unit legislatures and a Lower House (called the House of the People) consisting of 400 members elected on the basis of universal adult suffrage. In each House, there will be equal representation as between East and West Pakistan. All real authority will lie with the Lower House and the powers of the upper chamber amount to little more than suggesting revisions to legislative proposals.

Although East Pakistan is territorially much smaller than the western wing, its claims to parity rest on the facts that its population exceeds that of western Pakistan and that it makes a very important contribution to Pakistan's wealth in the shape of its jute production. Indeed, on the basis of population, East Bengal would be entitled to more seats in the Lower House than Western Pakistan.

The report has aroused a good deal of criticism and some hostility, especially in the Punjab which will have only 27 seats in the Upper House and 90 in the Lower, as against East Bengal's 60 and 300. It is further said that the special treatment of East Bengal is a tacit admission that the interests of the two wings of Pakistan are incompatible. For this reason, a unitary form of government has been advocated in some influential quarters, but this suggestion runs counter to the interests of provincial politicians.

In East Bengal there has been talk about a confederation of East and West Pakistan which would give to each the maximum degree of independence within the state. The proposal has been condemned on the obvious ground that it is then but a step before dissolution of the bonds which unite the two wings of Pakistan.

It is doubtless easy to criticise the structure proposed, but the Committee deserves commendation for its sensible recognition of the inherent difficulties in the way of a country split into two parts and separated by a distance of 1000 miles. This is not a matter to be overcome by ignoring it and the Committee have faced the problem and tried to solve it. Indeed, comment and clear-headed men have expressed in private the view that the solution which the Committee has suggested is probably the fairest and most practical that could have been devised.

The westernised intelligentsia and some foreigners regard the Islamic emphasis as theocratic and retrogressive. Whether this is so or not, there is a point which arises out of it which is always to be remembered and it is that Pakistan grew out of the belief that the Muslims of the sub-continent should have a place of their own in which to live according to their own code and there were sufficient Muslims eager for this, so as to make it possible to enforce the aspiration. This being so, can anyone feel surprise that in framing a constitution, they look to the fountain of their fundamental beliefs? Any judgment of Pakistan's affairs which ignores this aspect is not likely to be a reliable one.

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

I'm quite sure that I have no prejudices and I think I have no colour prejudices, nor creed prejudices. All I care to know is that a man is a human being — that is enough for me; he can't be any worse.

—Mark Twain.

—o—

You have to stand against the whole world although you may have to stand alone. You have to stare the world in the face although the world may look at you with blood-shot eyes. Do not fear. Trust that little thing in you, which resides in your heart and says: "Forsake friends, wife, all; but testify to that for which you have lived and for which you will die."

—Mahatma Gandhi.

Equality For Non-Europeans

DR O. D. WOLLHEIM, Warden of Capricorn, told a Tuesday lunch meeting in Cape Town recently that the Union would not go ahead until its White population accepted the non-Europeans as equals on an economic and political level.

There would be no enforced social mixing, but social intercourse between the Black and White people of South Africa should be allowed to take place freely.

People in South Africa talked about preserving White civilization. What they meant was preserving their White skins. They thought the only way to do this was not to allow a dark skinned person from reaching the same standards of living.

As a result the non-Europeans had been suppressed. They were unable to learn the Europeans' civilization because of lack of contacts on a higher plane.

It was time the "stupid convention" that the Black-skinned man was inferior to the White was dropped, he said.

The Government was trying to take the vote away from the non-Europeans on the grounds that they were not qualified to vote because of the colour of their skins. Yet an uneducated railway ganger was entitled to a vote only because his skin was White.

To judge a man's values by looking at the colour of his skin was wrong. Values should be judged on individual capabilities. Dr Wollheim said.

Non-Europeans should have a far greater representation in Parliament than they were at present allowed. They wanted to be accepted into Western Civilization and should be given the opportunities in legislation as well as in the economic sphere.

He had learnt that they wanted to attain the standards of living of the Europeans. Africans and Coloured people were willing to drop their customs and traditions if there was a complete transition of the non-European way of life to that of Western Civilization.

Honesty Alone Is The Best Policy

Were not far wrong in our surmise last week about the reaction of the Nationalists to the Appellate Court's judgment on Railway Apartheid. The Prime Minister, Dr. D. F. Malan, said that it had come as a shock to him and that it would be felt as a shock throughout the whole country. The position created by the judgment cannot be accepted, he said. "South Africa does not intend to depart from this traditional form of apartheid, which, in fact, has always been accepted by the non-Europeans except for an extremist minority." The Prime Minister further said, "The United Party has always been, as best indifferent towards this matter. Its Press has even been hostile, as appeared from the comment on the lower Court's rejection of Railway apartheid as 'a blow for Sauer.' If the Nationalist Party wins the election," he said, "we shall rectify the matter without delay, and in a way that will leave no Court in doubt about the wish and intention of Parliament and the people."

The Minister of Economic Affairs, Mr. E. H. Louw has gone a step further, and has by implication charged the majority of the Judges with political insincerity. He said they appeared to be "liberals" in the "generally accepted sense of that well-known term." Thus implying, of course, that the Judges were "communisticly inclined." The Nationalist leaders have often dubbed the liberals as communists. Other Nationalist leaders too have attacked the Appellate Court.

The Prime Minister is of course entirely wrong in stating that the non-Europeans, except for an extremist minority, have always accepted this form of apartheid. On the contrary they have always protested against it. Had it not been so there would not have been this violation of it leading to a Court case. The non-Europeans have had to reconcile themselves to many things unwillingly owing to circumstances but not without resentment.

The non-Europeans have sufficient common sense, indeed more than Mr. Eric Louw credits them with, to understand that this judgment does not solve the colour problem and open the door for them to move about as freely as they would like to. They know that they have to contend with the public prejudice engendered by the type of men like Mr. Louw and it is not their purpose to come into clash with the White public. Their fight is not against the public but against the Government. What they want is the removal of the stigma of inferiority based on race and colour that is imposed on them by law. If in the eye of the law all were treated alike the non-Europeans would be the last to abuse their rights. History has proved that beyond doubt.

But we are not at all shocked at the reaction of the Nationalists. It was just as we had expected. What has shocked us immensely, however, is the reaction of those who claim to be—whom the Nationalists believe to be—the friends of the non-Europeans. This is what the most powerful organ of the United Party 'The Natal Mercury' has to say in its leading article dated March 26, on the Appeal Court's judgment. "The situation can and should be remedied as soon as Parliament reassembles after the election. Segregation of the races on the Railways is a traditional policy and it is perfectly clear that the people are in no mood to tolerate any intermingling of persons of different colour in railway compartments, buses or station waiting rooms." There seems to be no difference here between the policy of the Nationalists and the United Party. As long as the White rulers of the Union are going to pursue the policy of judging a man by his race and colour and not by his merit and this is sanctioned by law there is going to be no peace.

The function of the Courts of Justice is to give justice, not merely to interpret the laws. The function of Parliament is to make laws based on justice and morality. It is the height of dishonesty to seek merely to remove the flaw in a law when it has been detected to suit one's evil political purpose. This is what is being suggested.

If there is to be apartheid it should be applied equally and impartially. The highest Court of the land has found that that has not been done. It has never been possible to do so ever since apartheid was introduced nor is it ever going to be possible to do so. Apartheid is therefore impracticable and must therefore be done away with. Can men, for instance like Chief Luthuli, Mr. Mtshkulu, Dr. Xuma, Professor Jabavu, Professor Z. K. Matthews, Dr. Molema to mention just a few of the many scores of distinguished Africans, and the many distinguished Indians including University graduates, whose names we need not mention, be judged by their colour and condemned as being lower than the lowest type of White man? If this is the traditional policy of White South Africa the time has indeed come to bring about an end to that pernicious policy before it is too late. Signs that it is becoming too late are not wanting. What the United Party needs to learn is that not hypocrisy but honesty alone is the best policy.

Fools' Paradise

In an electrifying speech at Worcester (Cape) recently the Minister of the Interior, Dr. T. E. Duggan, is reported to have said: "For the first time a defiance movement in the Union had failed and collapsed. In the past such movements had led to concessions and further demands because of the weakness of the Government."

Dr. Duggan said "that supporters of the defiance movement were misled by the Liberals, the greatest enemies of the Europeans' future in South Africa. The danger was not just and, therefore, South Africa must retain a strong Government."

"If European supremacy was to be maintained in the Union, European control of legislation must be retained. If non-Europeans once gained control of the legislative authority, all forms of apartheid would disappear," he said.

If Dr. Duggan really believes what he says about the defiance movement we must say that he is living in a fools' paradise. The defiance movement has come to stay in this country. The temporary lull does not mean that it has collapsed. The Government is unaware of the undercurrents that are working. They are more dangerous than what appear on the surface. It will be well for the Nationalists to know that the days of White domination are over. The darker races are becoming more and more conscious of their power and they will not rest until their goal of freedom from oppression and humiliation is attained. It is our fervent prayer that whatever they may do they will not give way to hatred and resort under any circumstances to violence. For if they do that, it will assuredly be the day of victory for our opponents. Our victory lies only in following the path of non-violence with faith in God and fear of God and not of any man.

Prospect Before Africa

THREE very significant events are awaited with concern by very large sections of the non-white peoples in Africa. The first is the verdict to be passed on Jomo Kenyatta, leader of the Kenya Africans. The second is the referendum to be held in Southern Rhodesia on April 9, on Federation. The third is the general election in the Union of South Africa on April 15.

Although occurring over widely different areas, these events have one thing in common—all are manifestations, one way or the other, of the clash of colour in Africa. And although in all three events the peoples involved, that is, the whites and the non-whites, have not as yet co-ordinated their plans, it is clear that a substantial section of them, on both sides of the colour line, realise now that they have to deal with continental problems and not just with matters of narrow, domestic jurisdiction.

On the white side, one of the first things the Malanites did when they got to power was to send Mr. Charles to Water to very many countries in various parts of Africa to open their eyes to what Dr. Malan called the Black Danger. At the time the mission was not much of a success. But subsequent events, particularly in British-held territories, have shown that there is a growing number of whitemen who are thinking seriously along the lines of devising means by which to crush African nationalism and get Africa to revert to the old days when the African people yielded to oppression.

In Kenya these people have robbed the Africans of large tracts of their lands and driven them to reserves which are in danger of being overcrowded. An unreasonable colour bar limits the African's economic opportunities, gives him an inferior education and all in all, marks him apart as an inferior human being. He is deaf to reasonable appeals to reform. It was in protest against

But the Mau Mau continues to make life not worth living for its victims of all races.

Quite clearly, in Kenya, Britain has to deal with a situation which requires a fundamental change in British policy to produce positive results. Efforts to counter Mau Mau terror with military terror will not frighten the Africans of Kenya into abandoning the Mau Mau as long as the causes which brought it into being remain. The people who are murdered by the British today are being hailed as martyrs in the cause of Kenya's African people's freedom.

The first thing to do is to release Jomo Kenyatta from prison. Secondly, the British whether or not it should join the federation.

It will be largely the white people who will vote in that referendum. And if the pronouncements of men like Sir Godfrey Huggins and Mr. Roy Welensky mean anything, the future of the African is not very promising.

Farther south, the white people will go to the polls on April 15, to say whether or not they like the tyranny that the Malanites have imposed on the African people.

If Jomo Kenyatta is thrown into prison or hanged; if Southern Rhodesia votes for federation and if Dr. Malan is returned to power, an altogether new situation will arise in Africa. Inasmuch as the whiteman has shown signs of treating the colour problem on a continental scale, the peoples of Africa will have cause seriously to consider a joint continental solution to it as well. This is the prospect opened up before the world by the three events discussed here.

Fountain Of Wisdom

"All reputable anthropologists condemn the malignant nonsense about racial psychology which is preached and practised by those who try to justify the oppression of ethnic minorities. Political theories about race are nothing more than instruments of propaganda, devised for the child minds of totalitarian populations."

—Professor E. A. Hooten in 'The Twilight of Man.'

—Chambers.

BEWARE OF SELF PRAISE

WHEN any one praises himself or speaks much of himself, or lets in any way be seen that he stands high in his own esteem, he is sure to be laughed at. We ought both to feel and to appear to feel, humbly about ourselves; and even when others praise us, we should receive their approbation with humility. All good qualities are justly held to be set off and improved by modesty, while even the best qualities are in danger of being despised if they be shown in a boastful spirit. We should be still more ridiculous if we pretend to knowledge, work or rank, which we do not possess. Such pretensions are easily detected, and then every one despises the pretender more than if he had been supposed to want those qualities altogether. We ought also to check the disposition to think too highly of our own opinions, and too humbly of those of other persons. Our neighbours may think rightly, though their opinions appear to us absurd; and our opinions may be wrong though to us they appear right. It is a great point for any one to attain—to know and act as if he knew, that he may possibly be in the wrong.

that that the Kenya African Union arose. The KAU was a moderate body. But Africans all over Africa are discovering that moderation does not pay at all when faced with the evils of the white man's colour bar. The Mau Mau came on the scene and took almost complete charge of the situation.

People who read their papers intelligently realise by now that the British Government is powerless to deal with the Mau Mau. A situation exists in Kenya which is not unlike what has been happening in Malaya for years now. British spokesmen daily inform the world that the Mau Mau terror—for which we have no brief whatsoever—is under control and that its leaders and organisers have been arrested.

will have to realise that whether or not they like it, the solid unity of the Kenya Africans is a living reality. The thing to do will be to re-open their schools and allow them to return to their normal life. The third will be to give the Africans an effective say in making the laws which shape their future. This approach alone holds out hope of peace in Kenya.

The situation is different in methods employed in Central Africa, where the white people plan to present a white front against the African, in efforts to keep the latter a perpetual junior to the land of his birth. On April 9, Southern Rhodesia, which comes second only to South Africa in its hatred for the man of colour, will decide

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other on the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with bloodhounds, and romance. NOTES AND NEWS

Bishop Of Pretoria's Easter Message

It was very necessary that Christians should ensure that the election would be fought on Christian principles, and that the party returned to power should govern in accordance with the principles of justice and integrity, says the Bishop of Pretoria in the latest issue of "Kingdom," the Diocesan magazine. An election was essentially a Christian way of discovering the will of the people. Because of the errors which creep into the human mind, all kinds of stupidity, injustice and deceptions enter into an election. "It is unfortunate that during Passiontide and Easter the minds of so many people will have to be absorbed with political controversy. But as members of the State, we have our responsibilities towards the State, just as we have, as members of the Church, responsibilities to the Church. Although our political duties come upon us at a time when we should have preferred to have been free from them, that is no reason for shirking them." Referring to the anti-Defence legislation the Bishop said: "The principles of the Bills appear to be a complete negation of justice, and if our country is to be governed on these principles there can be no freedom of thought, no freedom of speech, and no freedom of action for anyone."

Students Will Conduct Own Welfare Work

The students of the University of Cape Town are out to prove this year that their annual "rag" is not simply a convenient excuse to give vent to their high spirits. They are going to devote most of the proceeds of this year's "rag"—each year they raise at least £10,000—to starting their own organized welfare work in the heart of Cape Town's blackest spot—Widdermore—where 30,000 non-Europeans live on the edge of the "poverty line." They will establish and run a health and community centre to incorporate a medical centre, social services, youth clubs, adult education, food and milk schemes and a canteen. Members of the university staff will co-operate in running the scheme, and leading member of the public will serve on the board of management to advise on policy.

We very heartily congratulate the students of the University of Cape Town on this fine gesture worthy of emulation by all.

Government Loses Yet Another Case

A full bench of the Supreme Court last week dismissed the Attorney-General's appeal against the acquittal in the Capetown Magistrate's Court of Mr. Percy Brian Bunting on a charge under the Suppression of Communism Act. The judges were Mr. Justice Herbertus, Mr. Justice van Wieringen and Mr. Acting Justice Watermeyer. Mr. P. B. Blakenberg, Q.C. (the Attorney-General) said, "I may mention that I am taking this further to the Appellate Division." The charge in the Magistrate's Court arose from Mr. Bunting's election as a Member of Parliament after the Minister of Justice (Mr. C. R. Swart) had ordered him, in terms of the Suppression of Communism Act, not to become one.

Mr. Cowley's Offer To Africans

Major Cecil Cowley, who is seeking election to the Senate as Africans' representative in the place of Dr. Edgar Brookes, who has retired, set out an 18-point programme when he addressed Africans in the basement of the City Hall last week. He said he would work for an end to rule by proclamation, no taxation without representation, the removal of pass laws, the introduction of trade unions, and freedom to purchase and occupy land. "I am fighting," he said, so that you may be given that measure of justice due to other men." The present system of government whereby one lone voice represented 2,000,000 people was a "travesty of democracy." Major Cowley urged the African to develop his national pride. He said that he would work to see that Emakusini, the traditional home of the Zulu kings of old, was appropriated for the Africans. "I can picture the erection of a headquarters of the Zulu nation here, where the spirit of a nation will speak. It will build up the strength of the nation, lending weighty authority to the Zulu spokesman."

No Colour Bar In Angola And Mozambique

No racial discrimination existed in Angola and Mozambique, Dr. A. J. Alfaro Cardoso, the Angola Government's economic delegate to the Union and Rhodesia, told the University of Cape Town Summer School. "What we want to see is that the individual, be he White, Yellow or Black should possess a moral and civic education and culture—that he should be, in a word, a civilized man," said Dr. Cardoso.

PROFESSOR MATTHEWS DEFENDED

Mr. Selby Ngcobo (Fort Hare, Cape) writes in the 'Cape Times'.

THE speech made by Mr. C. R. Swart, Minister of Justice, when he moved the second reading of the Public Safety Bill, as reported in the 'Cape Times' of February 12, quotes Professor Z. K. Matthews as having once said, when speaking of the policy of "Africa for the Africans":

"The ultimate aim of such a movement would be the eventual repatriation of the whole country for the 8,000,000 Africans, and the removal from it of all those Europeans who are not prepared to live here on terms of equality with the Africans. The 2,500,000 Europeans who talk so glibly about the repatriation of 250,000 Indians must realise that to the African national the repatriation of 2,500,000 Europeans does not appear any more preposterous."

The above statement is part of a closely reasoned article under the title "An African Policy for South Africa," published in the Race Relations News (volume XVI, number 3, 1949). Taken out of its proper context and set against the circumstances of the Public Safety Bill the quotation gives a totally wrong impression of the main standpoint of the entire article or of Professor Matthews' general political outlook.

The general content of the article makes it very clear that in the above statement Professor Matthews was countering a trend of thinking among his fellow Africans which was certainly not his own. He rejected the idea contained in the earlier part of the Minister's quotation as Black apartheid.

Secondly, the latter part of the statement quoted above contains an implied warning that the idea and talk of repatriating the 250,000 Indians can have a disastrous effect on the African masses as regards the presence of Europeans in South Africa.

The quotation, standing by itself as it does, is objectionable and unfair to the Professor as it gives the impression that he is in favour of, or associated with, a scheme or programmes for the repatriation of the Europeans in South Africa by the Africans.

How would the South African Institute of Race Relations, under its auspices, publish views of a such dangerous scheme.

Professor Matthews, who is known to be very careful with his thoughts and words, is not given to saying things like that.

Professor Matthews' warning the country against ideas of non-co-operation. He said: "It has been pointed out that here is a growing feeling among Africans that the policy to which they should lend their support in the future is that of non co-operation. Certain sections among them look upon this as the most suitable answer to the European policy of apartheid, which is itself tantamount to a policy of non co-operation."

Then he warns: "Once the policy of non-co-operation becomes endemic on both sides of the colour line, the resultant friction and antagonisms will prove disastrous to the country as a whole."

Professor Matthews also stated that, like all other peoples, the Bantu "claim the right of self-determination." In the South African situation self-determination for the Bantu means that he must be accorded a full share in the determination and the execution of policy.

Inconsistent with the African right to self-determination and "full co-operation with the African" are policies based on White leadership, Christian trusteeship or apartheid.

The burden of the entire article was a reasoned plea for "closely scrutinizing the principles by which our policies are inspired," racial accommodation and racial co-operation.

Professor Matthews defines co-operation (p. 30) as "working together." ("The African has hitherto taken his stand on a policy of co-operation between Black and White at all levels of our national life.") Then he concludes by saying: "Co-operation alone can rightly constitute a suitable watchword for a strong, prosperous and united South Africa."

Since Professor Matthews is away on a lecture mission in the United States, I felt, obliged as his teaching colleague and friend, to defend his good name and reputation.

M. L. SULTAN TECHNICAL COLLEGE

It is wonderful how a night school for adults commenced years ago by Advocate A. Christy with the aid of a band of enthusiastic workers has grown into the M. L. Sultan Technical College, a unique institution of the Indian community open to all men Europeans. It stands also as a monument to the biggest charity made by a single Indian for the benefit of his own brethren in particular and the non-Europeans in general. Mr. H. Nairam the Principal of the College who is the life wire of the institution has just submitted his annual report for the year 1952 in which he gives a vivid description of how the institution has grown in recent years by leaps and bounds. In his report Mr. Nairam referring to Mr. Sultan states:

"Mr. M. L. Sultan, who is eighty years of age, started work in Durban as a lowly carpenter on Beres Road Station many years ago. Through steady application to work and by reason of his outstanding business acumen he, in spite of setbacks and difficulties, has been able to establish the M. L. Sultan Charitable and Educational Trust, endowing it with no less a sum than £100,000. Mr. Sultan and his Trust have donated to the Technical College the magnificent sum of £33,000."

"The year 1953" states the report, "is to see the erection of the first of the College buildings on Curries Fountain, some six acres in extent and lying within a stone's throw of the Greyville race-course. The completion of this building and the workshop block will make possible the establishment of full-time day classes so altering considerably the outlook of the College."

Referring to statistics the report states: "In 1932 the enrolment in our classes was 169. Ten years later the number of students enrolled rose to 518. In 1952 the College dealt with 3,605 students."

"It is pleasing to note the increase in enrolment of women students. During the year we had 1,493 Indian, 80 African and 15 Coloured women students as against 1,606 Indian, 410 African and 5 Coloured men."

Students' Society

"The newly constituted M. L. Sultan Technical College Students' Society held its first election during the early part of the year. Students at all branches of the College took part in the ballot. At this is the first occasion on which a full election was held I have pleasure in recording the names of the students elected. President: Mr. V. S. Nadar; 1st and 2nd Vice Presidents: C. Mahan and Mrs. N. R. Pillay, Members of the Administrative Council: S. R. Chetty, Mrs. S. Naidoo, R. Royappa, Miss J. Vra, K. A. Appalaray, N. Bowen, J. David, G. Nagaraj, D. Nairam, K. D. Pillay, R. Singh, and S. R. Singh."

"Rapid strides were made by this Council of Students and additional sporting activities initiated. A successful social was held in June, the Satri Hall being filled to capacity. Mr. Sultan attended and presented Honorary Awards. He also made this the occasion for the announcement of the increase of his donation to £33,000. Dr. B. M. Narbath presented certificates to successful students."

Referring to the services of Dr. B. M. Narbath the report states: "It is fitting that we should remember most thankfully the long years of steadfast endeavour and service rendered to technical education by Dr. B. M. Narbath. To have been the first Principal of the first Technical College in the Union and to have, without remuneration or reward, worked for the establishment of the first Indian technical college and guided it into its present virile state is a record of which any man might be proud. To have such a pioneer connected with our foundation is cause for much thankfulness. The College Council join in congratulating him in connection with our visit and look forward with pleasurable anticipation to seeing him, in fact, lay the foundation stone of our new building."

The College has the following branches with the following gross enrolments for 1952: Satri College 1,752 (which includes 572 dressmaking enrolments at Dart-mall Crescent and Kathward Hindu Seva Samiti) Hindu Tamil Institute 327, Clairwood continuation 164, Depot Road 56, Mount Edgecombe 428, Umkomaas 115, Tongaat 396

By JOHN GILD

SEPARATE BUT EQUAL

THE true meaning of the Appellate Court's decision on apartheid on the railways does not emerge from the blarney of the political parties. A lawyer tells me what it all amounts to. Under the common law of this country, which follows the English law, racial discrimination is not valid, and will not be upheld by the higher courts, unless it has been expressly authorised by an Act of Parliament. In plainer words, if colour bars are to be strong enough to resist challenge, they must have been created by statute, not merely in the form of regulations made to carry out a statute which is itself silent on colour. Officials in various government departments are in the habit of basing a colour bar on a regulation framed by themselves. It is this practice that the court now holds to be unreasonable and a regulation which is unreasonable can be upset.

In earlier years the tradition in our parliamentary law making was to avoid putting explicit colour bars into statutes. There was no need to put them in because non-Europeans very seldom or never tried to assert their legal rights under the common law of the land. But non-whites have been rising in the economic and racial scale. An increasing middle class of educated people has emerged, conscious of their rights and ready to claim them.

In the United States a similar position arose a long time ago. The courts met it by inventing the doctrine that "separate but equal facilities" are legally justifiable. Once then turned, as they still do, on the question of fact whether certain separate facilities are really equal in practice. Where they are proved to be unequal, the Supreme Court will not recognize the discrimination. It is now clear that in South Africa there will be no pretence of providing equal facilities when the races are kept apart. Promptly, 'The Star' in Johannesburg has found the right phrase—"separate but adequate." You can guess, without a moment's hesitation, who will decide the question of what is "adequate." The white authorities will exercise their own discretion: Before they can do so, however, Parliament must pass a new Act saying that racial separation need not be based on any semblance of equality. As time and non-Europeans march on, the utter hypocrisy of the whole theory of apartheid is made plain in the harsh light of reality.

A Terrible Example

The Colonial Office is reacting to open warfare against the Kikuyu in their violent efforts to combat Man-man. The latest step, the arrest of Mr. Fawcett Walter Odedo, has shocked liberal opinion in Britain. Mr. Odedo, who is not a Kikuyu, but a Luo, is a very moderate African leader. The fact that he was dominated by the Governor to a seat on the Legislative Council is evidence enough of that. When Mr. Jomo Kenyatta was arrested months ago, Mr. Odedo agreed to become president of the Kenya African Union. But he maintained his opposition to methods of violence and cherished his hope of inter-racial co-operation. It seems to me that Mr. Odedo's real crime is his successful resistance to official efforts to destroy his Union in the Nyanza province which he represents. By their destruction of civil liberties and their surrender to the small minority of white settlers, the British are setting a terribly bad example to every government in the continent. And by these methods they will never bring peace and racial harmony in East Africa.

Incidentally, the best books about Kenya are by Norman Leys, especially "The Colour Bar in East Africa" (Hogarth Press, 1946). Dr. Leys was a mainly observer who wrote with a beautiful lucidity. He was unjustly dismissed from the colonial service because he was suspected of allowing his sympathy with Africans to undermine his loyalty to the service. He lived for many years after his dismissal to use his pen as a formidable weapon in the service of the truth.

Life of Laski

Harold Laski was a great man. I am happy to find that a memorial to his life and work has come in the form of a biography written by Kingsley Martin, the editor of the socialist weekly, 'The New Statesman And Nation,' and published by Gollancz at 21s. Among other things, Laski was a very good friend to Indians, many of whom were his students at the London School of Economics. One of the most brilliant of them was Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, who has lately retired from the post of High Commissioner in London. It was he who got Laski to speak in Britain on innumerable platforms of the India League. A wonderful speaker, Laski used to attack the British [?] in burning phrases, explaining the absurdity of teaching in our schools the doctrines of Mill and Milton on freedom and then expecting them to allow the British to run India indefinitely. Those speeches helped to pave the way for the Labour Government's decision to concede independence after the world war. Laski acquired great influence in India itself where his books on politics are widely read and where his former students occupy high posts.

SIGNS OF HOPE

WHILE it is difficult to overestimate the evils of racism and oppression in South Africa, it is also true that there are grounds for hope. The most important factor for progress and a greater degree of racial equality is the economic trends which are bringing the African to urban areas and thus bringing non-Whites together with Whites faster than Dr. Malan and his government, or any government, can possibly keep them apart. This trend is not merely positive, for with more inter-racial contact and less urban poisoning there result social dislocations which create the slums and a kind of mass contact which may, for a time in South Africa as in North America, actually lighten tension.

It has been said that South Africa's economy in the past quarter century has gone through almost as great an industrial revolution as occurred at the time of the industrial revolution from the 1790's to the 1830's. The gross value of the output of secondary industry in South Africa rose more than fivefold to £535 million between 1928 and 1948. Yet most of the non-European, and especially the African, are treated by law and custom in a feudalistic manner. African males are not "employees" under the Industrial Conciliation acts, but servants under the archaic Masters and Servants laws similar to those in feudal European times. African males must make contracts with their employers, and penal sanctions are imposed for breach of contract. On the other hand, White workers in South Africa come under the Industrial Conciliation acts which contain some of the most protective legislation in the world. In addition, through other legislation they are "protected" from competition by non-European workers.

Industrial freedom has fast-tongued agriculturists and in these economic blocs largely been able to maintain low wages and inhuman working conditions through their influence in Parliament. A social gap, however, the relative importance of mining even of agriculture has to manufacturing has drawn foreign concern of South Africa as a land of gold and diamonds, happily for the economy of the country, not to mention the welfare of the Africans, there has been an increasing economic diversification with gold mining accounting for only 3 per cent.

In the past quarter-century, especially during and since World War II, the rise of secondary industry in South Africa has been rapid, with manufacturing now contributing a total of 22.5 per cent to the national income more than twice that of mining and almost twice that of agriculture. The stimulus has been partly financial and partly political, a financial necessity to conserve dollars and indeed earn pounds, and a political necessity—on the part of the Nationalists—in liaison with the Commonwealth. Basically, of course, the stimulus has been the almost classical conditions for the growth of capitalism: enormous reserves of iron ore, coal and other raw materials; an abundant labour supply; and a vast potential market both at home and abroad (in the rest of Africa). Whole new industries have been established—for example, textiles—with African labour being used largely in all but the highest managerial levels. The frequent allegation that non-European, especially Africans, are incapable of skilled work is belied by actual experience in these industries.

Africans Shift To Urban Jobs

It is estimated that between 30 and 40 per cent of the adult African population is now employed outside agriculture and mining, the employment of non-Europeans rising from 25,000 to 401,000 between 1928 and 1948. The real wages of non-Europeans are still unacceptably low, but are rising faster than those of Europeans. Many Africans are bringing their wives and children to the towns and stabilized family life is resulting. The African women, through a fortuitous court decision, legally can join trade unions; though rigidly segregated, non-European women constituted one-fifth of the membership of registered trade unions in 1949. Even male Africans are creating their own unions. The difficulties involved are great, however, since under the Masters' and Servants' law each African must give notice to terminate his contract before going on strike.

All this means that South African industry would collapse if Africans and other non-Europeans were withdrawn. Increasingly manufacturers realize that their vested interest is in a stabilized, well housed non-European labour force, and eventually their voices will be heard in Parliament and felt by the African in the locations. With more skilled employment, higher wages and more urbanization, the non-European himself will be in a better strategic position, if not yet in a voting one, to demand greater justice and equality.

Islands Of Interracial Activity

A second ground for hope in the existence, although much too infrequently, of little islands of genuine interracial activity in this sea of apartheid. Not too many can be found, but three—in the fields of higher education, religion and cultural relations—are illustrative.

At the 1952 graduation ceremony of the University of the Witwatersrand, Chancellor Richard Feilchenfeldt told the distinguished gathering: "Experience in this university shows that, given equal opportunities to study and to learn, Africans can benefit and progress in the same way as Europeans." These are fighting words in South Africa, but fighting words are expected from the Witwatersrand University in Johannesburg which, together with the University of Cape Town, tries to exemplify the movement in a divided country. Of the five full universities in South Africa, the two African institutions at Stellenbosch and Pretoria usually do not accept non-European students, and the University of Natal accepts them only to serve its own Witwatersrand, on the other hand, has between two and three hundred African, Indian and Coloured students in a student body of about four thousand. It is, however, not completely an interracial paradise, for non-European students live in separate hostels (or in private homes) and by common consent do not take part in sports or in dancing. They do, however, take telephones with White students and participate in student activities, some non-European always being elected to the student council.

Student Opposition To Segregation

When the Nationalists came into power in 1948, one of their goals was apartheid in higher education, with a cabinet member describing in Parliament "the intolerable situation and unpleasant relationship between Europeans and non-Europeans." The government shut off certain scholarships provided for African medical students and helped initiate a separate medical school at Durban for non-Europeans, promptly offering it 15 scholarships. The National Union of South African Students, sensitive to racism, immediately organized its own African Medical Scholarships Trust Fund, imposed a voluntary annual levy on students of 10 shillings (about $1.40) and so far has collected enough from students all over South Africa—and in other parts of the world—to offer several scholarships to qualified African medical students at Witwatersrand.

Through this and other support, including a direct government subsidy of almost 50 per cent of its annual budget, Witwatersrand University despite the lack of an appreciable endowment has not suffered despite the threats of the Nationalists to complete the segregation of higher education. This university also offers its meeting halls, when available, to outside groups desiring unsegregated meetings, and it is the home of the Johannesburg Society of Friends, which feels happier meeting at the university than in the Johannesburg Y.M.C.A. With the faculty and administration solidly and courageously behind a policy of integration in higher education, Witwatersrand and Cape Town universities are undoubtedly producing each year graduates who, if they remain in South Africa, are destined to be its leaders and inevitably will retain the refreshing interracial experience and outlook acquired during their university days.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

RHODESIAN FEDERATION AND AFTER

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

SOUTHERN RHODESIA will vote in a referendum on April 9, 1953 on whether or not to join the proposed Central African Federation. The result will be awaited with interest by Africans in all the continent south of the equator—for very good reasons.

Firstly, the Rhodesian decision will have a direct bearing on federation itself. An affirmative result will give new strength to the federalists and encourage them to go full-stream ahead with their plans for the Malacisation of Africa. An adverse result—which is most unlikely—will force them to go about federation a little more carefully.

Secondly, if the referendum result favours federation African opinion will perforce develop a new approach to Black-White relations on the continent. This might be a good development, it might not be—because so much depends on the basis and objectives of that unity.

One aspect of federation which arouses very close African interest is the attitude of the British Government towards the clearly expressed wishes of the Africans in Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Up to now, Britain has seemed determined to impose federation on these Africans in spite of their unanimous opposition. If Britain does this, she will have given Dr. Malan a valuable precedent for subsequent use when he presses his demand for the protectorates.

Up to now, Britain has taken the line that she cannot agree to incorporation within South Africa of the three Protectorates within our borders. Her reason is that she is legally obliged, in terms of the Schedule to the South Africa Act, to consult these people before she agrees to incorporation. Such agreement will presumably depend on African acquiescence to incorporation. At least this is what Britain's attitude so far has implied.

In short, Britain has taken the stand which implies that the protection extended to Basutoland, Bechuanaland and Swaziland would have been of no value if it did not mean that on a fundamental issue like incorporation, the protecting power would be guided by African wishes.

But this attitude, whether clearly expressed or implied, is almost the exact opposite of the line against the Africans in the protectorates of Nyasaland and Northern Rhodesia.

In (these) two territories Britain seems in mood to listen more to the wishes of the White settlers than to those of the African people. If she does this until federation comes through in the teeth of African opposition, Dr. Malan will have reason to ask why, in Basutoland, Swaziland and Bechuanaland, the attitude of the Africans should be treated with respect when it has been virtually ignored in Central Africa. He will have reason to insist that the Central African precedent justifies the incorporation of the protectorates within our borders against the wishes of their African inhabitants.

A second result of an affirmative decision is that the process which the African calls the Malacisation of Africa will be firmly entrenched in the whole of Southern Africa and directly threaten Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika—and even Ethiopia. For, in African eyes, federation consolidates a White racial front at the expense of the Africans and condemns the latter to a junior partnership from which the African cannot escape. In fact, if the history of South Africa is any guide, federation holds out the prospect for the African of seeing himself reduced to the position of virtual serfdom one day. This is what Malanism stands for in African eyes.

The protective clauses in the proposed federal constitution will not stop a determined Herriot and Malan of the federation successively reducing the African to the position of a serf. The framers of the constitution, who were Whites, ensured that political power should remain vested now and in the future, in White hands. At the very best, the African was given token representation in parliament. Where is partnership in that arrangement? And, if the African becomes a little more truculent in agitating for complete equality, what will stop the White federal Government presenting a united front with Union Malanites of the future against the African?

But there is a silver lining in this otherwise dark picture. If Britain forces through her plans for the creation of a White-dominated state in Central Africa, that will be the signal to most men of colour on the continent that it was time the Africans cultivated a pan-African approach to the question of Colour and devised ways and means to solve the problems created by this jointly. For a long time the White oppressors in all parts of Africa have acted more or less in unison when it came to handling African problems. Federation will give the African the reason to take a leap out of his oppressor's book.

This attitude will not be racial. It will be protective, inspired by African determination to throw off their shoulders the yoke of oppression. The Whiteman who opposes the evil tyranny of race will, as he has been in the past, be on the side of the African. The oppressor will join the advocates of a White front as he has done all along the line. The issue will be straight and clear cut—the African will be opposing social and political values he considers wrong and which he can no longer stand.

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Bombay, March 28.

INDIAN Parliament began the second stage of the debate on the General Budget by taking up the demands for grants in respect of the Ministry of External Affairs totalling Rs. 8,85,01,000. The Opposition members vigorously attacked the foreign policy of the Government of India. Dr. Shyamprasad Mookerji, leader of the National Democratic Group, applying the test of the results achieved in areas that mattered most to India—Pakistan, South Africa, Ceylon and the foreign pockets in India, adjudged India's foreign policy "a dismal and dynamic failure."

Mr. Nehru, winding up the debate on foreign affairs, stoutly defended his foreign policy. The Prime Minister defended his approach to foreign policy as a subordinate of "basty courage" to "quiet wisdom and in the action, looking ahead at the future rather than acting on the anger and passion of the moment. Mr. Nehru declared: "I am convinced that whoever might have been in charge of the foreign policy of India during these years could not have but followed more or less the broad policies that we have pursued, because it did not come out of my head or anyone else's head, but came out of the circumstances under which we live, the background of our history and the present context of events. It is an inevitable policy, bearing variations here or there, bearing, may be, a certain emphasis here or there."

In regard to South Africa Mr. Nehru said that the "half-hearted attitude of some of the important countries did not do any credit to them. The time might come when other countries of the world would have to choose definitely as to what policy they were to adopt in regard to a country like South Africa, where this policy of racial inequality, discrimination and suppression is applied in the way it is done. It was perfectly true that we have been unable to do anything in regard to South Africa except to express ourselves in the United Nations or otherwise. I would I do not see any solution of the problem in the near future. Certainly I cannot bring it about except as a gradual development of situations in the world which bring enormous pressure, I confess at the present moment to a feeling of some diffusionment at the way a number of important and great countries quibble about these matters. They could not openly support this kind of policy, of course, because practically no reasonable person in the world can support it."

The Congress Praja Socialist talks for co-operation at Governmental and other levels which had generated high hopes of Coalition Governments at the Centre and in some of the States, have failed. Negotiations between the Prime Minister and Congress President, Mr. Nehru and Shri Jayprakash Narayan, the Praja Socialist leader, have come to an end. While the Congress found no objection to a more radical economic and social programme outlined by the spokesman of the Praja Socialist Party in his talks with Mr. Nehru, it was felt that difficulties were bound to arise at Governmental level in the timing, method and manner of implementing it. The programme outlined by Shri Jayprakash included amendment of the Constitution to remove the compensation clause in abolishing zamindari and thus facilitate expeditious agrarian reform, a more pronounced labour policy, nationalisation of key industries, abolition of Upper Chambers of the legislature at the centre and in the States, stoppage of payment of privy purses to rulers, abolition of the system of Rajpramukhs and concrete measures to tackle unemployment.

Informed Congress circles, however, suggest that there is still scope for co-operation between the Socialist and the Congress parties in matters in which they are agreed, like fighting Communism and communalism and implementation of a programme of rural rehabilitation.

The communal organisations like Jan Sangh, Hindu Maha Sabha and Ram Rajya Parishad have launched an agitation in support of Praja Parishad of Jammu, which is continuing its satyagraha, demanding complete accession of Kashmir to India. These organisations started satyagraha under the leadership of Dr. Shyamprasad Mookerji in Delhi defying the ban imposed by the District Magistrate on processions and meetings. Dr. Mookerji was arrested last week along with two other members of Parliament while leading a procession. After Dr. Mookerji's arrest police had to resort to teargas and lathi charge to disperse the unruly crowd. About thirty persons were arrested in this connection. Dr. Mookerji was subsequently released by the Supreme Court on the grounds that he was not brought before any Magistrate within the next 24 hours of his arrest and that was against the provisions of the Indian Constitution. Mr. Nehru characterised this agitation as "helping the enemies of India."

The eight-man Pakistan delegation, headed by Mr. G. Faruque, Chairman of the Pakistan Cotton Board has started negotiations with the Government of India at Delhi for a long-term trade agreement. This is the first attempt to have a long-term agreement between the two countries. Looking at the preliminary speeches of the spokesmen of the parties concerned, prospects of such an agreement seem to be bright.

Akalis leaders, including Master Tara Singh, who were arrested recently have been released by the Punjab Government.

Acharya Vinoba Bhave has resumed his walking tour for Bhudan Yagya (land gift) after three months rest at Chandil.

Sri Mahavir Tyagi has been appointed as a Minister of State for Defence.

At least 50 people perished and over 700 others were injured in north-western gales which swept parts of East and West Bengal and Assam. The gales, which zipped treatise, blew away roofs and flattened telegraph poles and banana plantations, rendered over 15,000 homeless. Lashing the countryside at 60 miles per hour at places, the storm has reopened the question of rehabilitation for the Government of East and West Bengal and Assam as most of those rendered homeless are displaced persons who had made a humble beginning with loans from the respective Governments. Total damage in property and crops is estimated at over a crore of Rupees.

The Government of India has bowed down before the strong and united opposition of Tamil nad and has virtually decided that the Andhra capital will have to be located outside Madras City. Andhras are still adamant over the temporary capital issue and a controversy is still raging between the parties concerned, preventing the publication of Justice Wanchu's report for fear of its adverse repercussions. Waltair or Vizagapatnam may be chosen as a temporary capital of Andhra.

The Government of Pakistan has released Bhupat, the notorious dacoit of Saurashtra, from jail on the expiry of his term of imprisonment for entering Pakistan without a permit and carrying arms without a licence. The Government of India requested the Pak Government for his extradition, but the Pakistan Government has refused to accede to this request.

The resignation of Sri Dharwar, the Chief Minister of Saurashtra, on the grounds of continued ill-health, has not yet been accepted by the Congress Legislative Party and there are chances that he may be prevailed upon to continue as Chief Minister.

The Government of India have lodged a strong protest with the Government of South Africa against the introduction of a Bill in the South African Parliament to prevent the entry into the Union of wives and children of persons of Indian origin domiciled in the Union of South Africa.

According to latest information from New Delhi, the Government of India have sent a special report to the Secretary General of the United Nations pointing out the gravity of the situation created by the South African Government's attempt to implement the Group Areas Act in the different parts of the Union. The action recently taken by the Union Government in connection with the proclamation of Group Areas is in flagrant and complete disregard of the resolutions passed by the United Nations in 1950, 1951 and 1952.

Moral Re-Armament

Indian Students' Manifesto

WHEN the Moral Re-Armament team led by Dr. Frank Buchman visited India recently a rousing reception was given them throughout the country. Various newspapers printed special illustrated supplements on the subject. 'The Hindu' (Madras) in a supplementary issue dated March 12 gives the following manifesto issued by Indian students, which the students world in South Africa will do well to ponder over:

We, the undersigned students representing various political, cultural and social student organisations, sign this document, in the spirit of Moral Re-Armament, to start a new chapter in the student and youth movement of this country.

"We are convinced that Moral Re-Armament is the only force that presents a permanent answer to all the problems of the students in colleges and universities not only of our country, but we believe, of the entire world.

The atmosphere that prevails in the universities and colleges of a country and the direction in which the minds of the students and young people work determines the future of the country and the world. This atmosphere to a great extent depends upon the individuals comprising the colleges and universities. We therefore realise that for the progress of our nations and the world a change in our hearts and minds is essential, and this change must be brought about immediately.

We acknowledge the following facts:

1. That a great deal of moral de-generation has unfortunately crept into the universities through us.
2. That we have very often laid emphasis on wrong values and have been guided often by success, sex and security.
3. That we have contented ourselves with mere book knowledge and have very seldom tried to translate it into action thus making our lives unpractical and useless.
4. That we have shirked our moral obligations towards our friends, families, universities, nation and humanity.
5. That we took great pride in our spiritual heritage but never thought of making it a reality in our present lives.

We are aware that a tremendous responsibility for the future peace and happiness in the world lies on each one of us, and we are convinced that that can be achieved only if we become changed, God-guided young men and women, and live by absolute moral standards.

We extend our hand to all those who believe with us that the world can be rebuilt by people who begin with themselves, their homes and their surroundings. The first step that we all jointly intend to take in that direction

FRIDAY, 10TH APRIL, 1953

Fateful Day For South Africa

APRIL 15 will be a fateful day for South Africa. The country will decide which Party shall be in power—the Nationalist or the United Party. In so far as the ten million non-Europeans are concerned they are to be the silent spectators of this drama of the two and three quarter million White people. Drama it is, indeed, and a melo-drama at that, the way things seem to be moving. That the non-Europeans have no choice to make in this election must be taken as a piece of luck. For if they had it would have been a very difficult thing for them to choose. For them it is a choice between two evils and they would at best have to choose the lesser one, which is the United Party. Under it at least there will be a lease of life for the non-Europeans. Under the Nationalist Party they are given no hope whatsoever. It will be a case of choosing between slavery or death. If we in our human weakness choose the former it will be a living death. Our body and soul both shall perish. If we choose the latter our body which is in any case perishable shall perish but our immortal soul shall live till eternity. It shall live in the hearts of not only our own future generation but of the world. The great souls who have sacrificed their lives at the altar of Truth and Justice live to this day even after a thousand years.

Under the United Party, on the other hand, we are at least given promises of being consulted and there may be a chance of converting our opponents to a better way of thinking. But what use is it conjecturing when you have no choice to make? We can only pray, as lovers of South Africa—a beloved land to millions by virtue of their birth and to thousands by virtue of adoption, that those who have the right to vote shall exercise it not in the interest of any one Party but in the interest of this great country. For on it will depend its future. If they do not choose wisely and allow this country to pass into the hands of irresponsible and unscrupulous hands millions will undergo sufferings beyond human imagination, but, in the end, this land, which has been blessed with all the resources the human mind can wish for, will be rendered desolate. Neither will there be any "White" man nor will there be his much vaunted "White" civilisation left in it. That will be the ultimate result of man's inhumanity to man. There is space in this land for all its inhabitants to live in peace, happiness and contentment. It is the selfishness and greed of a few who have assumed power unto themselves that has brought so much misery to this country and is leading it to ruination. What we all need to remember is: "Those who wield the sword shall perish by the sword," "Love thy neighbour as thyself," "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." Instead of this the spirit prevailing to-day is that of "an eye for an eye" and

"a tooth for a tooth" which must result in misery and death. For the sake of this fair land and for all its good people God forbid that that should happen.

'HORRIBLE WEAPONS'

SHOULD SCIENTISTS MAKE THEM?

OPENING the Conference of the Commonwealth Advisory Committee on Defence Science in New Delhi recently Prime Minister Nehru urged that scientists should "help in creating an atmosphere in which science can be diverted more and more to the arts of peace, construction and co-operation."

Over forty eminent scientists from all parts of the Commonwealth and observers from the U.S.A. are attending the Conference.

Mr. Nehru assured them of the full co-operation of his Government in the tasks in which they were engaged and said:

"What these tasks are, I am rather dimly, sometimes rather uncomfortably, conscious."

Today, when the world looked up to science to find a solution of its ills, it was at the same time terribly afraid of what science might do in destroying what it had itself built up. It was an extraordinary dilemma.

When the consequences of the scientist's work were so widespread, the responsibility upon him became terribly great and he had to function in something slightly more than a purely scientific field, went on the Premier.

"There is little solution of that dilemma in merely casting blame on others. If we do not solve the problem, it might very well bring disaster."

"Sir John Cockcroft, F.R.S. leader of the United Kingdom delegation and atomic scientist, presided at the opening session."

Dr. Kathleen Lonsdale, a Quaker scientist who was not present at the Defence Conference, made some comments on Mr. Nehru's speech in a letter to the 'News Chronicle.'

The dilemma which Mr. Nehru posed at the meeting, said Dr. Lonsdale, was in fact his own dilemma.

"If statesmen choose to ask scientists to make terrible weapons and if they provide laboratories and salaries for this work, then many scientists will be found who will believe it to be their duty to do their utmost to provide what their own statesmen want."

"It is, however, a joint responsibility. Scientists need not undertake this work if they object to it."

Dr. Lonsdale then asks whether it is right or even wise to make horribly destructive weapons in the hope that their very existence will prevent war, knowing that if the gamble fails they will be used.

"I believe it is not wise," she concludes, "because it is not right. But then I believe that Christian behaviour is really practical politics."—Peace News.

Railway Apartheid

There have been no incidents on Rand stations in connection with the Railway "apartheid" regulations, states the Johannesburg correspondent of the 'Natal Mercury.' So far as is officially known, there have been only two alleged incidents in the Union—both in Durban. In the first case, it is alleged, two Coloured men went into a tea-room and were asked to leave. They left the premises and later, it is alleged, one of them returned. He was charged with trespassing, giving a false name and address and an 'allegation' under the "apartheid" regulations. The case is still pending. In the second case, it is alleged, three Coloured women went into the European women's cloakroom. Their explanation to the police was that they went to see people off and that there were no facilities for Coloured women. The police informed them that the matter would be referred to the Senior Public Prosecutor.

Ashman Nene, 41-year-old chairman of the Cape Malay district branch of the African National Congress appeared before the Durban Magistrate, Mr. C. E. Russell on Tuesday in connection with the alleged using of the European booking hall at the Berea Road Railway Station on February 23. The hearing was adjourned until April 28 to give the defence time to study the record of the recent Appellate Court decision on railway Apartheid. Nene was not formally charged in Court and made no plea.

STALIN'S DEATH AND WORLD PEACE

NOMINALLY and technically, Malenkov takes over where Stalin left off. But in no other sense can he be regarded as Stalin's successor. The qualities of eminence and omnipotence popularly vested in Stalin are not acquired overnight. Some day Malenkov may create for himself the status of the "Godlike" Stalin. But he may not succeed.

This is a time of guesses. Yet it is possible at this stage to predict a number of things with certainty, and of these several are worthy of special study.

1. Sooner or later one person will emerge as Stalin's successor: the entire Soviet system is geared, practically and psychologically, to operate at the direction of one man, and the present arrangement for "government by committee"—or rather dictatorship by oligarchy—is only a temporary expedient.

2. The transference of power to this one person will be prefaced by a period of unrest both within the Soviet Union and the satellite countries.

3. The aim of the Western Powers will be to promote and exploit this unrest so as to cause as much disruption as possible within the Communist kingdom.

Nothing can conceivably happen to prevent each of these developments. Each may safely be regarded as inevitable and therefore beyond our control. But the impact each will have upon the other is yet to be determined, and is of immense consequence to world peace.

Undoubtedly, the governments of the Western Powers received the news of Stalin's demise with pleasure, implicit or explicit.

For twenty-seven years Stalin has ruled with absolute power an area of eight million square miles, containing two hundred million people, divided into one hundred and sixty-nine separate ethnic groups. Surely his death presents an irresistible temptation to break the tyranny he has wielded so long and so effectively? But so many people have been preoccupied with according proper condemnation to the sustained ruthlessness which has invariably characterised Stalin's attitude to potential rivals, and which forms each rung of the ladder he climbed to supremacy, that one result of his power is frequently forgotten. For the very strength which Stalin gained and held of itself enabled him to behave with great shrewdness in matters affecting peace and war.

Let us not forget that since the end of the last war, hundreds of international "incidents" have occurred. Anyone of these could have led instantaneously to world war thirty years ago—and would have done so today had it not been for the recognition, on both sides, of the final calamity inherent in full-scale modern war. It is true that the Western Powers have exercised great restraint on those occasions; it is equally true that the Western Powers have exercised great restraint on those occasions; it is equally true that Stalin has done likewise. This was because he was already strong enough to require no military adventure to enhance his prestige.

Prof. Radhakrishnan, India's former envoy to the Soviet Union, had two lengthy meetings with Stalin. On both occasions, he was profoundly impressed by Stalin's wish to be regarded by posterity as the great peace-maker. Contemporary judgment would surely decide that this wish remained cynically unfulfilled. Yet, in a relative sense, it could prove all too tragically true.

Analysis of Soviet foreign policy frequently overlooks one basic consideration which should never be forgotten. While it is true of all countries that domestic and foreign policies are contingent one upon the other, in the case of Russia they are inseparable in a much greater degree.

Almost all Soviet utterances on foreign policy, and even their major policy proposals are intended primarily for domestic purposes.

This has been noticeably true in the case of the whole Communist-inspired peace campaign but applies just as much to the recent anti-Jewish developments.

Anyone doubting the intrinsic propaganda nature of Soviet foreign policy has only to consider for a moment how a vast personal dictatorship could be maintained without immense consolidation every minute of the day and night. This is only to say that much of the bewilderment caused to the outside world by the frequent somersaults of Soviet foreign policy disappears when it is considered in its proper context—namely, as driving from, and being directed to, home purposes.

Short-Cuts To Power

But this has a direct bearing on the present transition. Stalin's eventual successor will have to overcome violent intrigue and opposition inside his own country.

For internal reasons, he may be faced with two clear alternatives as a short-cut to absolute power. On the one hand, he may seek his strength and supremacy as the peace-maker—a beloved and revered leader who succeeds, where Stalin failed, in establishing good and peaceful relations with the rest of the world. On the other hand, he can determine to establish his might by emerging as the infallible military defender of the Soviet fatherland, sweeping aside with the skill of inspired generalship all potential invaders and trouble makers.

The influence of the West can be decisive in determining which of these alternatives becomes the most attractive.

Will the Western Governments be so intemperate as to create a situation in which the latter alternative becomes the only choice?

Or will they rise to the challenge presented now, and by wisdom combined with enlightened diplomacy devise a situation in which the future Soviet dictator will find all his personal and national advantage in working to create good relations with the rest of the world?

We can scarcely hope that public opinion in Russia, by now probably quite atrophied through prolonged inhibition in such matters, will determine Stalin's ultimate successor. The greatest—and most conflicting—influences will emanate from the leading factions within the country, generally reckoned as being the Army, the Communist Party and the secret police.

But in the meanwhile, caution should be the keynote of the Western Governments' attitude. A false step could play into the hands of a Soviet military demagogue seeking a sudden and aggressive ascent to power. Temperate patience exercised at present by Britain and America would have a salutary effect, and could indirectly evoke within the Soviet Union the necessary backing for a man who could lead his mighty camp along the paths of conciliation.—'Peace News.'

SOUTH AFRICA, S.A. INDIANS AND RELATIONS BETWEEN INDIA AND THE UNION

DR. EDGAR H. BROOKES' LECTURE

(Dr. Edgar H. Brookes is South Africa's one of the few great thinkers and writers. He holds an esteemed position both among the Europeans and the non-Europeans. For a considerable time he was at the head of Adams Mission, where both Africans and Indians have had training under him and his work is visible on all those who have been under him. Dr. Brookes was for a long time one of the few enlightened Senators representing the non-Europeans, which, post to the great disappointment of the non-Europeans in particular, he has resigned owing to ill-health. He is also one of the live wires in the S.A. Institute of Race Relations. Dr. Brookes is at present engaged in lecturing. He has delivered a series of interesting lectures in Johannesburg on current topics. They are highly enlightening and it is to be hoped that they will be published in book form for the benefit of the general public. It is difficult, almost impossible, for us to publish these lectures fully but we cannot resist the temptation of giving a portion of one of the last lectures dealing with "South Africa, South African Indians and the Relations between India and the Union," for the benefit of our readers.—Ed. I.O.)

WE come now to South Africa, to the South African Indians, and to the relations between India and the Union. The years from 1907-1948, which might be described as the Gandhi-Smuts era, are over. While these two great men were both alive, there was always hope. Each recognised the essential greatness of the other. General Smuts, it is true, never seemed to bring to any question of colour in South Africa the complete and dauntless freedom which he brought to the world of international affairs. Yet he sincerely respected and admired Gandhi. Had he been less magnanimous in character, he might have exhibited dislike and distrust for that respect and admiration. For Gandhi and the question of Indian rights in South Africa gave him little peace from the early days of responsible government in the Transvaal to his final political defeat. As the Fenian War was to Napoleon, so the Indian question was to him—in apparent side show which in fact drained life out of him and played its part in bringing him to disaster. All the essentials of the present acute problem were with us before Dr. Mahan's government took over.

Not only were they not the special fault of the Nationalist Party, they were not even the special fault of the Afrikaner. The so-called "Indian question" has been the political grave of English speaking Natal, particularly at Durban, which has tended (as it too tended to say) to shake Dr. Dozza by the right hand while waving two Union Jacks with the left. It was his English speaking supporters who, time and again, prevented General Smuts from going as far as his 'fair for statesmanship' would have left him. His passing has left no man of equal political stature, and lesser men are left to face the situation.

The South African white men have no 'mutts' and the South African Indians have no Gandhi. India, as we have seen, is too Communist but in its own way, not the American way. To keep it so is vital to the maintenance of free Western civilisation. If South Africa by her policies drives India into the opposite camp, she will be a traitor to world freedom and a direct helper of Stalin. What seems the almost trivial "domestic issues" of the Union thus constitute a potential menace to world peace of a most formidable character. There seem lacking at present on the South African scene Europeans who realise fully the gravity of the "Indian question" and at the same time have enough political influence to make their views matter while much Indian leadership has been so thoroughly imbued as to make an honourable compromise all but impossible.

In an article in its issue of the 14th January 1953, 'Die Transvaler' said that "the great question was whether Africa would range itself with the democratic West or Communist Russia or oriental India. But if the "democratic West" and "oriental India" part company, the former will soon be in mortal danger. "Do the Western powers," asks 'Die Transvaler', "realise what significance Africa has for them?" It is the idleness of dreaming to imagine the Gold Coast or Tunisia allied with the Union to protect Africa against India, just because all the states concerned happen to be on the African continent,

Do the Western powers, we may ask in our turn, realise what significance India has for them? Even when they are most exasperated with Mr. Nehru's neutralism, they do. And when they come to balance the Union, notwithstanding its neutralism and its strategic position, against India (which they would prefer not to have to do, for there is still much friendliness towards South Africa), their decision cannot be for the Union.

Again and again in these studies we have stressed the similarity of the problems facing the great world, and those facing the Union, which is a true microcosm. Even those irritating elements of unreasonableness which the West has found in Mr. Nehru's policy have their parallel in South Africa. It would be idle to pretend that the political leadership of South African Indians in the last few years has been conciliatory or 'easy'. The 'moral overtones' has been present there too, and perhaps sometimes the double standard of morality referred to earlier—complacency as regards the Soviets, critical towards the Western Powers. Moreover, the Union has had a problem all of its own to cope with in the fact that an influential section of Indian leadership attempts to combine Communism with Satyagraha—Marx with Gandhi, a portentous alliance.

Perhaps this picture may be thought a little over-critical. Perhaps Indian opinion may feel that it overstates the case. But even if it understates the case it would still be the duty and the interest of South African statesmen to consider and, if possible, win over South African Indian opinion, just as it is the duty and the interest of world statesmen to consider and win over India.

India is, when properly known and loved, a pearl of great price, a potential friend worth cultivating; and that should be the approach, worthy of our common humanity, and completely justified by the facts, as those who know and love India can testify. That South Africa can also experience with its own Indian population if it will. A man always has more of a chance to bring out his trust and best self if he is approached as a man rather than as a "problem," and there is a great wealth of emotion and intellect in the Indian population of South Africa, available to the very few who know and love.

But India is the western world is also a potential enemy, and a hostile India, making common cause with the Soviets and China, might do much to bring our world down to ruin. No amount of irritation with Indian leadership for not thinking as Americans think about present day issues, no amount of wishing that India was not there, can destroy the fact that India is in fact there, and if not a friend can easily be a foe. So in the Union it is utterly futile to wish that the Indian population had never come here famous and notorious, in fact about Indian "repatriation"—which will not and cannot take place—as a political programme, useless and dangerous to fasten only on the fact that the Indian can be 'difficult'. They are here, they are here permanently, and if they are not friends they can be formidable foes. For South Africa's own inner peace it is important that the Indian should be found a real place in the joint community. But South Africa also must act in this matter as a trustee of that western civilisation of which she is so proud to be a part, and act with a due sense of her responsibility to the western world from which she springs, but which has already suffered much by her responsibility in these matters.

To most seems that the Indian character itself should be considered. India fulfilled herself in loyal service and co-operation. The best of Indian thought and practice is bound up with these ideals. India, respected and loved, has a fund of true friendship to give in return, "pressed down and shaken to gather and running over." To force this great people into bitterness, resentment and self-protectiveness, and finally into a bitter struggle with our ideologies, would be a crime against world peace. Indeed, but most of all a crime against the very lovely thing—the soul of India at its highest and best.

Few men have been more magnanimous and less given to cherishing resentments than Mahatma Gandhi. Yet his years in South Africa left indelible impressions on his soul. One wonders how many South Africans realise how wide an influence our petty exclusions and discourtesies have in the world. We cannot say that Gandhi would have been a Christian if it had not been for the South African Christians, he had other difficulties than his inconsistent colour bar to face, difficulties of philosophy and theology. Yet it makes one cold to believe that a picture of Christianity too clear must have formed from his experiences in our land. Is it altogether fanciful to feel that if he had become a Christian he would have found in co-operation a stronger force than non-cooperation, and been able moreover to reconcile Moslems and Hindus in a way impossible to the best Hindus or the best Moslems?

How much of this is justifiable speculation must be left to the reader's judgment; but this we do know—that Gandhi came to South Africa a believer in the British Empire; that his experiences here played their part in determining him to break away "if possible; and that it was Natal, with all its emotional loyalty to the Empire, which thus helped to give it the greatest blow it has ever had.

"Hardly ever," writes Gandhi in his Autobiography, "have I known anybody to cherish such loyalty as I did to the British Constitution...The National Anthem used to be sung at every meeting that I attended in Natal. I then felt that I must also join in the singing. Not that I was unaware of the defects in British rule, but I thought it was on the whole acceptable. In those days I believed that British rule was on the whole beneficial to the ruled...Never in my life did I exploit this loyalty, never did I seek to gain a selfish end by its means. It was for me more in the nature of an obligation, and I rendered it without expecting a reward." ("My Experiments with Truth," Chapter XXVI) In January, 1897, he was mobbed by angry Europeans on returning to Durban after a stay in India, yet he raised a corps of 1200 South African Indians for ambulance service in the Anglo-Boer War. In 1906 he organised a much smaller Indian Ambulance Corps in the Zulu rebellion, and though his great joy was in tending the Zulu wounded he was yet in the service of the white government of Natal, and even held (a little-known fact) the rank of Sergeant-Major! He organised an Ambulance Corps in England as late as 1914.

It is too much to suggest that it was only Gandhi's experiences in South Africa that made him turn against British rule in India. The years of decision were in India itself. But it is undeniable that the experiences of the Mahatma in South Africa formed him for his leadership in India, helped him to discover the method of Satyagraha, showed him the evil of race prejudice, prepared him for disillusionment with the British Empire, led him by winding paths indeed, but steadily to his destiny, to his part in building a new world wherein the British Empire, as it was can no more have a place, so that Natal is rejecting him ultimately rejected it.

If our policy and attitudes could have such far-reaching effects in the relatively stable first quarter of our century, how much more important these must be in the uncertain age in which we live, when so much is in peril and when responsibility of word and deed is a duty as never before! With a policy which discriminates against Indians as Indians, South Africa becomes a liability to the Commonwealth, a liability to the United States and its allies, a liability to the United Nations. If India went Communist, the effect on the world would be incalculably bad. No one is more likely to push her over to the Communist side than white South Africa, and no community is more likely to suffer from the victory of world Communism than white South Africa. There seems a lack of perspective, an inadequate sense of proportion, in running these risks in order that Mr. X may be elected to the Durban City Council, Major Y to the Natal Provincial Council or Dr. Z to Parliament on that "anti-Apartheid" platform which is the easiest way in Natal to become famous without ability.

nest egg to buy tools for his trade when he leaves the Centre.

Dr. Brand does not expect the rehabilitation project to grow in size, but rather hopes it will serve as an experimental centre and a model for government and private hospitals in other countries.

Born in 1914 in south India of missionary parents, Dr. Brand was educated in England. Determined to become a missionary, he worked as a carpenter, plumber, mechanic, stone mason, and studied architectural drawing and building construction before going to medical school.

He received his medical degree at the University College Hospital in London and later, a Fellowship of the Royal College of Surgery. He also worked as an orthopaedic surgeon at the Children's Hospital in London.

In 1946 he was called to head the Department of Orthopaedics at the Vellore Medical School in India.

He was recently elected a Honorary professor of the Royal College of Surgeons in recognition of his research work on leprosy paralysis.

His wife, a specialist in ophthalmology, is also on the staff at Vellore as an eye surgeon. They have four small children.

LEPROSY REHABILITATION IN INDIA

(From Our New York Correspondent)

DR. PAUL BRAND, British missionary surgeon in India and widely known for his pioneering work in leprosy rehabilitation, has just completed a three months series of consultations under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation with America's foremost hand surgeons concerning reconstructive surgery for the paralyzed hands of leprosy victims.

Dr. Brand has left for India on April 2 and is due to pass through the Union in the beginning of May.

Head of the Department of Orthopaedics at the Christian Medical College in Vellore, Madras State, India, Dr. Brand is also director of New Life Centre, a rehabilitation project for leprosy patients near Vellore. He is a missionary of the Mission to Lepers in London.

Dr. Paul Brand attracted considerable attention in world-wide medical circles in 1948 when he performed what is believed to be the first successful transplantation of tendons in the paralyzed hands of a leprosy patient at Christian Medical College in Vellore, India. Later a similar operation was performed at the U.S. national leprosy hospital in Carville, Louisiana.

Two years later, after many leprosy patients who had undergone effective reconstructive surgery at Vellore were compelled to return to the hospital because they still could not make a living, Dr. Brand established a rehabilitation centre where discharged leprosy patients could learn cottage industries and skilled trades before returning to their homes.

The only one of its kind in the world for leprosy cases, the rehabilitation centre is patterned after a typical Indian village. Called New Life Centre by the patients, the village was started with a gift from an American arthritis patient in Vellore and receives some support from the Gandhi Leprosy Fund, as well as gifts from America and England.

The fifty or so patients represent all castes from Brahmin to untouchable, who live together harmoniously, sharing food at the same table and taking turns in performing the daily chores of the Centre. While their treatment is being completed, they learn to help themselves in preparation for their re-entry into village life.

Training is carried on under skilled instructors, and special tools have been designed for the patients' individual needs by Dr. Brand. Products, which include all kinds of carpenter work and toys, are sold in leading departmental stores in Madras.

Experiments are carried out during the period of training to determine just how independent each patient can be, and studies are made of the crafts best suited for leprosy cases.

Each patient receives the proceeds from the sale of articles he has made, thus accumulating a

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

By HOMER A. JACK

(With The Kind Permission Of 'The Christian Century')

V

AN INTERRACIAL WORK CAMP

A SECOND interracial institution has been in operation for four years and promises to fill a real need in a country which goes to great lengths to keep peoples apart. The Wilgespruit Fellowship is a group of dedicated, colour blind Christians who have taken to a hilly, rock-strewn farm a few miles west of Johannesburg at Randpoort. Here they conduct an interracial work camp. A modest centre of Christian living is slowly taking shape as house conferences, training courses and retreats.

Unlike some tentative interracial experiments, Wilgespruit is not afraid of publicity. One Johannesburg newspaper in July printed a favourable story. But by some rule of South African Jewish estate ethics, it would not print a photograph of the 19 young people of all colours actually working in South Africa together. Already Wilgespruit is a significant experiment in community and "welcomes all who wish to come together as Christians, regardless of racial distinction, to work toward a richer understanding. This sounds simple enough—almost innocuous anywhere else in the world—but there's nothing else quite like it in all of South Africa.

A third memorable institution is the Durban International Club. The visitor to South Africa soon realizes that there is nowhere for Whites and non-Whites to meet on a social level in any of the cities. Hotel lobbies and all kinds of restaurants are closed—especially, by custom and not by law. If two people of two races are friends or want to be friends, there is no public place to cultivate this friendship, except surreptitiously on such park benches as are not marked "European" or "Non-European."

To fill this need for social intercourse, interracial clubs have been established at least in Cape Town, Johannesburg and Durban. For various reasons, some political, only the Durban International Club survives. Today it has a paid-up membership of 400 persons, with equal numbers of Indians and Whites and fewer Africans and Coloureds. The club serves meals, maintains a library, sponsors lectures on race relations, offers some group activities and allows the use of its premises to other organizations with mixed memberships. After almost a decade of operation, and recently with modest aid from the Phelps-Stokes Fund, the club serves as an important bridge between Africans, Indians and Whites in this third largest city in South Africa.

Growing Native Dissatisfaction

The third ground of hope for a change in the age-old pattern of race relations in South Africa is the rising threshold of dissatisfaction by non-Europeans. The traditional "hewers of wood" are suddenly fabricating vehicles for freedom. While this unrest is most obvious in the African and Indian national congresses, which will be described in the final article, it extends to many other levels of non-European life.

In certain colonial countries and even in large portions of the United States there is a middle class of non-Whites who have a vested interest in the status quo and actually can be counted on to act as a counterweight to revolutionary changes. This is much less true in South Africa. There is a growing lower middle class, hardly middle compared to European or American standards—but these people are being so contemptuously treated that even the professional men among them know their only hope lies in the future, and not with the present.

Even without ion much trained leadership or organization, in recent years there have been important demonstrations of this vast, non-European potential for direct political action—by peoples almost completely without franchise and therefore without vehicles for parliamentary action. One spectacular example was the refusal of African residents in the Alexandra location of Johannesburg in 1913 and 1914 to use buses in protest against a fare rise of one penny. Thousands walked many miles each day to and from work for many months—and won. In 1946, some 60,000 Africans struck on the Rand gold mines. Ten workers were killed, hundreds injured and thousands driven back to work by force. In 1950 Indians and Africans held a successful day of protest against oppression with thousands walking off their jobs in several centres. Also in 1949-50 there were evidences on the Rand of increasing defiance of the insulting and often brutal White police. Here women took the lead, and as the commission investigating the disturbances revealed, "Native women played a prominent part in all the disturbances (being) always in the forefront in large numbers and by yelling and striking eggs on their menfolk to fight the police." These are but a few of the examples of effort by non-Europeans to mitigate their plight with the only tools available to them.

Nationalists Bring On Tension

It is ironic that the Malan government can thank itself most for the present revolutionary spirit of the non-Europeans. During the years that the United party was in power, the administration of its White supremacy policy was sufficiently lenient for moderates within the non-European community successfully to advocate conciliation and caution and for the community to be so divided in terms of strategy that it could not successfully engage in political battle. With Malanism visible for all to see, however, the moderate leaders have either repudiated their earlier positions or been repudiated, and there is hardly any discussion among non-Europeans as to whether or not co-operation with the government is feasible. In addition, the Nationalists have brought about what the non-Europeans themselves have never been able to do before—they have forced the non-Whites to come together and bury their racial antagonisms under a common threat. This makes a recent student of South African politics, John Hatch, comment in his new volume, "The Dilemma Of South Africa, that the present racial situation in Johannesburg in 1952 is "as explosive as the condensation of the people of Paris and St. Petersburg before 1789 and 1917."

The general dissatisfaction has been greatly sustained by events far from the borders of South Africa. As carefully as the Malan government tries to isolate South Africa, and especially its non-Europeans, from the outside world, new ideas infiltrate into union across the Atlantic and Indian oceans and from north of the Limpopo. If the government is not influenced by world public opinion, the non-Europeans in South Africa are

Communism Blamed

Almost 200,000 non-Europeans in South Africa were recruited for World War II and in the process many caught a spark of the democracy for which they presumably fought. Others got hints now and then of world public opinion turned against their government on occasion.

article in one of the English-speaking newspapers, a broadcast from the All-India radio, stories in American picture magazines, or rumours of another speech by the Rev. Michael Scott before the United Nations. The Indians follow carefully the refusal of courageous India to sell precious agricultural bags and the refusal of a truculent South Africa to co-operate fully with the United Nations inquiries. Most of all, the Africans hear the drums of freedom beating through the whole continent of Africa, and they like what they hear from the Gold Coast and from Nigeria.

The South African government periodically recognizes this threat of revolt by the non-Europeans and lays it at the door of communism. The Communist party, though now technically disbanded, is no doubt working overtime in South Africa to use this dissatisfaction for its own evil purposes. To attribute, however, the growing "insolence" (a favourite word) to the Communists is to give the latter a strength and a success which they don't deserve however gladly they would accept the honour. Yet it is wrong to underestimate the potential of communism anywhere in Africa, least of all in South Africa. In this unhappy land the preconditions of communism are evident (as in the economic sphere are the classic preconditions of capitalism), for it is easy to see how subversive shantytowns and hungry stomachs can be.

The world is moving fast these days. The African, if not in the lead at least in the location, knows something of this program of the coloured world coming into its own in India, Indonesia, northern Africa. With this knowledge the despised "kaffir" and "coolie" will never be docile and happy again. This revolutionary potential still spells hope if it is understood and acted upon by Whites in South Africa who think in terms of a decade and not of a century. It equally spells danger if this only reaction is to jail a few more Communists, real or alleged, and hope the worst will blow over as it somehow always has in South Africa before.

CAPITALISM AND WAR

By Wilfred H. Harrison

It seems cruel to say so but most of our wonderful mechanical developments have been made possible by continual 20th century wars. Every invention has been encouraged to perfect the war machinery and almost every factory has been converted for that purpose, which also means that every mechanical workshop is making big profits for those shareholders or owners who control them. This induced a Labour M.P. in England to write a book with the words "Death Pays The Dividends". In other words capitalism thrives on war. In fact it would today collapse with continual peace.

America being the hub of the capitalist universe has given special attention in recent years to producing war knowing as they do that if all their improved machinery was diverted to the necessities of life an abundant market of goods would, soon exceed the demand. This really happened there following the attack in 1945. They, unlike Europe, suffered no destruction of their plant and material, hence their warehouses were soon full of goods and millions unemployed as a consequence.

Devastated Europe was in dire need hence the "Marshall Aid" on a credit basis was established to dispose of their supplies. The Atlantic Pact followed which meant a combination of nations with America of the Western Powers against the East. This allowed America to get back to her war machinery to supply the lot. More armament production has continued in America and England ever since. It pairs of London's crumbled streets, of shops and houses are of little importance in comparison. Their United and rationed foodstuffs is another tragedy of this unholy alliance. The possibility of a third world war is recording daily in spite of the efforts of the Americans in Korea to keep the Eastern world into selfishness.

It is considered a crime in America to talk of peace. A little girl who heard her brother say so said "Mummy, Johnny has said a wicked word." Every peace move in England or even South Africa is said to be "Communist inspired". If that is so surely they want peace. Where is to be the battleground for a future war? It will be impossible to evade the East to face 400,000,000 combatants with all their munitions on the spot. The cowardly proceeds of atomic warfare is the intention for the next occasion. Tests of its destructiveness have been pronounced a "success" by Britain and America, and our new Industry Uranium is to supply them both with the material for it.

When Knights were held they fought each other. Modern "civilisation" put up their women and children for targets, and smash up their homes in the process. There is no animal on this earth so vicious and ferocious as the human animal. Not because of evil feelings, most people who are responsible for 20th century great deeds are possibly well intentioned in doing so. It is a matter of drift. War is the conventional way of conquest of any nation or territory which has magnified in cowardly cruelty. It has now developed a world soup of with no possibility of conquest by either side. Yet we live in a beautiful world of good kind people, paradoxical though it may seem. Who in our modern world of wonders, cannot, or do not offer a remedy or the prevention of such brutal deeds. Non-violence is the remedy, as the present system of productive and distributive industry cannot thrive without war. The morals of the non-violence policy are laid down in the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." That teaching was propagated by two of the world's most outstanding personalities—Mahatma Gandhi and the Russian Leo Tolstoy. Tolstoy died too soon to make his influence felt in the revolutionary change of the Russian system, and it has been left to those whose tactics are typical of the age. Mahatma Gandhi was cut off at a time when his influence was bringing India out from her century of bondage to reap the joys of peace and human kindness manifested in all his works and doings during his long life.

of the Cape, visited Durban, the Corporation of which presented him with an address which, later on, declared:

"We believe your Excellency will find occasion to expound the introduction of a limited number of Coolies and other labourers from the East, in aid of the new enterprises on the coast lands, to the success of which sufficient and reliable labour is absolutely essential."

Sir George concurred with this special wish of the citizens of Durban to a degree that he wrote to the Government of India in 1853 requesting the latter to permit Indian workers to emigrate from their homeland to Natal.

India Unwilling

But the Indian authorities were at first unwilling to allow folk of this kind to leave the land of their birth for South Africa on the grounds that not only was there then, much demand for their labour in India, but not a few of these workers, too, were at that time being promised at higher wage in their homeland than that obtaining in the Natal of the 1850's.

Eventually the Government of India agreed to the particular desire of the Natal industrialists after the latter, through the Colonial Government, had consented to the payment of a certain rate of wages as well as security for the expenses incurred in the importation of such labour from India.

After the passing by the Natal Legislative Council of Law 14 of 1859 which empowered the Government here to import indentured Indian labour, and that of the mission to India in 1859 of a former local postmaster-general, W. M. Collins, to select Indian workers from Madras for the Natal sugar fields, the first batch of the latter, numbering 341, arrived unexpectedly at Durban on November 16, 1860—"Boatrek" (Johannesburg) March 2).

INTRODUCTION OF INDIAN LABOUR INTO S.A.

By S. A. ROCHLIN

THE 1850's evidenced the introduction of an entirely new element in the world of South African labour, namely, that of the Indian in Natal.

How did it all originate?

It had come about chiefly on account of the fact that Natal at the turn on the 1850's was seriously in need of cheap and suitable labour in connection with the promotion of her then nascent sugar industry. Finding not only the European generally in the Colony at the time quite unwilling to perform labour of this specific kind, but the Zulus, also, on the whole unsuitable to be engaged as workers as such the local industrialists then believed that the best way out of their particular difficulty would be to obtain the labour required from Asia, preferably from Far East and India.

First Proposal

It was in 1815—four years after the sugar industry was founded here—that there was heard in Natal the first proposal to import Indian and other Asiatic workers into the Colony with the main object of saving the industry concerned from the prospect of economic ruin as a consequence of a lack of labour and of production.

Among the first to sponsor such an idea was one who himself was responsible for initiating an European settlement scheme in Natal. He was Joseph O. Byrnes, whom Professor A. F. Hutterley describes in his "Portrait of a Colony" as an "adventurer, an eloquent speaker, by no means lacking in personal charm, but imprudent and unscrupulous." It was at a public meeting held in Durban early in October, 1851 reports the "Natal Times," a Durban weekly of the time, that the latter advocated the introduction of Indian and Chinese labour into the country.

But the notion as such was again reiterated four years later when Sir George Grey, Governor

"That Credulous Morality"

That is rightly called wasted time which is spent neither in the service of God nor for the good of our neighbour.

—Antonio Guevara.

Happiness... means an enlightened realization of human dignity and a craving for human liberty which prizes above mere selfish satisfaction of personal comforts and material wants and would readily and joyfully sacrifice these for self-preservation

—Mahatma Gandhi.

TO subject South Africa to intense and almost continuous criticism was the right of the free world and was ultimately to the benefit of South Africa; resentment of this criticism by South Africans sprang from ignorance and immaturity, said Dr. Edgar Brookes, when he spoke at the University of Natal last week on the subject: "That Credulous Morality."

Dr Brookes added "What can legitimately be asked for, however, is that such criticism should be accurate and not malicious

"The credulity of liberal-minded men often leads them to an uncritical acceptance of any criticisms that seem likely to help the cause"

What gain accrued to the liberal cause by the dissemination of completely and demonstrably untrue statements? It was not as if the case against Union policy needed strengthening. It was unhappily only too strong on the facts without resorting to fiction

"On the main issue of the colour bar and the rigid opposition to political rights for non-Europeans, the facts are there for all the world to see.

But to exaggerate every disability, to water down or ignore altogether every bit of goodwill shown or welfare work done, to suggest that all is oppression and cruelty on one side and horror, suffering and despair on the other, is not to serve the cause of liberalism, and is indeed to betray the principles of the great liberals of the past."

Dr. Brookes gave a list of beliefs held by large numbers of South Africans, many of them in universities and many in positions of authority "A large proportion of these beliefs are supported by pseudo-scientific arguments," said Dr. Brookes.

This list was:

1. The White man in South Africa hates miscegenation in his very soul
2. It is necessary to have legislation to prevent miscegenation, otherwise it would spread rapidly.
3. The African is naturally and inherently inferior.
4. Competition of the African with the White man is a mortal danger to the survival of the White race.
5. The African cannot really assimilate higher education.
6. The higher education of the African is a danger to White supremacy
7. Educationally the African must develop on his own lines.
8. A committee of White men will tell him what those lines are to be.
9. The justification of the White man's coming to Africa, is, at least in part, the training of the African in Christianity and Western civilisation.
10. The progress of the African in Western civilisation, away from the tribal system and rural life, is undesirable.
11. Christian teaching is fundamentally revolutionary as regards the position of women and children.
12. The old African tribal and family system ought to be maintained.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 17TH APRIL, 1953

The Power Of Non-Violence

VINOBA BHAVE who has been engaged in the herculean task of solving India's land problem by begging land from the landowners and distributing it to the landless has achieved success unexpectedly outstanding. He receives land from those land owners only who are prepared to part with it absolutely willingly and without the least compulsion. In this way he has already received eight million acres of land. One landlord in Bihar has broken the record by making a gift of one hundred thousand acres.

Had we but a few landlords in South Africa to show a quarter of the zeal the landlords in India are showing the land problem, which is the root of all evils would be solved instantly and all talk of Communism would vanish into thin air. Vinoba Bhave has demonstrated to the world in no uncertain terms the power of non-violence. It is a lesson that non-Europeans in the whole of Africa would do well to learn. The story of Mau Mau in East Africa is highly deplorable. Those responsible for that movement seem to forget that they are doing intolérable disservice to the black people of Africa. It is an utterly suicidal step which will wipe the Black people out of existence and White domination will be given a lease of life for another two hundred years.

Non-Violence is the only way to get rid of White domination with the least loss of life and property and leaving behind it not hatred but love. Those who are inclined to follow the path of violence in South Africa to achieve their goal of freedom from oppression would do well to think deeply and ponder over the power of non-violence evinced by Mahatma Gandhi through his own life and which Vinoba Bhave, his true disciple, is doing so brilliantly to-day. "Non-violence is thought word and deed is the only way for our salvation in this country." That should be our only motto.

NOTES AND NEWS

White Mau Mau

We hear so much about Mau Mau in Kenya. But is it not practised by the Whites in South Africa? Here is an instance. Mr. Dietrich Ziegfried Mare, a director of a big engineering firm and member of the United Party, was ejected from a Nationalist meeting in the Boksburg Town Hall addressed by the Minister of Labour, Mr. B. J. Schoeman. Mr. Mare asked a question about the Language Ordinance. "As I did so I was seized by three Nationalists who literally carried me from the doorway where I was standing, through the vestibule and into the roadway," he said. "They left me at the parking bays near my car, but not before one had smashed my face. I was then driven home by my chauffeur." Mr. Mare told a Press representative that his child was compulsorily transferred from the Dominican convent to an Afrikaans school under the Ordinance.

Mob Rule At Election Meeting

Major G. J. de Wet, United Party candidate for the Heidehof-Frankfort (O.F.S.) constituency, was assaulted while addressing a meeting. He had scarcely begun his address when a section of the crowd rushed to the platform, assaulted him and prevented him from speaking. Major de Wet was struck by several persons and had to receive medical attention. The speaker is reported to have referred to General Smuts's policy and made a remark which upset the crowd. It was at this stage that the platform was stormed and the meeting broken up.

Disgrace To White

South Africa

Mr. J. G. N. Strauss, leader of the United Party is reported to have said at a meeting in his constituency of Germiston District that in an attempt to cause dissension, the Minister of Justice had cancelled all police leave, but still Nationalist Party supporters at decent, peaceful United Party meetings had been throwing stones and assaulting women who appealed to them to keep order. "This is a disgrace to White South Africa. When we, a comparatively handful of White people, fight our elections and conduct ourselves in that way, what example are we setting to the non-Europeans?" asked Mr. Strauss. "It is this dirty method of fighting elections, that is dragging the good name of the White man through the mire, which will dig the grave of the White man in South Africa."

Non-Europeans Not Part

Of S.A. Nation

Mr. J. G. Strydom, the Minister of Lands, said in Pretoria that under no circumstances would the vote ever be extended to the non-Europeans, the non-Europeans were not part of the South African nation. He also indicated that he favoured the enforcement of apartheid on organisations which did not accept it. In this case he mentioned the universities and the Nursing Council. "If we want to remain White, we must make sure that we remain the masters," he said. "To do this we must not extend the vote to the non-Europeans." The United Party regarded the nation as consisting of all races in the country, but the Nationalists considered the nation to be only the White people. The non-Europeans were a separate nation.

How To Repatriate Indians

Speaking at Hibberdene Mr. Barry de Kock, Nationalist candidate for South Coast, said the aim of Nationalist policy was the separation of the four main colour groups into their own areas. The Indians were sucking the life blood of the Europeans and the Natives. To prevent this happening, he said, the Indians would be moved into their own areas. They would not be allowed to have business outside their own areas although they would be allowed to trade with outside areas. They would not be as happy in their own areas as they were now and would therefore be more willing to be repatriated.

Criminal Law Amendment Act—First Conviction

The first prosecution under the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1953 took place in the Villa Nora Magistrate's Court, in the Waterberg district, near Potgietersrus recently, when Arthur Matlala, an African of Johannesburg, was found guilty on one count under the Act and on a second count under Proclamation 276 of 1952 says the "Natal Daily News" Johannesburg correspondent. Matlala was found guilty of incitement, as defined by the proclamation, and of contravening the Criminal Law Amendment Act by soliciting money to assist a campaign against any law conducted by means of unlawful acts. On the first count of incitement Matlala was fined £50 (or six months) and on the second count he was sentenced to a year's compulsory labour and eight strokes. Notice of appeal was lodged and Matlala was granted bail of £100.

Letters With Cheques To

Cost More

A regulation that the lower rate of postage on envelopes containing cheques—a minimum of twopence for destinations within the Union and other African postal countries—must be prepaid, has just been issued by the Pretoria postal authorities. "Cheques, whether crossed or uncrossed, are not eligible for transmission as 'commercial paper' at the reduced rate of postage. If so posted they will be liable to surcharge. "Unsealed and insufficiently prepaid envelopes which are found to contain crossed cheques made payable to order, will be chargeable on delivery with double the deficient in postage. "Those containing cheques not crossed, or not made payable to order, will be subject to compulsory registration and to the payment of a double registration in addition to the deficiency of postage at double rates."

Indian Gift To S.A. Gallery

The Indian Charge d'Affaires, Mr. J. L. Malhotra, presented a collection of books on Indian art and culture on behalf of the Indian Government to Mr. John Aarn, Director of the National Gallery, Cape Town. The books will form part of a library which the gallery intends to start.

13. The only ethically justifiable solution of the race question in South Africa is total apartheid.
 14. Total apartheid is not practicable today.
 15. The end does not justify the means.
 16. Temporary restrictions are justified by the hope that at some time in the future we shall be able to introduce total apartheid.
 17. "Be not anxious for the morrow, for the morrow shall be anxious for the things of itself."
 18. We ought to plan our racial policies for the next 200 years now.
 19. "He that saveth his life shall lose it."
 20. Self-preservation is the first law of life.
- "It is possible for large numbers of South Africans to hold all these beliefs at the same time," said Dr. Brookes. "We can only wish them joy of their state of mind—but is it quite worthy of universality men?"

"On this question of race, we suffer in South Africa from a tyranny of phrases. This tyranny is, indeed, not peculiar to South Africa. Never in a Socratic more needed than when politicians try to recommend unjust policies by kindly phrases.

"We shall treat the Natives justly." "We shall give the Natives a square deal." What is a square deal? What is justice? Is it not, in fact, in the mouths of such men ultimately 'the interest of the stronger'?"

Phrases are too often a substitute for thought. In South Africa we go further, and tend to attribute magic powers to them. For to repeat 'apartheid, apartheid, apartheid' and take no effective steps to provide the land for a separate African state, or the alternative labour to replace Africans now working in European areas, is simply government by incantation"—Natal Witness.

THE WIDER WORLD

By JOHN GILD

AFTER THE ELECTION

WHICHEVER side wins the election, one thing is already clear, liberals have lost. Both parties conducted their campaigns on the explicit assumption that White supremacy must be rigidly maintained. If the Nationalists win, Mr. Strijdom is likely to be Prime Minister before long, and we all know what to expect from him. If the United Party wins, Mr. Strauss proposes to avoid great decisions by calling a conference on race relations. The probable outcome of such a conference would be concessions not to Congress but to Nationalist opinion. I predict that there will be no extension of political rights in any form to non-Europeans in the near future. For one thing, to alter the present unequal rights of Africans would require a two-thirds majority of both Houses. The only purpose for which Mr. Strauss could command such a majority would be to take the Coloured voters off the roll. If, as seems likely, neither party wins a decisive majority, I believe that renewed efforts will be made behind the scenes to form a coalition.

As far as the Torch Commando, its days are numbered. It has been petering out for some time and now it will die. For our thing, the main source of its funds is drying up. But it was doomed, anyhow. Led by inexperienced and rather spineless men, it always put popularity before principle, especially when questions of colour came into the picture. No organisation can endure on such a basis. And no tears need be shed by anyone when the Torch Commando is decently buried because its members were only playing at politics.

What Is The Law?

To clear up some doubts that may be felt, I want to point out that the African National Congress and the Indian Congress remain perfectly legal organisations, whose normal activities are not affected by the new laws. The two recent Acts of Parliament were designed to deal with passive resistance against established laws. Both Congress movements have always had aims and objects far wider and older than the recent campaign. There is no legal reason why the normal activities of Congress should not continue. Nor is it against the law to collect or to give money to Congress. The amendment to the criminal law only makes it an offence to receive or solicit money to help a campaign to resist laws. There is now so much uncertainty about these things that it is well to be sure of the legal position and not to exaggerate the effects of the blows Parliament struck against Congress.

Mixed Schools

Jim Crow, as the colour bar is called in the United States, is under increasing pressure. At the moment a decision is awaited from the Supreme Court on the right of Southern Negroes to enter White schools. In the North, however, there are in some big cities an increasing number of mixed schools. In recent years notable victories have been won. In four states—Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey and Delaware—state legislatures have forced reluctant towns to abolish segregation in schools. Even in a few parts of the South, Negro and White children learn side by side in elementary schools.

The churches are also waking up. Although hardly one per cent of them today have mixed congregations, steps are being taken to raise the question. The great body, the National Council of Churches of Christ, is urging its members to lift the bar against coloured people. The Quakers, of course, have long been active in breaking down racial barriers. In the summer camps and other projects they organise, care is taken to welcome children of all races.

The Chinese Revolution

To the mind of Europe, China seems remote. And as the foreign news printed in the daily papers which we read is all manufactured in Europe, we are given little news about China. Yet the revolution that reached its climax in 1949 is one of the great events of this century. It is foolish to let opposition to Communism prevent us from recognising that fact and giving full weight to its implications. I have been reading with special pleasure a grand book, "Revolution in China" by G. P. Fitzgerald (published in London by the Cresset Press for 25s.). The author is one of the few Englishmen who know China and its history well. What is more, he writes with the simplicity of a master of his subject and he also writes in a most unimpaired fashion. One of the best things in this excellent book is the final discussion of China's relations with her Asian neighbours. To India, Pakistan, Burma and other countries recently become independent, the Chinese revolution, says Mr. Fitzgerald, is seen primarily as a great defeat for colonialism and a great liberation for Asia. They do not feel strongly on the issue between Communism and Western democracy, because to them the issue of independence against subjection is still vivid and dominant. They divide the nations of Asia into the free and the subject, and count the new China as one of the leaders of the free. The contrast between the so-called "free world" of the West and the totalitarian world of communism, so stressed in American policy and thought, is largely unreal to Asians. They not only accept the Chinese revolution; they secretly, almost openly, admire it.

Certainly in India sympathy for the Chinese Government, interest in its achievements, and hostility to the policy of the United States are much stronger than fear of Communism. Affront to China—like the continued refusal to let her take her rightful seat at UN—are felt as wounds to Asia. American policy towards China is strengthening the Government there and improving its prestige among the peoples of Asia.

After centuries during which China was weak and divided, the country is now united and growing in strength with every year of internal peace. Mr. Fitzgerald says firmly that, whether there is war or peace in Korea, tension will remain in Asia until the Western powers recognise and accept the historic change that has transformed China.

"The growth and spread of civilisation has gone on with a serene indifference to racial lines. All groups who have had an opportunity to acquire civilisation have not only acquired it, but also added to its content. Conversely, no group has been able to develop a rich or complex culture when it was isolated from outside contacts."

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

BRITAIN 1832 - SOUTH AFRICA 1953

A COMPARISON FOR EUROPEANS

By C. W. M. GELL

AS I write these words, South Africa is preparing for what politicians of all parties assure us is its most important general election. Yet I think there is little doubt that history of the future will regard with astonishment the extent to which the real problem of the country was avoided by both sides.

The election is being fought over two main issues: the first of which is "the sovereignty of Parliament" or the sanctity of the Constitution. The fraudulent nature of the Nationalist constitutional argument has been so fully discussed that it needs no further elucidation here. It is now as it always has been a subsidiary issue whose motive is (in Dr. Malan's words) "the maintenance of European domination over the overwhelming majority of non-Europeans." This can only be ensured by his own party which, therefore, seeks to maintain the election of its opponents made difficult by such measures as the Citizenship Act, the restriction of immigration, the sedition of the Communist Party, the token representation of Indians, Coloureds, and Chinese in Parliament, and the various measures together with the various legislative initiatives, all of which are designed to ensure the total leading. The effect of these measures would be to ensure the fact of not only the party dictatorship and the continuity of the "Nationalist" line.

Writing in "Forum" in February Dr. Bernard Friedman said: "The Opposition has from the very first insisted on the moral aspect of the constitution issue." To a limited extent this is true; limited, because the insistence has been on the particularly solemn character of the original compact of Union (as affirmed by all parties in 1931 and 1934), but only occasionally and incidentally on the rights of the Coloured minority as such. Despite Mr. Struys's promise to treat the Coloureds as "a loyal appendix to the Europeans," the constitutional crisis has not been a straightforward issue between democracy and dictatorship; but an argument as to whether "democracy" shall be confined to the White one-fifth of the population or the Nationalist one-tenth. If the Nationalist position is historically, legally and morally unsound, the Opposition has not yet discharged its full moral and political obligation to the country as a whole in 1953 merely by standing on its own electoral interests by a forty-year old compromise between Europeans only.

That we should be inclined to applaud it for doing so is the measure both of the retrogressive nature of Nationalist policy and the divorce of all our white thinking from the political and social realities of today. And this is most clearly illustrated by the attitude of both sides to the second major election issue—apartheid and its ramifications. From Nationalists came a spate of positive but conflicting statements on this subject, while the Opposition has yielded its proposals in a verbal fog of obscurity and vagueness. The one side seems to be hitting out in all directions, hoping that the electors will find comfort in one or another of its racial promises and will disregard its inconsistencies, the other to be dissembling its real intentions, if any.

Racial Policy Of Each Side

Here I can only summarise what the racial policy of each side appears to be. Despite some of Senator Verwoerd's wider utterances, the Nationalists seem to have rejected finally the idea of partition or total apartheid. They stand (vide the speeches of Mr. Strydom on September 13 and of Dr. Otto du Plessis on February 23) for the perpetual maintenance of exclusive White political power and an attempt to slow down or reverse the flow of African labour into the towns, though "we must keep some Natives in the White areas for a very long time to do the work." This is the best they can do "in the direction of what we regard as an ideal" and, though Dr. Verwoerd is prepared to retard economic progress if necessary, others of his colleagues are apparently not.

For its part, the Opposition will have no truck with racial equality either political or economic, immediate or eventual. It accepts and will even actively promote the integration of Africans into "our kitchens, our farms, our mines and our factories." But it stands doggedly by "White supremacy with justice," the industrial colour bar, residential and social segregation and the laws against sexual intimacy between the races. This does not seem to leave much room for "consultation" to which the U.P. is pledged. Apart from its cost of airing arguments addressed to the White electorate, the Opposition's one positive electoral promise concerns imcreased immigration and with all respect one must question whether, in regard to such stubborn facts as shipping and the supply of European emigrants, it is any more practicable than the Nationalist hope of returning the Africans to their Reserves.

There are no doubt important differences between the parties as to the manner in which existing laws will be applied and about some of the clauses of the actual laws. But the more one looks, the more one wonders whether there is very much difference in principle between the European parties on racial issues, excluding the minor squabble between Afrikaners and British South Africans. And the suspicion that both intend much the same thing by different names with slightly differing emphasis is confirmed by the attempts from both sides to identify apartheid and our traditional segregation. Mr. Strydom and I have almost nothing in common except the belief that what primarily interests the European political parties is "the maintenance of the discriminatory legislation on which the whole position of the European in South Africa depends." If this is so, it explains why the U.P. continued to support the Swart Bills, even after all its safeguarding amendments had been rejected with contempt. On November 22 Group Captain "Sailor" Malan promised that "we shall unite in the face of any threat as a White population." Is this very different from Mr. Strydom's call on February 28 to Europeans "to stand shoulder to shoulder as White men to protect themselves and their children?"

The Real Problem

Thus it seems that this election is being fought to decide who shall lead the White minority in defence of its privileges and power. But is this in fact the real problem of South Africa? Is this the way in which we want the problem defined, even if it eventually (and perhaps in the not distant future) means holding our position by force in the face of the united hostility of four-fifths of the population? Could we do that for long without pauperising ourselves and the country? I do not for one minute believe so. I believe that, if we make that desperate decision, then the issue will be decided by violence, almost certainly against us though we may win the early rounds.

I read that Dr. N. Diedericks once said privately (and I have not heard him deny it): "All we can hope to do is to save them off, save them off for as long as possible." I recall that in 1950 a Conference of the Dutch Reformed Churches declared:

"The political life and the general prospect of becoming a full citizen are of the utmost importance for every volk. This applies to the Bantu also. We cannot keep Natives in our service, educate and develop them, and keep them pegged to unskilled occupations. On the other hand we cannot expect that, if we give them full opportunity for economic development and allow them to rise to the highest rungs, they will be satisfied to leave their economic, political and social interests to the care of others. They will fight for a say in national affairs."

I have heard Dr. Ben Marais express serious conscientious doubts about the moral and theological foundations of the apartheid policy and, when his book was assailed from the traditionalist point of view, I heard Professor H. B. Keet: "Is it only for the coloured races' benefit that we press for seisoptige selfregering or is it also because we do not want to have too much contact with them?" And I have listened with no less respect to what Anglican and Roman Catholic bishops and Jewish rabbis have had to say with impressive unanimity on this subject. Then I have read this from Mr. J. D. Rheinhart Jones' last presidential address to the Institute of Race Relations:

"No one can say that the Nationalist Government has not been active in its efforts to carry out its 1918 election pledges, and the racial situation has become very much more explosive as a result. We are now witnessing the beginnings of a struggle between the Government and the leaders of the subject peoples, and we do not yet know what the issues will be. It has yet to be seen whether the subject peoples will respond to the call to resist, or will acquiesce in measures intended to confine them within geographical residential areas and to withhold from them the political rights which the more advanced among them appreciate and demand. The effectiveness of the segregation measures such as the Group Areas Act is still in doubt, whilst the economic forces of the country continue to develop the very conditions which the Government's policy and programme are intended to abort or even abolish."

And I cannot in all honesty shut my eyes to the implications of the fact that no African or Indian leader, however "moderate," has repudiated the Defiance Campaign or the policy of the African National Congress, even if he has withheld his active support.

SEETHING SOUTH AFRICA TO-DAY

THE DEFIANCE CAMPAIGN

THE most heartening sign on the South African scene today is the joint action of Africans and Indians in defiance of certain unjust racist laws. Born only June 26th this year, the campaign has spread to most of the major cities and is beginning to involve some of the rural areas as well. By mid-August, 2,500. (By October 6, this figure had risen to 5,564.) Africans and Indians had been arrested (400 in a twenty-four-hour period). White South Africa is suddenly realizing that it has a new weapon with which to deal—carefully enough, a weapon first perfected by Mahatma Gandhi in South Africa in the decade before 1914 and later used by him with spectacular results in India. This resistance campaign, the most important current political movement in Africa South of the equator, deserves careful examination. Only for the almost religious fervor and sacrifice it is engendering.

The present defiance campaign has long history, going back to the organization of the African National Congress in 1912 and of the South African Indian Congress in 1920—the latter as an outgrowth of the Natal Indian Congress founded by Gandhi in 1894. These congresses (apart from not unlike the American National Association by the Advancement of Colored People) never had the leadership or support they deserved; it was not until after World War II that they began to gain in effectiveness. The Indian movement, spurred by Gandhi's success in 1913-14 and by his later victory in India, has shown more initiative than the African congress. In 1946-48 it launched a passive resistance campaign against the Asiatic Land Tenure act, which took away certain elemental land ownership rights from the Indians in South Africa. After the anti-Indian riots by some Africans in Durban in 1949, special efforts were made to foster cooperation between the Indian and the African congresses. They culminated on June 26, 1950, in a nationwide demonstration against discrimination.

At the invitation of the African National Congress, a joint conference of the national executives of the Indian and African congresses, together with representatives of the Coloureds (the half-castes or mulattoes), was held in Johannesburg in July 1950. It was decided to form a joint planning council of the two congresses, with 60-year-old Dr. James E. Moroka, a physician in the Free State, as chairman. At the annual conference of the African Congress in Bloemfontein in December 1951, a detailed plan of defiance was voted upon. The next month the plan was enthusiastically endorsed by the twentieth session of the South African Indian Congress in Johannesburg.

The plan was coolly and brilliantly conceived. So far it has been remarkably carried out. It was not a secret plan; in the tradition of Gandhi, it is available for inspection by anybody. Its preliminary step was a communication address to Prime Minister, D. F. Malan by Dr. Moroka, as President of the African National Congress, calling upon the government to repeal certain racist acts not later than February 20, 1952, or face a united resistance movement. The Prime Minister took no heed of this request. On April 6, 1952, as a prelude to resistance, non-European all over the union held impressive, if restrained, demonstrations, boycotting the Jan van Riebeck celebration commemorating the day in 1652 when the Dutch first landed in South Africa. The beginning of the defiance campaign itself was not scheduled until June 26, the second anniversary of the National Day of Protest.

In Port Elizabeth, where the campaign has been especially successful in its first two months, a public worship service was held the Sunday before resistance was to begin. Two thousand Africans stood in the cold rain to pray for those who had volunteered to defy the laws. An African clergyman told them: "You have undertaken a sacred and touching task. You have started to write a new page of history."

The night before the campaign actually started, a thousand women held an all-night prayer service in the African location (ghetto) of Port Elizabeth. The next morning thirty African volunteers, including three women, defied the apartheid (segregation) regulations by entering a suburban railroad station through the door marked "Europeans." On their sleeves they wore the African National Congress colors—black, green and gold ("black people on the green land under which we gain.") They occasionally chanted the African national anthem, "Nkosi Sikelele Afrika," and gave the clenched hand and thumbs up salute (the hand a symbol of freedom) yelling as they did so, "Afrika, Afrika." They were arrested by police as they cried "Mayibuyis Afrika" (come back, Africa.) The volunteers offered no resistance whatsoever, and co-operatively entered the police van. They did not accept the services of an attorney, refused to be released on the small bail set and for several weeks remained in the crowded, segregated jail awaiting trial.

The Jails Are Filled

These scenes were repeated in selected centers in the Cape and the Transvaal. During the first week one hundred, and fifty volunteers were arrested. Almost every day the English language newspapers carried accounts of the arrest of a new batch of volunteers or the trial of an old group. Some Africans were tried for breaking the pass laws (regulations requiring certain papers to be carried by all African males) and some Indians were tried for entering an African location without permits. Others were charged with violating apartheid in railroad stations and post offices. Finally, the plan was for the principle campaign leaders' not to be arrested, but within the month those arrested included Nana, Hys, president of the Transvaal branch of the South African Indian Congress, and Mrs. J. L. E. Njengwe, wife of the president of the Cape Province branch of the African National Congress.

Most residents pleaded sympathy, one seventeen-year-old girl telling the court, "Even if I'm released I am sure to see the same European entrance again, for I did so because there have been friendships between us and the Europeans." Magistrates usually found those arrested guilty. The leaders of each group of volunteers received heavier sentences, those in Port Elizabeth being sentenced to two months of hard labour or a fine of £10 (about $28 or the equivalent of six weeks' salary), with half the sentence suspended for six months for good behavior.

The rank and file were sentenced to shorter terms, but uniformly they refused to pay the fines. Early in August, as the jails in several cities became full, the government resorted to an old law which permitted the authorities to use any money found on prisoners to help pay their fines. In a few cases, the volunteers were not convicted in Johannesburg, fifty-two residents who were arrested for breaking the 11 p.m. curfew laws for Africans were released because the police neglected to seek each volunteer separately for his pass. In Port Elizabeth, seventy-three volunteers were freed when it was belatedly discovered that there are no laws compelling segregation in post offices. After eight weeks, more than 2,500 volunteers had defied the laws, and in at least two cities—Port Elizabeth and East London—the jails were filled.

No Support From White Clergy

One might expect that the Christian Church in South Africa would support or at least show interest in this campaign. So far, not one White clergyman in South Africa is known to have endorsed the campaign. A Methodist Minister was reported in the newspaper as saying: "A campaign of this sort is negative. We seek something positive. The Church cannot condone anything that seeks to break the law." One Anglican Bishop said privately, "I'm watching it closely to see if it grows, but of course I can't endorse it because later I might have to repudiate it." Anglican Michael Scott did, of course, and the campaign has support from his exile in London, and a few White clergymen are privately wishing for its success.

The African clergy, however, are much more friendly to the campaign. Several have volunteered, and one—Johnstone Sumbe—actually was arrested in Port Elizabeth for breaking the post office regulations. Upon arrest he stated: As a Christian and a Minister of the Church of England I have for many years preached and prayed that 'Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.' But on the contrary, government after government has passed unjust laws that make it impossible for such a state of affairs to come about. I therefore have no other alternative than to defy the unjust laws."

General reactions to this campaign have been varied. Prime Minister Malan early warned the African Congress against action. In doing so shortly after

AFRICA AT THE CROSS ROADS

THE report of the North American Assembly on African Affairs makes very interesting reading. We give here an extract from an address given by Theodore Madoed, Director, Institut Français d'Afrique Noire, Dakar, Professor, Museum of Natural History, Paris, Leader of the French Delegation to the Assembly.

"One would wish," he says, "that all those, blacks and whites, on whom depends today the future of Africa, should be themselves convinced of and should never forget, even in the details of daily living, the true interest of a man who, although he is indeed a consumer and a producer, and a labourer, and a taxpayer, and whatever one will, is also a free son of God."

This reading of a people, more or less spontaneously snatched out of the traditional framework and rhythm of a life hardly changed since prehistoric times and precipitated into a feverish and mechanical world, is sadly resented by those of the sons of Africa who still know how to reflect and to meditate.

One of them wrote to me some months ago: "The word 'sacrificed' is certainly that which is best applied to our generation. The technology which gained our admiration is now proved negative in our new eyes, because of its power to debase human values... Ought we to go forward? Ought we to go back? There is the dilemma, and our anguish is heart-rending. What a sad situation is ours. We had faith in the West and now the West commits suicide. However, we are obstinate and believe that man can become better again. He only needs less pride and self-sufficiency."

At the crossroads, the African soul asks itself: to submit or to choose? The whole question is there. Africa and Europe stand in each other's presence and hence in conflict, but why must the victory of each one be accompanied by the death of the other?

Far from renouncing himself to become a servile copy of an alien model, the African ought to separate the traits of an original culture, and be ready to unite in a new way of life and thought what he himself possesses of the best with carefully selected gifts from the West.

Thus, one may already see the more reflective among Africans accept those Western things which are healthy for them while they refuse to deny their past, their language, their art, their way of thinking, and a humanity to which they in all ways, some-tically and psychologically, continue to belong.

The old barriers, which effectively compartmentalised peoples, are going down. From one end of the earth to the other stores sell the same ready-made goods; the same movies regale with the same absurdities brains daily more identical and more docile; the same soldiers are trained to the same murderous games. Fashions, slogans, dogmas, likenesses spread and penetrate. And human life is on the way toward acquiring, on a planetary scale, a certain kind of behaviour, a sort of simultaneity which is preparing to make of nations—only yesterday isolated cells—what biologists call a "synecium" (an aggregate of imperfectly separated cells).

Men, as nature, history and their milieu have made them, are extremely dissimilar. Their common denominator, which exists, is enriched with innumerable and potent idiosyncracies. Nothing will be gained by hiding this. Better to accept the reality with the purely documentary and judgment-free proofs of the ethnologist. These profound differences, which concern something quite other than the colour of our skins and which distinguish me from this Asian or that African, or not to be prudishly disguised as if they were some kind of disgrace, but ought to be treasured as blessed signs of the marvellous diversity of man.

To be completely what one ought to be, to bear one's own flowers and one's own fruits, is not to deny the community but on the contrary to render it vital and something other than a dull sum of numbers. To be able to join with others, one must know oneself and will oneself to be distinctive. "We shall find ourselves again when we shall have arrived," said Tolstoy.

The French Union will remain a vain phrase if it is not a true "symbiosis." I deliberately employ the technical term which designates "the intimate and constant association of two organisms under conditions which can be considered as assuring them reciprocal benefits," in opposition to "commensalism" or to "parasitism" in which the profit is essentially unilateral.

Symbiotic equilibrium respects the personality of the associates. For to unite is not to efface one's own potentialities, to deny one's best qualities and one's irreplaceable gifts in order to drown in the monstrous anonymity of a shapeless mix up. Real union differentiates, and "to flow together" is not "to become lost in." What is wanted is a fruitful union, not in spite of differences, but because of these very differences, which are obvious, enormous, and which it would be as criminal to hide as it would be puerile to deplete.

It is necessary, then, that each of the collaborators in the common work be strongly and fully himself, conscious of what makes him indispensable, proud of the tint which he alone is capable of placing on a palette which would be incomplete without his contribution.

Leon Letellier said in 1908: "When I find myself before a black man or a yellow man, I feel myself to be a violinist confronted by a pianist or a flutist; what if we do not all make the same sound; there is music in all of us."

But the selection of colours, with the necessary tricks, discards, shufflings, like their arrangement, will not be made by the wave of a magician's wand. It must be recognised and accepted that the process will be a laborious one, with tentative gropings, irregular spasmodic growth, crises and halts, determined efforts in all possible directions, long periods of forbearance, sudden shifts onto the weak points of the wall, and with a tenacious will to keep the highest end in view.

Will it be enough for the builders of French Tropical Africa to keep alive to themselves, as a great friend of human diversity has urged them, "that flame of generosity and imagination which moves a man to love in any man his most personal quality, what makes himself and not another, the creative force which stirs him to action?"

Enlightened minds are alarmed to see Western civilisation, while sometimes foundering amid the exclusively useful and rational, only hold as real what it can measure; they are alarmed to see it dismember a humanity which preserves elsewhere its mystical aspirations and its thirst for the divine.

Who knows whether aging Europe may not one day discover, in a confidential chat with other countries belonging to different spiritual families, in a quiet dialogue leaving aside the accessories of form to attain, in its profundity, the unum necessarium, the sense of totality, the fascination with a Cosmos in which things and beings lose themselves only to find themselves, the fullness of a Unity in which man, with the rest of the world, realises and fulfils himself in something—or in Someone—who is beyond him.

The abolition of the Native Representative Council, has unintentionally given recognition to the Congress as the prime spokesman of the African people. Even the South African Institute of Race Relations did not give to non-Europeans the impression of support. Although in a press statement in March the Institute admitted that public demonstrations were the "only effective means of expression open to Africans," it condemned the African Congress for "unrealistically demanding the immediate abolition of all discriminatory legislation" and regretted the choice of April 6 for a demonstration—a date "which has such deep significance for many South Africans."

Criticism, Legitimate And Otherwise

Another evidence of misunderstanding of the campaign came from the liberal Johannesburg English language newspaper, the 'Star.' In an editorial written less than two weeks after the campaign opened, it said: "From the outset the whole defiance movement was ill advised in conception and could do nothing but harm to South Africa and the non-Europeans themselves, alienating those who are well disposed towards the non-Europeans and hardening the hearts of the reactionaries and their sympathisers."

The leaders of the campaign were cheered when they saw excerpts in South African papers of an editorial in the New York Times endorsing their movement. On the other hand, the most influential Afrikaans-language newspaper in South Africa, 'The Burger' (formerly edited by Prime Minister Malan,) stated in a weekly editorial: "The state must refuse to play the game required of it by the resisters; offenders who refuse to pay a forfeit because they 'want to fill the jails' should be compelled to contribute to state funds rather than draw on them to the costs of their imprisonment." More rational was the 'Natal Witness,' which in an editorial a month after the campaign started admitted: "The persistence and strength of the movement to defy unjust laws must be profoundly disturbing...for in the long run no laws can be enforced which do not win the political and moral approval of those who are subject to them."

The campaign has not lacked more legitimate criticism. That the whole movement is the result of White domination and therefore of a black and brown nationalism cannot seriously be denied. Yet the leadership of the National Action Committee constantly emphasises its non-racial nature. Before the campaign began, the leaders declared, "The struggle is not directed against any race or national group, but against the unjust laws." Dr. J. L. Z. Njongwe, an African physician who is president of the Cape Province branch of the African National Congress, stated: "What is the use of substituting one form of racial arrogance for another? Our people understand the evil results of hatred. The problems of peace are always greater than the problems of war. I am quite certain that we will succeed in our struggle against White domination; but to win what comes after our struggle, we must begin now to be free from hate."

Admittedly, the future leaders of the campaign may not be as farseeing and free from vengeance as Dr. Njongwe and most of the others now directing the endeavour. With the gap between Europeans and non-Europeans widening in South Africa, and with almost no White support of or even sympathy for this campaign, it will take rare restraint for the leadership not to powder to the obvious hates of the non-White masses. Already, one sees an inclination on the part of the non-European leaders (much as they intellectually want the help of the Europeans) to avoid contact with Europeans lest they appear to be selling out to them.

The Role Of Communism

An equally serious aspect of the campaign is its relationship to South Africa—and world-wide—communism. Some of the top leaders of the Campaign are admitted Communists—although no longer technically so, since the Party in South Africa dissolved in 1950. The few White supporters of the campaign in South Africa are likewise mostly Communists. The best accounts of the campaign are carried by the 'Clarion' successor to the 'Guardian.' Though the 'Clarion' is perhaps technically not a Communist weekly, it faithfully echoes the party line and each week devotes space almost equally to accounts of the defiance campaign and to blasts at American foreign policy. Nevertheless, the majority of the leaders of the campaign, especially the Africans, are not Communists, and the campaign itself so far has shown little evidence of acting as a hand-maiden of the Communist party. The only exception is the studied and unfortunate identification of opposition to the unjust racial laws with the separate problem of protest against the equally unjust Suppression of Communism act. Some of the leaders of the campaign have been officially circumscribed by this act, and the public finds it difficult to distinguish between their roles as Communists and as leaders of the campaign. One must regret that a few Communists are not only jeopardizing the whole campaign but building up a following which, in future months or years, they may cynically use to defy democracy instead of apartheid. It is for this reason that Mahatma Gandhi, the Mahatma's son who has lived most of his life in South Africa and has undergone two important hunger strikes against apartheid in recent years, has so far not co-operated with the campaign.

Probable Future Course

The significance of this campaign is initially that South Africa's Indians and Africans—and increasingly other dark-skinned people, are belatedly uniting to fight their common foe, White supremacy and domination. This alone is a powerful enough factor, but it is made doubly so by the fact that the resisters are experimenting with the religious weapon of nonviolent direct action (the telegraphic address of the National Action Committee is Satyagraha, Johannesburg) and because for the first time hundreds of Africans are being initiated into a method much newer to them than to the Indians. In the process, much is being learned. As an English-language newspaper shrewdly admitted: "The present seemingly ineffectual phase is being used by the leaders for several calculated purposes—to test their organisational machinery, to gain experience in direction and liaison, to assess European reaction and, above all, to 'politicise' the non-European peoples, to educate them in the use of that immensely powerful weapon—passive resistance."

It is impossible to predict the future of this movement. The immediate plans are for the action to spread to most of the urban centers and then to the rural areas, including the African reserves. Future plans call for industrial demonstrations (Africans are legally forbidden to strike.) The final step is for the campaign to spread to great masses of people, perhaps when the new Population Registration act goes into effect.

The reaction of the government once it realizes the serious nature of the campaign is difficult to predict. Once wise leader of the African Congress has said: "The way the Europeans react to this campaign will determine the future of race relations in South Africa. If they react with violence (some of the extreme Nationalists have already suggested flogging, and youths already arrested have been given the usual punishment of caning) they will sow seeds of hatred which will take centuries to heal."

This is not the talk of an African too primitive to have a major share in the political control of South Africa. It represents the intelligence and hope of the new leadership in Africa. Out of this leadership will rise a man who, with imagination and dedication, will tap the deep frustration and rich energies of the Africans, the Coloreds and the Indians. Then apartheid will go—believably fast.

Our America Letter

By HOMER A. JACK

Chicago, April 3,

THE turmoil in South Africa continues to be front page material in American newspapers. Not only did America's number one newspaper, 'The New York Times,' send one of its crack foreign correspondents, C. L. Sulzberger, to South Africa for a short time, but it has carried daily stories about the Parliamentary debate on the "whipping post" Bill. In an editorial, 'The New York Times' admitted that "the Opposition United Party has no clear-cut Native policy except that it, too, is adamant against extending political rights to non-Europeans." The editorial significantly concluded: "The real quarrel with Malenium is that it tries a racist solution which is bound to fail because it is impractical and evil."

In February, thirteen organizations at the University of Michigan held an all-day seminar on South Africa. More than 350 persons spent the day studying the racial and political problems of South Africa. Among the speakers were students from several parts of southern Africa, Prof. Chester N. Sisson, diamond expert from the University of Michigan, and this writer.

President and Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, in February, attended a special showing of the new motion picture, "Mahatma Gandhi: Twentieth Century Prophet," as guests of the Indian Ambassador in Washington. The full-length film was produced by Louis P. Gaiasborough, president of the American Academy of Asian Studies at San Francisco and is narrated by the American journalist and writer, Quentin Reynolds.

"The Women in Gandhi's Life" is the most recent addition to Gandhiana published in the United States. It is written by Eleanor Morton, published by Dodd, Mead of New York City, and sells for $4.00. This book is based on a good idea: to discuss the women who were associated at various times with Mahatma Gandhi. There are fair descriptions of his mother—Paltia—and his wife, Kasturba. A number of South African women stride across the pages of this book, especially Olive Schreiner and Sophia Schreiner. Among the many Indian women who were co-workers of Gandhi, the author gives the best account of picturesque Sarojini Naidu.

There are frequent flashes of good writing in this book, yet also lapses of information. The author—Eleanor Morton is a pseudonym—unbelievably omits Phoenix Farm with Tolstoy Farm. She spells the name of Pyarelal, Gandhi's long-time secretary, four "different ways." This is a fair biography of Gandhi from one woman's point of view, but the dramatic story of the women in Gandhi's life has obviously not yet been written.

The death sentence for atomic espionage of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg of New York City has been the basis for widespread propaganda efforts around the world—and, no doubt, in South Africa as elsewhere. This is a very complicated case, and many non-communists feel that the sentence—of death—is not commensurate with the crime the Rosenbergs may have committed. But the allegations of anti-Semitism are certainly overwrought and there are indications that the communists are using the plight of this unfortunate couple to deflect attention from the undeniable anti-Semitism springing up in Soviet Russia and her satellites. It is even suggested that the communists want the Rosenbergs to die—for dead spies tell no tales and become martyrs—symbols of injustice for the party. And the Rosenbergs seem so far to be willing tools of this international communist effort. Yet there are individuals in the United States, including this writer, working for their clemency, despite the communist intrigues on all sides. The difference between democracy and communism is that democracy can afford to be humane.

Dr. W. A. Visser 't'Hooft's report on South Africa—mentioned in this letter some months ago—was debated at the Lucknow Indian meetings of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches. It unanimously adopted a resolution which, in part, reads: "The Central Committee would use this opportunity to express its strong conviction that the first and foremost contribution which the churches everywhere can and must make to the solution of the race problem is to manifest in their own life that in Christ all racial division is overcome and that any policy of enforced segregation in any aspects of church life is incompatible with the very nature of the Church of Christ. The Central Committee, holding strongly the convictions expressed by the First Assembly (at Amsterdam in 1948), affirms that all political, social and economic discriminations based on the grounds of race wherever they may exist are contrary to the will of God as expressed in the Christian gospel. Recognizing that existing racial discriminations are increasing tension and bitterness in various parts of the world, the committee calls upon the member churches to engage in the Christian ministry of reconciliation and to do all in their power to end such discrimination wherever it exists." In making this statement, the top leaders of world Protestantism were looking straight at the churches in South Africa.

AFRICA IS HERE

REPORT OF THE NORTH AMERICAN ASSEMBLY ON AFRICAN AFFAIRS

WE acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of "Africa Is Here," from the African Committee of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America. It is a report of the North American Assembly on African Affairs held on June 16 to 25 at Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio.

This Assembly had no function of policy-making whatever. Its 344 participants gave themselves for ten days to study and discussion of the inclusive theme: The Changing Racial, Economic and Political Conditions in Africa South of the Sahara, and the Relation of the Christian Church and Mission to Them.

The Assembly's main purpose was further education and understanding in North America of Africa's peoples, problems and potentials, and of Christians' responsibilities concerning and in Africa.

Whatever degree of attainment of this purpose was achieved was in large measure due to the most widely representative participation of Africans of any international gathering thus far held on Africa—34 Africans from 13 different areas of Africa—and to the unprecedented participation of governments—28 officials and persons officially appointed from eight governments and the United Nations. Europeans to the number of 23 attended. There were 49 present from universities, colleges, seminaries, philanthropic bodies and social service and international relations interests in Africa, Europe and North America. Forty North American, African and European Protestant missions, home societies and agencies were represented, and the Roman Catholics in the person of a priest with African missionary experience.

Within this diverse group there grew after two or three days an atmosphere in which views were expressed, challenged and discussed with what appeared to be a great degree of frankness, and in good spirit. This went on not only in the sessions but in the hours between.

Non-official delegates, Africans and others, appreciated particularly the attendance of all four of the European colonial powers which were invited to participate—Belgium, France, Portugal and the United Kingdom—and their willingness to have their representatives not only present their views but reply to questions concerning their governments' policies and actions. This was believed to be the first occasion on which all four of these governments had joined in public discussion of this sort.

Only two of the governments invited to participate did not do so. No reply was received from Ethiopia. The Union of South Africa felt unable to accept.

The Africa Committee is most appreciative of the values brought to the Assembly by every participant.

Those who desire to obtain copies of "Africa Is Here" can obtain paper-bound copies at $1.00 each, postpaid, from 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, 10, N.Y.

Arya Pratinidhi Sabha (Natal)

The Secretary's Report submitted by Mr. D. G. Satya Dava to the 28th annual general meeting of the Arya Pratinidhi Sabha which was held recently at the A.P.S. Hall, reflected a year of progress. "With a view to infusing keener interest in the study of the Vedic Dharma, quarterly gatherings have been held with great success in Durban, Pietermaritzburg, Ladysmith and Stanger," stated the report. Attempts are being made by the Sabha to bring out a Vedic Preceptor to this country from India for a period of three years so that his missionary work could be of a more lasting nature. Efforts will be directed during the ensuing year towards the erection of the proposed Vedic Temple and Hall. The Treasurer's Financial Statement presented by Mr. M. Moonoo showed a surplus of £121 8s 9d. Over 50 delegates from various parts of Natal attended the meeting which was presided over by Mr. R. Mr. Singh who is an ex-president of the Sabha has been throughout its 28 years of existence a pillar of strength in the dissemination of Vedic Religion, Aryan Culture and Hindi Language in this country. In responding Mr. S. L. Singh stressed the need for social service in our community and stated that he was happy to visit his ancestral home.

આ ચાર્ આર વિનોબા ભાવે આજે હાઈદરાબાદમાં જમીનદારોની પાસેથી જમીનની બીજા માગી જમીન વગરનાઓને જમીન પુરી પાડવાનું જબરદસ્ત કામ કરી રહ્યા છે અને તેમાં તેમણે કદબી નહિ શકાય તેવી મહાન સફળતા પ્રાપ્ત કરેલી છે. તેઓ કેાઈ પણ જાતની ધાક ધમકી કે હાથાણું વગર સાચી સમજણ પુર્વક જમીન આપનારાઓ પાસેથી જ જમીન સ્વિકારે છે. આ રીતે અત્યાર સુધીમાં તેમને આઠ કરોડ એકર જમીન ભેટમાં મળેલી છે જે તેઓ જમીન વગરના એડુતોમાં વહેંચી રહ્યા છે. બિહારના એક જમીનદારે એક લાખ એકર જમીનની ભેટ આપી આજ સુધીનાં રેકૉર્ડ તોડ્યો છે.

દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકામાં આપણી પાસે જો ચોક્કસ એવા જમીનદાર હોય જેઓ હાઈદરાબાદના જમીનદારો બતાવી રહ્યા છે તેના ચોથા ભાગનો પણ ઉત્સાહ બતાવી શકે. તે જમીનનો સવાલ, જે સંબળાં કાંબોડ-સુબ છે, તેનો કુલસરમાં ઉકેલ આવી જાય અને આશ્ચર્યકાંઈ સઘળી વાતો હવામાં ઉડી જાય. આવાચાર વિનોબા ભાવેએ અહીંસાની અપાર શક્તિનું કુનીધાને અચુકપણે દર્શન કરાવ્યું છે. આ પાછા આખા આફ્રીકા ખંડમાં વસી રહેલા

ગોરી પ્રજાનું વચસ્વ નાબુદ કરવાનો અહીંસા એજ એક માત્ર માર્ગ છે. જેથી જાનમાલની ઝાણમાં ઝાણી કુકસાનીથી ક્યેય સિદ્ધ કરી શકાયો અને પાછળ ક્યેય નહિ રહે પરંતુ પ્રેમ રહેશે. દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકામાં હમનથી ચુકત થવાનું ચેતાનું ક્યેય સાધવા માંગનારા જેઓ હાઈસાનાં માર્ગ લેવાની વૃત્તિ ધરાવી રહ્યા હોય તેઓએ ઉડો વિચાર કરવાની અને મહારમા માંપીણ્યે ચેતાના છપનથી જે અહીંસાની શક્તિનું દર્શન કરાવેલું છે અને આજે તેમના ખૂબ શિશ્ય આવાચાર ઓર વિનોબા ભાવે પ્રચલ રીતે જાતાવી રહ્યા છે, તેના પર અનન્ય કરવું ધરે છે. “વીચાર નાણીને વર્તનથી અહીંસા પાલનમાંજ આપણી સુકિત રહેલી છે” એજ આપણો એક માત્ર સુદામત્ર હોવો જોઈએ.

મેટરટરને જોડીને તેમજે કહ્યું, તમે યુરોપીયન કોષ સ્થાનાતિક રીતે તમે માનતા હશે કે અમને યુરોપીયનો ની વિરુદ્ધમાં કોષ છે. અમારી પ્રતીત એ આફ્રિકનોપર યુરોપી રહેતા અમારોની વિરુદ્ધ છે અને તમે એમ

વૃક્ષ પ્રધાન ડો. મધાને પ્રિટોરીયામાં કહ્યું. “હું અહીં આવ્યો છું કારણ કે વિરોધ પક્ષ અને મોલો કમ્પે છે. વિરોધ પક્ષના નેતાએ કહ્યું હતું કે હું મરડો ચર્ચ મધો છું એટલે હું બાધ્ય કરી ચકીય નહીં, આથી હું આને તમારી સમક્ષ આવ્યો છું. નેશનલીસ્ટ પક્ષને મેનીફેસ્ટો ૧૯૪૮ માં તેમજે ને રજુ કર્યો હતો તેજ છે. ૧૯૪૮માં, નેશનલીસ્ટ પક્ષે સૌથી અમલનો નીવવ-વધુને સવલ-લાય કરવા કહ્યું હતું. યુનાઇટેડ પક્ષે અનેકવાર કહ્યું હતું કે નેશનલીસ્ટ પક્ષની એપાટ હેઠ નીતી શું છે તે તેમને ખબર નથી. હવે નેશનલીસ્ટ પક્ષે એ નીતી કેલવી અમમ માં મુકી છે તે બેવાનું છું. તેની સાખીતી તરીકે સરકારે કાચાપોથી પર, “નેશનલ રેજીસ્ટ્રેશન એક્ટ, ગ્રામ જોરીમાલ એક્ટ, મીકા પ્રેરેશન એક્ટ અને ઇન્ડિપેન્ડેન્સી એક્ટ મુક્યા છે.” સરકારે નેડીવ રેગેન્ટીવ કાઉન્સિલ પછી નાખ્યું કરી છે. આ કાઉન્સિલે યુનાઇટેડ પક્ષના વખતમાં પછી વધુનો સવલ નાખ્યું કરાવવા અને યુરોપી અને બીન-યુરોપીના સમાન હકો મેળવવા હકતાલ પારી હતી. બે અપીલ કેટિ અંતરાય મુક્યો ન હોત તો સરકારે “એપેરેટ રેગેન્ટેશન એક્ટ કલર્સ” નોટસ” એક્ટ” નો કાયદો પછી પસાર કર્યો હોત. પરંતુ હજી અંત આપ્યો નથી. બે અમે પાછા આપીશું તો બનવું કરીશું. યુનાઇટેડ પક્ષના અમમ દરમીયાન સામવાદીઓ નો બલ વધ્યો હતો. આફ્રિકાના બીજા ભાગોમાં શું મધ્ય રહ્યું હતું તેની પછી

સરખામાં એક ૫,૦૦૦ વર્ષ યુની કમર થોડી કાલમાં આવી છે. તેમાંથી મળી આવેલા ફરનીયર અને વાસણો જતાવે છે કે આપણે પારના દેશ તેના કરતાં તે વખતના લે છે વધુ રાધેલા દેશ. આ કમર લંડન યુનીવર્સિટીના ગ્રીક એમરીએ રોપી કાઢી હતી. અને એમ માનવામાં આવે છે કે તે વાડી (Vandy) રાજની અથવા તેમના એકાદ મંત્રીની છે. ગ્રીકેમર એમરીને, કાપી લેવાના અને ભાગલાં એવળેલા, ફરનીયરના ભાગો, વાસણો વગેરે મળી આવ્યા હતા. પહેલાની કમર જેવી રીતે થાડ પાડ્યા હુંટ માટે કમર થોડી કાલના દેશ તે પ્રમાણે આ કમરને પશુ તુક માન પહેલું હતું કારણ કે તેને અમુક ભાગમાં પાછું બનાવેલું માથામ પાડું હતું

અધિક માસને પુરોત્તમ માસ તરીકે કોઈ કોઈ જાણે છે. તે સમયમાં જરૂર મળેલા પાણી આવે છે. જે અધિક માસમાં સુપર ૨૫૯ મિલિ ગ્રામોનું સંક્રમણ ન થાય તે અધિક માસ અને જેમાં જે નવાન શરૂ થાય તે સમય માસ એવા સિદ્ધાંત રચી શકાયો છે. હવે જે માસમાં સુપર ૨૫૯ સંક્રમણ ન થાય તે અધિક માસ તે અધિક પુરોત્તમ માસ છે. સામાન્ય રીતે મહિનાનાં નામ પુરુષોના દિવસે જે નક્કર હોય તેના ઉપરથી પાડવામાં આવે છે જેમકે કૃતિકા ઉપરથી કૃતિકા, જ્યેષ્ઠી ઉપરથી જ્યેષ્ઠા, પુષ્ય ઉપરથી પૌષ, મધ્ય ઉપરથી મધ્ય વગેરે. પરંતુ જે નક્કર ઉપરથી માસનું નામ પડે છે તે જ નક્કર હોઈ માસની પુર્ણિમા એ જ આવતું નથી. આથી જે જે માસ માસ મેષ વગેરે રાશિ સુવં સંક્રમણમાં પુર્ણ થાય તેને જોનાર સમજવા અને જેમાં જે માસની પુર્ણ થાય તેમાં બીજો માસ અધિક માસ જાણવો. જેમકે સં. ૨૦૦૬માં તા. ૧૩-૪-૫૬ના રોજ વડ છે તે દિવસે અધિક માસ જાણી જાય પણ પછી પુર્ણ થાય છે. તે જ દિવસે ૨૦ થી ૧૩ વળ પછી મેષ સંક્રમણે. અમલ થાય છે. એટલે મેષ સંક્રમણે જેની સમાપ્તિ થઈ તે જોત માસ કહેવાય. હવે તા. ૧૩-૫-૫૩ ના રોજ બીજા માસની અમાસ પણ પુરી થઈ. મેષ સંક્રમણે થાય છે. આથી એક માસની સમાપ્તિ થઈ. આથી પહેલા માસને જોઈ અધિક અને જોઈને અધિક માસ અધિક. અને જોત પછી આવનારા માસ તરીકે તેને જોવામાં નામ આવ્યું. આથી તા. ૧૩-૪-૫૩થી તા. ૧૩-૫-૫૩ સુધીના માસને "અધિક મેષ" એમ નામ આપ્યું છે.

ઉપર મુજબ અધિક માસની ઉત્પત્તિ સંબંધી જાણ્યું. હવે તેના મહત્વ અને જાણ સંબંધી પુરોત્તમ જે કૃતિકા છે તે અધિક અધિક વર્ષની જાણ માટે આવવા પ્રયત્ન કરી છે.

એક સમયે નરનારાયણ ભગવાન ભિલાસના બરિકામમમા સિદ્ધ મેળીજોનામાં બિરાજ્યા હતા ત્યારે નારક સુનિ ત્યાં પધાયા. ભગવાને પ્રજ્ઞામ કરી તે સ્તુતિ કરવા માગ્યા કે જે અપાર કલ્યાણના સાગર, સર્વનું કલ્યાણ કરનાર. અધિક તે ઉપકાર અધિક સર્વભાષા વિષય ભગવાન છે, તે સંસાર સાગરમાં કુળતાં અને સંસાર પ્રાણીઓનું શિલ કરનાર કોઈ ઉત્તમ સમિત્વાતી કહે.

ભગવાન નારાયણે જાણ્યું કે, તે નારક! પુરોત્તમ માસનો મહિમા તને સંજ્ઞાપું છું. તે માસના રવામાં સંસાર પુરોત્તમ ભગવાન છે. તે માસ મા મત-નય-નય-ઉપવાસ પુન વગેરે કરવાથી ભગવાન પ્રસન્ન થાય છે. નારકે જાણ્યું કે "ભગવાન! પાર માસનાં નામ તે જાણીતાં છે પણ પુરોત્તમ માસનું નામ તે જોઈ જાણ્યું નથી. તે કૃપા કરીને મને તે માસનો મહિમા કહે. તે માસમાં શું શું કરવું જોઈએ તે મને જણાવો." નારકે સુનિર્ણય કર્યો સંસારી ભગવાન નારાયણે કહ્યું. "હે નારક! અધિક માસરે જ્યેષ્ઠામાં કારીને રીપદી સાથે વનમાં રહેવા હોવા જારે ભગવાન આ કૃષ્ણ તેમને મળવા મળા હતા. ભગવાને જોતા જાણ્યું અને રીપદીને જાણ્યું સાગી આવ્યું. વનમાં અનેક પ્રકારનાં કૃષ્ણ સહ-સેવકો તેમજ પીડાતા હતા. રીપદી પણ તેનું ધ્યેય અપમાન જાણ્યું ન હતો. ભગવાને જોત જાણ્યું તેમજ રીપદી. આ રીપદીને આજ્ઞાસન આપવા સાગર અને અધુન ને કહેવા લાગ્યા કે, "હે ભગવાન! હવે વરસે ૧૨ માસ આવે છે. તેમાં રહેલા દેવો અને અત્યંત પુરોત્તમ પુન-સેવા કરવાથી પ્રાણીઓના મિત-કલ્યાણ થાય છે. પરંતુ આદિ, કાળ

માં, એક વધારાનો અધિક માસ જોવામાં આવી જાય અને અધિક ઉત્પન્ન થાય તેને જોઈને જાણી જોઈ કહેવા લાગ્યા કે આ તો મહામાસ છે, તેમાં સુખની મતિ થતી નથી. એટલે તે અપવિત્ર, અવેગ્ય અને શુભકારીમાં વર્જીત છે. આ અધિક-માસમાં રવામાં વિષય ભગવાન ભગવાનને કહેવા લાગ્યા કે મારી અંદર જે શુભ-અવેગ્ય-કર્તા રહેલાં છે તે જાણી જોઈ આ પુરોત્તમ માસને મળી. તેના નામથી ભગવાન વિવિધ કરી અને પાર માસમાં તે ઉત્તમ મળાશે. જાણ મહિના તો કાળ પ્રમાણે જાણ આવનાર છે પણ આ માસ તો સર્વ કામનાઓ, પુરી કરનારો, જોય અને જોઈને આવનારો, સર્વ વધનો અને પાવોને પ્રકટ કરનારો બનશે. આ માસમાં મત-નય પુન-ભક્તિ-પદ વગેરે કિય. એ કરવાથી સાતિધામ-આત્મદર્શન થઈ જાણી અને જાણના ઉદ્ધાર થાય છે.

"આ રીપદી પહેલાં મેધાવી નામના તપસ્વી બ્રાહ્મણની એકની એક પુત્રી હતી. તેનું નામ 'સુરતી' રાખ્યું હતું. તેની માતા તેને નાની સુરતીને મૃત્યુ પામી હતી. એટલે તેના પિતા તેનું સાવધાન કરતા હતા. તેના પિતા એ તેને સાક્ષિય સાક્ષી કુટુંબ બનાવી કોઈની મોટી કરી પરંતુ પોતાની પુત્રી માટે કોઈ યોગ્ય પતિ ન મળવાથી તે અંતિમ રહેતો અને તે કૃષ્ણમાં ને કૃષ્ણમાં જોઈએ તે જાણના બિલાને સપાવો અને તેણે આ જાણ્યું કહે સુરતી, રાધેય જાણે રીપદીના એક જોઈતાં બેભાન પ્રાણી છે. પોતાના જાણ ને કૃષ્ણ રીપદી નિરાધાર બનેલી સુરતી આજમા જોઈવી રહી હવે કરતી હતી જોવામાં કુવોસા સુનિ ત્યાં આવી મદયા તેમજ તેને કહ્યું કે મેટા! આજથી અંતે માસે પુરોત્તમ માસ આવશે તેમાં જ મત-નય કરીશ તો તારી મનકામના પુર્ણ થશે. પરંતુ તે સુરતીને કુવોસા અધિના વનમાં અવગણના કરી અને અધિક માસ તો મળવામાં જાણ્યું નહિ અને કંઈ કરવું જોઈ તપ કરવા લાગી. કંઈ તેના તપથી પ્રસન્ન થયા અને વરદાન માગવાનું જાણ્યું. સુરતી એકદમ

શુદ્ધિ કરી બહિષ્કાર-પરોપકારના-
ભાવ-ઉપવાસ-તપ-તપ દાન પ્રથમ કરી “આત્મવત્ સર્વં કુર્યુ” (માણી માન

દુનિયા મારે કંઈ કરીએ એજ તેની
શરત્કતા

પરજી મનની માફક પ્રસંગે તમ
માફમાં પશુ મદદ. ભારત-ગીતા- કવિપદોમાંની કયાઓ વગેરે બધે તે
ધર્મી પ્રસંગોમાં વાચન-અવલોકન અને
ધનન થાય એ હમણે જાણ છે.
આપણી સમીપમાં વસેલાઓના જીવન
તરફ દિશી કરીએ અને પ્રાણીમાનની
સેવા કરી “આત્મારામ”ને પ્રસન્ન
કરી જીવનને ધન્ય બનાવીએ. પ્રાણી
માનના ભલામાજ આપણે બહુ
સમારેણું છે. જ્યાં સ્વાર્થ છે ત્યાં
કદી પણ સુખ નથી. પરમાર્થમા-
પરોપકારમાજ-સાચા સુખના ઉત્તમ
માર્ગ છે, એમ જરૂરપણ અનિવાર્યકરિત
નથીજ. ભાણુજીએ ગીતાનોષ્ઠમાં કહ્યું
કે કે “પ્રભુની બક્ષિત ક્ષેત્રે પ્રાણી
માનની નિસ્વાર્થ સેવા.” તન-મન
અને ધનથી આવી સેવા કરવાની
પ્રજ્ઞ! આપણુ બધાને શુદ્ધિ અને
દક્ષિત આપે એજ પ્રાર્થના.

સદનુ...પ્રમ...પ્રમ...! કરતાં સુરેશે ટેબલ ઉપરથી થાળી, વાડકા ઉજાળવા માંડ્યાં, અને
તીવ્ર સ્વરે તકુકયો; “આટલો જમીનો મયે અને તારી રસોઈમાં કંઈ ટેમણું નથી! આ ફાળ કુલેલી, આ બજારમાં કાઢરી, મગમાં કાઢ્યુ...”

સરલા, ઊંચ સ્વરે કંપાત કરતા બોલી; “હવે તો હું તમારાથી કંટાળી છું. થોડો આ તમારી દીકરી પંક્ષી અને પાલી, અને હું આ ગાલી...”

એટલામાં સરલાની નજર, કુસુમ, પડોશમાંથી આવી પહેંચે છે “હું થયું છે બાબી, કહે, તો ખરાં?”

“જુઓને આ તમારા બાઈ કમની ઉતાવળે નેવો-તેવો માલ લાવે અને જહી રસોઈમાં મારો મજાના ભેટમાં ઝીણી કાઢરી ફેપ તો પછી બજારમાં આવેજ ને?”

કુસુમ : “જુઓને બાઈ! આમ બાબીને વાક તમે કરવડીએ કહડો એ ઠીક નહિ. હમારે

A Declaration For The Increase Of Sight Among The Peoples Of The World

The above is the title of a meditation on Psalm 67 written by Phelps Putnam and appearing in a volume entitled 'The Modern Reader's Book Of Psalms' which was published a decade or more ago but which only recently I picked up by chance on a second hand book counter. I commend it to all as an exceptionally fine collection of translations of or meditations based on the 150 psalms in the Psalter. Such authors as Auden, T. S. Eliot, C. S. Lewis, Louis MacNeice, Paraphrase, and Sarah N. Cleghorn are included. I felt the meditation on Psalm 67 so appropriate to the New Year and the time in which we live that I copied it.

"Let us declare that we are the men

And that the weight of seeing is among us

The nations will be sane, using our thoughts

And our words shall penetrate beyond our guns

We live upon the edge near the lordly lands,

And the world shall eat the harvest of our minds

In Support Of Our Cause

WE receive many letters in support of our cause locally and from overseas. One from the United States just received is so full of love and sympathy that we cannot resist the temptation of sharing it with our readers. It is by Mrs. Helen Le Chaminant.

"Although I never had the privilege of seeing your wonderful father I honoured and loved him through reading things written about and by him. . . He was the greatest man that the world has known for centuries and centuries. I deem it wonderful to have lived in the world the same time that he did.

There is only one way that the world can continue to exist and that is the way of love and non-violence. The human race must come to know this or it will not survive and while it must seem very discouraging under present conditions in South Africa you and all of us must fight on for what we know to be the better way. We honour you for carrying on your father's work. You must have courage to continue. Even if you knew you were doomed to failure you must continue for the ideas and the spark must live!

I love India. Though I have never been there in this life time, I am sure I have in a former incarnation. I feel such an affinity for the Indian people that can only be explained in this way. I wish I could help you. Please know that you have the best wishes of many here and that we are doing what we can to spread the idea of true brotherhood."

".... It can't be wrong to resist unjust laws as Christ told his disciples they would be brought before magistrates and judges and all the Masters defied the laws. I feel a brute to live here in security and comfort whilst others are suffering. It may interest you to know my spare room is kept entirely for non-Europeans. I have just offered it to an ejected mother and baby (Coloured). I can't give much but will do my utmost if there is any way I can help to ameliorate the condition of Africans. It is encouraging that the South African Liberal Association is being sponsored by so many Capetown University people. Our hope for justice is in the young who have a sense of justice and are willing to be adventurous. The older Europeans can only think in terms of self-interest. They won't see that our interests are bound together. The Bantu and Indians must despise our Christianity, which does not attempt to meet the social needs of our country. I assure you of my deepest sympathy with all oppressed races. The way they have kept to non-violence in face of so much provocation is amazing."

What Next?

SO the Nationalist Party has won the election with 91 seats in its favour as against 57 for the United Party and 4 for the Labour Party. The Nationalist Party has a majority of 30 over all parties, including the three Native Representatives in the House of 159, whereas in the last election it had a majority only of 13. We were not at all surprised at these results since we had not the slightest doubt that the Nationalists would win. We would have been surprised if the United Party had won.

With us non-Europeans it is a case of "better an enemy we know than a friend we do not know." The Nationalists have won because, they were frank and straightforward and had a definite policy, right or wrong. They meant what they said and did what they said. Truth was on their side. The United Party, who form the bulk of the English-speaking people, were hypocrites. They had no definite policy. What hurt them about the entrenched clauses in the Constitution was the way their own rights and interests were being endangered, not how the non-Whites were faring. They did not stand even by the old Cape policy of "equal rights for all civilised people." Had their own interests not been jeopardised and had the non-Whites alone been affected they would have stood squarely with the Nationalists.

Frankly speaking this country is doomed to destruction because of the utter hypocrisy on the part of the English-speaking people and utterly narrow nationalism on the part of the Afrikaans-speaking people, who honestly believe that the non-Whites who represent five times the Union's population are destined to be the "hewers of wood and drawers of water" of the White man. All this is against the principles of Christianity on which their policy is claimed to have been based and against the principles of all religions. If there is a God no country in the world with such a policy can survive and history teaches us that none has survived.

There are dark days ahead of this fair land blessed with all the resources one could desire. If those resources were wisely utilised there is not the least doubt that this land would be like a heaven on earth. But because of the selfishness, greed, false pride and power-madness of a few, who are out to crush humanity to satisfy their own evil desires, it is doomed to be turned into a hell. That in a nutshell is our reading of the whole situation in South Africa.

What, in the circumstances, are the non-Whites, who are the victims of this oppression, going to do? That is the question which confronts them. Are they going to fear the tyrant and submit to his will, or will they fear God and submit humbly to His law with faith in Him, Who alone is the Creator, Protector and Destroyer of all living things on this earth? Let us not lose our heads with the tyrant, for he knows not what he is doing. In his light he believes he is doing the right thing. We who claim to know better and believe that he is doing the wrong thing, may not give way to hate and resort to methods that he is employing against us, but have pity on him and firmly refusing to bend to his will pray to God for His mercy and wise guidance. That is the essence of Passive resistance, which is based on absolute Love, Truth and Non-violence. The time has come when we shall have to bear the Cross as Christ did, drink the cup of poison as Socrates did, embrace the burning pillar as Pralhad did.

Be it remembered the Nationalist Government is now fully armed to fight us. We are doomed unless we arm ourselves with a superior weapon. That weapon is non-violent resistance. But let us also not forget that the successful use of that weapon demands a very strict code of self-discipline. Unless we undergo that the weapon will not work. If we have mastered it it will never fail us even under the direst circumstances.

We do not think we should engage ourselves merely in violating laws to court arrest. A great deal of constructive work needs to be done among our people, such as educating them to give up all evil habits such as drinking, gambling and many other social evils, to become self-reliant, which they can only do by reducing their requirements to the barest minimum and to lead clean and honest lives. The leaders will have to begin by teaching themselves many of these things so as to set an example to others. If they think that these are things of no consequence and that they are at liberty to lead a licentious life with no self-restraint, we fear they do not know the rudiments of "Satyagraha," (Force of Truth) which is the true meaning of "Passive Resistance." We must therefore not take any hasty action but think calmly and make our future plans wisely.

NOTES AND NEWS

Why There is Racial Segregation

THE following letter under the con-de plume "An African" appeared in the "Natal Witness" dated April 21:

Sir,—One afternoon I got on a Corporation bus opposite the Colonial Building in Church Street to go to the Railway Station. As I sat on a seat at the back a young European gentleman ordered me to sit where he felt I should sit. I use these buses right times each working day. I always use the seats for Blacks. I stand when there are many White folk. I do so of my own volition. Now Sir, has a passenger any right to command another passenger to sit here, there or anywhere? The conductor was doing his work. I was in one of the three seats at the back. There were no White folk there, so I was puzzled indeed. I gave up going to Durban. Rather I got off near Chapel Street and went to the nearest church to pray for our country. I am sixty years old. I was rushing from a church meeting—I had a lot of self-control, but it leaked so dangerously I had to rush for a fresh supply. There was peace in heaven until an angel was sent. Later there was war. On the other hand "God highly exalted His Son—and gave Him a name which is above every name, that every knee... in Heaven and Earth... should bow... and every tongue should confess that he is Lord." Is it impossible for White folk to earn respect for their civilisation by being civil to civil fellowmen irrespective of colour? Is it my fault that I am an African—and not a European? Tell us now, please Sir.

Commenting on the above the "Natal Witness" writes:

"An African correspondent, who for reasons that are perhaps obvious prefers to remain anonymous, draws attention in our correspondence column today to an incident which is unhappily all too typical of the things that occur among us in the day-to-day relations of the different races... 'We are always hearing that if the non-Europeans wish to be respected, they must earn respect. It is as well to remind ourselves that the same principle applies to the Europeans. Our position depends on the last resort not on force or superior abilities, but on the respect that we can command. We can only continue to command it if we deserve it'."

Non-White Opinion On Elections

A campaign to try and achieve rights for the non-Europeans would be carried on, said a statement on the general election, issued in Johannesburg by the executive committee of the African National Congress, the Franchise Action Council and South African Indian Congress. The aim would be to try and bring about the repeal of Acts which discriminated against non-Europeans, the statement said. Explaining the statement at a Press conference Mr. Albert J. Lutuli, president-general of the African National Congress, said that the campaign would always be non-violent. "But just what form it may take from time to time, I cannot say," Mr. Lutuli said. Asked why there had been no obvious activity by non-Europeans during the past months, Mr. Lutuli said: "Round about November, there was a Government Proclamation which made certain things illegal. Parliament later passed the Public Safety and the Criminal Law Amendment Acts.

In the light of that fact, it was necessary for the organisation to take stock of the situation. It means studying our programme and the new situation to adapt our plans and to see what we could do." Mr. Lutuli concluded: "I have hope and faith that White South Africa will one day see reason and give the non-Europeans their rights." The statement also said that in spite of the larger vote in favour of the Opposition, in effect the White electorate as a whole had voted for the Nationalist policy, because the Opposition also stood for the fundamental policy of denying to the non-White people full democratic rights, and its belief in segregation was consonant with apartheid and White domination.—Sapa.

Central African Federation

The Southern Rhodesia electorate has spurned the principle of a Central African Federation. Three areas which opposed the federal scheme were the farming districts of Gwelo, Selukwe and Port Victoria. Africans will refuse to stand for election to the Federal Parliament if Central African federation is "forced through" against the opposition of Africans of Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Mr. Joshua Nkomo, an African leader in Bulawayo is reported to have said. Mr. Nkomo was one of the delegates to the recent conference of African leaders from the three Central African territories, at which federation was discussed.

Mr. Fenner Brockway, British Labour member of Parliament, according to a Sapa-Reuters message from London, said, "the Federation plebiscite is a disastrous decision. The fact that 50,000 people in Southern Rhodesia, of whom fewer than 1,000 are Africans, should decide the fate of 6,300,000 Africans is a sufficient comment on the undemocratic character of the decision. We must face a worsening of racial relations in the three Central African territories." Mr. Brockway said that he hoped "my African friends there will follow the line of non-violent resistance, of which they have received an example from South Africa, rather than the methods of violence and terrorism which have been followed in Kenya."

Outstanding Academic Qualifications Of A S.A. Indian

Indians in South Africa will be proud to know that Mr. D. Basseu, one of their brethren, who had obtained his B.Sc. and M.Sc., with honours at the Fort Hare College, where he lived at the Anglican Hostel when the Ri-

Rev. Bishop Ferguson-Davis was in charge, has been elected a "Fellow of the Zoological Society" in London. He is now working for the Ph.D. We very heartily congratulate Mr. Basseu on his outstanding achievement and wish him every success in his future undertakings.

DEMONSTRATION IN AMERICA ON ELECTION DAY

(From Our New York Correspondent)

At a demonstration of support for the non-European majority who had no voice in the recent elections in the Union, representatives from other parts of Africa joined 'Americans for South African Resistance' in picketting the offices of the South African Consulate, 645 Madison Ave., at 3 p.m. on election day, according to a statement by George M. Houser, Executive Secretary. Mr. Houser also noted that April marks the first anniversary of the launching of the non-violent resistance by non-European organizations in their struggle to gain equal rights. Emergency measures aimed at smothering the movement were passed recently by the South African Parliament and a letter from a high official of the African National Congress thus describes the present state of affairs:

"...You will no doubt be aware by now of the fact that this Government has by recent legislation given itself such wide and unlimited powers over the role of individuals and organisations that practically any act could be deemed an offence if the Police so wish it. To give you an example two local men have just been arrested for convening a prayer meeting during the course of which prayers were said for our national organisation.

"We have good reason to believe that mail is subjected to scrutiny. One is thus unable to write you as freely as one should have liked to. But please be reassured of our great indebtedness for all you have done..."

Leader Of African National Congress To Give Final Address

The drive to gain support in this country for the "Non-violent Resistance Campaign Against Unjust Laws" culminated in a meeting on Wednesday, April 22 at 5 P.M. at the St. James Presbyterian Church, 409 West 141st St., announced Bill Sutherland, 'Americans for South African Resistance' public relations director. The principal speaker at the meeting was Dr. Z. K. Matthews, African National Congress leader, who spoke on the South African elections and the resistance campaign. This was one of the final public addresses by Dr. Matthews before he returns to South Africa.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

BRITAIN 1832—SOUTH AFRICA 1953

A COMPARISON FOR EUROPEANS

By C. W. H. GELL

Reproduced from 'The Forum' (Johannesburg)

II

[BY no means hold the Nationalists alone responsible for our present racial predicament, though by applying the doctrine of the handshake with relentless dogmatism and a certain militant integrity they have brought us to a crisis that has been long maturing. When 'The Star' wrote on February 18, "it is no doubt true that at some time in the future all political parties will have to ask themselves what political arrangements they propose to make to meet the needs of a multi-racial society," it was concerned to point out that this problem confronted the Nationalists quite as much as the Opposition. I only quarrel with the words "at some time in the future." By all the signs and portents, by all the confessions of intelligent men who have no reason to conceal the truth of what they see, the time is upon us now. For, before the attitudes of the various races harden beyond the possibility of honourable compromise, we have to choose between force and consent. The question we have to ask is whether we are to commit ourselves to the defence by all possible means of our present privileged position with all the consequences of civil strife and race war that may ensue; or whether we shall make an effort to go forward to a South Africa commanding the willing consent and loyalty of all race groups, because all are allowed to participate in the direction of its higher political and economic life. The bonds of non-European patience and goodwill are fast running out upon our nostrils.

If we decide for the first course, then our present political set-up will serve the purpose admirably, though we shall have to increase our defence and police allotments as we go along and tighten up the Swart Acts. But if in our hearts a significant number of us opt for the second alternative, we shall encounter the serious difficulty of politicians too anxious to mislead the wavering by preaching to their lowest level. Today we learn of our real predicament from "irresponsible" Churchmen, intellectuals and (if we will listen to them) non-Europeans, because these gentlemen do not have to face trade and economic attitudes at the polls. But we need to voice most politicians are exasperably realistic. Dr. Matsen has told us that it does not pay any party to attempt to achieve the impossible and most politicians set their sights a good deal lower than that. They, therefore, conceal the immense sacrifices we shall have to make in defending our privileges and harp on the risks we would incur in trying to share them with our non-European fellow-citizens. And the vicious circle of politicians and voters egging each other on to disregard the tensions arising outside the White community and threatening it will continue until it is broken by the force of circumstances or we have the wisdom to make our politicians responsible to the polls to at least some small section of educated non-European opinion. The irresponsibility of our politics at this gravest hour in South African history is largely due to the unrepresentative nature of our franchise.

Historical Analogy

There is a marked historical analogy with the state of Britain in the years between the end of the Napoleonic Wars in 1815 and the Great Reform Bill in 1832. I know there are important differences; but the similarities are striking, particularly the mentality of the ruling classes.

That was a time, like our own, of great international upheavals dominated by a continental revolution and its ideologists. To be called a Jacobin in England in 1820 meant much the same as being called a Communist here today. England had more or less completed her Agrarian Revolution and the enclosure movement of the late 18th century had created a landless proletariat rather as our Native Land Acts have done. England was, moreover, in the middle of her Industrial Revolution, even as we are today. She knew all that we know today about the drift to the towns, the shortage of urban housing, the squalor of the industrial slums, the over-representation of platitudinous interests at the expense of urban and industrial ones, the rapid rising material standards and higher living standards were creeping in among the lower classes and creating a demand for better social and economic opportunities. It was thus a period of almost continual civil unrest from the Luddite movement, through Peterloo and the Six Acts which tried to hold the position by repressive legislation as the Swart Acts do today, on through the conflagration of Bristol to the Chartist, Let me quote Dr. G. M. Trevelyan:

"In town and country every person in authority in Church or State seemed to be in league with their employers against the poor (cf. our non-European). They had no tongue to speak for them; they had no franchise in central or in local government; they had no legal means of trade organisation to make their numbers felt in the labour market. Unfortunately the victors of Waterloo (like their successors at el Alamein) were less happily inspired in dealing with the crisis that now confronted them. They had no economic or political remedy to propose except the severest form of repression."

Rioters in Britain were tried for high treason (on South African activities and "seditious Communism"), printers and authors for sedition (the 'Guardian' suppressed without trial and lack of safeguards in the Swart Acts). Habeas Corpus suspended (detention without trial under the Swart Acts), public meetings prohibited (as in most of our locations). The British Government of 1819 approved of the ruthless suppression of rioting without enquiry, as our own has recently done. In the 1820's the British criminal law was at last reformed in the teeth of opposition which forecast (quite incorrectly) that the abolition of the death penalty for over a hundred offences would lead to widespread lawlessness ("the nigger only understands the lash"). In 1830, on the eve of the Reform Bill rioting agricultural labourers demanding a wage of 26 a day were savagely punished, three being hung and over 400 deported to Australia. It all sounds quite modern, doesn't it?

Rival Factions

During all this period the British political parties, like our own today, were concerned not with the basic causes of so much discontent and frustration but with their own struggle for power. They did not stand for democratic ideas and national power; they were merely two rival factions disputing the possession of power, the means and the ends. What Trevelyan said of Britain and the countries of Europe has a very familiar ring to us: "The Powers did not represent the peoples and the States did not represent the facts." On the eve of the Reform

Bill the Duke of Wellington with a disregard for political realities as overt and complete as any South African politician today declared "The system of representation possesses the full and entire confidence of the country."

But in fact it was not so. For thirty or forty years reform of the British franchise had been actively canvassed in order to base it more broadly and make it more representative of the new industrial and urban classes. But, as in South Africa, it had depended on a parliamentary agitation by Colclough, Hunt and the champions of unorganised labour battling with the sympathetic support of the Evangelicals against the privileged upper classes entrenched in Parliament and middle class apathy—a situation not unparalleled here today. And the arguments with which the opponents of reform justified their stand were very reminiscent of those used against extending our franchise to non-Europeans—opening the gates to "a flood-tide of radicalism" (1), too ignorant "barbarous and uncivilised" to be entrusted (2) the term derived from those who demanded a "radical" reform of the franchise with the vote. Even so late as 1866 (just before the Reform Bill) Robert Lowe opposed any further franchise extension because of "the moral and intellectual inferiority of the wage-earners" and his cautious eloquence on this interesting theme roused the same sort of reaction from those whose self-respect had been affronted as contemporary herrenvolk admonitions do in South Africa. Within the lifetime of many of us similar objections were made against giving the vote to British women and led to the not very passive activities of the suffragette movement.

But in the winter of 1830, immediately after the Iron Duke's monumental mis-statement, a combination of causes brought in a Government which preferred constitutional reform to revolution—the return of bad economic conditions (which we have so far avoided), the violence of working class despair (of which we have only had premonitions), the gravity of middle and upper class fear of a social uprising (which clearly inspired its partisan support for the Swart Acts), the belief (which we do not yet share) that it could no longer be averted by mere repression, and the example of a peaceful overseas revolution in France in 1830 unaccompanied by social disorder and administrative collapse (such as has occurred in India, Nigeria, the Gold Coast, the West Indies.)

From Our Own Correspondent

CENTRAL AFRICAN FEDERATION

THE House of Lords debate on Central African Federation on April 1 was followed with great interest by people throughout Britain. After distinguished speakers from both sides of the House had discussed the Federation Scheme, the basic ideological factors were raised by Lord Addington, "Federation or not," he said, "unity is still the most vital issue. In Southern Rhodesia there are two most hopeful signs—and I would emphasise the word 'hopeful.' The first is that many Europeans are coming to see that there must be contact and consultation with the Africans on a new level and in an atmosphere free from suspicion and fear. The second is that African leaders are beginning to take the initiative themselves in working out the ideological strategy for Central Africa."

Lord Addington reported that "from Africa alone 90 leaders from 12 different areas have been to Caux in Switzerland where this ideology is not only taught but lived and caught." Among them had been Mr. Godwin Lewanika, founder and first President of the Northern Rhodesian African Congress, who on his return arranged the first round table talks between Europeans and Africans. Speaking at such a round table conference, Mr. Hove, the editor of the "Bantu Mirror" in Bulawayo, reported that national leaders of the European and African trade union organisations were for the first time planning together to influence the greatest number with a positive ideology."

"I suggest," concluded Lord Addington, "that there are thus firm grounds of hope for a solution, both of this particular problem of Federation in these three territories and of the wider problems of unity and race relationships in Africa and many other parts of the world."

Miss Peggy Metcalfe, a Civil Servant, said: "The problems at a conference table are often not as difficult as the problems around the table. In MRA we have a real and vital chance to bring a solution to the divisions and frustrations of the world."

From Finland came Miss Kirsti Hukkarainen, a factory worker, who twice lost her home in the war. "I have been prepared to die for my country," she declared, "but I did not know how to live at peace. I was looking for something so big that it would make a new world possible. In MRA I found it. Applying this ideology in my own life has cured all the deepest wounds in my heart."

Mrs. McArthur Holman, who had recently returned from India, summed up the thoughts of the women present. "If we want a safe world for our children and our children's children and for our own old age," she said, "we must give everything now."

A Lead From Management

In the Digbeth Institute, Birmingham, where the workers' meetings have been taking place during the great strike in Austin's Motor Works, a meeting for trade unionists, mainly from the motor industries, heard industrial speakers on Moral Re-Armament.

Mr. John Nowell, General Manager of the Crompton Tannery in Cheshire, and last year's President of the British National Association of Cut Sole Manufacturers, spoke on revolutionary change in industry and the nation.

"Moral Re-Armament is creating the trust and teamwork of men set free from their fear, hates and resentments," said Mr. Nowell. "It means change for us in management." He told how he had apologized to the trade union leader in his factory, and then adusted all wages on the basis of what was right. A Works Council jointly led by management and labour, had been so successful that a well known revolutionary leader from Europe had commented: "Here I have seen my boyhood's dream fulfilled. This could never happen under Communism. You men are free—I see it in your faces."

The Healing Of The Nations

Women from many countries thronged the Cowdroy Hall,

London, recently to hear evidence of a world force active in over 60 countries, and to be presented with the challenge of what is right and not who is right. The meeting was called by the well-known actress, Miss Lena Ashwell O.B.E. (Lady Simson) and Miss Hilda Pocock, S.R.N.

Lady Simson said "Moral Re-Armament is the most powerful and vital instrument God is using today for the uniting of the nations." Miss Pocock told the audience "I went into nursing for the healing of peoples' bodies; I am in MRA for the healing of the nations."

THE HYDERABAD CONGRESS RESOLUTIONS

TWO of the important resolutions passed by the 55th session of the Indian National Congress held at Hyderabad (January 17 to 19) are reproduced below.

Foreign Policy And The World Situation

The Congress views with deep concern and grave anxiety the ever growing tension and the deepening crisis in the relations between the Great Powers who have aligned themselves in rival Power Blocs, engaged in a "cold war," and poised to strike with their unprecedented armed might, ever mounting to greater dimensions and intensity, a threatening destruction to themselves and to the rest of the world.

While nations and governments are not seeking war and the peoples of the world, including those of the countries in the rival Blocs, earnestly desire peace, the accumulation of the race armaments continues. The campaign and the psychology of hatred and distrust and the acceptance by the Great Powers, as the basis of their policy, that preparation for large scale and total war alone can lead to the prevention of war, have resulted in grave, incalculable and present risk to world peace. This has rendered the desires of the common people for peace not only ineffective, but has continuously turned the minds of nations and peoples to the acceptance of war preparations as necessary and war itself as almost inevitable. Thus their thoughts and minds are orientated in the direction of war.

Unceasing endeavour should be made to bring about a change in the opposite direction, creating a climate of peace, and a change in the approach of nations and governments to one another, and as between groups of them, in the direction of reconciliation rather than conflict and power grouping, so that the great objectives embodied in the Charter of the United Nations and its original purposes may be attained, and war prevented.

To this end, greater interchange and freedom of intercourse between nations, particularly between those who now stand separated by the "cold war" and by other conflicts, should be encouraged; preventive and positive action to bring about a degree of disarmament, and cessation of hostile propaganda and of campaigns of hate and suspicion, is necessary; and definite initiatives should be taken to resolve at least some of the outstanding issues which stand deadlocked in world affairs. The broadening of the United Nations Organization by the admission of States whose applications have been pending for many years, and the representation of China being regularized by the real Government of China taking its place in the United Nations, are essential first steps of grave urgency.

The Congress appreciates the considerable achievements of the United Nations Organization in the social, economic and humanitarian fields, even though they fall far short, measured against the needs and distress of mankind on the one hand and the potentialities of the earth and the advance of human knowledge on the other.

While recognising the advance made in the colonial field during the past few years towards the liberation of subject peoples and for their welfare and progress, the Congress is of opinion that this is inadequate and deplors that some national movements for freedom are being forcibly suppressed. Colonialism, inevitably accompanied by race hatred and conflict, exploitation and international rivalry, is a continuing cause of war and human misery, and should be ended.

Congress records its appreciation of and support to the Government of India in pursuing steadfastly unshaken by setback, inducements and provocations, the policy of peace and international co-operation, and non-alignment with Power Blocs, and urges the Government to continue to pursue this course which alone enables it to make positive contributions towards international understanding and world peace. It records its appreciation of the peace efforts of the Government of India in regard to the Korean war, which were non-partisan and based on international law.

The peoples of India, with their rich heritage and traditions and their newly-won freedom, have in this time of world crisis a duty to the cause of world peace. That duty they will best discharge by ridding themselves and their national life of all complex of fear, intolerance, distrust and hatred, and by freeing themselves of economic dependence on others. By the performance of this duty, they will not only save their own country but will also serve the larger causes of the world.

South Africa

Congress reiterates its admiration and its appreciation of the Satyagraha movement in South Africa against racial discrimination to which the overwhelming majority of the people of South Africa are subjected by the Government of the Union.

Congress notes with deep satisfaction that Gandhi's message of non-violent resistance to evil has taken root in South Africa and further that in the struggle against oppression and racial violence Africans, Europeans, peoples of mixed racial descent and Indians have made common cause, thus meeting the twin evils of racial discrimination and violence by racial co-operation and non-violence.

The Government of the Union of South Africa continues to flout world public opinion even as embodied in the moderate resolutions of the United Nations Organization which only calls upon the Union Government to enter into negotiations and allow the facts of racial discrimination to be examined. The Government of South Africa has thus given further evidence that she does not respect the principles of human rights to which the civilized world has given its approval and also that she dare not allow the light of reason or of truth to be directed to its offences against the laws of humanity and the conduct of civilized nations.

Congress congratulates the Satyagrahis in the Union and those who co-operate with them on their courage and determination as well as on the example which they are setting of racial and communal unity and co-operation which alone can lead to stability and progress in a multi-racial society.

Congress trusts that South Africans of Indian origin will continue to give their wholehearted support to the Satyagrahis and share their sacrifices in such ways as may be open to each one of them.

Congress further calls upon the civilized nations and peoples of the world to look upon the courageous struggle of the Satyagrahis in South Africa as a struggle of mankind for freedom of opportunity and racial equality and tolerance carried out in the way of truth and peace, and to express their sympathy with the victims of the racial policies of the Union Government and to extend to the resisters every possible support.

BAN ON ENTRY OF INDIAN WIVES AND MINOR CHILDREN

AS a result of the statement made by the Minister of the Interior in Parliament on the 10th of February 1951 regarding the entry of wives and minor children of Indian immigrants in South Africa into the Union, the Department of Immigration and Asiatic Affairs has suspended the usual practice of accepting applications for the entry of such wives and children. Consequently the affected persons are finding great difficulties in this matter.

We wish to inform all these persons who have applied to bring their wives and/or minor children into South Africa and who are experiencing difficulties to report in the following offices:

(4) Cape Indian Congress, Port Elizabeth, 65 Adderley Street, Port Elizabeth.

(5) East London Indian Association, 14 Buffalo Street, East London, and EVILS OF DRINK

By C. D. MODI

THE use of liquor has been accepted as a modern trend in the social life of our youth but has taken a wrong stride as far as morality and character is concerned. On the enjoyment side and, of course, the romantic part of any social function, where both sexes are represented, liquor might have been and has been a great stimulant of impulses in both sexes and the result has been tragic always, and detrimental to the weaker sex fundamentally.

We continuously read in the daily papers in India on Alcoholism. Alcoholics are not loved as much and are never "labelled" intentionally, but are the products of the institution of pleasure and enjoyment and to a lesser degree "worry (anxiety)" and also mind relaxers or we may say "happy making" tools. These terms I have used are all in one way or another responsible for the holding of an alcoholic.

There is constant argument as to whom the word Alcoholic should be applied. My definition would be as follows:

Anybody who feels like having a round of spirits without being offered same and who, if offered, would never hesitate to drink the offering, in fact, would be only too pleased to be able to get a few to a taxi for the day. That would mean anybody and everybody would be termed an alcoholic if he or she has a habit of even a glass of brandy, wine or for that matter any spirits, daily, in fact, at a certain fixed time, say every evening or so.

Beginning with our main subject I would say the cure has usually started its evil course in the youthful days of one's life. When one's father, mother, parents, aunts, uncles or even religious. The Hindu and Muslim faiths have always advocated total abstinence and spirits of any kind for any purpose is forbidden, so we see that the fundamental causes of broken homes, divorce, suicides and a host of other tragedies including fatherless children, prostitutes and other social evils, are and always have been and always will be "liquor."

Hemlock has been cursed from the very day intoxicants were manufactured. In medieval times when the purpose was actually to numb one's brain for surgical purposes or for extracting the truth out of a criminal it was never abused to the extent it has been abused in these modern times.

I am no medical authority on the merits or demerits of the liquor craze but on an economic and social basis I will condemn liquor to the very last drop of life left in me. Not because I hate liquor on the grounds that it has caused economic instability amongst the middle class people but because it is, and will always be, a social disease, an incurable one which no medical science can overpower or defeat.

No social disease can be cured by medicine, remember my words, you doctors, of today. Only by drastic measures taken by Government departments could the evil be eradicated.

The manufacture of liquor should be curtailed gradually. Prohibition comes into effect. Liquor parties should be condemned, liquor advertisements should be banned, liquor stores should be reduced annually so in line with the curtailment of its manufacture.

If we want to see our children free from this evil disease, practical measures must be enforced and it must be done today and not tomorrow if the next generation is to be saved from it.

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other on the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining; and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, expeditions, a chase with bloodhounds, and romance. Order your copy as soon as possible, as there are only a few copies on sale at our office.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

ELECTION RESULTS AND OURSELVES

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

THE mood of despondency which has come on most people should not be allowed to cloud the clear and challenging unrestrained by the results of the election. The fact that Dr. Malan has doubled his majority is not the most important thing, insofar as the African people are concerned, nor is his new strength something which will upset our plans.

A large number of Africans who believed that reason could still prevail in South Africa will naturally feel that their White countrymen have let them down. This is not an attitude taken up just because of their white colour. It has deeper roots than that; it is a criticism of the state of affairs by which a white bobo is held up to be a better man, who can be trusted with the vote when a man like Mr. Luthuli or Professor Matthews is not.

As long as colour becomes the criterion by which men and values are judged, so long will South Africa wallow in the morass into which the Malanites will assuredly keep it.

Not Dr. Malan's victory raises two new issues—apart from underlining just what has already been referred to. It shows that we have reached the dead end of segregation. And that end shows up the White people themselves clearly dividing on racial lines in a way nothing less than capitulation by one side, is likely to stop. The anti-Malan group has certainly polled a larger number of votes. So have the Malanites. In other words we have reached the point where either side has reached the zenith of its strength. This result leaves Malan unquestioned master of the political situation in so far as the White people are concerned.

And because the initiative lies solidly in his hands, he will from now henceforth proceed to consolidate his position in a way which will ensure that his action dominates South Africa for the longest time possible. He will reduce the age limit for registration on the Voters' Roll for white South Africans and bring a new wave of supporters on his side which will increase every year as new age groups qualify for the vote.

By this and very many other devices, into which we are not called upon to go now, he can perpetuate his rule for the longest time possible. Thus, we must admit, is the prospect which faces, in particular, the anti-Malan White sections of the White community.

There are two ways out of this, open to them. Surrender to Malanism and see South Africa a racial tyranny, or recast outlooks in the light of the dangers to which colour prejudice has brought us.

Writing strictly as an African, the chances are that a large section of the Whites will prefer to capitulate by slow degrees to Malanism and see in it a lesser evil than joining hands with the African against a tyranny which is now a real threat even to them.

On the other hand, they might recast their whole outlook on colour—and a section of them, particularly among the more highly-educated classes, have already begun to talk of a liberal party which would recognise no colour bar—and see in the African's extended hand of friendship a potted to take South Africa out of the present morass.

But at this moment in history, all this is sheer speculation. We, as a people, are faced with a major disaster in our life. By we, I mean both the Africans and the Indians and Coloureds.

Numerically, we are the strongest single force in the country which has the capacity to restore South Africa to the path of sanity. We have already demonstrated, in the resistance movement, that there are in us, as a group, latent spiritual values and moral resources which can enable us as a group to survive every adversity. It will be for our leaders to draw freely on these in the dark years ahead of us—to return South Africa to civilised standards of living.

But it would be wrong if we, the common people, sit down and look for everything to the leaders. In fact now is the time when there should be neither leaders nor followers; we should all be leaders. The Malanites, given a clear mandate by the White electorate will crush, with a singular ruthlessness, our leaders and organisations. Jail is open for everyone of them now. But if it is for them, it is open for us as well.

In this light, a new situation arises which deserves to be seen in new light by the African National Congress. Need might arise for a broader conception of unity among those who oppose Malanism; a need which the present framework, within which the non-White political alliance works, would be a little too narrow to accommodate. We might have to think of a broader basis for an all-embracing, non-white unity with a broader outlook than the narrowly political. Something which would enable the non-Whites to pool all their spiritual, material and other resources in an all-out fight against the tyranny of the times.

Nobody should hurry to bring this state of affairs about. Let us all think deeply, earnestly about it all. Those of us who believe in prayer and the Divine guidance of human affairs need to pray now, more earnestly than we have ever done in the past, for the courage to see the truth clearly and act according to it—forgetting for the time being narrow party political or racial or communal gain. We are all oppressed because we are not White and let us all march together to free ourselves.

But in doing that, let us not forget that there is also a White minority which is in danger of being as cruelly oppressed as we have been for generations past. In building up a broader and more solid form of non-White unity, our plan should be such that it should provide room always for these people in the event they feel they would like to throw their lot with us against the Malanite monster.

As one thinks of the darkness which has descended on South Africa, these are the uppermost ideas which flash into one's mind. We are still too near the hour of the great tragedy. As it recedes farther and farther away from us, we might steadily discover new sources of strength in ourselves and those who abhor the things for which the Malanites stand. Then the light shall have begun to shine a little more brightly on this fair land of ours.

"Tell me
Doctor . . . What do you mean
by a safe antiseptic?"

To be called safe an antiseptic must be safe in several ways. It must be reliable, it must be gentle, it must be non-poisonous. It must help, not hinder, the natural processes of healing and repair. 'Detol' the modern antiseptic, is a highly efficient destroyer of germs, but it works on the germs, not you. It is non-poisonous, pleasant, safe to have around.

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

Our Preoccupation

"The western world jeopardizes its moral authority by its tendency to rely on physical force alone. More and more our preoccupation has become arms, an atomic stockpile, military bases and airfields on our defence perimeter, and the development of a western European military alliance. No one should deny our need to attain enough military power to repel possible aggression. But the moral authority of the western world is grounded on our faith in authentic democracy, in the extension of human rights to all children of God, in our confidence that the Divine Providence guides the processes of history, we demonstrate this faith when we help the world's peoples to attain a more equitable social economic and political status, so that the false but alluring blandishments of communism no longer held an appeal for them. Only the expression of moral authority can win the allegiance of other peoples to the free world goals we seek."

—The Church Peace Union.

The Roots Of Danger Of Dehumanization In Modern Society

[Rene Fullop Miller, is the writer of the famous book "Lenin and Gandhi." He is a close student of modern society and the new trends in civilization that are taking shape in the West under the revolutionary impact of modern science, art, psychology, politics and social philosophy. The results of such study was recently given by him in one of his lectures in America from which the following extracts are given.]

WHILE politicians are worrying about the bankruptcy of our economic or social set-up, very few people trouble themselves about an even greater impending danger, the bankruptcy which threatens the dignity of man.

There has scarcely been a time when man was as insecure as he is today. The insecurity which bothers us is not only outside, it is also within ourselves. It is part of us. And we often wonder whether there is not a guidepost that will point a way to a meaningful, happy and creative kind of life.

Since we have become unaccustomed to think for ourselves we look for some ready-made programme, which will solve our problems. After all, there are programmes which were worked out by the keenest minds and which aimed at providing for the needs and happiness of men. Perhaps all we have to do is to fall back on a programme and stick to it. But let us look at these programmes a bit more closely to see what they promised and check which promises they kept.

The programme that is closest and dearest to us is of course that of democracy, which offered to uphold the sacredness of the individual. This offer was based on good foundations; it derived from the ideals of Christianity and from the humanism of the Enlightenment. When the original offer arrived a great many people put in their order for democracy. When the goods were delivered, they received the right to vote, trial by jury, a free press, religious freedom, the freedom to choose their jobs and the freedom to speak their minds. They also got bread and shelter and many commodities which made life easier.

On the surface the order seemed to be filled neatly, but underneath there was an unordered item; economic man. This led to a brand of capitalism which laid too much stress on purely material security, and too little stress on inner security, too much stress on the capacity to produce goods and too little stress on the capacity of leading a purposeful life. And in the end the promised happiness was still wanting.

Then there was another offer made by socialism which came along later and tried to outbid its liberal democratic competitor. The socialist bid sounded good and convincing, so a lot of people filled out the order blank. But the international shipment ran into difficulty and eventually there was a change in management. The Bolsheviks took over most of the outfit, and their original offer read no less appealingly. They promised to help the under-dog, they promised a just distribution of goods and the protection of labour. Many people rushed in their orders,

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 8TH MAY 1953

The Limit Of High-Handedness

THE refusal by the Minister of the Interior, Dr. S. L. Danges, to grant passports to the South African Indian soccer team to proceed on their tour of India last week has come as a severe shock to the whole Indian community of South Africa and we have no doubt to the whole of India, and an unexpected surprise to the world. The Nationalist Government has been bitterly complaining about others bringing it into disrepute in the outside world by carrying on false propaganda against it. But here is a most glaring example of how the Government's own action has been more vocal than all the propaganda in the world against it by others. A responsible Government should have good reasons for all its actions, and the present Government must, no doubt, have sound reasons for taking a step which must have serious repercussions not only on the four hundred million people of India but throughout the civilised world. Since the Government has refused to disclose the reasons, it has left us all thinking and guessing as to what could have led it to take such action against an organisation, which has never had any black record against it and whose case was pleaded by no less a person than Mr. D. C. Shepherson, the Administrator of Natal. The South African Indian Football Association even went to the extent of giving an assurance to the Government that it was a non-political body, and that none of the players had any political allegiances, and gave an unconditional guarantee that the players would give no political interviews while in India.

What is noteworthy is that there is a soccer team from Dundee (Scotland) at present in the Union, a rugby team from Australia is due to arrive in the Union soon and a South African soccer team (European of course) is soon to leave for England, and none of these have had any difficulty in either leaving their respective countries or in entering the Union. Why is it then that the Indian team alone has been singled out?

It is a known fact that there have been political differences between India and South Africa over the treatment of Indian nationals in this country but that surely should not come in the way of Indians going on a visit to their own Motherland on a purely non-political mission in fact, just to play a game of football. Or is it that the present Government is just itching to turn what is at present a cold war between the two countries into a hot war? The only motive underlying this utterly high-handed action on the part of the Union Government (we say Government because the Department of the Interior would not act on a serious matter like this in a manner it has done without the knowledge and consent of the Government) seems to be just to slight the Indians of South Africa and India. We should, however not forget that this is not the only instance where such a thing has happened. Other instances are of the Union Government's refusal to allow the entry into the Union of India's celebrated dancer Ramgopal, and of India's newspaper correspondents. Where will this narrow vision of the Union Government lead this country to? It is a question all thinking people of South Africa need seriously to ponder over.

A Kick Combined With Sympathy

This shock coming from the Government might indeed have been lightened, we should have thought, by a sympathetic word from at least that section of the South African Press which is known to be liberal minded. The only comment come to our notice so far, however, is that by the 'Natal Witness' which does not seem to have been in a particularly happy mood when it made it. It has combined its sympathy with a kick to the Indians, the severity of which has rendered its sympathy insignificant. While the whole western world is full of praise of India's Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, our contemporary has chosen this particular moment to vent its wrath on him for no rhyme or reason and has charged him of being "a cunning, unscrupulous politician, one who has never shrunk from practising power politics as ruthlessly as any dictator when it suited his book to do so." It has expressed its readiness to believe that Mr. Nehru's government might have tried to make some kind of political capital out of the visit of the South African Indian footballers. This is an unwarranted insult to Mr. Nehru and the Indian Government. Surely there is nothing wrong on the part of the head of any government according a welcome to any public organisation sending its representatives to that particular country. There is nothing in it beyond a simple act of courtesy and how one can impute motives to it is beyond us. But of course a guilty conscience sees guilt in everything. We are not very surprised in this criticism about Mr. Nehru when we think of how a great personality like Mahatma Gandhi even had been misjudged by some people. We can only say that we would not be disposed to make such comments against Dr. Malan, though we have had more than enough provocation to do so, as the 'Natal Witness' has deemed fit to make against Mr. Nehru. It only depicts, we are unhappy to have to say, the very low standard of culture of, indeed, not all, but the average White man in South Africa.

'NATAL WITNESS' CRITICISES MR. NEHRU

'The Natal Witness' dated May 2, writes as follows under the Caption "High Handed Act": "The refusal of passports to the members of the Indian football team chosen to represent South Africa on a tour of India seems to be a disgusting example of administrative high-handedness. We make full allowance for the motives which may have inspired the Department of the Interior. We have never shared that feeling of near-worship with which simple-minded liberals everywhere seem to regard Pandit Nehru. He tends to us to be a cunning and, on occasions, an unscrupulous politician. He has never shrunk from practising power politics as ruthlessly as any dictator when it suited his book to do so, though, like the prudent prince in Machiavelli and unlike most contemporary dictators, he has realised that the efficacy of ruthlessness and cunning depend largely on their being pleasantly disguised. We are ready to believe that his government might have tried to make some kind of political capital out of the visit of the South African Indian footballers. But even if the attempt had met with some success, and seventeen Indians had returned to South Africa with some disturbing ideas in their minds, the harm would have been infinitesimal compared with the damage to South Africa's reputation throughout the whole world which this arrogant action will cause. There appears to be no reason—certainly none has been stated—to regard the members of the team as people whose political activities have rendered them suspect to the authorities. This is, so far as we know, the first occasion on which passport have been refused to people going overseas with no known intention of engaging in activities which the authorities could regard, however wrong-headedly, as detrimental to South Africa. If there is good reason for the refusal, Dr. Duggan should state it. In the absence of any such statement there seem to be only two possible explanations. Either the Department of the Interior, under the present Government, is determined to use every petty and spiteful administrative means it can to make non-Europeans feel their inferior status, or else it is determined to shut them off from all contact with a world in which things are not arranged to the satisfaction of purified Nationalism. In either case, the policy involves interference with individual liberty, and if the latter explanation is the proper one, it will not in the end have even the "realist" justification of succeeding in the aim that it is designed to achieve.

UNION REGARDED AS UNCIVILISED IN S.-E. ASIA

Mr. Maurice Webb, of the Institute of Race Relations, who has recently returned from a tour of Asian countries, writes in the 'Natal Daily News'.

NO South African Government, however sensitive, could complain of misrepresentation in South East Asia, for, in my experience, there is no representation at all. Except for a short paragraph or two in the newspapers, South Africa might have dropped out of the world.

Yet everyone knows the one undisputed fact about South Africa: that it practices and has heretofore accentuated policies of racial separation. These policies are not attacked; they are just regarded as being uncivilised.

In Singapore, I visited the Juvenile Court. The Magistrate was Indian, the Prosecutor, Malay, the Senior Probation Officer, Chinese, the Clerk of the Court, European. The Magistrate dealt with cases and understanding with a number of typical cases of delinquency on the part of Indian, Chinese and Malay children.

I spent some time in the Department of Economics in the University of Malaya. The Professor of Economics is British, the lecturer in Industrial Economics, Australian, the lecturer in Agricultural Economics, Malay, the statistician, Chinese.

One soon realises that this is not a multi-racial country. A Magistrate's Court or a university department should be multi-racial; they are of the country.

It would be an interesting experience for Dr. Malan to explain to those four members of the staff of the Economics Department just why, if they were to come to South Africa to meet South African economists, they would not travel together or stay at the same hotel or share a cup of tea in a restaurant or go to the same cinema.

When I told them just what the situation would be they listened with amusement that covered hurt, hurt on the part of the "non-Europeans" that any country should offer them such affront; hurt on the part of the others that colleagues who held their friendship and respect could anywhere be so treated.

There is, I believe, no South African information service in Asia. It would be interesting and, perhaps, instructive if South Africa were to open an Information Service in Singapore and try to persuade audiences of Europeans, Chinese, Indians and Malays of the advantages of segregation, but it might be rather difficult to convince them that by keeping them apart and giving most of the privileges to one group the other three groups would be made safe for democracy.

We South Africans are naturally concerned for the good name of our country. In the West we have often to defend it from unjust attacks and to explain it

But in the East we realise that if we are to have a piece of respect to the world, if we are to be thought civilised, we must change certain of our practices, however much we may regard them as essentially our domestic affair.

If we are to be able to hold up our heads among the peoples of the world we must at least change the treatment that we accord to visitors to our country who happen not to be White. We could be host country to international gatherings that at present go elsewhere if visitors could come to us without being subjected to humiliation and hurt.

HEARTENING MESSAGE FROM GERMANY

WE have great pleasure in sharing with the reader the sentiments expressed in the following letter from H. Kraschinsky, a friend in Germany, who has undergone terrible sufferings under Hitler's regime during the War and who had attended the World Peace Conference held in India in December 1942.

"Dear friend, may I once more assure you that the struggle for human rights for all inhabitants of the Union of South Africa, irrespective of their colour and race, is followed by us with extreme interest and sympathy.

"I heard that you have been sentenced to a fine yourself and I know that you are the very last person to be frightened by such methods.

"I am convinced that the struggle will be a long one, and that victims will have to suffer before victory is yours. There is no progress in the world without suffering, which is the strongest power for human progress. And I am convinced that you yourself have no illusions as to a short time of the struggle. The result of the recent elections seem to mean that the majority of White people in South Africa have not yet realised what the situation really is.

"If ever a struggle was morally right, it is yours. But I am sure you will not forget the other side also. The philosopher Nietzsche once said to a man who had grossly offended him. "My friend, what have you done to me, I forgive you. But how can I forgive you what you have done, by your attitude, unto yourself?"

"Malan and his people, what are they doing? They are flagging poor negroes, and incarcerate them for shorter or longer time but whose soul is spoilt? Certainly not your's, nor the poor African's, but his own. Would you like to be in his position? If one day you are in jail—and you will go, I am sure of that—would you change your place against his, in the government's prison? I know you, and so I know you would not.

"And ourselves? We feel fortified when thinking of you all in South Africa. We do not know whether and when our own fate will once more be to be persecuted. Then we shall think of you.

"And I remember the words an American anarchist once said (Eugene Debs): "As long as there are men to jail, I am not free."

"I beg you to accept my best wishes for the future of your struggle, and to believe me that I feel humble when thinking of what so many brave men and women in South Africa have to suffer for the cause of freedom, which is our own.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

SOUTH AFRICAN INDIANS—(I)

HOW THEY CAME TO NATAL

By C. W. M. GELL

From 'The Forum' (Johannesburg)

THERE were some disconcerting signs that the fate of our smallest racial minority, the Indians, was again a party political football in the struggle for votes in Natal, where anti-Indian feeling plays a part similar to the role of anti-Semitism in some other countries.

We do not want a repetition of the Durban riots which followed soon after the 1948 election campaign, in which candidates exploited hostility to the Indians for personal and party advantage.

As long ago as 1925 Dr. Malan, then Minister of the Interior, declared: "The Indian, as a race in this country, is an alien element in the population and no solution of the question will be acceptable to the country unless it results in a very considerable reduction of the Indian population."

In 1948, as Prime Minister, he said: "The Indians have no right to regard themselves as part of the settled population of South Africa and must, therefore, be prepared to recede in South Africa under restrictions."

No doubt, belief that this attitude helped the Nationalists to win three Natal seats in 1948 is responsible for the U.P.'s present unrealistic Indian policy. Both Mr. Struza and Mr. Mitchell have spoken of going back to the 1927 agreement "that the Indians were to be repatriated" and beginning negotiations again with India and Pakistan from that point.

The purpose of these three articles is to show that the Nationalist policy is thoroughly unhistorical and immoral—no novelty in Nationalist attitudes to non-European peoples—and that the U.P. policy is unlikely to lead to any constructive solution.

This was emphasised most strongly and to the consternation of his own supporters, by Mr. J. G. Strydom at Newcastle on November 26 when he quite correctly argued that we cannot repatriate unwilling persons unless some other country agrees to accept them. For at best party is pretend that there is any hope of this solution to its own supporters and unfair to the Indian minority.

The reasons for this state of affairs go back into the widely misrepresented history of how the Indians came to this country. The official report (1950) of a Joint Committee studying Affairs

Land Tenure, upon which the Government relied for evidence to prove the necessity for the Group Areas Act, begins: "A perusal of the evidence (not published) shows that the Indian came to South Africa as an indentured labourer against the wishes of the European inhabitants of Natal. They did not want the Indians and they feared the curses which they believed would come upon the country with the advent of the Indian."

The use of intemperate language in official documents is unfortunately nothing new. But in this case the statements are a most flagrant distortion of the truth in the interests of party propaganda.

The facts are these. From about 1850 there had been a chronic shortage of reliable labour on the coastal plantations of Natal, as the Zulus did not care for this sort of work. Various other sources were considered in vain—convicts, orphans, Chinese, coolies, freed negro slaves from America.

In November, 1855, the Durban Town Council by a very large majority interested into an address of welcome to Sir George Grey, the Governor of the Cape, a request for "coolies or other labourers from the East in aid of the new enterprises on the coast lands, to the success of which sufficient and reliable labour is absolutely essential." Grey, who had seen the value of Indian labour on Mauritian plantations, began negotiations with India.

Natal became a Crown Colony in 1856 and India passed from the control of the East India Company to the British raj after the Mutiny of 1857. Hence forward, the negotiations were between the Natal and Indian governments.

The second Natal Legislative Council, elected in 1853, learnt that India would agree to limited indentured immigration, if Natal made provisions for Indians similar to those in force in Mauritius and the West Indies. Accordingly the Council passed Law 14 of 1859 without a division.

This law provided for a period of five years' indenture, after which the "coolie" would be free to re-engage or to hire himself out as an ordinary salaried labourer or to set up on his own.

On the completion of ten years' residence, during five of which he must have been indentured, the immigrant was entitled to a free return passage to India or, if he preferred, to a grant of Crown land in Kwa.

A Nationalist said in the Senate debate of September 27, 1948, that "the whole idea was that at the expiry of the period of their contracts, and it was provided that they should be so, they should be repatriated to India."

But Sections 6, 9 and 20 of Law 14 completely refute this convenient theory. It may be that the Senator expressed the conditions on which many would have liked to import coolies. But the historical record is quite clear that the Indian Government would never have allowed importation on such terms.

This aspect of the matter was again prominent in 1872-74 when Natal wished to re-open coolie immigration after the depression of the late 60s.

In order to meet Indian charges that some of the provisions of Law 14 were being more honoured in the breach than the observance, Natal appointed the Coolie Commission of 1872. As a result of its recommendations Law 12 of 1872 exempted Indians from corporal punishment and substituted "Indian immigrant" for the offensive word "coolie" in all official wording; and Law 19 of 1874 enforced much more effective supervision of the original provisions of Law 14 of 1859.

India then permitted the re-sumption of indentured emigration. It is thus beyond dispute that, if Natal wanted Indian immigrants (as indeed it did), it had to accept the terms laid down by the Indian Government and these never included any sort of compulsory repatriation.

Memories are, however, short where self-interest is concerned. Many of the witnesses before the Wagg Commission in 1885-87 pleaded for the extension of the term of indenture to the whole period of the Indian immigrant's residence. And the Commission who is admitting that this was the predominant European opinion at that time, had to remind the public that Indians were not available on such conditions.

His recommendations for increasing the supply of indigenous Native labour were again unsuccessful and, despite the growing European reaction against the expanding "freed" Indian population, a majority in the Natal Government (e.g. the Volksraad of Natal) continued to facilitate indentured Indian immigration until 1911. Indian labour was used not merely on the plantations near the coast but inland as well, and for domestic service, in the mines and on the railways.

Some figures tell their own tale. The first batch of Indians landed at Durban in November, 1860. By 1866 6,445 had arrived and the figure remained at 6,000 until 1874.

The value of sugar exported from Natal rose from £2,009 in 1857 and £3,860 in 1858 to £26,000 in 1863 and £100,000 in 1864.

By 1870 all the early immigrants had finished their terms of contract and only one had entered into fresh indentures. Immigration was resumed in 1874 and Natal Indians reached 30,000 in 1886, 41,000 in 1891, 101,000 in 1904 and 133,000 in 1911 (against 98,000 Europeans). The bulk of the increase was due to continued immigration of labourers under indenture.

In 1911, because of the unsatisfactory treatment of Indians in the Union, the Indian Government finally closed indentured emigration of South Africa.

The Union Government interceded energetically on behalf of Natal, which still wanted indentured labourers, but in vain. Thus, India stopped the entry of coolies into the country against the wishes of South Africa.

In all, over 142,000 indentured Indians were brought to Natal. Eighty-one per cent of our present Indian population descends from these "coolies"; the other 19 per cent from the free Indian immigrants who were mostly traders and clerks.

The year 1911 saw the end of the first phase of our dealings with Indians. During it, the Europeans of this country profited so greatly from cheap and reliable Indian labour that they (with few dissenting voices) wanted Indians in ever larger numbers.

The historical evidence fully justifies the verdict of the late Mr. J. H. Hofmeyr in regard to over four-fifths of our Indians: "However we may regard our Asiatic problem, the fact that it came into existence is due to the European and the European alone."

We invited Indians to come here on terms which allowed them to become free men after five years and to commence their return passage for a grant of land. We thus helped them to settle. And we went on doing so for our own considerable profit, long after some of the racial complications became apparent.

Without disowning our own history or adding to an already formidable list of dishonoured obligations, we cannot now disclaim responsibility for this "alien element."

and from Russia they received their collective security, and a common purpose of the working class. But they also received an unordered item: mass-man, or collective man. The mass-man was produced by the State and came equipped with a synthetic outlook on life. He was conditioned to accept freedom from thought, freedom from choice and freedom from personal decision, and in return he received true emotional security of a robot.

Now interestingly enough the two unordered items, economic man on the one hand and mass-man on the other hand, reveal that democracy and communism share a basic misconception of man. While both have a great deal to say about "the concrete human being," while both combat abstract generalities, they both fell victim to the very thing which they professed to be combating, namely, to abstraction. They fought idealistic generalizations because they abstracted from the concreteness of man. But the religion-humanitarian abstractions lifted man up by idealizing him and setting to him the crown of creation. The new abstractions of economic and mass man, however, dragged man down by reducing him to his material needs.

There is also another similarity between the two camps. Both share an almost religious faith in the miracle of modern technology, which is chiefly concerned with mass production, automation and speed. This outlook gives preference to quantity over quality. The result is a highly mechanized life which puts the main stress on technical achievements and leaves out innermost being unharmed. Thus it seems that neither of the two programmes can fully meet man's requirements.

All the promises that are made on either side have a hollow ring. And I think the reason for it is that the most important thing—human values—was lost in transit. Without such values, the kind of values which you can take with you when you die, neither the individual nor science and technology are able to function satisfactorily. Yet it seems that in the various programmes to date these values have been left out. What happened to them? How and why did they disappear? Why is it that on the one hand terms like "cash value," "big value," "special value, and on the other hand "ideological values," "planned values," "proletarian values," have replaced the value of man?

In a democracy at least the right to be ourselves is not being contested. We have a chance to grow and develop according to our own possibilities. This makes me feel that basically democracy is man's best bet. Still there is room for improvement.

We have freedom, but freedom for what? There is progress, but progress where? Freedom is not an end in itself. It should not be confused with licence. True freedom entails responsibility; it is the right to choose what we ought to do. The ultimate freedom is a freedom of self-dedication. Progress again is not a wild onrush. We need a higher goal toward which we want to progress. We need a purpose which we want to achieve.

Things In General

John Gunther To Visit The Union

Mr. John Gunther, American author of "Inside America," "Inside Europe," "Inside Asia" and other authoritative books dealing with world affairs, is in Northern Rhodesia planning a new book which will be called "Inside Africa." Mr. and Mrs. Gunther have undertaken a comprehensive tour of the Continent visiting nearly every territory in it. They began in Morocco, travelled along the Mediterranean coast, through Egypt, the Sudan, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, the Belgian Congo and arrived in Ndola from Elizabethville last week. After visiting Southern Rhodesia, and Nyasaland, they will fly to the Union where they will spend a month. One of the experiences that stands out most in Mr. Gunther's mind, states the "Natal Daily News" correspondent, was having dinner in Kenya with revolutionaries lying on the table next to the plate.

Professor And Mrs. Douglas Steere

Professor and Mrs. Douglas Steere who are touring the Union are at present in Durban. Professor Douglas Steere is Professor of Physiology at Haverford College, Pennsylvania. He has travelled widely on behalf of the American Friends Service Council and is the author of several books. They come to the Union after a lightening tour of Europe and West Africa, and brief visits to Johannesburg, Kimberley, Capetown, Port Elizabeth and Port Harour. We extend to them a cordial welcome and wish them every success in their mission. Included in the short programme in Durban is a visit to Phoenix where they will spend next Sunday at Mahatma Gandhi's Phoenix Settlement as honoured guests of Mr. and Mrs. Manilal Gandhi.

Tribute To an African Student

The first issue of the International Students' Reporter, which is the organ of the International Students' Association, Banaras Hindu University, paid tribute to its President, Mr. E. G. Mwalessa, an East African student, in the following terms: "This year under the Presidentship of one of the founder members, Mr. Mwalessa, the International Students' Association is ably carrying on their principles of friendship, toleration and free enquiry together with the traditional Banaras hospitality." Mr. Mwalessa is one of the first five African students who went to India for further studies in 1947 on Government of India Cultural Scholarship. After passing his B.A. from the Banaras Hindu University in 1951 he joined the same University for law. In his L.L.B. (Previous) examination held in April 1952 he secured the first division. Both academic and socially he seems to have made his mark in the student world.

Success To Banias Student

An African student of the University of Natal, Mr. A. Vilakazi, B.A. (Hons.), has just been awarded a teaching fellowship in the Department of African Studies of the Kennedy School of Missions which is one of the 3 schools of the Hartford Seminary Foundation in Hartford Connecticut. He will be required to lecture for 6 hours a week and devote the rest of his time to working for a M.A. or Ph.D. Degree which would involve research and the preparation of a thesis. The appointment is, in the first place, for one year but may be later extended to 3 years. The Hartford Seminary Foundation is essentially a post-graduate institution and specializes in preparing its students for vocations in connection with the Church.

PAKISTANI DIPLOMAT'S BID TO SMEAR INDIA IN U.S.A.

SHARP REBUFF FROM PROMINENT AMERICAN CITIZEN

AN attempt by a Pakistani diplomat in the U.S.A. to blacken India has brought a sharp rebuff from a distinguished American citizen. Mr. S. M. Burke, Pakistan Minister in Washington, recently delivered a speech containing the usual mendacious charges against India. The reply to it came from Mrs. Dorothy Norman, whose letter, published under the caption "Aid to India and Pakistan" in the 'New York Times' on March 26, is as follows:

"As reported in the 'New York Times', Mr. S. M. Burke, Pakistani Minister in Washington, recently informed an English-speaking Union audience in New York City that with respect to our foreign aid programme, equal treatment of India and Pakistan by the United States—despite India's declared neutrality and Pakistan's co-operation with Western nations is "putting" to rest Pakistan."

"Mr. Burke's statement is itself puzzling to this writer as an American. For, until only a short while ago, South Asian suspicion of the United States derived largely from fear that we would in fact tie 'political strings' to our foreign aid. It was assumed that if any country happened to disagree with our foreign policy, either we would refuse to give aid at all or, having given it, we would withdraw it unless the nation in question altered its policy in conformity with our own."

U.S. Policy

"After finally having succeeded in dispelling such suspicion, to be castigated in reverse is indeed puzzling. Certainly in the matter of making foreign grants-in-aid it is, and should be, our policy to give an assurance to these free peoples throughout the world who are most in need of it, irrespective of obtaining perfect agreement with them on all issues."

"In this connection it should be especially noted that India has adopted a democratic constitution; she is ardently striving to establish herself as a full-scale secular democracy with guarantees to her people of the same fundamental rights on these valued most by a nation with her race and for others throughout the world; she has been attempting to raise the standard of living for her vast population against great odds, she is quite obviously a peace-loving nation. Certainly it would be neither wise nor friendly to withhold aid from a country with such a record."

Apportionment Of Aid

"As for the amount of assistance we have given to India and Pakistan, the relationship between the populations of the two countries has been the major factor determining how our aid has been apportioned. Thus it would be impossible on this score, too, to charge that we have been anything but fair and impartial."

"Mr. Burke is further quoted as having stated that the United States economic aid has been given to further irrigation projects and had refused some areas of Pakistan to desert. Since it must be to the Bhakra Dam that Mr. Burke has referred, it should be recalled that the project located in the north of India was initiated by the British before either Pakistani or Indian independence was won, hence, before the partition of Pakistan from India."

"The Bhakra Dam was designed to serve East Punjab, now part of India, whereas most of the canal systems previously developed by the British were located in West Punjab and Sind (now in Pakistan). At the time the dam was conceived the British took what might be termed a unified view of the needs of the territory now divided between North India and West Pakistan; it was never thought that the project would impair water supply for any irrigation scheme now located in the latter area."

"As has been pointed out by the Indian Government, Pakistan's alleged grievances on this matter have not even been communicated to India in the form of official protest. Moreover, it is well known that the river system of Punjab has suffered from scanty rainfall during the past year, which has decreased the amount of water available for irrigation both in India and Pakistan. This shortage of water, is due neither to American aid nor to any scheme designed to jeopardise the well-being of Pakistan in any way."

A Few Facts

"A few facts relating to availability of the Indus basin waters in question and use thereof, both in India and Pakistan, may be illuminating. According to the 'Economic Survey of India' for 1952-53, the total run-off of waters in question has been estimated at 168 million acre-feet, of which only 77 million acre-feet are now being utilised. Only one-seventh of this is now being utilised in India; when the other schemes for additional utilisation are completed, the total utilisation in India will not exceed 35 million acre-feet."

It would still leave Pakistan with about 20 million acre-feet in Indus basin rivers and the balance of run-off to the sea of about 49 million acre-feet."

"However, the situation should be further clarified as soon as the Technical Mission of the World Bank (on which both Indian and Pakistani technicians are serving) has completed surveying the area and its water resources."

GROUP AREAS ACT

THE following is the text of a letter addressed by Mr. Rajeshwar Dayal, India's Permanent Representative at UN to the Secretary-General of the UN:

"The Permanent Representative of India to the UN presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the UN and has the honour to transmit the following communication from the Government of India:

"According to a statement made in the South African Parliament by the Minister of the Interior, the Group Areas will be proclaimed very shortly in a number of places. Accordingly, the Land Tenure Advisory Board has notified important cities including Cape Town, Durban, Port Elizabeth and Kimberley giving very short notice to interested parties to file objections."

"A protest by the Natal Indian Organisation against the shortness of time allowed has gone unheeded. The public hearing of objections, which is the next step in the process of implementation of the plan, is scheduled to take place on March 2, 10 and 17 in Cape Town, Durban and Port Elizabeth respectively."

"One of the two main proposals in respect of Durban notified by the Board is from the Nationalist Party, which envisages practically complete removal of non-Europeans and making Durban an entirely 'White' city. The acceptance of this plan would affect 146,000 Indians forcing them to leave their homes, established businesses and a large number of religious and cultural institutions, including temples and mosques."

"The value of the property to be abandoned by the Indian community in Durban is estimated at £30 million."

"The other plan from the Durban City Council covering the residential area alone, would uproot 63,000 Indians for the present. Their gain for the central commercial area of Durban which has not yet been submitted; would affect 54,000 Indians of that area also. There is no provision for alternative housing and the Durban City Council's plan is designed to remove Indians to undeveloped land outside the City's boundaries. Similar plans for other cities inflict hardships on Indians in varying degrees, though in smaller numbers."

"The Indian community is apprehending very early removal from the group areas. The proposed zoning will inevitably cause racial bitterness and friction. The Natal Indian Congress, in a memorandum to the Land Tenure Advisory Board, has pointed out that the real intention of the Group Areas Act is to "deprive the Indian people of their long-established ownership and occupation of lands and houses" and to "facilitate the uprooting and expatriation of unhappy South African citizens of Indian origin, or confine them to ghettos as a cheap source of labour."

"The Government of India consider the present move of the South African Government aimed at causing untold misery and hardship to large numbers of persons of Indian origin in South Africa as an extremely serious matter. Not only are these measures a violation of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the UN, but they are a deliberate disregard of the resolutions of the UN of 1950, 1951 and 1952, recommending the non-implementation of the Group Areas Act."

"The Government of India have already placed before the UN the whole question of the treatment of persons of Indian origin in South Africa. They feel it their duty to bring these latest developments immediately to the notice of the UN for such action as may be deemed practicable."

"It is requested that copies of this communication be circulated to all members of the UN and the Good Offices Commission established by the General Assembly by its Resolution 615 (VII) of December 5, 1952."

is it safe to put an antiseptic straight on the wound?"

In an emergency you need an antiseptic that can be used quickly, without hesitation, and without danger or undue discomfort. One which retains high germicidal efficiency in the presence of blood. You need a reliable killer of germs, but non-poisonous, gentle on human tissues, and valuable in promoting clean and rapid healing. You need the modern antiseptic, 'Dettol.'

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other on the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up, the Maratha Kingdom was declining, and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with blood-bonds, and romance. AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

A PAN-AFRICAN FRONT

By JORDAN K. NGUSANE

THE Press recently reported Mr. Walter M. Blau, Secretary General of the African National Congress, as saying that steps were being considered to explore the possibilities of convening a pan-African conference at which the oppressed peoples of Africa would devise ways and means of waging a joint struggle against the tyranny of colour.

Such a conference has been overdue for a very long time. That this is the fact, however, does not in any way rob the Congress intention in this regard of its very great significance. There is about it a touch of utopianism and realism which deserves the support of every fair-minded man.

It has been some time for a very long time now that those Africans who still dream and talk of change of heart among the white people live in a fool's paradise. Those who imagined that this change of heart could come about freely as a result of petitions and drawing room plans for racial peace should have realised from the results of the last elections, that the world of reality is very far removed from their dream-world.

The real and cruel fact we have to face today is that the more militant we become in our struggle to free ourselves and the more determination we show, the more our oppressors become frightened of our growing strength and increasingly resort to more and more desperate measures to crush our march to a happier future for ourselves and our children.

The odds against which we have ranged ourselves are, in our state of organisation, formidable. The Malaysians, for example, have all the military police and police power on their side. In itself, this advantage is not in any way decisive—see Hungary. But it has delayed an emancipatory struggle for an unacceptably long time. In this country it is being used to keep us in the gutter for the longest time possible. We ourselves are relatively poorly organised at present. For this reason we need to use additional weapons in our struggle which we might not have had to use if we were stronger; at least not for the purposes for which we might use them now.

One of the weapons is the formation of alliances with friendly, similarly placed people in Africa and, secondly, with free and self-governing peoples in other parts of the world who have or may be made to have sympathy for our cause.

Solid Foundations

During the last ten years or so, our leaders have systematically laid solid foundations for friendship with self-governing peoples in other parts of the world. We are today reaping the benefits of this policy in the way in which our cause is known personally to all the civilised world. We are reaping the benefit in the fact that at every international conference where the colour question is debated, our oppressors always find themselves on the defensive. There are signs that they now find themselves being routed as well. But the greatest benefit we are reaping today—from the internal angle—is the fact that not even the Malaysians in their darkest political madness have imagined that they could shoot us down in silence.

Deaf as they would like the world to believe they are to world opinion, they know today that their gun is as bad as they would merely throw themselves out of court if they resorted to military violence against us. We are not scared of military or any other violence. A people which can do things we are doing, under the conditions in which we find ourselves, can do them only when it has banished fear from its heart.

In spite of this, however, it is to the credit of world opinion and the way it has made itself felt that the Malaysians have not felt free to use harsher measures to crush our political fight. To the extent that this has saved innocent men and women who might otherwise have had to suffer, we should regard it as one direct benefit we reap from the wise policy of our leaders.

But, also within the last ten years, a new situation has been arising which called for a re-examination of our relations with fellow-Africans who are oppressed like us in their countries. Within South Africa itself racism was progressively obscured when it came to the colour question. Law after law was being passed to make it almost physically impossible for the African to develop and take his rightful place among the free men of the world.

Whether we like the fact or not, this process was being approved of by the majority of the white people in this country. The Malaysians made no bones about their own intentions, of course. If the United Party was a little shy about holding its tyrant's flag, that was not because of any pricks of conscience it felt. At heart the United Party was as ruthless a racial oppressor as the Malaysians. See what Mr. Struwig said on the eve of the elections—when he described as enemies the African intellectuals who were today raising their voices against their people's humiliation. The United Party would not just afford to let the world see it for what it really is when it comes to treatment of the African.

United Party

For its reason, I can't have much sympathy for those, in this Party, who have publicly donned the maskcloth, thrown the stones at their guilty heads and from every platform about "We'll Wen unto us all!" At heart they have always approved of the present basis to the Malaysian approach to the colour question. It was inevitable that in the face of the acts of colour, the average whiteman in this country should trust Malan and his gang—who want no half-measures—in a clearer job of keeping the 'nigger in his place' than the United Party.

The policy horse-hoofing going on in United Party ranks at the moment should not worry any non-European. A jilted hag resorts to queer theatrics to express her disappointment. When the United Party cools down and surveys the racial situation more calmly, it will decide that Malan and his hostility to the Appellate Court are a better ally than the African people's stretched hand of genuine friendship with the whiteman.

It is largely against the background of this situation that the leaders of the African National Congress have decided to consider establishing closer bonds with the oppressed in Africa.

The experiences of the people of Asia, in their struggle against foreign domination, are always an open book freely branshied to us by History for us to perceive and learn political wisdom therefrom. The struggle in Asia was delayed for many years by the slow development of pan-Asian consciousness. When at last this consciousness was strong enough to assert itself, it freed Indonesia!

This is not in any way a regression on the heroic struggle of the people of Indonesia. They had laid solid foundations for their own liberation. But because they were isolated in the Indian Ocean, under the boot of a mighty Dutch empire, they would have taken a considerably longer time to free themselves finally if it were not for the timely and decisive intervention of the rest of Asia. India, for example, stopped Dutch military plans with reinforcements for the Dutch East Indies army seeking over Indian territory. Burma took up an attitude which helped the Indonesians too. So did very many Asian powers. The result was: The Dutch had to surrender sooner than they expected.

We are in a somewhat similar position. In international councils our voice; the voice of ten million non-whites; is raised high against injustice. Humanity's conscience heeds it; but the men at the head of affairs—in America, Britain and France, for example, who attach greater importance to gold and uranium than to human values—say it might not be politic, for one reason or the other, to heed the African's voice against that of the Malaysians who rule the country!

If, on the other hand, the voice raised against tyranny was not just the voice of ten million in the Union but of the 150,000,000 in all Africa—even the men at the head of affairs in Britain, America and France would listen.

There is another reason why the Congress move is commendable. It will broaden the African's own outlook. We have grown up in an environment where we could see only ourselves and the white man against the background of what was going on in this country and outside. When we see our struggle as part of a bigger struggle, when we see ourselves as members of the larger human family, we shall accustom ourselves to the idea of belonging to that family. The spiritual and psychological effects such a realisation will have on the masses of our people finally everything our leaders are doing to broaden our horizons.

This does not mean that no obstacles will be laid on their path. Obstacles have been laid on the path of progress since the dawn of History; obstacles have made History. But mankind has marched forward on the crest of defeated obstacles.

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

If We Choose

"There was enough moral wisdom to organise great nations such as England or France on the basis of internal peace, but it was a difficult task which took centuries of effort. Is there enough moral wisdom to organise a world society to enable the European, the Hindu, the Chinese, the Negro to live together on tolerable terms to overcome their vast diversities of tradition, language, and race, to curb the rapacity of unscrupulous men to control exploitation and close the door on war? We cannot with any certainty affirm that there is moral wisdom enough, but we can with assurance say that it is wholly a question of the enough. Given an adequate moral development, there is here no hard stone of obstruction on which it must break its teeth. We have to educate ourselves, and that is all there is to be said. We can succeed in it if we choose, but enough of us must so choose."

—Leonard Trelawney Hobhouse.

African Racial Conflict Danger To Peace

AT a public meeting in New Delhi recently Mr. Nehru, Prime Minister of India, referred to India's foreign policy of friendliness towards all nations. He said India was pulling her weight on the side of peace, though she was not a great power in the military sense of the word. Her might was not of the atom bomb. But her sincere and truthful attempts in the cause of peace and international good-will compelled respect and hearing in the counsels of nations.

Mr. Nehru said he foresaw great danger to world peace emerging from Africa and said that, as time passed, the African question would loom larger and larger. The struggle in Africa was bound to assume a most dangerous character, for it would then become a question of white versus coloured all over the world.

Mr. Nehru advised Indians in Africa to conduct themselves in a dignified manner and never even harbour a thought of gaining any advantage at the cost of the African people. They should regard themselves there as guests of the African people. Mr. Nehru declared that unmistakably India's sympathies were entirely with the African people in their great struggle against exploitation and repression colonialism.

Pakistan

Referring to Pakistan, Mr. Nehru said that, for the first time since partition, the common people of Pakistan were beginning to look upon the people of India with genuine feelings of friendliness. Welcoming this change, Mr. Nehru said they wished that the terrible state Pakistan was passing through would end. Their sufferings would do no good to us. If disaster were to overtake Pakistan, it would not be good for them, Mr. Nehru said. He said that today voices could be heard in Pakistan against the mullahs (Muslim divines), and the feeling was growing that Pakistan should develop on India's secular lines. Sometimes, he said, they looked with envy upon the progress of India and regret was expressed why Pakistan did not develop a state on secular lines and why it did not frame a constitution like India's. There was also a feeling that the influence of the mullahs had to be destroyed and the people freed from their clutches. All this was very significant, the Prime Minister pointed out, and was a great portent for the future relations of India and Pakistan.

Kashmir

Referring to the agitation in Jammu and Kashmir, the Prime Minister said that communal organisations like Praja Parishad in the State were only helping Pakistan and were weakening India's strong case before the United Nations. He said Kashmir was a national question and must be regarded so by all political parties. Mr. Nehru said he never had any doubt about the Kashmir issue during the past five years. They had gone to Kashmir when the people of Kashmir themselves wanted India to come to their help in the event of Pakistan's aggression. But the Parishad activities were affecting the minds of the people of Kashmir. Mr. Nehru said these communal organisations were pursuing a shortsighted and senseless course. To separate Jammu from Kashmir would be giving Kashmir on a platter.

Mr. Nehru said the recent happenings in Pakistan must be a lesson and warning to all. No country could progress by mixing politics and religion. India's secular stand was praised by Iran, by Turkey, and by Egypt, where General Neguib wanted his countrymen to emulate India's ways and policy.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 15TH MAY, 1953

Coronation

 UK readers would naturally desire to know what our attitude in regard to participating in the Coronation celebrations would be. Let our views not be misconstrued. We are second to none in our loyalty to and our deep affection for Her Majesty the Queen. But the significance attached to the Coronation in the past does not exist today. There is no such thing as a King or Queen today. They are just figureheads who have no authority of any kind. They have no individuality of their own. They may not speak or act as they would desire. They can only speak or act as they are made to by a set of persons who have assumed power for the time being. It is sham and hypocrisy to use the term "In the name of His Majesty the King" or "In the name of Her Majesty the Queen." It would be more true to say, for instance, in the present case, "In the name of Mr. (now Sir) Winston Churchill and Company." All the pomp attached to the Coronation therefore seems to us to be a farce and it seems real, sinful to squander so much money especially when Britain herself, leave alone the world, is passing through troubled times she has never experienced before.

We are therefore inclined to agree with the views expressed on the Coronation by Mr. Henrys Hughes, M.P., reported elsewhere in this issue. We were very much impressed also by a recent article by Dr. J. H. Holmes of New York, we reproduced in our issue of May 1, wherein he compared the simplicity of the inauguration of the American President with the Coronation of the British Queen.

And now to come to the participation of the non-Europeans in the Coronation celebrations in South Africa. We find ourselves as non-Europeans in a very peculiar position. Our woes hardly reach the ears of Her Majesty the Queen and if they do Her Majesty is utterly helpless to do anything to bring relief to us. The very fact that a question should arise as to whether we should participate in the Coronation celebrations or not shows that there is something wrong somewhere.

The Queen is and should be the possession of all alike. If in times of trouble we forget all distinctions between caste, creed, colour or sex and hug each other as helpless creatures seeking the help and mercy of the King of Kings, we utterly fail to see why in the world those distinctions cannot be put aside for once at least on a great auspicious and historic occasion like this and why all the people irrespective of their colour cannot join together in hailing the Queen and participate equally in the jubilation. Why must the non-Europeans just because of the colour of their skin be treated as pariahs and why only crumbs should be thrown to them while those blessed with white skin should eat the cake. Thus is how the celebrations seem to be arranged by the local authorities and the non-Europeans are expected to participate in them without a murmur as a matter of course. This is what dampens the enthusiasm of people who value their self-respect above everything else as indeed all should do, and they feel it would be better to remain at home and send their silent prayer to Her Majesty that Her Majesty may be blessed with health and long life and that her reign may bring peace and happiness to Britain and to the world. Whilst these are our views the choice to participate in the celebrations on any conditions should at least be left entirely to individual judgment. It should be expected of course that those who do choose to participate would do so whole-heartedly with an inner joy, not out of fear of being black-listed.

NOTES AND NEWS

Formation Of A Liberal Party

THE South African Liberal Association, after a meeting of its federal council in Cape Town, has issued a statement announcing that it was to form a Liberal Party based on the following principles: (1) Essential dignity of every human being, irrespective of race, colour or creed, and the maintenance of his fundamental rights; (2) Rights of every human being to develop to the fullest extent of which he is capable consistent with the rights of others; (3) Maintenance of the rule of law; and (4) that no person be debarred from participating in the government and other democratic processes of the country by reason only of race, colour or creed, and that political rights based on a common franchise roll be extended to all suitably qualified persons. The Party, the statement said, will employ only democratic and constitutional means to implement its principles, and will oppose all forms of totalitarianism, such as Communism and Fascism. Membership of the Party will be open to all who subscribe to its principles. The Association has members in all four Provinces. The statement says a programme is being formulated by the federal council, and this will be submitted for ratification to a conference to be called by the new Party as soon as possible. The office bearers of the Party are: President, Mrs. V.M.L. Ballinger, M.P.; vice-president, Mr. Leo Marquard and Mr. Alan Paton; national chairman, Dr. O. D. Wothlam, national vice-chairman, Mr. Leslie Rubin.—Sapa.

Mr. Louw Attacks Anglican Bishops

Referring to "the attacks made by certain Anglican Bishops on the Government Apartheid policy," Mr. Eric Louw, addressing a National Party meeting at Brackenford West said: "Perhaps one of the Bishops will explain why, in most of their churches, a special section is set aside for non-European worshippers. He asked whether the Bishops would be prepared to practice what they preached and admit the children of Coloureds and Natives who were communicants of the Church, and who were able to pay the fees, to Anglican Church schools. 'If you are not prepared to answer this question you can hardly blame me and others if we doubt the sincerity of your protestations about the iniquity of discrimination on the grounds of colour, and if we are reminded of the gentlemen in the scriptures who stood at the corner of the street and thanked God that he was not like unto other men. Did not the Anglican Synod resolve that it was unchristian and even blasphemous to assert that discrimination was justified because of a different pigmentation of the skin? These questions are being put not only by myself but also by communicants of the Anglican Church, some of whom want to know why colour discrimination is reserved for the schools of those who are able to pay the fees.'—Sapa.

Objectionable Literature: "People's China" Confiscated

We have been informed by the Collector of Customs and Excise that "People's China" addressed to us has been detained at the Post Office and has been declared to be obscene.

All issues of this publication are therefore prohibited from importation into the Union and a copy at present under detention are seized in terms of Section 2, (1) F. 122 and 143 (1) of Act 35 of 1944. The Section in question reads as follows:—(1) All ships, vehicles or goods, which have been seized under any law relating to Customs, shall be deemed to be condemned and may be disposed of in terms of Section one hundred and forty-seven, unless the person from whom the same have been seized, or the owner or his authorised agent, gives notice in writing, within one month after the date of the seizure, to the person seizing or to the Commissioner, or to the proper Officer at the place where the seizure was made that he claims, or intends to claim, the said ship, vehicle or goods.

(2) If no such notice be given, no legal proceeding whatever shall thereafter be instituted against the State, the Minister, the Commissioner or any Officer, based merely upon the seizure of the ship, vehicle or goods.

(3) When a notice in writing has been given in terms of subsection (1), the person giving such notice shall, within ninety days of the date of such notice, but, except with the consent of the Commissioner, not earlier than one month from the date thereof, institute proceedings in the Court of competent jurisdiction, for obtaining release of the said ship, vehicle or goods.

The Federal Party's Non-European Policy

The following is stated to be the non-European policy of the Union Federal Party sponsored last week-end in Johannesburg by Mr. G. Henson Nicholls and others: The abandonment of fear as the guiding principle, and the adoption in its place of courageous policies, offers the only hope in the field of non-European affairs. The policies that have so far been pursued hold out no genuine prospect of permanently peaceful relationships among the peoples of South Africa.

We believe that the immediate aim in the field of non-European affairs should be rapid improvement of living conditions, welfare services, education, and economic opportunities, thus striking at the roots of crime, disease and political discontent.

We adhere to the principle that the franchise already extended to the non-European should be so way be curtailed or by any means rendered less effective. The South African born non-European should be accorded a right of expression in the organs of Government, commensurate with his degree of civilisation, as follows:—

(a) The present system of limited group representation of Natives to be maintained and an interim period of group representation of Indians on a system similar to that accorded to Natives to be initiated.

(b) Subject always to due safeguards against disproportionate representation of any one section of the non-European population, the long-term policy to be taken in steps over a considerable period of years, is the ultimate placing of those non-European who have passed suitable tests of a high standard, upon the common roll of voters.

We recognise the fact of increasing economic integration of the non-European peoples in the economy of South Africa.

We accept the desirability of racial and social segregation between Europeans and non-Europeans, to be obtained on a fair and equitable basis and wherever possible by the encouragement of voluntary population movements through housing and town planning schemes designed to that end and to the establishment of the foundations of a sound family life.

We believe that those Natives who have attained a high degree of civilisation should be entitled to exemption from those laws designed for the protection of backward peoples.

We stand for the recognition of all South African-born people, Coloureds, Bantu and Indians, as members of the greater South African community.

The Sinner Of The Two

Needless to say that the sinner of the two Parties mentioned above seems to be the Liberal Party which not only means with the desires and aspirations of the non-European but is in keeping with democratic principles.

Labour M.P.'s Views On Coronation

Mr. Emorys Hughes, a Labour member of Parliament, has washed his hands off the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth next month. He means to have no part in it, he says, and he has written a pamphlet "The Crown and the Cash," scolding Sir Winston Churchill's Government for "spending £2,000,000" on the Coronation. Mr. Hughes is 59 years old, a Wealden who represents a Scottish constituency. He is a son-in-law of the late Mr. Keir Hardie, famous Socialist pioneer. He said: I have never attended a Coronation, and I do not intend to start now." He said he hoped the young Queen would reign even longer than her great-great-grandmother Victoria, who ruled from 1837 to 1901. He considered that the country would not need another Coronation for 80 years. Mr. Hughes opened his pamphlet—by saying nobody who had read the autobiography of the Duke of Windsor could have anything but sympathy for the Royal Family. Nobody here any person will do the young Queen, the mother of two children, whose reign it was fervently hoped would bring an era of peace and prosperity to Britain and the world. "But with a Tory Government in power, and with Sir Winston Churchill Premier, it soon became clear that the Coronation of the new Queen was to be made the occasion for an enormously expensive spectacle. "All the nation's emotions were to be worked up to a wireless and television, to be followed as it was suggested, by a general elections at which an electorate stupefied and dazed by flag waving and national anthems, singing and mass suggestions—would go to the polls to vote again for a Tory Government." Mr. Hughes claimed that altogether the Monarchy cost Britain about £1,000,000 a year. He also criticised the expense entailed in building a new Royal yacht. He said on the day the Queen launched the ship there was an announcement that President Eisenhower was giving up his official yacht because "it was a symbol of needless luxury."

REPATRIATION OF FOREIGN CAPITAL INVESTED IN INDIA

RELAXATION OF RESTRICTIONS

THE Government of India had announced on June 22, 1950, certain relaxations in the exchange restrictions on the repatriation of capital invested from non-sterling area countries in projects approved by the Government of India after January 1, 1950. The announcement, however, expressly excluded appreciation in the value of the investment from the scope of the repatriation facilities, except to the extent of the profits of the investment ploughed back into the business with the approval of the Government of India. The Government of India have reviewed this policy and in order to stimulate investment of foreign capital in desirable channels have now decided to withdraw this reservation. Accordingly the repatriation of capital from the sale proceeds of the investments made by residents of countries other than the countries of the sterling area, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, will from now on be governed by the following principles:—

(1) Capital invested after the 1st January 1950 in projects approved by the Government of India may be repatriated at any time thereafter together with any capital appreciation in the value investment.

(11) These facilities, however, will not apply in purchase of shares on the stock exchange unless it is an integral part of an investment project approved by the Government of India after the 1st January 1950.

To suffer woes, which hope thinks infinite,
To forgive wrongs darker than death,
To love to bear, to hope; till hope creates from its own wreck the thing it desires,
Neither to change, to falter or repent,
That it is to be great, good; beautiful and free,
Thou alone it life joy and victory.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

SOUTH AFRICAN INDIANS—(2)

MALAN-SASTRI AGREEMENT

By C. W. M. GELL

From 'The Forum' (Johannesburg)

THE second phase of South Africa's relations with Indians overlaps the first to some extent. It began with the advent of a few "free" Indian immigrants after 1874 to supply Indian food and clothes required by the colonies and the "freed" Indians.

As the latter increased in number, some set up as small shopkeepers, market gardeners, pedlars, as well as entering domestic and public service. Thus free and freed Indians combined to form a resident Indian population composed of a minority of traders, small-holders and salaried persons and a large majority of wage labourers.

The slump of the late '80s saw the beginning of large-scale European hostility towards the Indians.

Law 3 of 1885 segregated Indians in the Transvaal because of "their neglect of sanitary measures and leathsome mode of living." But the law was hardly enforced at all, and many Indians living in the Transvaal today for their fathers) received grants of land from President Kruger and other prominent Boer leaders.

Most of the Transvaal Indians today descend from the free immigrants whose commercial enterprise and financial losses were much appreciated by Europeans in the expanding areas of the Reef and Pretoria.

From now on, though indentured immigration continued for 20 more years, the story is one of decreasing restrictions against Indians.

After obtaining self-government in 1892, Natal levied a poll-tax on free Indians in an effort to reduce them to go home. Originally fixed at £25 a year—a punitive figure for those days—it was reduced to £3 as a result of the Indian Government's threat to curtail indentured emigration.

In 1896 Natal abolished the Indian parliamentary franchise when there were 9,309 Europeans and 251 Indians on the roll. In 1927 an Act restricted free Indian immigration into Natal and another introduced trading licences which were sparingly granted to new Indian applicants.

In 1903 Milner said of the Transvaal with some justice

"The Asiatics are stronger forcing themselves upon a community reluctant to receive them."

But it must be recalled that a number were already legally resident there and the large illegal entry into the Transvaal during the next few years was as much due to the corruption and inefficiency of the immigration staff as to the persistence and ingenuity of the Indians.

A government that does not effectively enforce its laws cannot demand itself from the consequences. In 1906 the Cape applied a literacy test to Asiatic immigrants and, when the Transvaal next year demanded fingerprints from all its Indians in an effort to sort out the legal from the illegal resident, it sparked off Gandhi's first passive resistance campaign.

This continued off and on for six years and culminated in the Smuts-Gandhi Agreement which was embodied in Immigrants Regulation Act of 1913 and the Indians Relief Act of 1914.

The only concession to Gandhi was the omission of repatriation reference to "Asiatics" in the wording of the Act. The Indians Relief Act abolished the Natal poll-tax, recognised the validity of Indian marriages and offered free passages back to India for permanent repatriates.

Smuts hoped that, once Europeans were relieved of their fear of being swamped by continued Indian immigration they would treat the resident Indian population more reasonably. But that hope was never fulfilled.

Restrictions on Indian rights to reside and trade in various localities were steadily increased and Dr. Milner's "Class Areas Bill" of 1925 provoked a Round-Table Conference between the Indian and Union Governments, which led to the first Cape Town (Malan-Sastri) Agreement of February, 1927.

By this pact the two Governments undertook to co-operate in a scheme to repatriate our Indians voluntarily—the Union providing free passages and a small cash bonus, India accepting responsibility for rehabilitating the repatriates in India.

Other clauses of the Agreement recognised the Union's right to maintain Western standards of civilisation and his responsibility for the education, housing and welfare of whatever Indians remained in the Union and conformed to Western standards, the Class Areas Bill was dropped and the Union agreed to allow the entry of one wife per resident from India and minor children born to her outside the Union.

In view of these conditions it was strange, though perhaps not uncharacteristic, to find the chief Nationalist agitator, Dr. Milner, repudiating several of the clauses within three months.

On April 12, 1927, he told the Pretorius Chamber of Commerce: "The whole object of the agreement is to get as many Indians repatriated as possible. . . . All other points were subordinate to this. The agreement is not an agreement in the usual sense of the word. The Union Government does not bind itself in any way with regard to future legislation and can impose any legislation it likes in the event of the repatriation proposals not working satisfactorily."

Nothing whatever in the Agreement justifies this convenient theory that the "subordinate" clauses and the Union's responsibilities lapsed, if sufficient Indians did not accept repatriation. It is, in fact, our failure to honour the obligations towards our resident Indians, here freely accepted by a Nationalist-Labour coalition Government in a pact between two virtually sovereign states that has given India a pretext to intervene in our domestic affairs.

She has the undoubted right to press us to fulfil the responsibilities we acknowledged in 1927, though it may be both illegal and unwise to raise this issue at U.N.O.

The second Cape Town Agreement of 1932 recognised that, since over 80 per cent. of our Indians were by then Union-born, few wished to return to the land of their origin. Possibilities for emigration elsewhere—Brazil, British Guiana, New Guinea—were explored without finding any hopeful prospects. Voluntary repatriation had failed.

Two issues still relevant today emerge from this phase of trying to reverse the flow of Indians into this country.

First, that, for various reasons to be discussed in the next article, our Indians do not wish to leave the country in which well over 90 per cent today have been born. Possibly some could be induced to go by offering a larger cash bonus, but the cost to us would be prohibitive.

Otherwise, we are left with some form of compulsory deportation. Since we invited the Indians here, enforced repatriation of Union-born citizens must be ruled out as morally unthinkable and practically impossible, as no country would agree to accept them. There is really no honest way of evading the truth that our Indians are here to stay.

Secondly, Nationalist spokesmen are making almost as much of the "Brown menace" as of the "Black." There are almost daily references to "India's national aspirations in Africa" and to "India's policy of making Africa a dumping ground for her surplus population."

I am myself quite clear that the 200,000 Indians in the East and Central African territories constitute no sort of significant outlet for a population problem that runs into millions.

But the allegations are even more obviously unfounded in regard to the Union. For, since 1913, the only legal immigration into this country has been that of wives and children under the Malan-Sastri Agreement—a mere matter of 7,940 women and 9,138 children in 25 years.

As for illegal immigrants, Dr. Dinges said that 14,000 had been detected (and presumably deported) in the 40 years since 1913. In fact, Indian immigration into the Union has been virtually closed these last 40 years and its reopening has never been made an issue either by the Indian Government or the Indian community in this country.

MR. LUTHULI ON AFRICAN'S PROGRESS

SPEAKING at a meeting of the Durban and District Joint Council of Europeans and Africans at the Banisi Social Centre, last week, Mr. A. J. Luthuli, President General of the African National Congress, said:

"Some people claim that the African will submerge and destroy Western civilisation. I don't think so, for he has set out to acquire it. The problem is to discern between the mere veneer and the substance of this civilisation."

"It is unfair to call the African a savage for he possesses quite a high degree of civilisation and a certain amount of refinement in outlook and basic knowledge. It is largely for political reasons that certain White people have vilified the African in the eyes of the world."

"In all scenes of modern life the African, notwithstanding his shortcomings, is advancing. In spite of the formidable obstacles in his way the African has made great progress. Religion has

Mr. A. J. Luthuli

"We must not assume that before the White man came to South Africa the African was stagnant. Records show that the White man came into touch with an active, virile people who were progressing towards civilisation, however slowly."

"The popular belief that the African is an ignorant and uncivilized savage is untrue. Judged by the 'outward forms' and knowledge that goes with modern civilisation the African is on a lower scale, but it is the inner aspect of civilisation that counts, and here the African stands far higher than is thought. He has the civilisation of the heart."

"Before the advent of the White man the Zulu had a code of ethics and conduct similar to the Jewish one, which is the basis of Christianity. He had courts, which shows he lived in an ordered society. He could mine and work iron and had developed music and art."

destroyed and neutralised both their own and Christian civilisation and influences have had a considerable beneficial effect."

"Not all Africans are practising Christians, but neither are all Europeans, but consciously or unconsciously, the African is gradually acquiring the forms of a Christian way of life."

"Culturally and industrially as the African makes his contributions to this field to his status rises."

"In the sphere of education, in spite of difficulties such as poverty, we are turning out men who have distinguished themselves in the field of music, art and literature. Although their efforts may seem feeble to some, they are making a distinct contribution to civilisation, and against their background you must applaud them for it."—Natal Daily News.

THE WIDER WORLD

By JOHN GILD

A SHAM FIGHT

NATAL is supposed to be in revolt against the Malan Government. I do not myself attach any lasting importance to the movement gathering around Hrisma Nicholls. In the first place Mr. Nicholls' record in public life is well known. He is more conservative and less liberal than most of the United Party leaders. He can claim to be the father of much of the Native policy embodied in the legislation of 1936. He has never in his life been visited by anything resembling a moderately generous impulse towards Ind and Africans. If you study his wordy pronouncements, you will find him unconsciously woolly about non-European rights and wrongs, but I suspect that he believes the United Party was not hostile enough to the claims and aspirations of non-white people.

At heart this so-called "spiritual secession" of Natal is nothing much more than dislike of Afrikaners. It is not fundamentally, opposition to the colour policies pursued by Afrikaners. It is a quarrel over words and forms, over methods and techniques for retaining white supremacy, not over the question whether it is wise to try and maintain such supremacy. This movement will therefore only deserve support if and when it proves itself more, not less, liberal than the United Party. I doubt if it will do so because its main activity will be to detach votes from the U.P. and it can hardly do so by being more liberal.

Only Angry Words

Natal has no legal or constitutional right to secede from the Union. Mr. Strydom is perfectly right in saying that secession can only be made with the consent of Parliament. That consent can hardly be gained by a process of argument and persuasion. What is the alternative? That is the vital question that these brave Natalians decline to face. History shows that men achieve their political aims only if they are, in the last resort, prepared to struggle for those aims by all effective means. In recent times this has meant passive resistance, strikes, refusal to pay taxes, meetings and demonstrations of protest, all undertaken in a spirit of sacrifice and regardless of the legal consequences to those who participate. I do not believe that Natalians for a moment contemplate any activities more militant than angry speeches at exciting meetings. And if they ever do, I hope that someone will warn them of the old law making it a serious crime to break any laws as a form of protest. Natal is fatally handicapped in advance by the laws against passive resistance which it helped to pass through Parliament.

The opposition to the Malan Government is tending to divide into various groups, of which a new party in Natal is only one. A liberal party may well be another, but we must wait and see how liberal it will really be. What matters most, to my mind, in these days is that liberal ideas and political education should be kept alive and that friendship across colour lines should be maintained and cultivated.

Influence Of The Press

In their forlorn search for the reason for defeat, the United Party's supporters have recognised the only factor, namely, their lack of an Afrikaner daily paper to champion their case. This is childish. The influence of the Press is considerable, but it is often exaggerated. In 1924 and again in 1929 Hertzog won a general election although the Nationalists were supported by only one daily paper in the Cape. In Britain, to this day, the Labour Party is supported only by the 'Daily Herald,' while the Tories have scores of other papers behind them, both in London and in the provinces. In the United States Roosevelt was elected President four times in succession although four out of every five dailies are Republican, not Democratic. In any case, I don't suppose that the United Party will start a new Afrikaner daily. Journalists reckon that it would cost anything up to a million pounds to finance such a project. The Party's previous papers, 'Die Volkstem' and 'Die Suiders' both failed in spite of generous subsidies. One reason for their failure was mismanagement. The U.P. finds it very hard to start able men to its paid staff. No Afrikaner journalist, even if his sympathies lay with the U.P., would leave a secure post with the flourishing Nationalist papers for an insecure one with a new paper unlikely to survive. A weekly paper would be an ambitious enough venture to undertake in the light of earlier failures.

Economic Realities

The English dailies, moreover, are not keen to see a new Afrikaner daily set up because it would compete with them for advertisements as well as readers. Papers like 'The Star' and 'The Cape Argus' and the 'Cape Times' pride themselves on having many Afrikaner readers. These readers are, in some proportion, Nationalists who enjoy sporting news and other non-political features of the English dailies. That is one reason why the English papers, except in Natal, have now begun to modify their opposition to the Nationalists.

Another reason lies in the desire of the Chamber of Mines (which, of course, controls most of the papers) to come to terms with the Malan Government. The mines have much preferred Mr. Havenga to Mr. Hofmeyr at the Treasury. As long as the Nationalist Party refrains from imposing heavy taxation on the mines and from interfering with cheap migrant Native labour, the mine-owners will never attack their resources or exert themselves greatly to oppose this Government. The Chamber of Mines and its allies are also hoping that the crisis of the Constitution over the Coloured franchise will somehow be settled in a friendly fashion. They believe that if it were settled and the rule of law appeared to be respected, capital from overseas would again be encouraged to come here. And the mines really need capital to develop the gold fields in the Orange Free State.

These are some of the economic realities behind all the sound and fury of the white politicians.

'New York Times' On Dr. Malan

"All civilised people must feel a sense of shame at Dr. Malan's victory," says an editorial article in America's leading daily, 'The New York Times'.

"No man is an island, and Daniel F. Malan is not an exception, no country is a world apart in these days of one world, so continent like Africa can suffer such a shock without its repercussions spreading across the seas and oceans."

In this first consideration of the election result one cannot do more than to repeat the reason why Malan has met the hostility and condemnation of the free world. It is a simple matter of moral principles. To Dr. Malan the white race is permanently superior to that of any other and the white man in South Africa has the right, the duty and the privilege of ruling the other races, keeping them apart and on a lower level. This is a false and wicked doctrine which has been rejected by modern civilisations and by religion at all times.

That the vastly outnumbered white man has a practical problem of enormous difficulty and complexity in South Africa is not denied, but that it should be rationalised into the monstrous doctrine of racism is wicked. Therefore there will be a day of reckoning for these men, since human beings will not endure injustice and the loss of freedom indefinitely.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

DIFFICULTIES BEFORE A LIBERAL PARTY

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

ABOUT a fortnight ago a top-level conference of representatives of the African National and the South African Indian Congresses on the one hand and a number of European political groups on the other met in Johannesburg to explore the possibilities of tracing a liberal party in this country. In itself the move is a very sound one—showing as it does, that there are men and women in the white community who are prepared to be guided by reason in their dealings with their darker-skinned countrymen.

But at quite an early stage difficulties arose over the crucial franchise issue. On the one hand white people—with, I believe very good intentions—proposed a slightly "loaded" franchise for the African. The African National Congress representatives felt they could not operate in anything which relegated to the African an inferior status.

The question is a delicate one and requires to be approached with open a mind as is humanly possible.

The white case for "loading" the franchise for the African should not be dismissed off-hand if the intention is to get to a workable solution of a problem that is somewhat tangled. But this at the same time, should not mean that the African should be expected to rush headlong into any scheme designed to protect the interests of the white minority group. Statesmanship on either side will seek for the happy means which will assure the whiteman that it is not his destruction that is being plotted while convincing the African that no new plot is being cooked in delay his march to an existence.

On the White side, we must acknowledge frankly that there exists a very genuine fear of being swamped by our numbers. And, as the facts before us bear numerical superiority, for example, it is not a case with out foundations. The majority of the white people feel that they can save themselves from being swamped if they retain power in their hands for the longest time possible. In other words they say to us that if their own free will they will never share it with us. They will do this or surrender it to us only when we exert on them irresistible pressure.

But if the whiteman is afraid of being drowned under a tide of colour to us the danger of extermination as a result of his colour policies is very real. His racial policies have done more harm to us within the last fifty years than to make us a healthier and happier people. If they are persisted in, in the future, our race shall be wiped off the face of South Africa one day. This, we are determined to prevent happening even if we have to give our lives.

The white liberals would appear to have a good case when they ask for a "loaded" franchise for our people. If we accept this they might approach their own people and hold out acceptance of the "loading" as proof of our sincerity when we say we do not intend dominating the white man. If that happens, liberalism might build a new and stronger bridge of peace between Black and White in this country.

But then there are snags in their snags of so serious a nature that the Congress standpoint requires to be equally appreciated and respected. At the moment it has been tentatively suggested that Standard VI, at least, should be the educational standard qualifying an African to the vote. This, in fact, means that only a small percentage of the African people will have the vote. For the bulk of African people do not even Standard VI because of economic and other conditions altogether beyond their control. This is not the position in the other racial groups.

The smallness of the African electorate would mean, in practice, that our voice in Parliament would not be strong enough to enable us to see laws passed which would materially improve our own living and educational standards. We would be a Parliament strait, but we would not have the power to influence events in a way to bringing us to the position of complete equality with the other races within a reasonable period.

There is a second good reason against loading the vote, if the French colonies in Africa, for example, the Westernized or educated Africans are being absorbed into the straits of the ruling whiteman. This creates a situation where those men between their interests are those of the foreign rulers often work in a way which not always benefits the masses of their own people. They tend to become the black section of the ruling aristocracy and work generally for the preservation of their own class interests and not for the masses of suffering humanity. The leaders of the African National Congress rightly refuse to betray the masses of suffering Africa in the way their counterparts have tended to do in French Africa.

What we are fighting for in the African National Congress is the emancipation of mankind. We regard as sacred the human personality as such and not so much what a man has achieved. Because of this, we work for a social order in which every human being created by God will be free to rise to his position to which his talents entitle him in this country. We are against creating a ruling class of so-called "civilized" men who will in turn dominate the masses of our backward people.

We do not intend setting up a tyranny of the "civilized" of all races in the place of the present tyranny of colour. We have suffered too long and too much from tyranny to believe that one form of it might be very much better than the other. I use the word "civilized" here, in the sense in which most white people use it to justify their oppression of us.

Supposing that we did accept partnership on the "loaded" basis, supposing the leaders of the African National Congress felt it was better to have a few seats in Parliament as representatives of the privileged few—than to wallow in the uncertainty of the status quo—what would be the position of the "civilized" few within the ruling class?

Economically the African still has to cover too much ground to catch up with the European or to a lesser extent, the Indian. They would not be human if they (the white people) did not use their own collective economic power to perpetuate the position of dominance which their own economic position would enable them to. So that even within the circle of the "civilized" the Africans would find themselves so impotent so early—their numbers notwithstanding.

Thirdly, of course, the fact the new political alignments are being seriously discussed is something which has come about largely as a result of the exertions of the African National Congress. Congress enters these negotiations from strength. It has shown its organizing ability and demonstrated that it can marshal its behind it forces which can bring apartheid teppiling to the ground. At this stage, and after so many setbacks, Congress cannot be expected to be enticed with a junior partnership where its own needs and strength militate it to something better. People must take into consideration the fact that national self-respect is a living reality in African life today.

But when all this has been said, the African National Congress because of its strength and because its own attitude might wreck or reinforce the foundations of the new and broader nationalism now being laid, needs to temper its own determination with statesmanlike realism and avoid placing itself in the position where its political sincerity might be seriously doubted.

We have to face the position very frankly that not a single group which is not African will feel comfortable in an arrangement where every African will have the vote. The Indians might accept this arrangement they might not. But the Coloureds and the Whites will certainly reject it. If Congress insists on this condition, it will wreck the prospects of a united anti-Apartheid front which would be supported by all the other races. It would, on the other hand, give Nelson all the ammunition he would need to prove to the white people that what we want is to dominate in a vindictive way all the other racial minorities—which we sincerely do not want to do.

We can democratize our own society only in one way: by showing that when we are strong we are reasonable; by showing that when we have the power in force developments our own way, we are prepared to treat with respect the other man's wishes, by showing that when we lose sincere respect for our own wishes, we shall not do to racial minorities the things that are being done to us by our present oppressors; by showing, in short, that we are not paying lip-service to the ideal of tolerance. And I believe we can do that in no better way than by accepting the principle of a "loaded" franchise for the African people for a certain period. The alternative, I am afraid, is the communal franchise—a poor starting point for liberalism.

I myself do not like the proposals advanced to date for the "loaded" franchise. They will enable us to win the political way and lose the peace. If we win let us win both. This is what we are fighting for.

I know there are Congressmen who would rather go into the wilderness than accept the "loading" principle in any shape or form. Anybody who knows what we have been through, can't help appreciating their attitude. But we are evolving into an historic phase which is new in our experience. Where before we were weak and powerless, now we are slowly becoming and being recognised as masters of our own fate—brothers of our strength, proved in action. If then the advocates of an un-fettered franchise can go into the wilderness and wait for the day when they will have everything their own way, why can't they wait in altogether different circumstances? Wait for the day when every African shall enjoy the franchise. In the meantime co-operate in accelerating the evolutionary processes now being released to solve a problem not without its dim outline.

It will be a grave mistake on both the African and the white sides in the present discussion if either tries to break off the negotiations. We cannot expect peoples who have been brought up on racial hatred for centuries suddenly to discover that they agree on every point. Either side will have to give a lot and take little if we are to get anywhere near solving the problems of our country. And, in doing that, we should avoid bargaining for the immediate purpose of satisfying parliamentary needs, that will lead us down a number of tragically blind alleys.

Our watchword should be tolerance and realism.

Now India or Indian-controlled Kashmir) were used in the most obvious and easy way in irrigate desert areas (now in Pakistan) along their own watercourses, i.e. to S.W. Punjab. Partition cut the sources of all five rivers off from the main irrigated areas and left the headworks of two major canal systems in Indian hands. It is natural now that India should wish to divert these waters to desert areas in East Punjab and Bikaner. Equally naturally, Pakistan's fear that such measures will jeopardise the fertility of large areas in Pakistan, for whose development Hindus and Sikhs were so much responsible than Muslims. This is not a matter where "international usage" or "obvious justice" has clearly with either party. Both are struggling with one of the serious economic consequences of the tragedy of partition, for which both must share with the British the blame and responsibility. Time, the good offices of genuinely impartial friends and much more forbearance than your correspondent has shown are required to see that the just aspiration of both republics to regard to the Indus basin waters are as fairly and fully met as science can devise.

May I finally suggest, Sir, that you bring to your correspondent's notice the very troubled and uncertain future which lies before the Indians of this country? This surely demands that we should emphasise what unites rather than what divides and refrain from importing here (as your correspondent has done almost verbatim) the partisan pettiness of certain sections of the Indian and Pakistani press. We need not avoid contentious issues; but we must discuss them with understanding of opposing opinions sincerely held and with charity for the strong emotions generated on either side. In this respect the report from your Karachi correspondent in the same issue sets a standard which I hope your Bombay correspondent will in future strive to emulate.

Yours faithfully,

O. W. M. GILL

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE

CONTENTIONS OF KASHMIR

THE EDITOR, INDIAN OPINION

SIR,—As one who has strong ties of interest and affection with both India and Pakistan, as well as personal experience of the Punjab, I must protest against the very partisan manner in which your Bombay correspondent discussed Indian-Pakistan disputes in 'Indian Opinion' for May 1st.

He mentioned the three most contentious issues of Kashmir, the canal waters and evacuee property, the last two at some length. Any fair-minded and informed person knows that much can be said on these issues from both sides. But the continuous of impartial world-opinion is against India on Kashmir and against Pakistan on evacuee property. I will, therefore draw attention to the misleading argument used by your correspondent about the Punjab canal water dispute which is still under investigation by neutral experts.

Your correspondent wrote "In September 1947 India formally proposed...that the...agreement be referred to arbitration. Pakistan did not accept the proposal." This is a deliberate half-truth. India proposed an arbitration tribunal of two judges from each side. Since unfortunately no such tribunal has reached a conclusion on any matter since partition, Pakistan refused this proposal as likely only to perpetuate the stalemate. Pakistan offered to accept neutral or UNO mediation, as also in Kashmir. In both cases India refused this, unless Pakistan first accepted most unreasonable preliminary conditions. In each case India's geographical advantage (the possession of three-quarters of the area of Kashmir and of the upper reaches of the Ravi and Sutlej rivers whose waters are in dispute) ensures that procrastination is to her benefit, for it will enable her to confront Pakistan with a Kashmir whose economy and constitution have been integrated with India's and with rivers whose water have been successfully diverted. Pakistan's suspicions about the sincerity of India's offers to negotiate cannot, therefore, be dismissed as purely fanciful.

Secondly, your correspondent quotes certain facts as showing that at partition Pakistan received most of the water and irrigated land of the Indus basin, "highly developed by Hindus and Sikhs." From these facts he infers that "it is obvious where justice lies."

But the facts do not prove what he insinuates. They merely show that many years ago in undivided Punjab the waters of the five rivers (all of which flow to what is

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Bombay, May 1.

WITH the dismissal of Mr. Nazimuddin and the institution of a new Cabinet under the leadership of Mr. Mohamed Ali in Pakistan, the prospects of an amicable settlement of the outstanding issues between India and Pakistan have brightened to a considerable degree. In the new Pakistan Cabinet there are persons like Abdul Khan Kayum Khan, the former Premier of N.W.F.P., who are avowed anti-Indians, but many of them are liberals, who will sacrifice personal feelings and political propaganda for the interest of their country, which will best be served by friendly relations with India.

Mr. Mohamed Ali, the Premier of Pakistan, lost no time in declaring his intention to start talks with Mr. Nehru. Pakistan Government has called a conference of Premiers of Muslim countries, but not a single country responded to that call. Now Mr. Mohamed Ali has declared that he would like to call a conference of Premiers of all Asiatic countries, thus obviously renouncing the intention, at least for the present, of joining MEDO, to which India had taken strong objection. The advocacy of joint defence of India and Pakistan which would save millions of Rupees to both the countries that can be gainfully employed for promoting the welfare of the people of both the countries, has created a very favourable impression in New Delhi.

His first message to Mr. Nehru expressing his desire to have friendly relations with India and to solve all the problems through peaceful negotiations, has evoked favourable response.

Pakistan officials' delegation which was expected to arrive in New Delhi last week, but postponed its departure from Karachi due to a change of Government, is now expected to arrive in India in about a week's time to counterparts in Delhi and prepare grounds for a meeting between the two Premiers. Mr. Mohamed Ali has written a second personal letter to Mr. Nehru, the contents of which are not yet revealed. Pandit Nehru is expected to reply to the same after finishing the tour of famine-stricken areas of Maharashtra.

Mr. Nehru and Mr. Mohamed Ali will discuss the outstanding issues, on the basis of the groundwork prepared by the officials at New Delhi, in London where both the Premiers will proceed to attend the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

The agitation by the people of Hyderabad has again brought the question of linguistic States, which was given a decent burial for at least five years at the Hyderabad session of the Indian National Congress. Mr. Nehru announced at Belgium that a Commission on linguistic States would be appointed after the formation of Andhra State and watching its progress for "some time, say, a year."

The proposed Commission's terms of reference would include consideration of the feasibility of redistributing States on linguistic basis and also whether such States would prove economic and viable units. The Commission would examine all aspects of redistribution on linguistic basis and recommend measures for the creation of these States. Then the Government would draft a Bill on the basis of the Commission's report and call for public views on the Bill.

As a result of the recommendations of this Commission most of the Part "B" and Part "C" States and bifurcate too unwieldy States such as Uttar Pradesh.

India is slowly but steadily progressing towards its aim of creating a welfare State. The Government of India took a big step in this direction by implementing Employees' State Insurance Scheme in Kanpur and Delhi. Under this scheme workers get medical relief in the event of sickness or disablement and cash benefits during their convalescence.

For the dependents of employees who die as a result of industrial injury, there is a provision for pension and for the female workers there is a provision for ante-natal care and cash benefit for the period of disablement due to maternity.

The Employees' State Insurance Scheme is expected to start working in all industrial towns of India with more than 5000 industrial workers by the beginning of 1954 and to extend to smaller areas by the end of that year.

Preparations are being made by the Employees' State Insurance Corporation for the early implementation of the scheme in Greater Bombay, Ahmedabad, Nagpur, Jabalpur, Calcutta, Bangalore and Madras.

The scheme covers all personal factories run with power and employing 20 or more workers and includes all manual and clerical employees getting a remuneration of not more than Rs. 400 per month.

Employers all over the country are paying, from the date of implementation of this scheme, special contribution by way of subsidy for the fund required for the benefit in Kanpur and Delhi. In addition, the employers in "benefit areas" are paying their share of the contribution.

When the scheme is implemented in Greater Bombay it will provide benefits to over 4,00,000 employees working in about 1600 industrial undertakings. In Ahmedabad it will cover nearly 1,50,000 employees working in about 300 industrial concerns.

The Government of India is seeking to nationalise air transport in India and the Air Corporations Bill has been introduced in the Indian Parliament.

During the debate on the Bill, Mr. Jagjivanram, the Communications Minister, expressed his confidence that as a result of nationalisation, commercial air transport in India can look forward to a very bright future.

During the last few years the position of the air transport industry as a whole had worsened due to uneconomic running of various routes. Apart from economic considerations, other considerations which weighed with the Government in sponsoring the present measure were defence requirements during an emergency, transport of food and other essentials during any natural calamity.

The Government would take over all the assets and liabilities of the present air companies and pay compensation on the basis of the valuation of the assets in negotiable bonds bearing an interest of 3½ per cent. per annum.

The Bill provides for setting up of two Corporations, one for operation of long distance international air services and the other for domestic air services and for services to neighbouring countries.

The confabulations of the new Indian High Commissioner for Ceylon, Mr. C. C. Desai, with the Prime Minister of Ceylon and his colleagues seem to be bearing fruit. The question of citizenship of Indian settlers in Ceylon has defied solution due to the intransigent attitude of the Ceylon Government. Mr. Dudley Senanayake, Premier of Ceylon, had asked Mr. Nehru to have personal discussion on this question. Pandit Nehru had refused to have such talks before a preliminary agreement was reached on broad principles, otherwise the talks may end in failure and may result in only emphasising the failure.

Mr. C. C. Desai has come to New Delhi to seek personal instruction from the Prime Minister to evolve a specific basis with a view to facilitate fruitful discussion between the two Prime Ministers when they meet in London.

The Government of India has prepared a scheme for participation of students in community projects. The community projects, for rural areas development, are undertaken with the assistance of America and are progressing well. Many offers from students for work during the summer vacation had been received by the Planning Commission and it had been discussed with the Development Commission of the State Governments at a meeting held in New Delhi recently.

The Development Commission had welcomed the idea and said that they were already in contact with the authorities of the institutions concerned in regard to the students' participation in the work. The main features of the scheme are that the students' participation must be for a minimum period of fifteen days and the nature of the work that is to be undertaken by the students will be decided by the project authority in consultation with the institutions sending the students.

The scrapping of the policy of giving lands to political workers has created a rift between the Rajagopalachari Ministry in Madras and the Tamil Nadu Congress Committee.

The Tamil Nadu Congress Committee strongly opposing the policy of the Chief Minister, Mr. Rajagopalachari, has openly attacked him and Mr. Kamaraj Nader, president of the Committee, is gathering support from disgruntled Congressmen for an open revolt against Mr. Rajagopalachari.

At the Tanjore conference of the Tamil Nadu Congress Committee Mr. Kamaraj Nader, raising the banner of revolt, told his colleagues that there was nothing disgraceful in receiving land grants from the Government which were measures of reward for the untold sufferings endured by the patriots in the fight for the country's freedom.

But it is felt that Rajaji will not bow down to his erstwhile rival in the political arena and change his decided policy.

The Government of Madras has ordered the prosecution of the British owned Madras Electric Tramway Co. before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, under the Industrial Tribunal Act, for stopping the tramways without any notice. The result of the prosecution will be either to make the Company run the tramways again or after paying all the legitimate dues to the workers throw it out without notice, wind up the concern.

People of Uttar Pradesh are waiting with interest for the result of two cases in which the Chief Minister, Mr. Pant, the leader of the Opposition in the State Assembly, Mr. Rajaram Singh and the Speaker of the Assembly Mr. A. G. Eber are involved.

The Election Tribunal has been hearing the election petition of Mr. Abdul Rauf who was defeated by Mr. Pant at the last general election at Bareilly. On an application by Mr. Rauf, the Tribunal has decided to record the evidence of Mr. Nehru by a Commission.

The second case of Mr. Rajaram Singh raised a constitutional issue. Mr. Singh was removed by the police on the order of the Speaker from the Assembly Chamber last month on the alleged charge of disobedience of the orders of the Speaker. His case was referred to the Committee of Privilege of the House, which recommended that he should not be allowed to attend the present session of the Assembly.

The leader of the Opposition has questioned in the High Court this punishment imposed on him by the Committee and subsequently confirmed by the House. His Counsel argued before the Court that his client had been punished twice for the same offence; first when he was ordered to be removed from the House, and again when the House passed the resolution suspending him from the House.

This, he pleaded, was in violation of Article 20 (2) of the Constitution which laid down that no person shall be prosecuted and punished for the same offence more than once. The hearing is going on from day to day.

Moral Re-Armament

LONDON'S Royal Festival Hall for the first time on May 10 heard the African Anthem 'Nkosi Sikelele i Africa' sung by a chorus of 100 voices from twelve nations. The audience of 6000 overflowed the hall into two large marquees nearby.

It was at a national Assembly for Moral Re-Armament to mark the fifteenth anniversary of the movement. The platform party included representatives from South Africa, the Rhodesias, Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone, the Sudan and Abyssinia. Mr. John Serony, an African student from Kenya said, "The question facing Africa is one of leadership. Will it be white or black leadership? Moral Re-Armament shows the right way whereby black and white both fight together for what's right."

Other speakers included Herr Heinrich Hellwege, German Federal Minister for Upper House Affairs, who is the first German Cabinet Minister to speak in London since 1933 and M. Claudius Petit, French Minister for Reconstruction 1948-52. Both paid tribute to the work of Moral Re-Armament in bringing a new understanding between their respective nations. Mr. Hamilton Kerr, Conservative Member of Parliament for Cambridge and a member of the Consultative Assembly of the Council of Europe, said, "Moral Re-Armament has been effective in easing the bitter hangover of history between France and Germany. It is not enough to oppose bad solutions. We have got to say what we believe in ourselves."

News In Brief

Mr. J. G. Vandeyar, a prominent member of the Indian community at Transvaal and a member of the firm of Messrs. J. G. Vandeyar and Co., Real Estates Agents of Johannesburg left by air on a three months overseas tour to Europe, and will be in London for the Coronation celebration of Queen Elizabeth. After visiting some of the important countries in Europe, Mr.

Vandeyar will spend some of his time visiting the Eastern countries on his return journey. While he is in London he hopes to contact some of his leading business men.

There was a very pleasant function last Saturday, at the Inanda Seminary, where African girls are being educated, when the foundation stone of the Seminary Chapel was laid by Dr. E. H. Brookes. A large crowd of people had come from Durban and elsewhere and were served with tea and cakes.

On Sunday Professor Douglas and Mrs. Steere visited Mahatma Gandhi's Phoenix Settlement where they had lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Manilal Gandhi and met friends in the district and later paid a hurried visit to the Oblong Institute and the Inanda Seminary.

Whatever games are played with us, we must play no games with ourselves, but deal in our privacy with complete honesty and truth.

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with the period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other on the Indian Peninsula. The Moghal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining; and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, escapades, a chase with bloodhounds, and romance. INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

Happiness

Happiness.....means an enlightened realization of human dignity and craving for human liberty which prizes itself above mere selfish satisfaction of personal comforts and material wants and would readily and joyfully sacrifice these for self-preservation.

Means And Ends

'They say "means are after all means". I would say "means are after all everything." Is the means, so the end. Violent means will give violent independence. That would be a menace to the world.. France obtained her freedom by violent means. She is still paying dearly for her violence..... There is no wall of separation between means and end. Indeed the Creator has given us control (and that too very limited) over means, none over the end. Realization of the goal is in exact proportion to that of the means. This is a proposition that admits of no exception. Holding such a belief, I have endeavoured to keep the country to means that are purely 'peaceful and legitimate'

—Mahatma Gandhi.

WHERE LIES THE HOPE OF MANKIND

The following is taken from Wilfred Wellock's Orchard Lea Paper No. 3, entitled "The Values of The Small Community". Mr. Wellock is an English economist, a pacifist and a firm believer in the values of small communities. The entire series of "Orchard Lea Papers" or single numbers thereof may be obtained by writing to Mr. Wilfred Wellock, Orchard Lea, New Longton, Preston, Lancs, England.

NO one who meditated upon the history of the last fifty years would conclude that Western civilization had more than the remotest connection with the good life. Two world wars, long periods of mass migration, mass concentration and forced labour camps, testify to a civilization that has lost its bearings and is on its way to self-destruction.

Our age requires a new pattern of life which takes account of the whole man, the economic man who lives by bread, and the spiritual man who lives by truth, fellowship, service and self-giving, meditation, affection, religion, love.

That pattern must embrace three important rights or values: responsibility and creative opportunity in one's daily labour, and vital relationship with the community in which one has one's being. These rights the social system must provide, so that every man may live creatively and satisfyingly in the fullest use of all his powers.

.....Aristotle declared: "Experience shows that a populous city can seldom if ever, be properly governed. Well governed cities have a limited population."

Plato... Rousseau... Thomas Jefferson... a collection of pronouncements by modern British and American authors in favour of the small community as the best medium in which to develop an enduring and thus high quality civilization.

History proves abundantly that it is in small, largely self-governing communities that workmanship reaches its highest quality, and citizenship its peak of culture and grandeur. To produce for a user, a neighbour, is far more satisfying than to produce for a trader, in that it establishes a permanent relationship of esteem and goodwill. It is in these conditions that a man puts all he has into his labour while to have something of one's soul in the homes and surroundings of one's habitation, is to be widely honoured and beloved—a reward which means more to a man than the cash return of his labour.

It is a fact of history that genius flourishes most abundantly in small neighbourly communities. An outburst of genius in a prophet, a poet, sculptor, painter or musician is followed by a number of his admiring and inspired neighbours becoming his imitators....

I am not arguing for a return to the Middle Ages, but I am arguing for a recovery of some of its values—values that have been lost in the perilous journey to modern industrialism. Every age has its evils, its shortcomings, temptations and failures, and the Guild era was no exception to this rule, but there are human rights and values which ought to belong to every society in every age. It is because so many of these precious rights and values were sacrificed during his reckless pursuit of riches and power, that the Industrial Revolution stands condemned.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 22ND MAY, 1953

Sheer Cussidness

This question of providing a decent bus rank for the privately run non-European buses catering for thousands of passengers has been hanging fire now for a considerably long time. An outsider who happens to see the dangerous situation which exists at the bus rank near the Indian market cannot but be disgusted the way the elementary requirements of a large section of the citizens of the Durban City are criminally neglected by the authorities concerned who, in the present case, are the City Council. Why such a comparatively small matter should be allowed to be made a political issue and to be hindered by the political organisations when it could easily be amicably settled between the City Council and the Bus-owners Association, having due regard to the conveniences of the public, surpasses us. Does the City Council glee in appearing to be so utterly ridiculous in the eyes of the world? And all this fuss just because the parties concerned are voiceless and voiceless non-Europeans, whose rights and privileges, however just and reasonable they may be, nay, even their very lives, do not concern the White City Fathers. A very reasonable request has been made on behalf of the Bus-owners to provide a proper rank on the testing ground which is in the vicinity of the present area in which the buses are parked, has been rejected and the City Council is insistent in providing a parking area right in the centre of non-European schools where naturally the lives of thousands of children are in danger. Had European parents been concerned would His Worship the Mayor and the City Council have dared to act in the manner they are acting?

The non-European occupied areas are so easily discernible by the shabbiness even of the approach to them, no matter even if it happens to be a twenty thousand pound educational institution. Take for instance the approach to the Sastri College. Even the very smallest place occupied by Europeans will be scrupulously cared for and looked after while those occupied by non-Europeans will be unscrupulously neglected. That is the fruit of "apartheid" we have been experiencing for nearly a century.

To come to the approach to the Sastri College we heaved a sigh of relief the other day when we found it being so beautifully renovated at full speed. We blessed the City Council in our hearts for appearing for once at least to do the right thing. But within a moment we were disillusioned when it dawned on us that all that post haste was to provide a bus rank for non-European bus owners in utter disregard of all the entreaties and the wishes of the people concerned. We cannot but describe this criminal act on the part of the City Council as sheer cussidness.

It is heartening to note that the liberal hearted European friends have seen the importance of coming to the rescue of the non-Europeans and are strongly advocating their case. We can only hope and pray that their labours will not be in vain.

NOTES AND NEWS

A Lesson For South Africa

Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President of Atlanta University, became the first Negro president in the Twentieth Century to defeat a White man at the polls in Atlanta when he won a Board of Education seat. He beat Mr. J. H. Landers, who had held the seat for 25 years, by 22,595 votes to 13,936 in a city-wide poll. Dr. Clement said afterwards: "It isn't a personal victory. I've been feeling for some time that the people of the South are far ahead of what people think they are. The White population is ready to try to work constructively with the Negro population." The last time a Negro was elected over a White man in Atlanta was in 1871. —(Saps United Press.)

Why cannot the same thing be possible in South Africa? How happy the world could be if only men were to shed all fear of man and were to begin to fear God and to abide by His Law!

First Cabinet Meets Under Mr. Strydom's Presidentship

The Acting Prime Minister, Mr. J. G. Strydom, Minister of Land's, presided over a meeting of the Cabinet in the Union Buildings last Monday. It was the first meeting of the Cabinet since the departure to Britain of the Prime Minister, Dr. Malan, the Minister of Finance, Mr. N. O. Havenga, and the Minister of Education, Arts and Science and of Mines, Mr. J. H. Viljoen, to attend the Coronation and the conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers. During their absence, Mr. Strydom is acting Prime Minister, and the Minister of External Affairs, Mr. E. H. Louw, is acting Minister of Finance. The Minister of Justice, Mr. C. R. Swart, is acting Minister of Education, Arts and Science, and the Minister of the Interior, Dr. T. B. Doodan, is acting Minister of Mines.

The Two New Parties

Of the two Parties spoken of so much at the present moment the Federal Party is so far as non-Europeans are concerned unimportant as thought at all both because of its declared policy which seeks to give only the shadow for the substance and because of the personality sponsoring it. The Liberal Party's policy is certainly luring. If the Party honestly adheres to the principles it professes to stand for it certainly deserves the fullest support. But whether such a Party can ever influence Parliament to such an extent as to eliminate the present Party in power is questionable. It is more likely to be a necessity as far as instance the former Independent Party. It can only carry weight if it can supersede the United Party and become more powerful than the Nationalist Party, which seems to be an impossibility in the present set up of things. Full democratic rights should always be the ultimate goal of all the non-Europeans and they should ardently work to attain that goal. They should however, not spurn any possibility of an honourable compromise which might eventually peacefully lead to their cherished goal. It is after all assured to them if they have the requisite strength to reach it. There can be no peaceful solution of the problem unless there is absolute sincerity and the spirit of tolerance on both sides.

Dr. Dadoo's Views

Dr. Y. M. Dadoo, former President of the South African Indian Congress, in a statement issued it was said to believe that "a half-baked and compromising" Party like the Liberal Party could turn the Nationalists from their avowed path. "The non-European people can no longer be deceived by any sheep's clothing in which the new Party may be clothed. Our demand is for the full and equal franchise without discrimination or qualification." The urgent and immediate task was for all progressive South Africans—White and non-White—to strive against anti-democratic and apartheid action by the Government, the statement said.

Apartheid Judgment

Mr. Justice Newton Thompson in the Supreme Court, Cape Town, last week, upheld the appeal of Welton Zibangu, an African, who was fined £15 (or, three months), for boarding a railway coach reserved for Europeans. Mr. Justice van Wierden concurred. Mr. J. de Vos appeared for the Crown, and Mr. G. Gordon Q.C., for Zibangu. Mr. Justice Newton Thompson said that the evidence at the trial was that the train consisted of two first-class coaches. One of these had a notice board saying "Europeans only" and the other had no notice. "Zibangu was one of a group of Africans who in protest against the policy of reserving certain coaches on each train for Europeans only, deliberately boarded the coach bearing the notice 'Europeans only,'" he said. "The appeal must succeed on the ground that the application of the general railway regulations mentioned in the charge sheet has resulted in partiality and inequality to a substantial degree and that it not authorised by the enabling Statute." The Judge said the facts of the present case were virtually identical with those in Rex v. Abdurahman, and the grounds of appeal were that the regulation which Zibangu was alleged to have contravened was ultra vires as it discriminated unfairly between Europeans and non-Europeans; also that the regulation was applied in an unfair manner. The Judge continued: "It is interesting to observe that though the Act was twice amended after the Appellate Division decision in Rex v. Abdurahman, Parliament did not on either occasion treat this question of partiality and inequality in the reservation of railway premises and trains."—(Sapa.)

LONG LIST OF BANS IMPOSED BY DR. DONGES

IN the long list of bans and prohibitions imposed by Dr. T. E. Donges during his five years as Minister of the Interior it is apparent that he does not want South African non-European sportsmen or stage artists to go on tour overseas; and he will not allow foreign non-European sportsmen or stage artists to tour the Union.

His refusal two weeks ago to allow a South African Indian soccer team to tour India was the latest application of this principle. Other examples are:

In April, Dr. Donges refused to allow Ram Gopal, a world famous Indian dancer, to tour the Union.

In July last year he refused to allow a Cape Town Coon Carnival troupe to leave the Union for a tour of Britain.

In February last year he refused to allow two Coloured boxers from Jamaica and British Guiana to enter the Union.

Dr. Donges has also been vigorous in other fields.

In April he banned the entry of two Negro bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church; in October last year he refused to issue passports to two European women trade unionists who wanted to attend a garment workers' conference in Europe; and in September last year he refused an entry permit to a journalist from the staff of the 'Times of India'.

Among books and publications

he banned during the year were 'Champion the Voice of Young Canada,' 'Serise Khama and the Bamagwato People,' two UN pamphlets discussing race prejudice, and 700 packs of playing cards.

Among publications temporarily held by the Customs by arrangement with Dr. Donges's department were 'Ring' (a boxing magazine), 'Men Only' and 'In South Africa,' by Francis Brett Young, a book commissioned by the Union Government.

The Ban-wagon

Commenting on the above 'The Cape Argus' writes:

In the past five years a formidable number of people in South Africa have been forced to climb on the ban-wagon of the Department of the Interior. The newest consigned travelers on this undesirable vehicle are members of the South African Indian soccer team, who have had to cancel their tour of India at the last minute.

Ram Gopal, an Indian folk-dancer, has been refused permission to come to South Africa on a purely cultural tour. Last year the Minister of the Interior declined to allow a troupe of Cape Coloured Coons to visit Great Britain. Two non-European boxers were not permitted to enter South Africa to fight non-European opponents at the time of the Van Riebeeck Festival.

Sometimes there must be valid reason for what seems to be arbitrary action. The department, however, has reserved the divine right of silence to itself. It would be illuminating to know exactly why the Minister of the Interior has declined to allow South African Indians to play soccer in India—despite the personal intervention of the Administrator of Natal, whom the Government themselves entrusted with a second term of office. One would imagine that the appearance of an Indian soccer team before Indian crowds might help to dispel the belief in India that their compatriots in the Union are a downtrodden minority living in ghettos.

In the same way Coloured Coons exercising their fascinating art before English audiences might persuade some of our overseas critics that non-Europeans are allowed a life of their own.

Quite apart from the fact that the Department of the Interior seriously interferes with the traditional freedom of individual movement, the department's ban-wagon gains the worst possible publicity for South Africa.

UNION'S THREE CHOICES

"WHAT seems to be the question facing South Africa today?" asked Mr. Alan Paton at a memorial meeting to Mr. J. D. Rhenallt Jones in Durban last week. "It is the issue of whether we are going to have two societies or whether we are to create one common society."

"If we are to have two societies before us, we must have two completely separate societies or we must have one dominant and one sub-dominant society or we must have one common society."

"The ideal of two separate societies," my reason rejects as impossible. The ideal of one dominant and one sub-dominant both my reason and conscience reject, because I cannot myself in the ideal of a common society, the same ideal to which the Janem, the J. H. Hofmeyr, the Bantus and the Boers all committed themselves.

To achieve the ideal of two separate societies requires an amount of time, an amount of money and an amount of land, and also, I believe, an amount of selflessness which we do not possess. But I have not yet met a thoughtful South African who thinks it can be definitely maintained.

"The new Liberal Party is so new that it has not yet had the time to become besmirched with political experience. Therefore I feel entitled to say something about it, especially because I feel Rhenallt Jones would have joined it, or alternatively, would have had reasons for holding aloof from it (which I advance as a mere supposition, not as a probability), but he would have said in his heart about the new Party: 'These are things in which I believe.'"

"This new Party will not, I trust, waste its time and its energy in attacking Dr. Malan, Mr. Buren and the new Federal Party. It has an ideal to set before South Africa. It may not have any well-thought-out programme as yet, but it will come."

"It can only be done politically and practically by the widening of the present society, by the extension of the franchise to people who can enter that society fully understanding that society, its ideals and aims. I am not the kind of man to despise the liberal African, the humble Indian labourer on his small plot of land, or the depressed Coloured people (but I say there would be no political power to electing that any of these should enter the present society without qualifying himself to do so).

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

SOUTH AFRICAN INDIANS—(3)

WHAT IS THIS "BROWN MENACE"?

By C. W. M. GELL

These articles have been taken not from 'The Forum' as is advertently stated in the previous issues but from 'The Evening Post' (Port Elizabeth.)

FIVE years ago the late J. H. Hofmeyr exactly summarised the three phases of our Indian policy: "(1) The self-interest of the European brought the Indian to South Africa; (2) self-interest has sought to get rid of him from the country; (3) self-interest, in so far as this cannot be achieved, is determined to keep him in what is regarded as his place."

Having dealt with phases (1) and (2) in my previous articles, I am here concerned with (3).

Lack of space prevents a detailed examination of the economic condition of our Indians. Briefly, it is a picture of great contrasts—small, fairly well-to-do commercial communities in the Transvaal and the Cape, and some pockets of appalling poverty; a very wealthy minority of financiers and industrialists in Natal and a vast, impoverished, undernourished, under-employed majority living in unspeakable slums.

For many years the wealthier Indian traders in the Transvaal and Natal have been hedged about by increasing restrictions on the rights to residence and trade. Today the Group Areas Act threatens to deprive them of their whole livelihood by isolating them from the main shopping centres.

As Mr. Hofmeyr very rightly said in 1932, "At the back of the segregation agitation, trade rivalry is a very important factor."

It is true that the Group Areas Act theoretically applies indiscriminately to all race groups. But since it is applied by one group only without reasonable opportunities of appeal to the courts, the result is—and is intended to be—discrimination against non-Europeans. This will fall hardest upon the most advanced of the non-Europeans of whom a large proportion are Indians.

Take, for instance, the original Lydenburg scheme to dispossess the town's 146 Indians, move them two miles out of town to a site on a hillside adjoining the sewage farm and reduce their trading licences from seven to one. Other Transvaal towns had prepared similar schemes. These are now being somewhat modified, but the principle remains

And the latest Durban zoning coverages moving half the city's Indian, Native and Coloured populations—a total of some 150,000 people—in exchange for one fortieth of the European population (about 3,000 people) £9 million of Indian-owned property will have to be sold and only £800,000 of European-owned property. This is discrimination.

If the commercial minority is so persecuted and the majority live in squalor, why do our Indians not want to return to India?

First, only perhaps five per cent. were born there and possibly another five per cent. have ever been there. To prefer the devil you know is a very common human characteristic.

Secondly, despite conditions in Natal which are an abiding disgrace to our civilisation, the Indian community is still a little better off here than the all India average.

Comparative figures for 1947-8 show the average annual income per head of the Natal Indians outside Durban to be about £38 (Europeans £156, and probably £250 if the industrial and commercial areas were included). For the Durban Indian labourers, who comprise half the total of Natal Indians, the figure was about £21. The all India average was then about £14.

Since the great majority of the inhabitants of India are peasant cultivators producing much of their own food and sometimes clothing too, the gap is not as big as the figures suggest. But there remains a small margin in favour of our Indians here. The hope of economic improvement is, of course, the mainspring of all emigration.

Most of our Indians come from the poorer parts of India and have a fitted proportionately less than the various European immigrant communities in this country. Nevertheless, they have benefitted somewhat. And they are unwilling to risk slipping back that little by starting afresh in a country they do not know.

But if they have benefitted, why are they so dissatisfied with their treatment in this country? Undoubtedly the first answer to this is that they are a sensitive people coming from a cultural and civilised heritage far older than our own. Our refusal to treat them on their merits as persons—some of them educated and cultured people, others poor labourers, but all persons with a proven capacity for self-improvement—goes to the root of their pride.

Racial self-respect is not confined to Europeans. Hence the Indians' very natural dislike of the word "coolie." Not many Europeans like to be reminded of menial origins!

Secondly, the Indians used to have more rights here than they have today. They had the parliamentary franchise in Natal until 1896 and the municipal franchise until 1924. They still have the threatened Coloured franchise in the Cape.

Commercial and residential restrictions have grown much more severe in the last 20 or 30 years and the Group Areas Act is likely to damage Indian interests far more than those of any other race group. Thirdly, there is the insecurity of being treated permanently as "an alien element in the population."

If, in these circumstances, our Indians have sometimes seemed to be too selfishly mercenary, have been disinclined to plough back their profits into this country, have appealed for outside help since they have no effective voice in municipal or political life, and are now helping a campaign for more rights and opportunities for all coloured peoples, can we, who brought them here and have created the restrictive conditions under which they live, find it in our consciences to blame them? Would we in their place do otherwise?

For what actually is this "Brown menace" which moves us to such ungenerous policies? Certainly they are fertile people who breed too fast. But not as fast as the last census figures suggested. These showed a 23 per cent. increase in our Indian population since 1946. But some 30,000 Indians were somehow undercounted in 1946 and the real rate of increase was about the same as the Coloureds' 18 per cent.

Even so, the Indians only form 2.9 per cent. of the total population and about one-seventh of the White population. Of course, the situation is locally aggravated by restricting their inter-provincial movement. Thus Europeans constitute the following percentages of the Provincial totals:

Europeans: Natal 11.4, Transvaal 25.0, Cape 21.0, O.F.S. 22.7, 20.8.

Indians: Natal 12.5, Transvaal 0.9, Cape 0.4, O.F.S. 0. Total 2.9.

Let those who talk about a "Brown flood" sweeping through the country if the inter-provincial restrictions were removed, honestly ponder these figures.

Can three per cent. really "flood" 97 per cent. or even the 81 per cent. White population? Is it not really more dangerous to keep up over 80 per cent. of our Indians in our smallest province and limit them to unskilled work in a country desperately short of skilled artisans?

In such conditions the majority will continue to live in the poverty, disease and homelessness which ensure the maximum rate of reproduction and constitute a menace to the health and political tranquility of the rest of the country.

If we had a little courage and common sense, our Indian community could today make nearly as great a contribution to the country's economic prosperity as their fathers and grandfathers did in the second half of the last century in Natal and, in the process, would convert themselves into useful, productive citizens.

Further, the commercial competition of the Indians is a much overrated bogey.

In 1948-9 Indians held 7,700 General Dealers Licences and 2,813 Fresh Produce Dealers Licences. Europeans held 58,574 of the former and 10,444 of the latter. That is to say, Europeans and Indians held these licences in almost exactly their population ratios of 7 to 1. By no stretch of the imagination do these figures represent a serious threat to White business.

Indians, however, usually work harder, more resourcefully and with smaller margins of profit than many European traders are willing to do. In an age of ever rising prices such thrifty retailers are an asset to our economy, unless they transgress fair trading legislation which should take care of racketeers.

Some say that Indians exploit gullible Africans and it may be true in some cases. But, on the other hand, they commonly treat Africans with a courtesy and patience not often shown to them in European shops, and the usual oriental method of bargaining over the price leaves both parties satisfied that they have outwitted the other.

In a country with an already complicated racial pattern, the introduction of the further Indian complication was probably a mistake.

But now that it has happened and is irreversible, it would be sensible to adopt such a policy as drew out the best qualities of the Indians in the service of the whole country, rather than throwing them back on a rather too pronounced mercantilism or condemning them to a sordid struggle with poverty, hunger, disease and homelessness. Such conditions do not breed loyal citizens.

The solution of our Indian problem requires, first, that we accept their permanence here, and, secondly, that we develop their potential abilities as skilled and semi-skilled artisans and technicians, of which we are so short.

Granted the will, it is perfectly possible to create these expanding opportunities for all non-Europeans, while safeguarding the skilled salary scales by law and trade union action on the principle of equal pay for equal work.

South Africa could be such a very much larger country than our race thinking will permit.

CONGRESS PROTESTS AGAINST SITING OF BUS RANK IN SCHOOL AREA

THE following Press statement was issued by the Natal Indian Congress:

The Natal Indian Congress once again expressed its strongest protest against the decision of the City Council to use the Centenary and Winterton Walk sites as bus ranks for non-European buses under its decentralisation plans. The Congress has consistently demanded that the Testing Grounds adjoining Warwick Avenue should be utilized to extend the present Victoria Street bus terminus and that the Council should make proper provisions for bus shelters, parking bays, crush barriers, and other facilities at this traffic centre, and that as a temporary measure to ease the congestion at the Victoria Street bus rank, it should decentralise the present non-European bus rank.

However, even as a temporary or trial measure the siting of the decentralised bus terminus at Centenary Road—Carlisle Street, and Winterton Walk are most undesirable, and dangerous. Both proposed termini are in the midst of an area traversed by thousands of school children who use the Centenary Road, Winterton Walk and Carlisle and Lorne Streets as thoroughfares to and from schools. Besides six Indian schools, including Saxel College which is in addition used by hundreds of students attending the M. L. Sulian Technical Classes and the Natal University Non-European Section, the area houses the St. Aidan Hospital, the Fire Station, an African primary school in Carlisle Street and the African Women's Hostel. The use of this area as a bus terminus, especially at peak periods can be disastrous and dangerous to life in addition to causing serious inconvenience to the hospital and educational institutions.

We are of the opinion that it would not be difficult at all to find other sites just as suitable for a temporary plan of decentralisation pending the erection of a proper traffic centre at the Testing Ground site. So far not a single ground has been advanced by the Council against the use of the Testing Ground as a Traffic Centre.

Our Congress a little while back held a representative conference by 24 organizations including the Trades and Labour Council which supported the demand to utilize the Testing Ground for a non-European traffic centre and this demand was backed up by a petition of over 25,000 bus users which was presented by officials of the African and Indian Congresses to the Mayor of Durban in October last year.

We have again requested the Mayor not to finalise the decentralisation plans before hearing the views of the African and Indian Congresses who represent the vast majority of the non-Europeans in Durban. We wish to point out at this stage that the protests against the use of the school area as bus termini are so great and widespread and made by so many interested organisations including the National Council of Women and The Safety First Association, that the Council should reconsider its decision.

We appeal to the Mayor to convene a special meeting of the Council to hear the view point of all interested organisations and then decide on the subject which is causing so much concern among parents and the public at large, and which decision was only supported by ten Councillors at the last Council meeting—a minority even of the Durban City Council.

The Natal Indian Congress has addressed an urgent letter to the Mayor and all City Councillors putting forward these proposals and urging them to convene an urgent meeting of the Council to reverse their previous decision.

Citizens Petition Mayor For Public Meeting

Professor Leo Kuper and 40 other European voters of Durban including many lecturers at the University of Natal have requisitioned the Mayor of Durban to call a public meeting at the City Hall on Sunday 24th May to discuss the siting of non-European bus terminals under the City Council decentralisation plans.

The petition states: "We, the undersigned citizens and voters of the City of Durban hereby urgently request and petition Your Worship, to convene and preside at a meeting of the citizens of Durban to be held at the City Hall on Sunday the 24th May, 1953, at 2.30 p.m. for the purpose of considering and adopting with or without amendments, the following resolution—

"That this meeting of the citizens of Durban is fully aware of the chaotic conditions at the Victoria Street non-European bus rank and firmly believes that immediate steps must be taken to remedy this dangerous situation.

"This meeting, whilst appreciating the efforts of the City Council to tackle this problem, is seriously perturbed at the decision of the Council to use the areas around Winterton Walk, Centenary Road and Carlisle Streets, which are traversed by thousands of school children daily, for bus termini under its decentralisation plans.

"This meeting is seriously concerned with the danger to life that is inherent in the proposed plans and therefore resolves—

(1) To request the City Council to reverse its decision to sit non-European bus termini for North bound and West bound buses, in the school area around Centenary Road;

(2) To recommend that the present Testing Grounds in Warwick Avenue be used for the extension of the present Victoria Street non-European bus rank; and that proper provision be made there for adequate bus shelters, parking bays, crush barriers, lanes and other facilities."

The Petition was delivered to the Mayor.

PROHIBITION ORDERS SERVED ON DR. NAICKER

DR. G. M. NAICKER, Acting President of the South African Indian Congress and President of the Natal Indian Congress was served with two notices signed by the Minister of Justice, Mr. C. R. Swart, prohibiting him from attending any public gathering within the Union of South Africa and from being in certain magisterial districts of South Africa.

Both these notices of prohibition were issued in terms of the Riotous Assemblies Act and the Criminal Law Amendment Act.

The notices read as follows:

No. 1. "Whereas I, Charles Robberts Swart, Minister of Justice for the Union of South Africa, am satisfied that you are promoting feelings of hostility in the Union of South Africa between the European inhabitants of the Union on the one hand and the non-European section of the inhabitants of the Union on the other hand, and now, therefore, under and by virtue of the powers vested in me by sub-section (12) of section 206 of the Riotous Assemblies and Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1914 (Act No. 27 of 1914), as amended, I prohibit you for a period of twelve months from being in any of the magisterial districts of Pietermaritzburg, Newcastle, Dundee, Johannesburg, Pretoria, Port Elizabeth, East London and the Cape.

"The period of twelve months shall take effect after the lapse of seven days from the date upon which this notice is delivered or tendered to you.

"Given under my hand at Pretoria this 5th day of May, 1953."

No. 2. "Whereas I, Charles Robberts Swart, Minister of Justice for the Union of South Africa, am of opinion that there is reason to apprehend that feelings of hostility would be engendered between the European inhabitants of the Union on the one hand and the non-European section of the inhabitants of the Union on the other hand if you were to attend any public gathering in any place to which the public have access within the Union of South Africa.

"Now, therefore, under and by virtue of the powers vested in me by sub-section (12) of section 206 of the Riotous Assemblies and Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1914 (Act No. 27 of 1914), as amended, I do hereby prohibit you from attending any public gathering in any place to which the public have access within the Union of South Africa during a period of twelve months with effect from the date that this notice is delivered or tendered to you."

Two more values I must mention: neighbourliness and the influence of nature. Few things are more painful and tragic than the spiritual isolation and starvation which obtains in vast populations where there are no organic or functional ties and values.

Another value of the small agro-industrial community is close contact with nature, for nature is man's finest teacher and a potent means of maintaining his spiritual balance. Nature stimulates the habit of observation, of thought and meditation, and these tend to produce stability of character.

Civilisations collapse when they become rich and powerful not when they are small, diligent and hard-working. It was when Rome became a powerful empire that her civilisation began to decay, and ultimately perished.

The hope of mankind lies in the creative society of the small community, not in the mechanistic society of the great state, and from now on all man's genius must be directed to building it, here and everywhere.

BRITAIN'S COLOUR BAR IN AFRICA

By JULIUS LEWIN

IN British Central Africa and in British East Africa today men and women who form more than 99 per cent. of the inhabitants, are denied three things because the colour of their skin is not white but black or brown. They are denied equal opportunity, they are denied effective political rights, and they are denied proper social status.

Here is the first illustration of how this happens.

1. The Colour Bar In The Copper Belt

Some of the richest copper mines in the world are in Northern Rhodesia. All the highly paid skilled work on the mines is reserved for white immigrants. No native African, however capable he may be in fact, is allowed to do skilled work. Most Africans do only rough unskilled work and receive less than one-twentieth of the wage that the skilled white men earn. For many years the facts of the colour bar in the copper belt were hidden from the public eye in Britain. In recent years, however, the attention of the British Government has on several occasions been directed to this injustice. The African workers themselves caused disturbances in 1935 and in 1940, mainly because of discontent with this situation. Now that they have organised their own trade unions—the white men have long had a strong union—more trouble can be expected to arise. The British Government has done nothing to alter this dangerous situation.

Now it could be altered without hardship to the present white miners has been described by a commission presided over by a British trade unionist which inquired fully into the problem. Its report is of value because it shows how an industrial colour bar could be gradually relaxed without detriment to white labour already in the industry.

The commission found that any further progress by the Africans must be in the direction of replacing the white men. It describes various categories of skilled and semi-skilled work that should be transferred to the Africans as soon as possible. Quite rightly, it asks that no white man at present doing such work should be discharged in order to make room for an African. But as vacancies occur in the future, it proposes that they should be filled by Africans and not by Europeans. The commission did not add another necessary proposal. It should be made a condition of the entry into the colony of future white miners that they be replaceable by Africans at any time after due notice. It should also be made perfectly clear that the object of replacing imported white miners with indigenous black miners is not to provide the mine-owners with cheaper labour. To guard against this danger, it might be necessary to accept the principle of "equal pay for equal work" and to consider its practical implications. Where, for instance, an African did the same work as the European he replaced, he would be entitled to claim the same pay as the European had received. The mine-owners might be induced to accept this principle because they know that the white miners recruited from Southern Rhodesia and South Africa are not really an efficient or stable labour force. At the same time the Government must take steps to provide technical education which would qualify Africans to replace Europeans steadily in future years. There is ample evidence that Africans would quickly qualify. Indeed, much of the desire to maintain the present colour bar springs from the very rapidity with which untutored Africans have in practice and without formal training learned to do semi-skilled work. The Africans are coming to regard the present situation as intolerable. And no wonder! Is there any other country in the world where the Government allows employers to employ skilled white men while itself doing nothing to train the indigenous people to do skilled work?

In South Africa there has long been a rigid colour bar on the gold mines of the Rand. As a South African, I have protested against this law and tried to get it relaxed.

South African policy is often severely criticised in the British Press and my country's name has become notorious for its bad racial policies.

But the colour bar in the British copper mines is much the same in its effects as the colour bar on the South African gold mines. The main difference is that it is not so well entrenched and could more easily be relaxed without disturbing the whole economy of the colony.

When the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. George Hall, was asked in the House of Commons on March 18, 1941, whether the British Government "would throw the whole of its weight against the practice of the colour bar in the copper belt," he replied:—

"I think it necessary to make it quite clear that the Colonial Office and the Government do not stand for the colour bar either in this country or in any of the colonies."

Yet the colour bar remains in the copper belt under British rule.

"Tell me, Doctor—

If they all kill germs, how can one antiseptic be safer than another?"

Some antiseptics lose most of their potency in the presence of blood. Some, though very powerful, require very careful diluting to be safe on human tissues. The safe antiseptic for untrained use has high germicidal efficiency even in the presence of blood. It is non-poisonous, does not stain, it is gentle on tissues. These are some of the reasons why

GROUP AREAS PLAN FOR JOHANNESBURG

ALTHOUGH the extended time limit for presenting the Government with Johannesburg's group areas plan expires at the end of this month, so many differences of opinion exist even amongst city councillors, states 'The Star,' that when the scheme is placed before the City Council on May 26 it is likely to have a stormy passage.

The biggest problem is the allocation of suitable areas to Asiatics. The original intention to set aside Pageview (largely the old Malay Location) as one of the localities for Asiatic occupation hangs in the balance.

Objections have been raised by a number of European interests, and the Non-European Affairs Committee has been asked to meet a deputation this week.

Some Europeans consider that there ought to be an extensive buffer zone between Pageview and adjacent European-occupied localities, notably part of Mayfair. Other European interests consider that the whole of Pageview ought to be cleared of non-European occupation.

Even if the City Council finally agrees on a plan it is possible that it may not receive the approval of the Government. The plan still tentative at present, has first to meet with approval from the Non-European Affairs Committee, then the General Purposes Committee and after that it comes before the City Council.

It then goes to the special committee set up under the Minister of the Interior, then to the Minister of Native Affairs and from him to the Land Tenure Advisory Board for investigation and report before the scheme is finally promulgated.

The right of ownership of property by Indians in the old Malay Location dates back to the early days of Johannesburg, and in the event of Pageview being designated for Asiatic occupation the City Council would feel itself committed to pressing for the grant of freehold tenure to Asiatics and Malays.

But for the past couple of years the Government have refused to grant permission to Asiatics to acquire ownership in this locality. In some quarters this is considered an indication that the Government have plans about the future of this township.

It is estimated that there are today 18,000 Indians in Johannesburg, and if the original plans of the city authorities to demarcate this as Asiatic locality have to be set aside the problem arises where the Asiatics are to be accommodated. Hundreds of Indian families are already under notice to vacate premises they now occupy in other localities and do not know where to go.

A private township for Asiatics has been established on land immedately east of Lear railway station. It is outside the city limits but it would be inadequate to cater for any mass removal of Indians from, say, Pageview.

Details of the tentative scheme considered by the Non-European Affairs Committee were published in the 'Star'

MR. NEHRU OUTLINES INDIA'S FOREIGN POLICY

IN response to a Communist request in the Lower House of Parliament in New Delhi last Friday, that he should outline his foreign policy before he left for London to attend the Coronation, Prime Minister Mr. Nehru made a major foreign policy statement.

Listening in the galleries were the sea of members of nearly every Diplomatic Mission in New Delhi. They included Sir Alexander Clutterbuck, the British High Commissioner, and Mr. George Allen, the new American Ambassador.

Mr. Nehru welcomed Sir Watson's proposal for a conference of the leaders of the world powers at an early date, and added: "I would earnestly commend this suggestion."

He said he noted President Eisenhower was not opposed to such a conference, but had said the time for it was not ripe.

Mr. Nehru said he felt a solution of the Korean problem was more likely to be found on the basis of the United Nations resolution and the Chinese eight-point proposals, than on the latest United Nations counter-proposals which, he said, diverged considerably from the United Nations resolution.

Mr. Nehru said India had been mentioned in some of the Korean proposals for undertaking various responsibilities.

"We are reluctant to assume any distant responsibilities," he said, "but if agreement is arrived at between the parties concerned and the task suggested for us is within our competence, recently in terms of that scheme the following displacements of population from the areas they now occupy would become necessary:

From Newtown: 309 Europeans, 55 Coloured people and Asiatics, 971 Natives.

From Fordham-Burgersdorp: 195 Europeans, 880 Coloured people and Asiatics and 228 Natives.

From Fettesdorp (intended for Chinese occupation): 97 Europeans, 513 Coloured people and Asiatics and 366 Natives.

From Pageview (which is undecided at present): 77 Europeans, 3,331 Coloured people and 2,885 Natives.

The proposals in relation to the future of Burgersdorp, although incorporated in the figures mentioned, are also uncertain at this stage.

and not opposed to any policy that we pursue, we do not wish to escape that responsibility.

Mr. Nehru said the cold war had somewhat toned down

He was cheered when he said there had been a marked improvement in the relations between India and Pakistan. He said he would do everything he could to dispel the clouds which had darkened the horizon of the two countries.

Turning to Africa, he said he hoped the violence there would cease. The whole continent of Africa was in a process of dynamic change and mutation and racial policy in South and other parts of Africa had come into conflict with the rising nationalism and consciousness of the African nations.

"Unfortunately, there has been a great deal of violence on all sides, and repression which has brought misery to vast numbers of people.

"No solution of the African problem can be based on racial discrimination or on suppression of the African people, who have suffered so terribly for centuries past and who must command our sympathy.

"I earnestly hope that the methods of violence will cease there, for this can only bring misery to all concerned."

Mr. Nehru said it was a misfortune that India's relations with Pakistan had been strained during the past five or six years. During recent weeks there had been a marked improvement in these relations, with many friendly gestures from Pakistan which India is reciprocated.

Mr. Nehru made his statement just before the House of the People adjourned at the end of the Budget session. He later repeated the same statement in the Council of States (Upper House) and was again loudly cheered.

At the end of his statement in the Council of States, the Deputy Leader of the Communist Party, Mr. Rupesh Gupta, expressed "general appreciation" of the speech.

"We hope the Prime Minister will give full and courageous expression to the deepest urges of the Indian people for the establishment of world peace now that new possibilities have opened," he said.—Kapa Reuter.

TROUBLED WATERS

By JOHN O'HIND

This book deals with that period of Indian history when three empires were at a clash with each other on the Indian Peninsula. The Mughal Empire was breaking up; the Maratha Kingdom was declining; and the British were establishing themselves. The story is full of suspense, keeping the reader engrossed in the acts of heroism and valour, naval bombardment and piracy on the high seas, as capades, a chase with blood hounds, and romance. BANARAS BROCADES

By C. V. VISWANATH

TWO almost entirely unrelated ideas occur in every Indian when the name of Banaras is mentioned—the holiness of the place and the beautiful brocades that have borne the stamp of speciality through the ages. These two attributes of the holy city have not faded with the passage of time.

As in the past, so at present also, there could hardly be a better choice of a fitting present for important occasions than a Banaras brocade—the latest instance was the presentation of such brocades by the President of the Indian Union to the Maharaja of the Himalayan domain of Bhutan at the latter's installation as Ruler.

The sight of a silk sari with designs woven with gold thread raises visions of a onslaught of historic pageantry beginning with the epics. The fame of the Banaras silk and brocades has spread not only to the four corners of India through the increasing stream of pilgrims through countless centuries, but also to distant lands, as much as that they formed an important item of merchandise even in days when men crossed the seven seas in wind-jammers. The New World also took a great fancy to them and there has been a sizeable export trade in the Banaras silk and brocades. Small wonder, because their bright hues as well as intricate and attractive designs are such as to focus feminine fancy to whatever climate or civilization. The Banaras weaver's skill was and still is unsurpassed in creating these works of art.

Before World War II, the annual output of the Banaras product was valued at 100 million rupees. About 100,000 weavers and about 10,000 tradesmen are devoted solely to the Banaras silk and brocade industry which employs about 30,000 looms, most of which are throw-shuttles. Although mainly concentrated in the holy city itself, the industry is spread to some of the neighbouring districts also, but all the products are brought to Banaras and sold to the merchants there. The silk weavers of Banaras manufacture "khipchaks," saris, shawl brocades, saris, "dopattis," "plumbers," and "harders," "chaddars" and "rooks" silk.

Investigations conducted recently by the Uttar Pradesh State into the present state of this large-scale cottage industry showed that the annual consumption of silk yarn would be about 380,000 lbs., worth about 10 million rupees. The gold thread used, would come to another 10 million rupees worth.

Raw Materials

The chief raw materials used are silk and organzine, gold and silver thread, art silk, cotton twice and dyed. Mysore, Banars, Marhishabad and Jammu and Kashmir, within the country, and Japan, China and Italy, among foreign countries, are the chief sources of supply of silk yarn. Suppliers from abroad were absent during the last war, and the industry had to turn more to internal supplies, which, however, were not so considered sufficient to meet the demand. Although about 800,000 mulberries are reared in the silk industry in Mysore and the quality of the yarn turned out there is good, 60 to 70 per cent of the yarn production is used up in the fast developing silk weaving industry in that state itself. The yarn made at Marhishabad is available for Banaras silk. The silk produced in Jammu and Kashmir State is considered good, but there also the silkworm and developing weaving industry takes up most of the yarn produced.

Weavers in Banaras obtain their yarn requirements through dealers who supply the material on cash terms. Credit is also allowed, but at higher rates, and there are no co-operatives in the line.

Till the first world war, gold and silver thread used to be imported from France, but that industry has since been started in Bombay State, too, however, concentrated Banaras in the gold and silver thread industry and monopolised the trade in Madras and Banaras.

The abnormal rise in the price of gold has resulted in restricting the output of pure gold thread. Sulphur coloured thread is being used sometimes as a substitute. Imitation or brass thread is, however, not used for Banaras textiles.

The dyes used are direct and basic because of their brightness and also because they help to maintain the colours' shades of raw silk. Again, expensive, dyes are not much produced, but each made in different colours. Since it would be quite expensive to make a separate warp for each and different places on the same warp are brush painted in various colours.

Manufacturing Organisation

The Manufacturing organisation of the silk and brocade industry consists of independent weavers, manufacturers—merchants and brokers. The independent weaver works in his own home with the help of members of his family and purchases his own requirements of yarn, lace and dyes. He sells the product either direct to a merchant or through a broker. About 75 per cent of those engaged in the industry belong to the silk class.

The weavers have not taken kindly to co-operatives in the past, because of the complicated marketing system built up by the middle-men, but the idea is catching up.

While the value of the annual consumption of Banaras silk and brocades within the country is placed around 40 million rupees at present, the export trade in these articles is estimated at five million rupees. The exports are mainly to Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, Malaya, Singapore, Egypt and Fiji, while Austria and other countries are not to U.K. and U.S.A. Foreign tourists visiting India also make large purchases, with the growing popularity of the silk in many countries of Europe and America.

So far as the international market is concerned, it is recognised that Banaras silk and brocades have been luxury articles. They have been used for decorative purposes and tapestry in princely palaces and mansions, special umbrellas used in temples and as royal symbols and costly dresses for idols in places of worship. They also form part of family heirlooms as well as wardrobes in central use. No dancing troupes or dramatic company's collection of costumes is complete without them. Nor a well-to-do bride's trousseau. — India Information Service.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

YOUTH IN OUR STRUGGLE

By JORDAN K. NGUSANE

A FEW weeks ago I received a short letter from an Indian young man in which he asked me to write an article outlining what I consider Youth's function in the present struggle.

The greatest need of the moment is tolerance. The greatest contribution the younger generation can make to battle the advent of the day when we shall all be free is to cultivate an outlook on life which finds joy in the variety of Man's cultures, attitudes, races, languages and political loyalties. To a balanced man this variety makes life the rich and precious experience that it is.

We have to learn that the white young man is not an enemy just because he happens to have been born with a white skin. We have to realise that he has as much right to live and prosper as anybody else. And, which is much more difficult, we have to be ready at the same time to make allowances for the circumstances of history which have made him imagine that the world belongs to him and his ancestors. Unless we are prepared to put ourselves in his position and from there start on the path of the truth as we see it, we are not likely to solve the racial question.

This applies to Africans and Indian Youth in its attitude to the white people. There is quite a lot of this tolerance needed as between the Indian and the African.

On the African side, Youth has to know two things about the Indian—first, his very rich store of culture and, secondly, the fact that he is a minority group. It is ever so easy for the African to dismiss the Indian contemptuously as a pusillanimous double-dealer. Men are not stereotypes. The human personality is a marvel of creation, it grows continuously and in this process gathers new experiences and reveals new beauties which lie hidden within it. Judged by this standard, that is, the flowering of the human personality India's performance is such that she is nobody's inferior—and has been that for thousands of years.

We who have the civilised man's regard for the human personality will tremble with awe when faced to face with what India has done, during the last four or five thousand years, for human refinement.

We will treat with respect and admiration a people which has done so much to conquer the primeval environment of the jungle. The balanced man does not lose anything by acknowledging freely the virtues and attainments of the other man.

It is perhaps very difficult for the African to appreciate India's contribution to human culture because the Indian who has made his home in South Africa is as poor an ambassador of India as the Malagasy are poor representatives of Western civilisation. The local Indian has been cut off from the great movements in India which made the country discover its real place among the nations of the world for so long that he has lost contact with the true spirit of India. Where India is the champion of human freedom everywhere, the local Indian very often appears handicapped by attitudes acquired in a colonialist environment.

African Youth has to discern between India and people of Indian descent in this country and, in doing that, remember always that the Indians here are a minority group. Minority groups everywhere are a frustrated people, except where they are free to lead their own lives within larger communities. If the Indian has been rather slow in accommodating himself to the accomplished fact of African nationhood, it is simply because he has grown amidst circumstances where the whiteman laid down the law and nobody said: "No." It is only within the last ten to fifteen years that we as a race have organised ourselves in a way to look the whiteman in the face. It is only in that period that we have shown our own strength. If the Indian takes his time in accommodating himself to this change, we must remember that he might feel he has no real guarantee that we shall treat him better than the whiteman.

We come to Indian Youth. The younger generation in this community can have its own relations with the African on happier foundations by acknowledging freely the fact that the African is as good as or had a human being as any Indian. With the Indian's better economic position, it is so easy to look down on the African; to dream nostalgically of India's great culture, which is hardly understood by the local Indian. But the Indian who comes with these airs to the African is a fool. He only brings nearer the day of his ruin. You do not make friends with your neighbour by despising him—in your house, in your cinema, in your stores or anywhere else. In fact, to use the language of commerce, to do that is bad business. I like Pandit Nehru's advice to the local Indian—that he should regard himself as the guest of the African. A guest you welcome in your house is one who treats you with respect and appreciates your hospitality. If the Indian can convince us that he is such a guest his future here is as secure as it can be.

Youth, in particular, can bring about this state of affairs, largely through the schools. And one notes with joy the attitude of Indian pupils—at least in urban schools—is noticeably different from what it was only ten years ago. That is a beginning in the right direction and let us see Youth encouraging this healthy development. On both the African and Indian sides we must build up an attitude of mutual respect and friendship in our schools. If the children are told the good things about the other side, they will not grow up in fear and hatred. In this task the Indian teacher can be very greatly helped by Indian Youth. It has been done on the African side.

We next come to political goals. Here, I think Youth is called upon to lay its services eternally at the disposal of the African and Indian Congresses—depending on the race of each individual young man or woman. Non-European young men, in particular the Indian, are not pulling their weight in their national organisations. I want to see alert young men and women with a keen political sense and who know what they want from A to Z. We have young men and women who will make it their life's purpose to sacrifice their lives to assert the dignity of the man of colour in this country. Of what value is your money or name if you can be kicked on the pants by a whiteman just because you happen to have a dark skin? Youth must have within a burning determination to give its life itself, if need be, to bring the day nearer when these things shall never again happen in this country.

Young men and women need to have the courage of their convictions and must not be afraid to think independently. To do this makes one very unpopular sometimes. But the greatest joy in life is to be able to speak your mind freely, no matter who says what. Non-White Youth needs to learn to do that.

But politics is not life. It is only one department in the great intercourse between human beings which we call life. I think our goal at all times should be to make the Indian and the African share as much of a common life as possible. I do not want the Indian to abandon his own religious and cultural background; nor do I want the African proselytised. I do want to see each treating the other as a human being. I want to see friendship claims set up to make it possible for increasing numbers of African young people to cultivate friendship with Indian Youth.

I look forward to the day when we shall all be South Africans; when it will no longer be necessary for us to know ourselves as Africans, Indians, Coloureds, Englishmen, Jews or Afrikaners,—when we shall have forgotten race and shall know only that we are South Africans. The road to that goal is hard and fraught with heartbreaking disappointments. But the goal is so noble that it is worth every sacrifice that young men or women of all races can make. This, it seems to me, is the real function of the Youth in South Africa to-day.

The Challenge Facing White South Africa

CIVILIZATIONS come to birth and proceed to grow by successfully responding to successive challenges, and the White people of South Africa are facing such a challenge at the present time, confronted by a racial situation probably unique in human history," Prof. J. H. Wellington, of the University of the Witwatersrand, said at Founders' Day at the Wiberforce Institute, Johannesburg, last week.

Professor Wellington said that nobody could say what course evolution would take in the Continent of Africa. If, however, civilization failed to meet a challenge with which it was confronted, it would break down and go to pieces.

"There are some who feel that the great civilization of Western Europe must be maintained at all costs, even perhaps at the cost of trying to hold in check the progress of the African.

"One might as well try to stop the progress of a mighty railroad train by throwing one's body across the track as to try to stop the growth of the world in the direction of giving mankind more intelligence, more skill, more liberty, and in the direction of extending more sympathy and more brotherly kindness.

"When we try to stop the progress of any individual or any human group we are fighting against the sun, the moon, the stars and the whole creation but when we seek in active goodwill to further the progress, even of those we perhaps have some reason to fear, we work with the Creator Himself."

As a member of the European racial group, he realized that a great responsibility rested upon the White people of South Africa.

"At the moment in a dominant position, we are all too liable to be filled with pride in our achievements, forgetting that in the course of evolution the great, massive creatures of by-gone times who seemed to tower above their more lowly fellow reptiles were passed by in the scheme of creation."

One of the great obstacles to racial understanding and harmony in South Africa was the lack of knowledge of each other as human beings.

"To know one another as human beings with feelings, aspirations, hopes, fears, sins and all the other concomitants of human nature, requires something more than casual contact," he said.

He who has truth at his heart need never fear the want of persuasion on his tongue

—John Ruskin.

Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men the defenses of peace must be constructed.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 29TH MAY, 1953

Long Live The Queen

JUNE 2 will be a great day for Great Britain and the Commonwealth. There will be unprecedented jubilation in honour of the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth. As Indians we feel proud of fact that India for the first time in her two hundred years' history will participate in the celebrations not as British Empire's hand-maid but as a free and independent nation. As part of India Indians throughout South Africa and the world will pay homage to the Queen and pray that the merciful God may shower His blessing upon her that she may live long and that her reign may bring real peace and happiness to Britain and to the world for which humanity has been yearning for nearly half a century. The prayer of every Indian man, woman and child will go out to her gracious Majesty.

As we have already stated in a previous issue we Indians in South Africa stand in a peculiarly unhappy position of not being able to express our joy outwardly as we would have liked to as we are denied the right and privilege to do so consistently with our national honour and self-respect. Many will participate in the celebrations not with an inner feeling of joy and happiness as they would have liked to. For in this country all non-Europeans are treated under the State laws as semi-human beings. They may not enjoy the rights and privileges that the Europeans can enjoy. They may do just what the privileged Europeans bid them do. Those whom they look upon as their respected leaders and guides are treated as prisoners. A ban has been placed on their freedom of speech and movement for the only crime of not being Europeans. They are therefore rather in mourning than anything else. Their soul is deeply wounded owing to this wanton assault on it. They cannot in the circumstances be expected to be jubilant much as they should like to be. It does not therefore however mean that they are lacking in their loyalty and affection for the Queen. If they cannot express it outwardly Her majesty can be assured of it existing in their innermost hearts.

Courtesy Week

THIS is supposed to be Courtesy Week. Courtesy has become such a rare commodity that we can think of it and practice it only once in a while. There were times when courtesy was taught when the child was yet in its mother's womb. The mother may not do evil nor even think evil lest the child may get its impress on it. Perhaps that is going a bit too far, though among us Indians it is a common belief and it has a great deal of truth in it. But this much is undeniable that the parents at one time used to take particular care about the upbringing of their children. To be courteous to all was among the very first lessons the child used to be taught. In the present generation unfortunately there is a hopeless lack of it. That is why a thing that should be natural—inborn in all human beings—is now thought of once in a while. Recently it has become a practise to think of it and to take particular care about practicing it just for a week and then to forget it the rest of the 51 weeks. What utter sham and hypocrisy? And in Apartheid ridden South Africa one finds apartheid even in the practice of Courtesy. These advocates of Courtesy Week should know that this superficial observance of Courtesy for a week will take us nowhere. We are living in an age in which discourtesy is abounding. It carries with it the seed of war. It is a deadly germ which requires drastic means to root out of society. It requires to be treated from the top downwards. Let the legislators examine the laws they have enacted. Apartheid laws are the height of discourtesy to a whole nation. If we were all really courteous to one another, as indeed we should always be, the present discontent in the country would not be there and all would be living in peace and happiness. This Courtesy Week is a positive proof of how uncivilised, uncultured and degenerated we have become. To our utter shame it will only serve as a record in history for our future generation to see how discourteous their forefathers were.

Ban Of Leaders

With the Appellate Court's decision in the case of Dr. Moroka, Dr. Dadoo and others and with the banning orders served by the Minister of Justice on Dr. Naicker and other leaders in the Transvaal both of the Indian community and the African community, practically all the leaders have been deprived of their freedom of speech and movement. There is also a ban on public meetings whenever such meetings are proposed to be held. So physically the Government feels contented in having incapacitated us. One thing the Government has not succeeded in doing and will never succeed in doing is to ban the people's soul. This physical ban will give people an opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the soul which mankind is sorely in need of. Mankind has succeeded in gaining victory over all material things. It has discovered the Atom bomb and the Hydrogen bomb and now almost succeeded in reaching the up till now unsurmountable heights of Mount Everest. How very wonderful! But what shall be gained when these heights have been reached? Just empty space; not the Kingdom of Heaven. And that which is within ourselves no scientists have succeeded in discovering nor aided humanity to do so. "What shall it profit a man who gains the whole world but loseth his own soul?"

We non-Europeans in South Africa who have placed our faith in Truth and Non-violence and have accepted those as our weapons have no reason to be disheartened. If our faith remains unshaken those divine weapons will work in inscrutable ways and baffle their deadliest opponent. One thing they need to remember is that to discover the soul and allow it to work they will have to undergo a cleansing process. Their hearts must be cleansed of all evils. They must become pure in thought word and deed. These are not empty words. The worldly weapons will not save them. It is only the spiritual weapon which will help them and that requires absolute purity of mind and heart which can be achieved by renouncing all material things and by complete dedication to God. One who fears God fears no man. Unless we cultivate that fearlessness we shall never succeed.

MORAL RE-ARMAMENT

By WILFRED H. HARRISON

THERE has recently arrived in South Africa an International School calling themselves the "Moral Re-Armament Task Force." Their chief purpose is "to convert the Communists." Communism means according to the Marxian thesis—"The Common or Social ownership and control of all the necessities of life, to be used in the interest and for the service of the whole community." What virtues then have they for Communists to acquire, or what evils must they eradicate to make possible that noble purpose?

There are, we know many schools of people who call themselves Communists, who adopt tactics of a militant character, quite contrary to the moral and ethical standards that purpose means. Therefore corrupting its real meaning.

Like-wise the Christians whose motto is the Golden Rule: "Do unto others, as you would they should do unto you." Yet most of the Europeans of South Africa call themselves Christians. Even our Prime Minister is a Pater of Divinity a supposed most reverend person.

Recently the good Doctor attended the opening ceremony, with other mining magnates, of the plant for the production of uranium in Johannesburg, at which he spoke in glowing terms of our new found industry. Yet he must have known that uranium is used for no other purpose than frustating atomic bombs for modern warfare of inhuman destruction of innocent people.

Also our Government, of which he is the head, has granted a loan of £40,000,000 for armaments in a possible third world war. These are the cruel and murderous tactics of the professed Christians who claim as their motto the Golden Rule. In fact it is more wicked than anything we have yet heard from any type of Communists. These same Christians have adopted a policy of segregation. Yet their Christ says He will succour all men.

Then all seems to indicate and also to deliberately show, that there is much more scope and real necessity for conviction of the mass—of the people—who call themselves Christians, who are in greater need of social and moral principles the Moral Re-Armament people claim. It is their purpose, they say, to tap our social conscience and make us good, kind people to our fellow beings. The world now abounds with such people, most of our politicians who help in all the murderous war, and grant funds for that purpose, are alike the most pious people who attend their church and kneel in pious prayer. They are also often ideal husbands and kindly fathers. Our lives and our actions are dominated by our material surroundings.

War has become more brutal and murderous because it is accepted as the traditional way of settling international disputes or national rivalry—who allow their professional military forces, by inhuman tactics, to obtain conquest, while the suffering inhabitants of the various countries look complacently and stupidly on. During the conflicts people become more pious, churches multiply, as also do the common people in their prayers. Many of whom often pray that their own forces will conquer their Christian brothers, now their enemies, and their pastors and them as advisers or combatants to do so.

Good kind people line the battle front on both sides. The great heroes are they who gain an advance even at the cost of many lives for which they are often decorated "For Valour" in doing so. We are all victims of a vicious system which has been allowed to drift into such inhuman devices for national supremacy and material gain. Empires who have risen and fallen in various parts of the globe are now a spent force. The world is now aware of its gruesome history. Therefore its dictators are now being fast overthrown. We are at the moment still suffering the re-managing forces of Empire domination, but those who keep in close touch with world affairs can see their approaching end.

One of the greatest founders of the new world was Mahatma Gandhi, who, like his former teacher Tolstoy of Russia, was not allowed to see the great world transformation that is to come based on the policy of non-violence and the resources of the world enjoyed by all its people.

If that is what Moral Re-Arms-

ment means surely they are welcome in South Africa where such a policy at the moment is in great need. Coming from the Western World the popular enemy No. 1 is of course Communism which is non-existent as an active force in South Africa. But, as we have indicated, there still exists a much more formidable force in this country which should receive their attention—to be taught moral principles rather than such wicked deeds.

APPEAL BY MOROKA, DADOO AND 18 OTHERS DISMISSED

BLOEMFONTEIN, Friday, May 22

THE appeal of Dr. James S. Moroka, Dr. Y. M. Dadoo and 18 others, who were convicted in the Supreme Court, Johannesburg, on a charge of contravening the Suppression of Communism Act, was dismissed by the Appeal Court today.

It was alleged that the accused advocated a scheme which aimed at bringing about political, industrial, social or economic changes within the Union by means which included unlawful acts or omissions.

The unlawful acts, omissions and threats relied on by the prosecution were contravenions by Natives, Asiatics and Coloured people of Union laws or regulations or municipal by-laws relating to the carrying of passes and permits by Natives, the entering of Native locations under the control of municipalities without permits, the limitation of stock in Native areas, the entry of Asiatics into certain provinces without permission, the separate facilities provided for the exclusive use of European and non-European tenants, railway stations and inland offices, the establishment of Group Areas, the registration of the population of the Union, and the suppression of Communism.

It had been contended for the accused on appeal that the object of the legislature in the Suppression of Communism Act was to suppress the Communist Party of South Africa and to prohibit Communist activities carried on by adherents of the doctrine of Marxism socialism or related forms of that doctrine.

The legislature could never have intended, it was maintained, to apply the drastic penalties prescribed by the Act to persons engaged in a wide variety of activities which had nothing whatever in common with the doctrine of Marxian socialism or with any related form of that doctrine.

On the facts of the present case, it was argued, the scheme in which the appellants took part aimed only at the repeal of certain selected laws by lawful process and was not, therefore, an object of Communism as defined by the Act.

Reversing these convictions, the Appeal Court confirmed the appellants' conviction and the suspended sentence of nine months' imprisonment with compulsory labour imposed on each of them.

THE FRANCHISE

THE problem of a suitable and equitable franchise law for South Africa is now under discussion in some circles. Yet it seems to me an academic issue more likely to divide friends than to strengthen their friendship. In the first place, it would require a two-thirds majority in parliament to make any change in the present franchise law affecting Africans. This is true whether the change was towards a common roll or simply to increase from three to, say, six or ten the number of members specially elected by Africans to the House of Assembly. Now the only purpose for which a two-thirds majority is likely to be obtainable in the foreseeable future is to diminish, not to enlarge, African political rights. Neither of the major political parties has the slightest intention of even discussing with Congress leaders the problem of the franchise. That is why Congress need not now declare whether it would be willing to accept a franchise loaded against non-Europeans by means of an education test (I hope that no one on our side will ever consider a property test, which is wholly unreasonable and un-democratic). What Congress must assert is that new franchise laws should not be based on race; that is, they should apply equally to all regardless of race or sex. If that great principle is kept firmly in mind, it can become a great unifying force. It is the vital principle on which the Charter of the United Nations was established, and which is accepted, at least in theory, by the sixty nations that belong to the organisation.

Whose Republic?

There is a good deal of wallowing when the question of a republic is argued. Nauseas are, of course, morose for their sentimental attachment to the magic of monarchy. No doubt this sentiment also affects other English-speaking people in our country. But nowadays I find many people ready to oppose the idea of a republic simply because the Nationalists are known to want it. Such people have got confused in their own minds about the relation of a republic to a dictatorship. The fact is that the establishment of a republic would not necessarily and of itself bring us nearer to dictatorship. Conversely, a monarchical form of government is no guarantee of democracy. What is important is the actual constitution and how it works. South Africa could become a republic and yet remain in the Commonwealth, as India did in 1949. Indeed, that might well be a sensible solution of the question in a country with republican as well as royal traditions to consider. No doubt when the time is ripe, Mr. Strydom will be shrewd enough to take this step of declaring a republic but remaining within the Commonwealth, thus taking the wind out of his opponent's sails. Whether Mr. Strydom will also let the Union remain as much of a democracy as it still is—that is quite another matter. Those who want to defend democratic forms of government ought not to get involved in issues that are purely sentimental.

The Dirty War

France's "dirty war" in Indo-China may yet replace Korea as the limited local war kept going in the interests of the armaments and other heavy industries. This war is seven years old and everyone knows that sooner or later France, like Britain, will be driven out of Asia. The war has already cost France more than three and a half billion dollars and the lives of 30,000 French soldiers. The United States is, of course, paying half the cost of the war. Without American aid, France would have long ago been defeated and peace restored to those unhappy parts. Among other Asian countries, such as India, the cause of the Viet Minh is popular and that of the French detested as an attempt to revive a discredited colonialism. The reluctant steps taken by the French to transfer some authority to regimes of their own creation in Cambodia and Laos were sharply criticised in Asia and India has refused to recognise these puppet governments.

China and Russia, on the other hand, have both recognised the Government of Ho Chi-minh as the legitimate regime in Indo-China and they have exchanged diplomatic representation with that Government. There is thus an open breach between the West and the East over the question of Indo-China.

During his election campaign last year, President Eisenhower declared that part of his policy would be to "let Asia fight Asia." This cynical remark has done the United States and her allies harm. Now that Britain has at last begun to assert a foreign policy of her own, America may find itself isolated and without real allies if its present course is maintained.

A Great Book

Indians migrated from India to a dozen different countries in the course of the last century. A comprehensive survey of how these emigrants fared has recently been published in a large and notable work, "Indians Overseas, 1838-1949" by C. Kondapi (Oxford University Press, 35s.). The author, who is assistant secretary of the Indian Council of World Affairs in New Delhi, has taken immense pains to make his study complete and accurate, and he deserves to be complimented on the result.

A South African reader naturally turns to those pages that record what happened to Indians in Natal and the Transvaal. He will find that all the blue books and other records have been drawn upon in order to provide the full story. And he will be able to compare the fate of South African Indians with that which befell others in various British colonies in Africa and in Asia. Whether he is discussing legal disabilities or political status or economic opportunities, Mr. Kondapi always keeps an alert eye on the realities of the matter. He writes in a sober style all the more telling because he does not aim to produce emotional effects. The last chapter, devoted to "suggestions for the future," is rather disappointing. Having shown how the reasonable demand for cheap labour encouraged Indian immigration, the author might have considered more fully what changes in the prevailing system of economic production are required before Indians can enjoy social justice in their adopted countries. None the less, this is a great book worthy of its tremendous subject. It must find a place in every public library.

CAUSE OF HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

HIGH blood pressure is the price which rich industrialists often pay for their directorships and the pecuniary which worried salesmen pay for their high commission, says Doctor Cornelle Heymans, professor of pharmacology at the University of Ghent, and Doctor P. Ratnayami, professor of social medicine, Madras Medical College, in a joint article in the current issue of the World Health Organisation Newsletter states the 'Natal Daily News' London Correspondent.

Blood pressure, say the writers, is also an added burden to the clerk who feels that he cannot hold down his job, or the farmer who is worried about the failure of his crops and his rising tide of debt.

"It is true everywhere in Europe and America," observe the writers, "that high blood pressure has become one of the major killing diseases, and that this disease is generally associated with the emotional stresses and anxieties of modern living."

Doctor Heymans and Doctor Ratnayami point out, however, that it must not be forgotten that other factors may favour development of high blood pressure. Among them are an unbalanced diet and over indulgence in certain foods. Then certain diseases of the heart and kidneys may bring on high blood pressure as an effect rather than a cause.

"The best remedy for high blood pressure," observe the writers, "is an adjustment of the patient's outlook on life so that he or she may escape persistent emotional stresses and anxieties which are its main cause. A reasonable amount of relaxation is essential, taking real holidays from the worries of business or profession or other occupation. It is also necessary to observe moderation in diet. Summed up we must try to attain a certain degree of calm and equanimity of outlook."

"If suitable remedies are applied in time," conclude the doctors, "there is no need for undue worry about this dreaded disease of high blood pressure."

DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION ON COURTESY WEEK

SPEAKING at the Durban Rotary Club luncheon, Mr. C. Murray Booyesen, Natal's Director of Education, who organised Courtesy Week this year, stated that ignorance was at the root of a lot of discourtesy. "South Africa has received scant courtesy at UN, where most of the criticisms levelled against us, and the bitter attacks launched against us, have been due to a wilful distortion and misrepresentation of the true facts, or to gross ignorance of the true position."

"Such action, no matter what the motives may be, is extremely discourteous and on an international plane, cannot make for peace and goodwill."

"Although we all resent what has taken place at the meetings of UN, we ourselves are not entirely blameless of similar conduct in our own country."

Mr. Booyesen said "Never before has materialism played a greater role in the lives of men than today. In all post-war periods it will be found that materialism plays an important part in the behaviour of individuals and of nations."

"As materialism flourishes, so does idealism fade and die."

Defining courtesy to the City Parliament Debating Society when he moved that the deterioration in South African race relations was due to a deterioration in courtesy, Mr. L. T. J. Breyer, Chief Inspector of Indian Education in Natal, stressed the importance of understanding the other person's feelings and aspirations, outlook and ideals.

Where this courtesy and understanding had been lacking the greatest misunderstandings had occurred, resulting in wars, riots, violent enmity, hatred and intolerance.

"From the highest to the lowest in the land we should realise our obligations, more particularly to those who have not risen to a full appreciation of these advantages," he said.

"If the African appears ungrateful for the privileges he enjoys, if he takes such things as free hospitalisation and sub-economic houses for granted and ungraciously asks for more, let us bear in mind that he is not aware that it is only a few short years since the White man received those benefits."

Mr. Breyer said the Zulu was puzzled and did not know how to fit into European society. He attempted to be polite and well-mannered after the ways of his race and was accused of being insolent. He began to feel that courtesy was a one-sided affair. He found European ideas of courtesy completely contradictory to those practised by his own people at home. If he fell between the two standards of behaviour he became a "fossil," a rough creature who lived animal-like, preying on his fellows and disliked by all, both White and Black.

The cry of "Let us get back to the good old days and cast out all non-Zulu customs," was spreading among the Africans, Mr. Breyer continued. There was much to commend in these custom although no one desired a return or continuance of the barbaric practices, pagan beliefs and superstitious fears of the primitive Zulu.

The discipline inculcated in the young, however, was particularly adapted to their needs and fitted them much better into the social structure than the thin veneer of Westernisation they had been able to acquire.

Courtesy was hammered into the child by all and sundry until he became one of those admired and respected by White and Black, a Zulu gentleman of the old school. Not many of these were found today because the law of the European convicted a man of assault if he beat another's child.

Courtesy was far more than refraining from discourtesy, as it was as important to acknowledge it as to practise it. If we bore this in mind in dealing with non-Europeans they would show a corresponding increase in the sense of responsibility towards the White man—"Natal Mercury".

EQUAL TREATMENT TO BLACKS AND WHITES IN NEW ZEALAND

WRITING in the "Natal Daily News" about race relations in New Zealand Mr. Mervyn Webb states: State schools are attended by Maori and Pakeha (White) children, although in some areas where Maoris predominate there are schools that have only Maori pupils.

Maoris are employed as teachers in the State schools on the same terms and under the same conditions as Pakehas. A Pakeha professor in one of New Zealand's university Colleges told me that his children, attending the local State school, had both Maori and Pakeha teachers but they liked the Maori teachers better.

New Zealand has wage and employment regulations that ensure all workers a minimum wage for a 40-hour week. All such regulations apply equally to Maori and Pakeha.

I visit a clothing factory employing about equal numbers of Maori and Pakeha; also a telephone exchange where there were about equal numbers of switchboard operators.

In each case I was told by the person in charge that friction between Maori and Pakeha is unknown. Such divisions or jealousies that do occur do not follow racial lines.

All employees receive the same wage when they start as learners. Promotion is strictly according to ability; in this no difference is observable as between Maori and Pakeha, difference in skill and diligence is between individual and individual. The only general statement I heard was that Maoris write better English.

New Zealand controls the distribution of its national income partly by wage regulations, partly by its far-reaching social security measures. In all of these Maori and Pakeha participate without differentiation.

I visited a pleasant cottage, newly built, in which lived a Maori widow, one of the old Maoris with tattooed chin. She was able to live in her pleasant cottage and to purchase it by instalments out of her old-age pension.

The Maori is subject to no colour bar as we know it in South Africa. He can and does enter all the skilled trades and professions, he can enter and rise in the public service on the same terms as the Pakeha.

This principle of equality of opportunity appears to be firmly entrenched in New Zealand life and thought. Knowing that in some places there had been expressions of anti-Maori feeling, however slight and unrepresentative, I asked if there were not a danger of this feeling being stimulated and exploited for political ends.

Adherents of both political parties assured me that any political party that attempted to make differentiation against the Maori a platform would be swept from public life by the electorate.

In the political field there is a measure of separation that is subject to criticism and may presently disappear. Full Maoris are registered on a separate roll and elect four members to the House of Representatives.

This was no doubt designed to ensure that at least four Maoris would sit in Parliament.

Half Maoris can choose whether to go on the Maori or the Pakeha roll. The choice is entirely theirs and is subject to no electoral officer.

In addition, any Maori can stand for election in Pakeha constituencies. Maoris have been elected in predominantly Pakeha constituencies against opponents. Maoris have played a full part in the political life of New Zealand, have been Cabinet Ministers, and, in the case of Sir James Carroll, held the office of Acting Prime Minister.

The position of the Maori being what it is, a South African, having in mind his own Native Affairs Department, asks, "Why should there be a Department of Maori Affairs?" The answer centres on land.

By selling land to Pakeha colonisers or speculators or by causing Maori tribal custom of land inheritance under which, in time, a Maori became part owner of a piece of land too small to be of economic use, the Maori was threatened with landlessness. He had to be protected from the voracious Pakeha.

Also it became necessary that land should be held in trust and used for the benefit of Maori owners too numerous for the land to be divided and used individually.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

HEAVY WEATHER FOR LIBERAL PARTY

By JORDAN K. NGUDANE

TO the outside world it seems strange that the heaviest fire against the Liberal Party so far has come, not from the Malanites but from the non-European.

Three factors seem to be behind this. The South Africans, as a rule, are conservative people, so matter to which side of the colour line they belong. We have accustomed ourselves as a nation to think of problems and evaluate ideas against the overall background of race. When a new situation arises, which threatens to take us out of this rut, we react violently. This is not peculiar to any one race. All the peoples of South Africa have it.

A close study of the violent denunciations of the Liberal Party from non-white leaders so far has revealed them 'in the role of men who have reacted with their hearts more than with their minds to the emergence of the Liberal Party. For years they have clamoured for racial equality and when at last a section of the white people came forward with a basis on which to establish racial equality, they ran away from it and hid behind violent and irrational denunciations. A humorous cartoonist would depict them in flight from their own goal!

Fortunately, this is a temporary phase. When both the leaders of the Liberal Party and the non-white all down to God bases on which to co-operate, the violent reactions will be seen to have been no more than a characteristic South African attitude on these matters. This, however, does not mean that the non-white peoples have no grievances which they wish to make against the Liberal Party. We shall come to these soon.

In the meantime the African watcher with keen interest the reactions of the Malanites to the formation of the new Party. The most significant thing to them is that the Malanites have been regularly restrained in their hostility to the formation of the Party. They are showed politeness as shown as any on the two white sides. On balance the emergence of the Liberal Party is a blessing to them.

Finally, the Liberal Party will draw some of its supporters largely from those who would have voted United Party. To the extent that this will mean a numerical weakening of the United Party, it is a gain for the Malanites.

Secondly, the new Party has received a very favourable Press reaction practically from all over the world. The Malanites know the dangers of an adverse world opinion from experience. The emergence of the Liberal Party will be held before the world as proof that South Africa does not, in fact, oppress the man of colour to the extent that outsiders might believe it does. The Liberal Party, which has opened its doors to everybody, will be held up as being in the direct line of succession to power like every other Party. If it can convince the electorate that its policies are sound, the Malanites will say, it can have its own Government and abolish the colour bar any time it wants. Theoretically, this appears to be the situation and these the prospects before the Liberal Party.

The Malanites will tell the world that it is up to the Liberal Party to work hard enough, like every democratic party and win enough votes to get to power and carry out its policies. This line will definitely confuse very many people overseas on the real dangers of Malanism. The Malanites, in turn, will exploit this confusion to adopt more tyrannous policies towards the man of colour. They get a better name abroad and remain in the position to be worse tyrants at home.

Thirdly, now that the liberal wing of the United Party has hired all the shames are much brighter of a tearing between the United and National Parties on the basis of a white racial front. By shaking off the Liberal's, the United Party has shown that it does not mind coming to terms with Malan—following the example of Hendrik. If this tearing ever comes about, it will strictly be on terms dictated by the stronger group—the National Party.

On the debit side, the only headache worth considering is that the United Party is now "purified" enough to be in the position to convert a few more National Party "moderates" to its side. But the possibility of this happening is very remote. If the results of the last two general elections are any guide for the immediate future. On both occasions the white voter showed unmistakably that he the clear-cut issue of race, he prefers the uncompromising racial tyranny of the Malanites and not the half-baked equalisation of the United Party.

Against this background, the Malanites stand to gain by the formation of the Liberal Party, both on the homefront and abroad. They would be fools to create difficulties for a Party which might—whether it likes it or not—do so much for them and their name here and overseas. And the Malanites are certainly not fools.

It must be realised that the African has had to consider this side of his relationship with the Liberal Party as well. Nobody will do him the injustice to deny his right to make certain that he will not place himself in the position to subserve Malanite interests. We hate Malanism—we believe it is an anti-South African evil and will not come to terms with it. The African attitude to the Liberal Party might, if seen in this light, be better appreciated.

On the other hand there is a genuine suspicion on the non-white side about the vagueness of the Party's real intentions. At the Durban meeting held in memory of the late Bhebeke Jeebs, Mr. Alan Paton, one of the leading spirits of the Liberal Party, in effect confessed that the Party still has a somewhat hazy idea of its programme. Now, I think the non-white people have every right to say that the Party had no business to get into the political arena before its own mind was quite clear on the society it is set to build. But against this the Liberals can argue that such a programme can only be worked out by Black and White in the Party sitting together for years.

The Africans, in particular, are extremely suspicious of leader goals on the political front. He has made up his mind to see a new South African society in which colour will be no criterion by which to assess human values. He does not want anybody to come to him with offers which might perpetuate the status quo—even if that is done with new symbols of mixed colour. He will not co-operate with the Liberal Party if it turns out to be nothing more than a political leader-goal. The African who makes all these reservations does that in all sincerity and he should be taken for what he is.

There is another force at work in the non-white community, however, which demands a settlement of the race problem on a liberal basis. That is underground communism. In so far as it lies within its power to influence events, it will do everything possible to make the real issues at stake and make racial co-operation difficult. I trust the Liberal Party will not jump to the conclusion that every African who has doubts about the Party has come under the influence of underground communism—for, as I have shown, this is not the case.

The African wants to be assured that the Liberal Party is not out to perpetuate the status quo in a new guise. But at the same time I think it would be unreasonable for the African National Congress to reject co-operation on anything less than a 100 per cent acceptance of its own terms as it would be unrealistic for the Liberal Party to expect that its formation is something which the African must automatically accept as nothing but a blessing.

At the moment, of course, the African has the whip hand. If he refuses to co-operate with the Liberal Party, he will destroy its main justification—namely, that it is a bridge between Black and White. But against this the African must remember that unreasonable rejection of the extended white hand of co-operation might be interpreted as proof of African insincerity in taking of racial co-operation or proof of African intentions to dominate the other minority groups. Somehow, we must strike the middle course.

Personalities sometimes react for much, sometimes for little in political movements. But I think a reasonable attitude for the African to take up is that the men and women who have formed the Liberal Party are honest people with enough vision to grapple with the Colour problem in the only realistic manner possible in the circumstances; men and women who look forward to their own sincerity of purpose to make up for their obvious lack of political experience.

I believe this is a mature attitude to take up towards the Liberal Party. The violent denunciations which have come from the non-white side so far are all as much smoke and fury. I think we should come down from these clouds and grapple realistically with a situation in which we and the white liberals are called upon to evolve a basis for racial peace in South Africa. Let us reject co-operation with them after giving them a fair hearing—for we shall never accept anything which perpetuates the status quo, one way or the other. But it is quite possible that when we sit down with them and talk things over we might educate them into seeing the truth partly in our light.

OVERSEAS INDIANS CONFERENCE IN LONDON

FOR the first time in the history of emigration and settlement of Indians overseas, a Conference is being held in London to discuss and consider matters of mutual interest to our people everywhere.

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru gave the following figures in the Indian Parliament about the number of Indians in the British colonies:

Aden, 9,456; Brunei, 436; British North Borneo, 1,298; British Somaliland, 550; British Guiana, 190,888; Cyprus 40; Fiji, 148,802; Gibraltar, 41; Gold Coast, 250; Hong Kong, 1,500; Jamaica, 25,000; Kenya, 90,528; Malaya, 577,000; Malia, 37; Mauritius, 271,636; Nigeria, 50; Northern Rhodesia, 2,300; Sierra Leone, 50; Singapore, 72,000; Southern Rhodesia, 4,150; Tanganyika, 56,499; Uganda, 33,767; Zanzibar and Pemba, 15,812; British West Indies, 227,390.

The Council of Indians Abroad, a newly formed organisation in London, has been actively preparing plans and details of the Conference for a number of months.

In this the Council has received enthusiastic support from practically all the Indian organisations, and a large number of prominent Indians overseas.

The main agenda for the Conference is as follows:

Other subjects for discussion will be included, at the request of the delegates.

1. Discussions on reports received from Indian Organisations in Overseas territories.

2. Discussions with a view to adoption of the following two objectives for Overseas Indians: (a) All Indian settlers in Overseas countries who look upon the country of their adoption as their homeland and sole object of their loyalty, should be prepared to accept the duties and responsibilities of full citizenship and in return be guaranteed equal rights and privileges with all other citizens of that country, and also seek for and obtain reasonable rates and conditions of naturalisation wherever such laws are necessary for attaining that country's citizenship. (b) Indian settlers in Overseas countries who desire to retain the nationality of the country of their origin, should be prepared to accept the status of friendly aliens, which means to say that they shall not claim civic rights but shall be assured of equality before the Law and enjoyment of person and property and should be treated in a generous and humane spirit by the country of their sojourn.

3. To consider ways and means of setting up single social organisations in respective Overseas countries in order to improve the social life and status of the community as a whole and for fostering its contacts with the other racial groups residing in the respective Overseas territories, with a view to cementing the spirit of friendship and brotherhood with them.

4. To devise ways and means to put an end to the spirit of communalism which is more or less rampant among Overseas Indians, because of religious, class, caste and provincial differences.

5. To consider the advisability of exchanging half yearly progress reports between the conferring Overseas countries channelised through a central body, on subjects to be decided upon at this Conference.

The Conference and the Dinner are being organised and arranged by the Council of Indians Abroad. But as a sincere gesture of goodwill and their regard for all the Indians from overseas, a number of prominent Indians resident in England have readily associated themselves with the Conference and the welcome to friends from abroad.

Members of the Executive Committee: G. J. Chhangur and S. Mair (B. Guiana), J. A. Kirpal (Fiji), Dev. Kumar and Narendra Kumar (India), Miss Ahilya Varma (Jamaica), S. Buckory and R. Sewgobind (Mauritius), Inder Prasad (Trinidad), Dr. Ganesh Sawh (B. Guiana and London), Hon. Treasurer: Mr. L. Shrivastava; Hon. General Secretary: Dr. K. D. Kumria.

The Conference will be held on Saturday and Sunday, 13th and 14th June, 1953 at 87, West Cromwell Road, London, S.W.5 (Earls Court Station). The Conference will last two whole days.

NON-EUROPEAN BUS RANK

THE Natal Indian Congress has written to Councillor Forsdick, Chairman of the General Purposes Committee to reconsider the plans to decentralise the bus rank. Congress urges that the Testing Ground site be utilised to extend the present bus rank and to avoid using the school area for bus terminals. The letter states:

"We wish to reiterate that our objections still stand in regard to the siting of the terminals for north and west bound buses in the school area. Your Committee has agreed to change the route from Carlisle Street to Lorne Street and has agreed not to alter the siting in Winterburn Walk. You will recall that the objection of Congress was to the choice of the school area for bus terminals, and the altered scheme does not meet this objection. The danger to children traversing this area on their way to and from the schools concerned still remains. The children will still have to pass through Winterburn Walk, Mansfield Road, Centenary Road, Carlisle Street and Lorne Street and with the alteration now suggested buses will pass alongside yet another school—the Kaibawa Government Aided Indian School, in Lorne Street which was unaffected by the previously suggested route of north bound buses.

"We reiterate that whilst we are not opposed to decentralisation on principle, and that Lorne Street is the lesser of the two evils, nevertheless the siting of the terminals in this thickly used school area is most unsatisfactory and we must lodge our protest against the decision.

"We are sure the Committee can find other alternative sites just as suitable but far less dangerous. We feel that the proper solution to this problem is the extension of the Victoria Street bus terminus by the use of the present Municipal testing grounds. We must admit that we have not been convinced that this should not be used for this purpose, despite proposals to house the City Police and licensing offices there. The bus rank is certainly the most urgent and concerns the largest number of citizens in regard to user.

"In our submission decentralisation is not necessary if a large enough terminus with proper conveniences can be found. We strongly feel that the testing grounds together with the present bus rank in Victoria Street will meet this need.

"Even at this latest stage we appeal to the City Council through you and your Committee to reconsider this matter and call off the scheme to use the school area for bus terminals and routes."

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

Bombay, May 15.

PAKISTAN seems to have started a vigorous "peace offensive" against India. As the Western nations are baffled by a similar "peace offensive" by Russia and could not make out whether the change on the part of the Communist countries is genuine or a make-believe, similarly India feels baffled by the recent declarations of the Pakistan Premier and other leaders, suggesting a change of heart on their part and wanting to have friendly relations with India and solve all outstanding problems in a give-and-take spirit. Pakistan radio and Pakistani Press have changed their tone and stopped malicious propaganda against India and the Indian leaders.

The Pakistan Government have banned a drama that was staged in Pakistan since the last two or three years, ridiculing Mr. Nehru and inciting the people of Pakistan against India. The Government of India had vainly protested several times against staging this drama. Now Pakistan has banned this drama of her own accord.

The Pakistani Government had refused to hand over Bhupat, the notorious dacoit of Saurashtra, and the Pakistani Press had gone to the extent of glorifying this dacoit as a hero who had committed over 80 murders and 20 dacoities in India. Now, according to New Delhi reports, the Pakistan Government will hand over Bhupat to India. These gestures of Pakistan are regarded as auspicious for the coming talks between the two Prime Ministers.

Now the Pakistani delegation consisting of Mr. Akbar Hussain and Mr. Aza Hidayat, secretary and joint secretary respectively of Pakistan Foreign Ministry, has arrived in New Delhi and have started talks with their counterparts in India to pave the way for further talks on a secretariat level and then between the two Prime Ministers to solve all the outstanding problems between the two countries. Their mission has proved successful and an agreement was reached in regard to items of discussion at the next phase of negotiations at secretariat level and tentative procedure to be followed. The talks were throughout conducted in a most friendly atmosphere.

Though this preliminary talk on agenda was hardly expected to present any serious obstacles, its satisfactory conclusion has nevertheless led to optimism that a new chapter in the relations between the two countries is about to begin.

Later, Mr. Nehru, while making a statement on foreign relations in the House of the People, said that during recent weeks there has been a marked improvement in Indo-Pakistan relations and many friendly gestures have been made to us from Pakistan which we welcome and reciprocate. We shall make every endeavour to dispel the clouds that have darkened our respective horizons and caused unhappiness to so many people.

Mahatma Gandhi Memorial Museum which is now temporarily lodged in Kotab House, New Delhi, will be shifted to a new large building that will be built near Rajghat, where the Father of the Nation was cremated. Plans are afoot to erect the building. According to available reports, the building would be befitting the unique position which Mahatma Gandhi occupied in the political and cultural spheres of the country for over half a century and the part he played in the emancipation of the people of this country.

The collections now kept in the Kotab House are obviously but a nucleus for the enormous quantity of exhibits intended to be housed in their permanent abode.

A curious and lively portion of the museum would be the one earmarked for Mahatma Gandhi's letters. A large number of those letters were addressed to friends abroad. Mahatmajee often wrote with his left hand when his right hand was tired of writing. It is curious that his handwriting was far more legible when written with the left hand. These letters mostly in Gujarati, Hindi and English throw light on the working of Mahatmajee's mind, faced as he was with the stupendous task of liberation on the national front.

Photostat copies of about 18,000 sheets of Mahatmajee have already been made. Another like number has been micro-filmed. It will take some years to complete this gigantic task.

The museum would house the books that Mahatma Gandhi used as a lawyer in South Africa. Apart from his own collection, more than 4,000 books have been added to the library, written about him or concerning some aspects of the political movement led by him.

The pathetic portion of the Museum would be the one where his few personal belongings would be preserved. His pocket watch and the Burmese sun hat catch the eye first. Among the personal belongings are three bullets that took his life, now handed over by the police to the Museum. His personal diaries and the bamboo quill-holder, and basket presented to him by his admirers in Capetown are also included in this portion.

The plan for the big building includes a public hall to accommodate 1,000 people, a hall for statues and another hall for Mahatmajee's photographs.

The Government of India has approved a plan for rural development, known as National Extension Service, which will improve agriculture and breeding of livestock and will utilise the spare time energy of the rural population in extending and implementing the programme of health, housing and education.

The National Extension Service programme is scheduled to go into operation on October 3, almost exactly a year after the community development programme was launched in 55 project areas all over the country. The service will cost Rs. 1010 millions and when completed in the next three years, will reach a quarter of the country's rural population.

This programme is considered to be the boldest step yet undertaken towards the creation of the Welfare State. It constitutes thus the first major change in the approach of the Government towards the people in that a broader and a more active responsibility is now being envisaged in providing the initiative for a mass movement of self-help.

Under the programme, a permanent machinery will be created in the rural areas through which the development work will be realised. As at present planned the programme will cover the entire country within the next ten years. Through this machinery the spare time energies of the rural population will be harnessed towards development work such as road-building, clearing of fields, training of waterways and digging wells. The programme also lays considerable emphasis on the formation of co-operative and village committees.

The programme will also open out considerable potentialities of employment for skilled workers. For the next three years it will need over 85,000 technical personnel.

The Extension Services programme will concern itself primarily with improvement in agriculture and the breeding of livestock. It is hoped to carry the programme to 120,000 villages comprising a population of 50 millions during the next three years.

Side by side, more intensive community development will be attempted in select areas to cover housing, health and education. The location of these selected areas will depend primarily on the voluntary effort that is forthcoming, though considerations such as the availability of resources, internal and external, must also prevail.

This is how the programme will work. During the next three years the Extension Service will reach out to 1200 areas each consisting of 100 villages with an approximate population of 66,000. Of these 300 areas will be selected for intensive development under the community projects already in operation. Of the remaining 900, 180 will be taken up in the first year, 370 in the second year and 450 in the third. Four hundred more will ultimately come under intensive development.

Of the total cost of Rs. 101 Crores on the programme, the Central Government will bear 75 per cent of the non-recurring expenditure. The rest will have to come from the States.

The last fortnight witnessed a keen tussle for power between the House of the People and the Council of State, reminiscent of the early days of British Democracy when similar tussles for power were going on between the House of Commons and the House of Lords. But ultimately good sense prevailed on both sides and what appeared to be a major constitutional crisis proved to be a storm in a teacup.

According to the present Constitution of India, the House of the People is directly elected by the voters, while the election for the Council is indirect, through the State Legislatures, Cabinet of Ministers is responsible to the House of the People and all Money Bills must be initiated in and passed by the House of the People only. No Bill need be sent to the Council provided the Speaker certifies same as Money Bill.

Income Tax Amendment Bill, which was passed by the House of the People, was certified as Money Bill by the Speaker, consequently it was not sent to the Upper House.

Some members of the Council of State took strong objections to the certification of this Bill as Money Bill by the Speaker. During the discussion on this question Mr. C. C. Biswas, the Law Minister and the leader of the Council of State doubted whether the Speaker had applied his mind fully before certifying the Bill and made certain remarks which were regarded as derogatory and showing "distinct disrespect" to the Speaker by Pandit Bhargava who raised the question as a matter of privilege in the House of the People. Mr. Bhargava declared in the House of the People that he was going to introduce privilege motion on this question in the House and requested the Deputy Speaker, Mr. Ananteyanay Aiyangar, to direct Mr. Biswas to be present in the House to answer the charges when the motion was taken up. The Deputy Speaker thought there was 'prima facie' a case involving the dignity of the Speaker and directed Mr. Biswas to be present next day to answer the charges.

But on the next day the Council of State rose as one man, giving a go-by to party affiliations, to defend its privileges and directed Mr. Biswas not to appear before the House of the People when that matter was taken up. The constitutional pundits dug up the fact that the Council of State and the House of the People both were sovereign bodies having the same powers in regard to privileges as the House of Commons.

Heated attacks were made on the members of the House of the People who were trying to lower the dignity of the Council.

When the House of the People took up this matter next day, Mr. Biswas, who was present in the House, staged a walkout saying that he would obey the orders of the Council. Maulana Azad's efforts to prevent him from leaving the House proved futile. Members of the House were angry at the attitude of the Council. But thanks to the good offices of the Deputy Speaker, the motion which Pandit Bhargava sought to raise in the House was dropped and Mr. Biswas returned to the House.

After returning to Delhi from the tour of famine stricken areas of Maharashtra, Mr. Nehru expressed his regret at this incident and declared that both the Houses had the same privileges and one should not look to the House of Commons of Britain for precedence and rules as unlike Britain India was bound by the Constitution. He asked the members to regard this incident as closed. Mr. Biswas also expressed his regret at the incident in the House.

As Mr. Nehru did not clarify exactly what the relations between the Houses ought to be and there being no specific clarification in the Indian Constitution, the issue between the two Houses might go on.

Dr. Bhyasprasad Mookerji was arrested while entering Jammu without permit. He was taken to Sree Nagar for detention. Dr. Mookerji refused to take a permit on the ground that Jammu and Kashmir State was part and parcel of India and Indian citizens should not require permits to enter that State. He was going there to investigate the conditions in Jammu where Praja Parishad has launched Satyagraha, demanding application of Indian Constitution to that State. In the meanwhile Jan Sangh agitation continues in North India in support of the demands of Praja Parishad.

Boundary dispute between Bengal and Bihar has again flared up after passage of a resolution demanding certain areas of Bihar to be incorporated in Bengal, by the West Bengal State Assembly. Bihar Assembly has reacted strongly and, it seems, this verbal duel between the two States will continue till the formation of States on linguistic bases.

Allahabad High Court has dismissed the application filed by Mr. Rajnarain Singh, leader of the Opposition in Uttar Pradesh State Assembly, against the order of the Speaker suspending him from the Assembly for the rest of the current sitting. The Court declared that it had no right to interfere in the proceedings of the Assembly, where the authority of the Speaker is supreme.

INDIAN DELEGATE BLASTS COMMUNIST YOUTH CONFERENCE

Vienna, Austria.

AN Indian delegate to the communist-sponsored youth conference held here in March said the international meeting was strictly "a propaganda device" for the Cominform.

Shatrugan Prasad Singh, General Secretary for the Bihar Institute for Cultural Relations, told how the communists used the following devices to control the meeting:

1. Delegates had to present their speeches in writing in advance and wait for two days for permission to deliver them.

2. There was no discussion during the conference.

3. Frequently the names of speakers were not announced to the delegates.

4. Newspaper reporters were kept away from the delegates and could only move around the conference room accompanied by communist guards.

5. The managers of the conference held in Vienna—the so-called International Conference for the Defence of Rights of Youth—got their orders directly from the Cominform and did not allow any opinions other than their own.

Singh said his invitation to the conference had come to him in India and he had been assured that every delegate would have the opportunity to express himself.

Singh said he was not allowed to speak at the meeting.—U.S.I.S.

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

Our tragedy today is a general and universal physical fear, so long sustained by now that we can even hear it. There are no longer heroes of the spirit. There is only the question: When will I be blown up?

—William Faulkner,
Nobel Prize Winner.

This is what I found out about religion. It gives you courage to make the decisions you must make in a crisis, and then the confidence to leave the result to a higher Power. Only a trust in God can a man carrying responsibilities find release.

—Dwight D. Eisenhower

Atmosphere Of Non-Violence Of The Brave

ADVISING workers on how to produce an atmosphere of non-violence of the brave, Gandhi once said: ".....This depends on individual workers cultivating non-violence in thought, word and deed, by means of a concentrated effort in the fulfilment of the constructive programme. Maximum of work and minimum of speech must be your motto. There is the programme of literacy. You must concentrate exclusively on it and not talk of any other thing. The work should be systematic and according to time-table.

Don't talk of politics—not even of non-violence—but talk to them of the advantages of literacy. There is prohibition of drink and intoxicating drugs and of gambling. There is medical relief by means of the propagation of simple rules of hygiene and sanitation and elementary preventive measures, and of cheap home remedies and training intelligent villagers for these.

All this constructive work should be for its own sake. And yet be sure that it will develop the quality required for non-violent responsible government. That is how I began my work in South Africa. I began with serving them. I did not know myself that I was so training myself.

This constructive programme may go on endlessly. Why should you be tired of it? Do you know the hundred years war in England? If they fought for a hundred years, we should be prepared to fight for a thousand years, in as much as we are a continent. Thus we will have given our contribution to the fight for freedom, which will be our reward. That is the mass constructive programme I want you to do and that is the basis of the training for the non-violence of the brave. It is whole and indivisible and those who do not believe in it whole-heartedly must leave me and work according to their own light.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY 5TH JUNE, 1953

All Is Not Well With Africa

THE statement made by our Prime Minister, Dr. D. F. Malan, on his arrival in England last week merits some thought. It is human nature to resent personal criticism. Praise is always pleasing but fault-finding is most displeasing. Yet a person can learn and improve oneself only by not being elated by the praises and by humbly accepting adverse criticism, examining it thoroughly and, making adjustments where necessary and rejecting what seems to be not applicable, without bearing malice towards those who have offered the criticism in all good faith. But to become intolerant and resentful over the least criticism shows a sign of false pride and a guilty conscience. The Nationalists in South Africa, we are afraid, are suffering from both and it is because of this that they and their leader Dr. Malan are not able to see light and yet imagine that they do so. That is what is ruining South Africa and not the criticism either favourable or unfavourable.

Dr. Malan has either consciously or unconsciously uttered half truths. "All is well with South Africa," he said and asserted that "we have no unemployment problems and no industrial unrest." He probably had in mind when he said this only the White population which represents less than a quarter of the Union population. When he is tackled about the rest of the three quarters the only answer he gives is "they are better off than elsewhere." The people concerned are denied the right to speak for themselves. The facts are that they have been kept suppressed, they are used and meant to be used as "holders of wood and drawers of water" for the White people. Over seventy per cent. of the comparatively small Indian population—numbering three hundred thousand in a total population of twelve million are living below bread line. These are only one or two of the most startling and unchallengeable facts.

If all was well with South Africa how did it happen that there was a defiance movement at all in which eight thousand people were flung into prison? Why were there riots in practically all the important cities of the Union and why did the police have to resort to shooting and killing people? Why was it necessary for the Government to pass harsh and inhuman laws such as the Riotous Assemblies and the Criminal Law Amendment Acts?

The defiance movement is dead," said Dr. Malan. Is that really true? Or would it be truer to say that it has been suppressed by harsh measures on the part of the Government, which in other words means that the Government is not at all secure. It is sitting on top of a volcano and there is no knowing when it may erupt? In order to make the Government secure Dr. Malan would have both the White groups to form themselves into an united front against the discontented nine million non Whites, and in that he seeks the assistance of the Press and the people of the United Kingdom and of the world and loses his head if it is denied.

Dr. Malan wants the outside world to investigate thoroughly and impartially their sources of information about South Africa. Why then does his Government refuse to allow the commission appointed by the United Nations to get a first hand knowledge of the conditions in South Africa? Why should there be any fear if there is nothing to hide and if all is well with South Africa?

It is no use charging Britain and the outside world of being "contaminated by political bias and an unyielding hatred of any one and everything which is anything else than purely British." The charge is really and truly applicable to the Nationalists in South Africa.

If all is well with South Africa why is a ban placed on the freedom of speech and movement on practically all the non-European leaders. The fact is that all is not well with South Africa and what Dr. Malan and his Government claim as being South Africa's domestic question is fast becoming an international problem endangering world peace.

NOTES AND NEWS

Apartheid On Coronation Day

IN Durban the non-European ex-servicemen were not permitted to join the European ex-servicemen and so the detachments organised a parade on their own at the Curries Fountain where the salute was taken by Mr. A. C. Sivad, Acting Protector of Indian Immigrants, who was the chief recruiting officer for Indians during the war.

In Maritzburg it was originally arranged by the City Council that non-European ex-servicemen would take part in the general parade and would march in a column behind the European ex-servicemen. The order of the parade had to be altered however, because of a Government ruling that non-European and European ex-servicemen must not march together in processions on Coronation Day. It was also intended that non-European ex-servicemen would not take part in the march-past at the Oval where the Mayor Mr. D. R. Warmbach took the salute. It was decided later that non-European ex-servicemen would have their own march-past and the salute would be taken by the Mayor.

Mr. Warmbach is reported by the 'Natal Witness' to have said that he was surprised to see in the Press that non-European ex-servicemen would not be permitted to follow the parade of military detachments at the Oval when he was to take the salute. "I know that when we were at war we welcomed any assurance, no matter what colour it was or what language was spoken. Now those people who rendered that service are being denied their wish to pay homage and show their loyalty to the Queen," he said.

Equality "The Only Hope For East Africa"

The chairman of the Royal Commission on East Africa, Sir Hugh Dow, arrived in London by air on Monday night from Nairobi after three-and-a-half months' tour of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika. At London Airport he said: "The main conclusion we have reached is that the communities no longer believe in government on the basis of the superiority of one race over another. The only hope for East Africa is a complete partnership of the three races—African, Indian and European. Sir Hugh said the eight members of the Royal Commission had travelled many thousands of miles, and the bulk of their report had already been flown home in the form of memoranda. He did not know when the complete report would be published.

Ben On African National Congress President

Mr. A. J. Lotbail, president-general, of the African National Congress, has been served with notices signed by the Minister of Justice banning him from all public gatherings and from being in any of 21 magisterial districts, including Durban, Johannesburg and the Cape. The grounds of the notices were the same as those in the case of Dr. G. M. Nkomo, president of the South African Indian Congress, and Mr. M. B. Yengwa, secretary of the African National Congress (Natal)—alleging "feelings of hostility" between Europeans and non-Europeans.

Congress Denies

The secretary of the South African Indian Congress has sent a denial that the Congress met anyone on high level to set up the Liberal Party as stated by Mr. Jordan K. Ngubane in his article in a previous issue. The statement, he states is totally incorrect and misleading. A detailed statement from the Congress is to follow.

Customs Regulations Of India

It has come to the notice of the Natal Indian Congress that passengers proceeding from South Africa to India sometimes experience difficulties because of their ignorance of Customs regulations. Anyone wishing to acquaint themselves with the regulations covering baggage that are allowed to be taken to India may obtain the necessary information from the offices of the Natal Indian Congress who have a copy of the latest Import Baggage Rules from the Customs Department of the Government of India.

During recent centuries the message has been sustained and invigorated by the strenuous contributions in language, literature and action of the nations of our Commonwealth overseas. It gives expression, as I pray it always will, to living principles as sacred to the Crown and Monarchy as to its many Parliaments and peoples.

I ask you now to cherish them, and practise them, lest then we can go forward together in peace, seeking justice and freedom for all men.

As this day draws to its close, I know that my abiding memory of it will be not only the solemnity and beauty of the ceremony, but the inspiration of your loyalty and affection. I thank you all from a full heart. God bless you all. —Sapa-Reuters.

"ALL IS WELL WITH SOUTH AFRICA"

ON his arrival in England last week our Prime Minister, Dr. D. P. Malan, in a public statement, as reported by Sapa said, "All is well with South Africa, we have no unemployment problems and no industrial unrest."

"The defiance movement, which was started and engineered and largely financed from outside, is dead, and the semi-military political organisation which so largely seemed to have started the imagination of credulous people in other countries is discredited and on the verge of disintegration."

"South Africa has now a stable Government. Orderly conditions are safeguarded and the two White groups, which in general outlook are fundamentally at one with each other, are bound to draw closer together in future."

"This process will be greatly assisted if the Press and the people of the United Kingdom would decide once for all to investigate thoroughly and impartially their sources of information about South Africa."

"There, to an overwhelming extent, are contaminated by political bias and, worst of all, by an undying hatred of anyone and everything which is anything else than purely British."

"There is nothing wrong with South African Nationalism—as little as there is with that of any other self-respecting nation, including that of Great Britain herself. In fact, nationhood, especially sovereign independent nationhood, presupposes it."

South African Nationalism is intended to include, basically and to its practical application, both language groups on a footing of equality.

"To represent it otherwise is untruthful and an indication of a well-practised racial animosity which seeks a last refuge in the creation of bogymen and unfounded fear."

"The language and political rights of the English Language group in South Africa are and will continue to be as fully safeguarded as those of the Afrikaans-speaking group."

"The people of Great Britain should not allow themselves to be trapped unwares into assuming or misrepresenting the creation in South Africa of another Ulster, be it territorially or psychologically, which the great bulk of South Africans, of whatever political complexion, would not tolerate, and which would certainly not be conducive to the maintenance of the good relations between South Africa and the United Kingdom."

Dr. Malan then made his appeal for a more "critical approach" by the people of Britain to their sources of information.

He said that they should curb their book and article-writing industries who rushed from Britain and hurried through South Africa for no other purpose than to collect any material, real or imaginary, which they thought might substantiate their ill-conceived prejudices.

"Apart from this, we have only one rather annoying trouble," said Dr. Malan. "This is the host of busybodies everywhere, and not least in Britain herself, who, forgetting to sweep their own doors, imagine they can manage our domestic affairs better than we do."

"I am afraid that this malady in the world at large is fast becoming one of the worst afflictions of our age," said Dr. Malan, saying that "this system of ignorance and often malicious 'busybodies' was 'very bad.'"

THE QUEEN'S BROADCAST

IN a broadcast on Tuesday night after the Coronation the Queen said: When I spoke to you last at Christmas, I asked you all, whatever your religion, to pray for me on the day of my Coronation—so pray that God would give me wisdom and strength to carry out the promises that I should then be making.

Throughout this memorable day I have been uplifted and sustained by the knowledge that your thoughts and prayers were with me. I have been aware all the time that my peoples, spread far and wide throughout every continent and crescent in the world, were united to support me in the task to which I have now been dedicated with such solemnity.

Many thousands of you came to London from all parts of the Commonwealth and Empire to join in the ceremony, but I have been conscious too of the millions of others who have shared in it by means of wireless or television in their homes. All of you, near or far, have been united in one purpose.

It is hard for me to find words in which to tell you of the message which that knowledge has given me.

The ceremonies you have seen today are ancient and some of their origins are veiled in the mists of the past. But their spirit and their meaning shine through the ages, never, perhaps, more brightly than now.

I have sincerely pledged myself to your service as so many of you are pledged to mine. Throughout all my life, and with all my heart, I shall strive to be worthy of your trust.

In this resolve I have my husband to support me. He shares all my ideals and all my affection for you. Then, although my experience is so short and my task so new, I have in my parents and grandparents an example which I can follow with certainty and with confidence.

There is also this: I have behind me, not only the splendid traditions and the annals of more than a thousand years, but the living strength and majesty of the Commonwealth and Empire, of centuries old and new; of lands and races, different in history and origin, but all by God's will united in spirit and in aim.

Therefore, I am sure that this, my Coronation, is not the symbol of a power and a splendour that are gone, but declaration of our hopes for the future and for the years I may, by God's grace and mercy, be given to reign and serve you as your Queen.

I have been speaking of the vast regions and varied peoples to whom I owe my duty. But there has also sprung from our island home a theme of social and political thought which constitutes our message to the world and through the changing generations has found acceptance both within and far beyond our realm.

Parliamentary institutions, with their free speech and respect for the rights of minorities and the inspiration of a broad tolerance in thought and its expression—all this we conceive to be a precious part of our way of life and outlook.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

THE UNITED FRONT—(I) WHICH WAY NOW?

By C. W. M. GELL

Reprinted from 'The Forum' (Johannesburg)

If the election taught us one lesson it was that there is no future along "the traditional South African way". This has been a more grievous shock to many people than it should have been. In the first place, once a major political party has chosen to make explicit in its policy all those underlying assumptions about white superiority and black inferiority that were implicit in the old way, its unabashed Herrenvolk ideology will always be able to outbid the muted version of the same theme on which the United Party fought the election. Secondly, the small non-European intelligentsia, finally confronted with the full implications of "white supremacy with justice," will inevitably react; and, whatever form that reaction takes, it will stampede our notoriously short-sighted white electorate further into the arms of the out-and-out white nationalists. Once this drastic polarisation of white and black nationalism has begun, there is no place for more moderate parties based substantially on the same principle. This is a fact the U.P. must now face with complete frankness. It will never recover power along the old road, its majority of the total poll now withstanding.

Its great and fatal weakness has been lack of clearly defined principles. It has offered its supporters a moderately tempered and moderately good administration based on the conciliatory wisdom of a few outstanding personalities. When these left the scene, the party was stranded without personalities or policies and, in the meantime, the "purified" Nationalists had had the good political sense to develop to their logical conclusion such social principles as were tacitly assumed as the background of the U.P. attitude. Dr. Malan thus had the edge in consistency and coherence, once it was more or less admitted that the basic principle of both Nationalist and U.P. policy was the preservation of the white community's monopoly of privilege and power. One of the more conservative dailies in its post-election leader said that "policy's not parties prevail". We fought as a party whose principles the Nationalists have appropriated and somewhat perverted.

Many of us, however, do not like the implications of this principle when it is stripped of its trimmings and reservations. We feel that we cannot justify it morally, cannot square it with our professions of religion or with what we know of the principles underlying Western civilisation, do not even consider it expedient since we fear it must quickly divide the Union into implacably opposed white and coloured nationalisms with the former outnumbered four to one (without reckoning on the proportions just over our frontiers) and on the defensive before our own consciences and the accusations of the world.

This article is, therefore, a plea to those who cannot stomach the racial basis of Nationalism to stop taking wistfully back to a past that died with Malan's victory in 1948 and the death of General Smuts in 1950, and, instead, to re-examine the whole foundation of their political philosophy so as to formulate a sound and consistent policy for the new South Africa that lies ahead of us.

I think we shall nearly all agree with the Nationalists that "white civilisation" is something worth preserving. The phrase is unfortunate and (as used in this country) often deliberately misleading, implying that civilisation and skin-colour are in some way connected. The only historical justification for this complacent view is that "white civilisation" was brought to Southern Africa by Europeans. What they brought, however, was European or Western civilisation—a cultural, ethical and technical heritage which was evolved among the mixed European, Asian and African peoples inhabiting the European geographical area. It has, therefore, no racial basis. Apart from its technical aspects, which are comparatively superficial, the essence of civilisation consists of its system of cultural standards and moral values. Without these, its material conveniences merely enable it to perpetrate bigger and better barbarities, until the decay of morality and the cult of force have brought us to the brink of the extinction of the human race by atomic and bacteriological warfare. On no much smaller stage the white community of South Africa similarly exploits its monopoly of physical power to perpetuate a morally and rationally indefensible situation.

Now the moral and cultural values of Western civilisation derive from three primary sources:

Asian religions, Greek philosophy and Roman law. None of these was un-racial; none was specifically "European." Each had its roots in a past embracing the spiritual and intellectual legacy of three continents. And the fundamental principle on which the whole of European civilisation precariously stands today—the intrinsic value of the free and independent individual personality as the link between the divine and the human god, therefore, as the only possible creator of the higher ethical and cultural values that constitute civilisation—is shared in slightly varying degrees by all the great spiritual traditions and is the basis of the great liberal-humanistic tradition which is the most important single element in Western civilisation. Thus the latter is no exclusive possession of one race or one geographical area. Its roots are as wide as mankind and, while its present destructive form was shaped by the astonishing technical energy and inventiveness of the European peoples during the last 400 years, even these were originally stimulated by the recovery of techniques and intellectual processes from the ancient world through the Afro-Asian channel of Islam and lately have owed much to the new multi-racial continent of America.

The Nationalist distortion of the traditional South African view that "white civilisation" depends for its survival on the perpetual domination of one race group is, therefore, historical nonsense and directly contrary to the basic precept of that very civilisation itself. However small the civilised minority of our non-European may be, any political philosophy which identifies the boundaries of civilisation with those of the race or colour groups is using standards of judgment alien to Western civilisation. Whenever in their histories European peoples have forsaken their ideals and standards, they have paid the price in the decay of civilisation and the loss of freedom, as in the Nazi and Communist experiments. With the Swart Acts we seem to be setting a similar course.

We have, therefore, to decide whether in our inescapable multi-racial setting we are going to apply the tests of Western civilisation or something else—something which, however fervently we may repudiate the charge, is indistinguishable from Herrenvolkism. The nationalists have made their decision. And, with all respect, most of us who supported the Opposition at the election agreed with the Nationalists in our hearts to put race first and civilisation second, whenever there was a clash of colour. We did not disagree so much about principles and strategy as about tactics and methods of application. Now we must be utterly honest with ourselves. Let those who in their hearts stand for the permanent retention of exclusive white power privilege, either as good in itself or because they imagine that it is the road to self-preservation, go over to the Nationalists and accept the full implications and dangers of Herrenvolkism. The rest of this article is for those who feel that that way leads to moral ruin and national suicide in the head-on collision of mutually exclusive nationalisms.

I will make one reservation, however. Total apartheid (i.e. territorial partition with exchange of populations and complete racial segregation) need not conflict with our basic civilised principle, if it is achieved by mutual consent or neutral arbitration, thus ensuring our surrender of sufficient land and resources to create a viable Bantustan. If the Nationalists use their unexpectedly large majority to come out in favour of this sort of apartheid, we must consider it as a morally defensible solution of our racial impasse, despite the crippling material sacrifices it involves. But to be applied in a just manner it requires a humbling of white arrogance and a willingness to treat as between equals, which Nationalists seem unlikely to attain in the foreseeable future.

BRITAIN'S COLOUR BAR IN AFRICA

II—EXAMPLE OF THE CAPE COLONY

By JULIUS LEWIN

Reprinted by courtesy of the Union of Democratic Control, London, which first published this material in pamphlet form

THE second quarter mentioned was effective political rights in the British colonies in East and Central Africa where people of African and Indian descent have separate forms of political representation. Each racial group is represented on the Legislative Council by members of that group. But the representation is nowhere in proportion to the numbers in each group, as the following table indicates:—

African Population: Northern Rhodesia 1,660,000, Kenya 5,218,000, Tanganyika 7,332,539, Uganda 4,914,211; African representatives in Legislative Council: 4, 6, 4, 8 respectively.

European Population: Northern Rhodesia 18,700, Kenya 29,840, Tanganyika 10,448, Uganda 1,448. European representatives in Legislative Council: 10, 14, 7, 4 respectively.

Asian Population: Northern Rhodesia 11,117, Kenya 114,702, Tanganyika 55,322, 33,767; Asian representatives in Legislative Council: 0, 3, 3, 4 respectively.

The table of figures shows that the white people, who are in such dependency the smallest group, have much the strongest representation. In fact, the representatives elected by the small minority of white people dominated the Legislative Councils in Northern Rhodesia and in Kenya. In Uganda, where the European population is very tiny, its representatives, together with those of Asians, are equal in number to those of Africans. In Tanganyika, a huge territory whose administration is supervised by the United Nations, equal representation has recently been proposed for each of the three groups. But the white community has fiercely opposed the adoption of this principle of equal representation. At the time this is written (October, 1951), it is not known whether the Colonial Office will support the principle or abandon it and face severe criticism in the Trusteeship Council of the United Nations. In comparable circumstances in 1946, the Colonial Office abandoned the principle after having first itself proposed it as the basis of the constitution of the federal assembly that now exists in East Africa.

The problem of political representation in a mixed society is a real one. The pattern adopted by Britain in East and Central Africa follows the lines of communal representation. The white people, the Indians, and the Africans are regarded as three separate communities which must always be treated differently. This policy has the effect of accentuating those very differences and hostilities which are usually deplored as an obstacle to inter-racial co-operation. It makes each racial group approach every public question solely from the angle of its own group interest. It means that everyone is encouraged to strong loyalty to his own racial group and none to the country as a whole. The British Government and the local administration do nothing effective to build bridges between these communities to bring them closer together in the hope of developing a common society in which all civilised men and women, regardless of their race or colour would enjoy equal political rights.

If that aim were accepted as the mainspring of British policy, there is an alternative method of providing political representation in a mixed society. It is the one that the Cape Colony adopted in 1954 and retained until 1936. It is to have a common voters' roll to which anyone can gain access if he can satisfy certain personal qualifications. In the Cape there qualifications included a literacy test and either minimum annual earnings or the possession of some property. This electoral system worked well for upwards of a century. Its advantage is that it offers a means whereby Africans, as they acquire more education and a larger share of western civilisation, acquire also full citizenship in their own country. Under such a system the test of fitness to exercise political rights is not the colour of a man's skin but the degree of education or civilisation he has attained measured by objective legal standards. These standards could be set at an agreed level. Whatever level is chosen, such as passing a certain form of school and/or earning, say, £50 a year—for the low standards prevailing in the colonies must be kept in mind—the great majority, probably over 95 per cent, of the African people would at present fail to qualify. But the small minority who did qualify would realize that in time others would follow them in increasing numbers. And this realization would do much to prevent inter-racial bitterness and antagonism from growing in the minds of Africans, as it does under the present system of separate representation. For many years white voters would greatly outnumber the non-whites, but the latter might soon hold the balance of power in the constituencies which are usually very small. In time the non-whites on the roll would increase until they ultimately formed the majority. There is nothing to fear in this development. Black people who are educated and civilised should exercise the same rights as white people. The real danger lies not in pursuing such a policy but in rejecting it in favour of the present policies, based on colour, under which no black person, however well qualified, can have the same rights as a white man.

Such a policy would, however, enfranchise only the educated middle-class Africans, mostly living in urban areas. It is important and urgent that this should be done, but it does not solve the whole problem of political representation in a racially mixed society. The mass of illiterate Africans, living under tribal conditions, and other rural people, such as farm labourers, must also be granted some voice in the government of their country. It is possible, as South African experience since 1936 shows, to devise an electoral system based on indirect voting which would go some way to meet the needs of this large section, actually a majority of the population. Under this system, electoral units carry a block vote equal in value to the number of taxpayers—in their area. These units are tribal chiefs, local councils, and ad hoc committees of farm labourers. The South African system on these lines is open to criticism but, improved upon and reformed, it could offer a practical means of providing representation, during a period of transition, for the mass of uneducated people. Moreover, under British rule, the autocratic element represented by the chiefs among the electoral units will be diminished to the extent that "Native Authorities" become genuine local authorities.

There is no reason why the educated urban middle class Africans and the rural tribesmen should not both enjoy political representation by different means at the same time, the first on the common roll and the second by indirect voting. Hitherto, the existence of the majority of illiterate tribesmen has been artificially emphasized as an argument against the enfranchisement of the minority of educated Africans.

When the old Cape system of an equal franchise for Africans was abolished in South Africa in 1936, some of us South Africans protested strongly and did all we could to oppose its abolition. Its abolition was, however, made easier by the fact that the quite different pattern of separate racial representation had already been adopted in British colonies to the north of the Union of South Africa. Our opponents demanded to know why South Africa should pursue a policy that Britain, with its liberal traditions had rejected.

The last vestige of a non-racial franchise was abandoned in South Africa last year (1951) when the coloured people (who are not Africans) were also removed from the common voters' roll. The British Press was again full of sharp protests against this disenfranchisement. British politicians said nothing. They knew that there has never been a common roll in their own African colonies, although social conditions there are more favourable to the idea of equal citizenship than they are in the Union. While Britain rejects the principle of equal rights for all civilised men and women, on what grounds can Englishmen criticize South Africa for not returning it?

"Its defects were discussed by me in the booklet Political Representation of Africans in the Union, published in 1942 by the South African Institute of Race Relations."

"Equal rights for all civilised men" was historically the slogan used to defend the non-racial franchise in the Cape Colony in the 19th century. In revising this principle in these words, I mean by civilisation to imply here a certain standard of education. No other test of civilisation has ever been seriously suggested.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

A NEW BRIDGE BETWEEN INDIA AND AFRICA

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

A RECENT issue of 'India News' contained the report of a function in Eira in which the Indian Ambassador presented prizes to Eiraan children won in a world competition organised for the children of the world by the Indian weekly, 'Shankar's Weekly.'

The prizes themselves were quite slight for the children. But what struck me about the whole competition was that it was one of the best contributions to world peace. The young of all races were brought together and had awakened in them the consciousness of Man's common origin and his common destiny. We need more and more activities which bring together the children of the world. For children who have grown up understanding their equals in other lands will not be readily susceptible to indoctrination by the saboteurs of the world. We can save our children from the perils which threaten us in our times by enabling them to know and appreciate the children in other lands. Anything which enables our children to grow up in an atmosphere of human brotherhood deters the support of all men of goodwill. I trust, for this reason, that when next 'Shankar's Weekly' organises another world competition it will include South African children of African, Indian and European descent.

This gives me an idea. The fact that the adults in South Africa have been brought up on racial suspicion or hatred does not mean that nothing should be done to break down the barriers which divide us. Some years ago the Government of India started the practice of setting aside certain funds every year for the purpose of giving a few Africans professional training in India. This was nothing more than a gesture of Indian goodwill towards the people of Africa. But Malan's Government does not believe in goodwill. He who tries to bring together men with different racial backgrounds is regarded as an enemy. As a result the scholarships lie unused to this day—because of the ban imposed by Dange against Africans attending Indian universities.

Why not use these funds to set up a trust whose job would be to build goodwill and friendship between the people of India and the people of Africa?

The more we, of Africa, understand India's real intentions in Africa, the better we shall understand the Indian in our midst and, as a result, the stronger will be the bonds between us as South Africans. With that, the day will come nearer when we and the Indian shall be free men and women in the land of our birth.

I should like to see steps taken to defeat the Dange ban in a more positive and more creative way—and in a field where no dictator can have his way: in the intellectual field. For example, there would be something like the Nehru Prize of Peace Between India and Africa. It would be awarded periodically to men and women of every race who would have done the most within a given period to better Afro-Indian relations. There should be no colour bar in it; everybody should be eligible.

Such a prize among other things, would create an atmosphere of intellectual amity between Africa and India. That, in itself, is a very valuable bridge to build. It would awaken African interest in the true significance for the world of India's culture. At the moment we hear a lot about India's culture. Certainly there must be something in a culture which can present the world with as potent a method for making our world freer as satyagraha. But beyond that, India's culture is very much like a light put under a vessel—instead of being put on a hill-top to radiate light in a darkened world, very much in need of light.

We, non-whites of the world, have to accustom ourselves more and more to the concept of a common political destiny for the men of colour in the world as the first prerequisite to convince the West that colour is an unreliable criterion by which to judge human values. The people of Africa are not free to-day. They and their lands are being exploited by the West for purposes which are largely dangerous to the African. That is the fate of men who are not free. But India herself is not as yet free, she is not as yet accepted as an equal among the nations of the world as long as a man of Indian descent can be humiliated in countries like South Africa just because Indian blood courses in his veins.

To the extent that this Indian cannot be free, no matter what he does, as long as we are not free, he and I have a common political destiny in the world. Both of us are called upon to fight an evil which works for our destruction—simply because we happen not to have white skins. He is our best friend and a true lover of humanity who will help us to build our alliance on very firm foundations. That is why I propose a Nehru Prize for Peace Between Africa and India. It will be a lasting bridge to seal the bonds which link us with India.

Most people in this country do not as yet realise that the alliance between ourselves and the Indian is becoming an issue of life and death for the men of colour in this country. The road we have taken with the local Indian allows of no turning-back. We just have to keep on marching forward, until victory. If we part in the way, disaster will come our way and the only man who will be helped by that will be Malan. I think all of us should at all times worry ourselves over how best to devise ways and means to strengthen the bonds that tie us. The Malanites are not asleep. They work day and night to make us quarrel and to spread misunderstanding. If they do that, let us always reply by using superior weapon—like intellectual amity.

Book On South African Non-European Cricket

The long felt need for an authoritative reference and record book, on "non-European" Cricket will be met in the near future. The book will be modelled on the lines of the famous "Wisden"—the Cricketers' bible. The Almanach will cover all the important Non-European National Tournament matches, A resume of the South African Federation matches, with detail scores etc. The honour of being chosen as the Cricketers' of the year, will be bestowed fittingly upon five outstanding Non-European Cricketers in South Africa. Statistics apart, the volume will contain a number of articles of absorbing interest. The Almanach will be edited and compiled by Mr. D. N. Banda and Mr. S. Reddy. Both are well known Cricket administrators in South Africa. Mr. Banda is the Secretary of the South African Indian Cricket Union and Western Province Cricket Federation. Mr. Reddy is the Secretary of the Eastern Province Cricket Board of Control and President of the Eastern Province Indian Cricket Union. OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

"Our motto must ever be conversion by gentle persuasion and a constant appeal to the head and heart. We must therefore be ever courteous and patient with those who do not see eye to eye with us. We must resolutely refuse to consider our opponents as enemies."

"A Satyagrahi bids good bye to fear. He is therefore never afraid to trusting the opponent. Even if the opponent plays him false twenty times, the Satyagrahi is ready to trust him the twenty-first time, for an implicit trust in human nature is the very essence of his creed."

—Mahatma Gandhi.

NO PEACE UNLESS WHITES AND NON-WHITES LEARN TO LIVE IN A SPIRIT OF PARTNERSHIP

There could be no peace in Africa unless the White and Coloured peoples learnt to live and build together in a spirit of partnership, said Dr. Ralph Bunche, director of the Trusteeship division of the United Nations, in a radio interview in Washington last week.

He drew a parallel between the situation in Africa today and the development of Asia.

"There is a great opportunity for the world to avoid in Africa the errors which were made in an earlier era in Asia, with tragic consequences which are still taking their toll," he said. "In Africa today one finds the twin issues of Colonialism and Racism on a greater scale than anywhere else in the world.

"The troubled areas in Africa are mainly where the two races, White and Black, are found living together. These areas are primarily in the North, East and South.

"These issues, especially where they boil up into trouble, are of great concern to the United Nations."

It was still to be demonstrated, Dr. Bunche added, that the two races in Africa, White and Black, could live together and learn together in a spirit of partnership. There could be no peace on any other basis.

It is imperative for the wellbeing of the world at large and for the foundations of peace, which we are trying to build in the United Nations, that this lesson be well learned and quickly learned in Africa. Sapa-Reuter.

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 12TH JUNE, 1953

Task Before The Liberal Party

We believe the Liberal Party has come more too soon in the life of South Africa. But before seeking the co-operation of the non-Whites it will have a great deal to do among the Whites. The mental attitude of the White race which has been poisoned all these years resulting in the present clash of colour, must be changed and it must be done rapidly before it gets too late—if indeed it has not already got too late. The Nationalist Government is playing havoc with its poisonous Apartheid policy. Mr. Strydom, Mr. Louw, Dr. Verwoerd and Mr. Swart will not be checked soon from having their own way the non-Whites will of course experience difficult times and the lives and property of a good many will perhaps be ruined or lost, but it will be a sorry day for White South Africa. If they do not give the non-Whites with grace what is their due according to the light of the non-Whites and not according to what the Whites think, the time will come, and it will come much sooner than one expects, when they will be compelled to quit South Africa with disgrace. These are not vain words; it is a prophesy which is bound to come true.

The Liberals should know that what is right is real and what is wrong is unreal. If they claim their policy to be realistic it must be based on absolute Right and absolute Justice. They must have a powerful Press and all the modern conveniences must be put to work vigorously to propagate their views and they must be interpreted into action both individually and collectively. In this they can well learn a lesson from the Communists. They have a hard task and they have to fight against time. That is of course no reason to despair. They must work with faith that Right must in the end prevail. They cannot carry on their work sitting in their arm chairs. They will have to cultivate the spirit of renunciation, they will have to forego many of the comforts of life and they will have to completely dedicate themselves to their cause and to God. There is no such thing as 'Afrikaner nationalism.' The issue today is between the growing African nationalism and Afrikaner hoodliganism. We do not thereby wish to implicate all Afrikaners for there are fine persons among them for whom we have the deepest respect. We refer only to those presently in power and their supporters.

It needs to be recognised that Apartheid based on the race and colour of one's skin is an unmitigated evil—a hydra-headed monster. There can be no compulsory submission to it nor voluntary acquiescence to it. It is sinful to nurture it. It must be killed right out. As Dr. Ralph Bunche has rightly said, the mistakes that have been committed by Asia or rather, by India, must not be copied by South Africa. India is repenting and is atoning for them. America too, as we see, is repenting for its colour policy, though, it never at any time existed in law, and she is moving speedily towards its elimination. It is South Africa alone where it has been established in law and steps are fast being taken to entrench it. The thinking non-White people do not begrudge the Whites their leadership. They fully recognise and appreciate its worth. The only way to retain it is not by compulsion but by merit. It has to be judged by its merit as indeed every human being is to be judged by his or her merit and not by the skin colour.

NOTES AND NEWS

Church Reply To Louw

SEPARATE educational establishments for Europeans and non-Europeans were at this stage probably the best means of ensuring that no restrictions were placed on any man, whatever his colour or race, from developing his full personality, states the latest issue of the 'Church News', the official journal of the Church of the Province. The statement is in reply to an accusation by Mr. Louw, Minister of Economic Affairs, that certain Anglican bishops were not practising what they preached.

"He repeated the old jibe about admitting the children of Coloured and Native communicants in Anglican schools.

"Of course, Mr. Louw must know that the integration of non-Europeans in State citizenship does not involve any particular policy on the plane of social contacts.

"These must, of necessity, be voluntary, reciprocal and spontaneous; they do, in fact, not infrequently occur."

The Church claimed that no obstacles should be placed in the way of anyone seeking to exercise knowledge and ability. The manner by which these were acquired was irrelevant.

The Logic Of Apartheid

Commenting on the above the 'Cape Argus' writes:

'Church News,' the organ of the Church of the Province of South Africa, in commenting on the controversy between Mr. Eric Louw and the Anglican bishops on apartheid, argue that the integration of non-Europeans into State citizenship does not necessitate any particular policy on the plane of social contacts. What the Church contends, further, is not that all persons should be educated together, but that no person should be prevented by race or colour from developing his full personality in culture and education, or from making full use of the knowledge and talents so acquired. It is commonly held by Nationalists that integration will and must result in social contacts, and it can be argued that separate education need not prevent anyone from developing his full personality. What is apparently not realised by some church spokesmen is that Nationalist policy does not rest on the denial of educational opportunities, but on the affirmation of the principle of racial separation in every sphere without exception. This, at least, is what it is meant to be, and this is what Mr. Louw assumes the bishops to be opposing. But when we come to the actual working of this policy and ask what practical measures are being taken to give effect to it, the answer of the Nationalists is just as ambiguous as that of the bishops to Mr. Louw. Social contacts, it is true, are being restricted in certain fields, and it appears that special efforts are being made to prevent intellectuals belonging to different races from meeting each other. But that is about all. While much clamour is raised about opposition to the integration of non-Europeans into State citizenship, their integration into the ordinary working life of the country is proceeding rapidly and unchecked. There is no economic apartheid, nor is there likely to be any. Yet no policy so comprehensive as that of apartheid is intended to be can have any hope of success unless it has a sound economic basis.

Lacking In Courage And Inclination

We must confess that we are a little disappointed with the explanation made by the Church of the Province to Mr. Louw's accusation that certain Anglican bishops were not practising what they preached. The charge is true and it cannot be explained away. No amount of equal facilities and opportunities granted to non-Whites can condone the aim of segregation on the score of colour of one's skin. There is no objection for such a thing in the Bible and it is not practised in times of trouble. Why should that evil be indulged in time of peace. An evil is an evil and the Church should be the last to allow it to be practised and the first to condemn it right out. Mr. Louw has certainly cornered at least a section of the Anglican Church and it must humbly admit its guilt. The only explanation for it is that the Church either lacks the courage or the inclination to rise above the common prejudices, which, of course, does not redound to its credit. The country is in need of a proper lead from the Church and the Church must be bold enough to give it irrespective of all consequences. It can give that lead effectively only by practice and not by precept alone.

Passive Resistance Against Federation

A conference of the African organisations in Lusaka, attended by the Rev. Michael Scott, has reaffirmed the intention of certain Native bodies to oppose Central African federation by passive resistance. After sitting in closed session until midnight the conference, which consisted of representatives of the African Congresses of Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, the Nyasaland Chiefs' Council, and the Southern Rhodesia All-Africa Convention, issued a statement reaffirming its opposition to Federation. It did not, however, put forward any alternative scheme. The statement appealed to members of the British Parliament to grant representatives of African organisations in Central Africa a hearing before the enabling Bill for federation was passed. It said, "While not accepting the proposals for federation or partition, we believe that the co-operation of the African people and people of other communities would be whole-hearted in drawing up and working a Constitution which was not based on segregation or the supposition of racial superiority." Federation was morally wrong, and the organisations would not co-operate with it. If federation were imposed, they had pledged themselves to passive resistance, the statement added. Subsequently it was learnt that the Rev. Michael Scott was deported from Nyasaland. Under the heading "Deportation Without Trial," the 'Observer' (London) commented on the action of the Nyasaland authorities. This deportation it says, shows the extravagant lengths to which the Colonial Office is prepared to go to defend its position on Central African Federation. "Autocratic powers of banishment and deportation are being invoked in the place of trial by law in some British Colonies in Africa with increasing frequency. Although the Colonial Secretary told the House of Commons last October that action would be taken to encourage Colonial subjects to ensure that British subjects have the right to normal judicial processes before being deported nothing has been done to implement this in Nyasaland and in certain other colonies. As the position now stands, Mr. Scott has no opportunity of clearing himself in a court of law of the strange-sounding allegations made against him by the Colonial Office. There is today no safeguard against a Governor using his autocratic powers to rid himself of political opponents," said the newspaper.

The Rev. Scott, deported from Nyasaland, said on his arrival at London Airport that he would make inquiries at the Colonial Office over his deportation. He hoped to return to Nyasaland, he said.—Sapa-Reuters.

Dr. Frank Loeschner

Dr. Frank Loeschner, who is at present in the Union, visited Durban last week. Dr. Loeschner who occupies an important position in the U.S.A. and is a man of wide experience and knowledge, is Executive Director of the Commission on Human Relations, City of Philadelphia. He was formerly Professor of Sociology at Temple University, and Visiting Professor of Sociology at Haverford College, Philadelphia. Dr. Loeschner is studying the question of race relations in South Africa. He delivered a most interesting lecture at the Durban International Club last Friday evening on how the racial question in the United States was being solved. Among the institutions he visited were the Adams College, the Ohlange Institute, Mahatma Gandhi's Phoenix Settlement and met many leading members of the European and non-European communities. His visit to the Union was sponsored by the South African Institute of Race Relations.

A Lecturer On Yoga

Sir Paul Dukes, a distinguished lecturer on Yoga is visiting Durban and will be delivering several lectures both on International Affairs and on Yoga for the Western World. Two lectures by Sir Paul Dukes, K.B.E. to be held at Gandhi Hall, Lange Street, Durban, are as follows: Thursday, June 18, at 8 p.m., "Yoga and Health." Origin and purpose of Yoga. The physical organism as the instrument of achieving this Hatya Yoga. The sacred physical arts. This lecture is illustrated with slides showing Yoga postures. Thursday, June 25, at 8 p.m., "Yoga and Mind." Control mind and emotions. Raja Yoga, Bhakti Yoga, Jnana Yoga. What is consciousness? Are we really awake? Fiction of the "I." Control of the mind through breath. Prana and pranayama. Dr. Anand Singh in the Chair. Sunday, June 21, at 8 p.m. "The Whole Man." This lecture is being organised by the Theosophical Society, Durban Lodge, will be held at Caxton Hall, Beach Grove, Durban.

GROUP AREAS PLANS

'The Star' (Johannesburg) dated May 23 writes as follows:

THE Group Areas Act was designed to eliminate racially mixed living, but it went further than that and for some classes it seriously threatens to eliminate living altogether.

It is this aspect of the Act that causes the greatest concern to all who would see racial adjustments made without flagrant injustice. In Johannesburg (as in Durban and elsewhere) the application of the Act could become a deadly threat to the livelihood of the whole Indian trading class in particular, and the conscience of the whole community must recoil from any action that will have so drastic and unwarranted a result.

Isolated Indian traders are to be found in various parts of the city, but they have established themselves particularly in part of Ferretown, where they form a compact block of experienced businesses of very long standing. Any group areas plan that has the effect of ejecting them would ruin them and could not be defended on the grounds of justice or any theory of race separation.

It is this kind of problem that makes the task imposed on the City Council almost an impossible one. Under constant pressure from above, it has nevertheless to take the responsibility for decisions affecting the lives of thousands of people. It is senseless in this context to talk of a conflict between 'liberals' and others. Long-standing obligation, plain decency and the interests of the city itself all demand that vested rights shall be respected.

Residential arrangements are scarcely less difficult. Where in the interests of apartheid, people are to be compelled to leave their homes it is essential that they should be provided with something equally good and acceptable, where they can enjoy conditions of ownership and convenience not less favourable than those they are compelled to surrender. They should not be the losers in any such deal, for it is none of their making.

It should never be forgotten that the Group Areas Act is a device of a Parliament elected by a White electorate. For all other sections it is an imposed design. All White authorities, from the Government downwards, must therefore lean backwards to do justice to those they rule. If sacrifices have to be made they should be made by those at whose desire this redistribution is being done.

It is in this spirit that the Act should be applied, and the council's difficulties arise from an attempt to reconcile it with the spirit of the Act itself. The ultimate responsibility before the world rests upon the Government.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

THE UNITED FRONT—(2) A PLEA FOR LIBERALISM

By C. W. M. GELL

Reprinted from 'The Forum' (Johannesburg)

APART from this one improbable contingency, we are therefore faced with the duty of basing our political philosophy on the uncompromising rejection of racism in all its forms and thus offering the country a clear-cut alternative principle to Nationalism. This we can only do by returning to the source-springs of our Western heritage and reaffirming our belief that the essence of civilisation lies in the moral and spiritual development of the individual personality. To make this possible we must provide all individuals with the maximum freedom compatible with social order, for personality only develops in freedom. Such restraints as are necessary to ensure the indispensable minimum of social discipline must apply to anti-social or immature persons of all groups, irrespective of colour, class, wealth or any other adventitious or external categories. We must, in short, treat all men and women on their merits as potentially valuable and responsible human personalities. This ideal finds its expression in the slogan of the old Cape liberal tradition: "Equal rights for all civilised people and equal opportunities for all to become civilised." In an organised, civilised society this means that all shall have access to education and economic opportunities so that they may profit from them according to their abilities. And it involves giving to all who are capable of exercising them in a responsible manner those minimum political, social and economic privileges which are legally known as "rights."

Before considering the immediate practical implications of the liberal philosophy, we must understand that it is not for us to decide these matters alone. Non-Europeans have their own opinions about the disabilities and frustrations of their lives and the way these might be remedied. The U.P. certainly pledged itself to consult "moderate non-European opinion." But it proclaimed a four-point non-European programme with qualifications and reservations in terms which even genuinely moderate non-European leaders could not reasonably be expected to accept. This simply will not do. But for reasons of principle and expediency we have to take into constructive account the aspirations and resentments of the small articulate non-European intelligentsia. Consultation, as the Nationalists have rightly pointed out, involves concessions or is meaningless. And whoever these "moderate" non-European leaders may be, I am very sure that African and Indian opinion will not accept as representative any convention that excludes the African and Indian Congresses. Those who sit at negotiating with what we have very ignorantly regarded as these "extremists" should consider how greatly their case has been weakened by the ousting from the Congresses not merely of genuine Communists but of a large number of "statutory Communists" as well. They should also ponder the significance of the fact that no non-European leaders, however "moderate," have publicly repudiated the political policies of the Congresses, even if they have withheld their active support.

Some Practical Matters

I will now briefly suggest some of the practical matters with which liberal policy must concern itself. First must come the extension of the franchise to responsible non-Europeans, because only when politicians become accountable at the polls to some section of non-European opinion will they really begin to replace their uni-racial outlook by a multi-racial one and make adequate provision for those running sores of our society, non-European homelessness and disease. Extending the franchise not only offers non-Europeans an enlarging share in the higher political direction of the country and a stake in the civilised community without which their loyalty is improbable and their active disaffection into anti-white nationalism almost inevitable; it is the only token of the honesty of our intentions which will effectively rally peoples grown cynical about white pledges and good faith. I dealt last month in an article in the 'Forum' with the red herring of inter-marriage and the fear of being swamped by superior numbers. We must accept the latter as the lesser of several risks in our racial dilemma and as the unavoidable commitment of our Western faith. We cannot refuse civic rights to the small civilised minority of the coloured peoples when only their piety deserves what their merits deserve much more obviously than some of our frail white brethren. And we must extend rights not with the speed at which the "immature mass" develops, but as fast as individuals can prove they have attained the standards of responsible conduct. Our concern is with persons, not masses nor races nor groups.

I hope that those who sit down to work out the franchise qualifications with the help of non-European leaders will eventually decide against some unit electorates which inevitably breed sectional loyalties and may later be used to peg the representation of under-privileged groups at a strength incommensurate with their numbers. We should recall that we have far the highest proportion of whites to non-whites of any African country. This not only puts us under the obligation of showing the way forward; it should largely relieve us of the fear of admitting the civilised non-European into a common citizenship. Smaller minorities have done it and their civilisation survived. I cannot think of any minority-based civilisation that long survived its refusal to allow the majority to work their way up.

Other matters incompatible in their present form with civilised principles are the industrial colour bar, the "master and servant" laws, the refusal of legal recognition to non-European trade unions (though I hope white trade unionists will see the dangers of racial unions and take steps to avoid them), discrimination except by the purse in services provided from public funds, residential segregation arbitrarily imposed by one group without redress in the courts (the Group Areas Act once again merely took the "traditional South African attitude" to its logical conclusion and thus exposed its immorality), the Suppression of Communism Act and the two Swart Acts. Perhaps nothing more devastatingly illustrated the lack of principles guiding U.P. policy than the party's equivocal attitude to these last two Acts and the division lines on the Group Areas Act and the Native Laws Amendment Act.

Liberal Principles

The application of liberal principles makes possible a perfectly straightforward, consistent line on all these matters and on the doomed attempt to recompact government-sponsored tribalism on reluctant Africans by the two Bantu Authorities Acts and a specious sort of "Native education." Indeed, consistent liberalism will soon reveal the contradictions with which Nationalists try to conceal their hypocrisy and thus put them on the moral defensive. For the future does not lie in a return to the patriarchal social ethics of the Voorrekkers, but either in increasing racial strife or in partnership and mutual trust between peoples moving rapidly towards equality of human status.

And it is for this that nothing would contribute more immediately to a lessening of racial tension than the abolition of the past laws. They are justified on the ground of identifying criminals and infirm control. But they are quite ineffective for both purposes. Criminals and illegal immigrants to the towns quickly provide themselves with forged papers and the laws bear most heavily on the law-abiding majority who are daily and hourly liable to arrest with its attendant inconveniences and discourtesies for no worse "crime" than forgetfulness or carelessness. If any of these laws can really be justified on practical grounds, let the onus be on those who want them retained to prove it. The U.P. will remember what it said during the election campaign about whites having to carry passes, though without the liability to instant arrest. No great effort is required to imagine how respectable non-Europeans must regard these laws.

Finally, let us be clear about the purpose of a liberal policy. It is not a short cut back to power. There is no such short cut today for the Opposition; we are in the wilderness, possibly for several elections, and the Nationalists are going to make it no easier for us to regain power democratically. Probably we had to test out the old formulas once more in order to learn from bitter experience how politically bankrupt they are. Now let us settle an account with our consciences that we postponed for the period of the election. In doing so we may immediately lose some of our M.P.s and voters to the Nationalist Party, but that is where racists and repressionists properly belong. From this Dunkirk of our political hopes we shall emerge stronger if we are relieved of the impossible task of reconciling the irreconcilables within the framework of one party. The loss of numbers will be more than offset by the gain in morale. Despite abuse and the risks of social ostracism and legal prosecution under the all-embracing Swart Acts, we shall stand forth without shame or fear as representatives of that "growing and audacious liberalism" to which Dr. Malan referred in his final pre-election broadcast, conscious that the basis of our faith more nearly represents Western civilisation than anything in our opponents' colour caste mentality and clinging that we have a long-term job of enlightenment ahead of us in which our personal example will count as highly as our principles.

The certainty of growing racial strife and the probability of white defeat (about which I wrote in April) have been brought nearer by the result of the election. The alternative possibility of racial harmony on a basis of sharing the benefits and responsibilities of civilisation has made that much more difficult to achieve. But if it is ever to prevail, it requires that we no longer delay our first investment in a policy which, however immediately unpopular with the white electorate, provides the only distinctive and constructive alternative to National racialism. This is something worth fighting for, a rallying point for all men of goodwill from either side of the colour bar against the day when more will see that united as a nation we stand and divided we fall. Even during the early years of our comparative political impotence we shall be performing an important function by offering a refuge from despair to both Europeans and non-Europeans who from their different positions see no solution but the use of repressive or revolutionary force.

To those who are unaccustomed to a South African political party boldly taking its stand in advance of public opinion I would quote the words General Smuts used in another context:

"When you are up against a situation so terrible in its possibilities for good or evil, you can do only one thing, even if you fail utterly. And that is the right thing, the thing you can justify to your conscience and to the conscience of all reasonable and fair minded people."

I believe that the political philosophy I have outlined here is right and that it offers the only practicable alternative to the disaster that parties pledged to white or black domination will bring upon our country. I hope that we will be able to implement it in time.

THE WIDER WORLD

By JOHN GILD

MR PATON WAS DISAPPOINTING

THE first meeting of the Liberal party in Johannesburg last week was a success if measured by the public attendance. But it was a failure if measured by any other standard. The chief speaker was Alan Paton, who said in the course of his speech: "The question of mixed marriages, separation of races, and so on, can be settled later on according to the wishes of the people in the party.... If there are any colour bars, they must be by consent, but not imposed against the will of the people."

Now, with all due respect to Alan Paton, this strikes me as very muddled thinking on his part. Before rushing into publicity and print, surely the Liberal party ought to clear up its own mental confusion. Does Mr. Paton really imagine that, at this time of history, you can find any representative non-Europeans who will kindly "consent" to a colour bar? I suggest to the Liberals, who are trying to attract some support from Africans, that the only sensible and dignified attitude for them to adopt is to oppose racial discrimination wherever it occurs in any shape or form in the Union's laws and public practices. Once the Liberals begin to compromise on any aspect of racialism, they are doomed to moral as well as political failure and frustration. White folk who want to make half-hearted compromises with firm principle can always remain in the United party, which is based on a denial of the value of principle in politics. Of course, the fact of the matter is that Mr. Paton is a novelist with no experience of the kind that tough realists require in political life.

Oom Kosie Failed

The new Liberal party has, however, done one good thing. By raising the question of the franchise for non-whites, it has put the Press on the defensive. The case for a common roll is so reasonable and so strong that those who are against it have to resort to the most absurd arguments. This was amply illustrated last week when the Johannesburg "Star" said in an editorial: "Africans are not fit to vote on a common roll because the Native is a newcomer to the intricacies of the civilisation we know—the civilisation of staple foodstuffs, aerodynamics, and international finance." To this Patrick Duncan wrote an ironic reply, drawing a verbal picture of Oom Kosie being examined on the plateland to see whether he really knew enough about those three subjects to qualify as a voter. As Mr. Duncan well said, "white people will begin to think that there must be something in the idea of a common roll if it is opposed by such arguments" as the editor of "The Star" was driven to produce.

Appeasement In The Air

The United party is now seriously considering the question whether it should give the Government the two-thirds majority legally required to disfranchise the Coloured voters. These in favour of doing this produce two main reasons. First, they say it would end the constitutional crisis which is so unsettling to investors and businessmen generally. Secondly, they argue that the alternative is to let Dr. Mafema find some way of packing the appeal court with judges sympathetic to his view. Once this has been done, the legal equality that the English language still enjoys with Africans will also have been undermined. That equality is today the only other chance in the constitution that is also entrenched. I don't suppose that anyone will really be deceived by these specious arguments. The potential "quillings" in the United party, as Mr. Struss himself called them, are now led by a new member of parliament, Mr. Blair Coetzee. I believe that he is a wealthy man who has made money by publishing poor-quality fiction in Afrikaans. What is interesting to speculate is how and why Mr. Coetzee and his allies have become so strong within the United party. My own surmise is that the mine-owners and other big businessmen want to keep the U.P. from becoming anything like a really progressive party. So they support and influence the conservative elements within it. They want business to carry on as usual undisturbed by a clash of political principles in the country. They want opposition to the Government to be purely formal so that the deceptive appearances of parliamentary democracy can be maintained.

High Cost Of Cold War

Here is a graphic illustration of what the western world is spending on preparations for a third world war:

"The world in arms is spending the sweat of its labourers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children. The cost of one modern heavy bomber is equal to a modern brick school in more than 30 cities. It is also equal to two electric power plants, each serving a town of 60,000 people. It is also equal to the cost of two fine, fully equipped hospitals or some 50 miles of concrete highway. We pay for a single fighter plane with a half-million bushels of wheat. We pay for a single destroyer with new homes that could have housed more than 8,000 people. This is not a way of life at all, in any true sense. Under the cloud of threatening war, it is humanity hanging from a cross of iron."

You would never guess who made the speech from which these ringing phrases are extracted. It was no less a person than President Eisenhower. And they apply not only to the budget of the United States but also to South Africa where Parliament last year voted £40 million for approval "defence" expenditure.

A

Instruments, apparatus and appliances imported by a passenger as part of his/her personal baggage and in actual use by him/her in the exercise of his/her profession or calling are exempt from payment of duty under the Indian Customs Tariff.

Household Goods.—The following articles are exempt from duty to the extent of quantity or value mentioned below:

Tobacco 1 lb., perfumed spirit 1 pint, cigarettes 100 in number, cigars 50 in number, platinum Rs. 50/-, glass and crockery Rs. 100/-, silver and platedware Rs. 200/-, cutlery Rs. 75/-, household linen Rs. 100/-, kitchen utensils Rs. 25/-, portable stove or cooker Rs. 10/-.

Note.—Double the above allowances are admissible when husband and wife are travelling together.

Personal Jewellery.—Personal jewellery up to Rs. 5000/- in value per passenger is exempt from duty.

Note.—The above limit may be extended at the discretion of the Customs Collector provided the passenger is not resident in India, not visiting this country on business or accompanying anyone on business, and his/her status warrants the ownership of the jewellery.

Souvenirs.—Souvenirs up to the value of Rs. 50/- are admitted free as personal baggage. Souvenirs may be taken to include things given or kept to recall the past, or as a memento of the past, or a memento of a special place or occasion etc. but shall not include any consumable stores.

Tourists.—Foreign Nationals visiting India as tourists who are not the residents of India may be exempted from payment of duty up to the maximum limit of Rs. 100 by the Collector of Customs in suitable case on articles like cameras, films, binoculars, and such other articles with which a tourist generally equips himself during his temporary stay in India but not on consumable stores such as liquors. This concession is not applicable in the case of passengers who are residents of neighbouring countries like Alps, Cairo, Persian Gulf Ports, Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma, Foreign Territories in India and East African Ports.

Articles Of Deceased Persons.—Articles imported by a passenger and proved to the satisfaction of the Customs Collector to have belonged to his deceased wife or other deceased member of his family who was dependent on him at the time of death will be passed free on production of the requisite Death Certificate, provided that the effects or articles are such that they could have been passed free if brought by the deceased person himself.

Unaccompanied Baggage.—The bonafide baggage landed at any Customs Port within one month before or after the arrival of the passenger in India is exempt from duty. The Customs Collector in his discretion may extend the above period up to four months provided he is satisfied that (a) the failure to import the baggage within the time limit was due to circumstances beyond the passenger's control, and (b) the baggage was the property of and in possession of the passenger before he/she left for India.

Note.—A passenger whose baggage is likely to arrive at any port other than that of destination is advised to give this fact to the Customs Officer on duty so that in advance of the free allowance granted at the port of disembarkation may be passed promptly in order to enable the passing of the unaccompanied baggage without delay at the other port.

Restrictions Under The Foreign Exchange Regulations Act

(i) All foreign currency brought in by a passenger must be declared on his arrival to the Customs Officer on duty and the requisite currency certificate obtained in the appropriate form to be supplied by the Customs Officer on duty. Failure to do so may result in heavy penalties including forfeiture of the currency.

(ii) The import of gold and silver bullion, gold coins and uncurrent silver coins is prohibited unless covered by a permit from the Reserve Bank of India.

(iii) Import Bank of England notes is restricted up to £5 per passenger. Amounts in excess of this limit require a permit from the Reserve Bank of India.

(iv) Import of Burma currency notes is totally prohibited.

v) All other foreign currency notes may be imported without limit provided such currency is declared to the Customs Officer on arrival of the passengers.

Moral Re-Armament

A Group of leading Africans in Johannesburg joined on June 1 in paying tribute to Dr. Frank Buchman on the occasion of his 75th birthday and the 16th anniversary of his launching the programme of Moral Re-Armament.

Their message stated, "We congratulate you on your 75th birthday. We have keenly followed your struggle to bring about the new world here in Africa where God has placed people to work together like the fingers of a hand. We need God-inspired leadership and we will not rest until your message reaches the hearts of the yearning African millions."

It was signed by Dr. F. W. Nxumbe, a founder of the African National Congress Youth League; Dr. J. M. Nkomo, Editor, "Santu World"; Mr. R. V. Seloape Themo, former Editor, "Santu World"; Rev. O. A. D. Mooki, President, South African Advisory Boards Congress; Rev. L. H. Mahabane, President, South African Unity Movement; Mr. J. M. Mshale, Chairman of Advisory Board, Kwa Thema, Township, Springs.

In a world broadcast Dr. Buchman stated, "In my lifetime I have seen two L. story-making discoverers. The discovery of the atom as a source of untold energy and its mobilisation. That has given us the atomic age. The other discovery is of man as a source of untold energy and his mobilisation. That has given us the ideological age. It is the key to events around us."

"While statesmen plan for armies and conferences," continued Dr. Buchman, "the disruptive forces win the ordinary man. While cabinets call for more production there are 'slow-downs' in industry. While everyone calls for unity between nations disunity grows within nations. What is the answer? The statesmanship which caneth the ordinary man on the march with a vision, comradeship and plan to remake the world."

"Absolute moral standards are the well-spring of inspired statesmanship. We talk of peace and unity, but forget that men who harbour ill-will can solve the hates of nations. We criticise the stubbornness of others, but ignore the self-will which our children are so famous with in ourselves. We talk of Divine guidance but forget that it is the pure in heart who see God. It is not those who talk but those who listen who receive guidance. The key to new statesmanship is new statesmen."

BRITAIN'S COLOUR BAR IN AFRICA

III—PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION

By JULIUS LEWIN

Reprinted by courtesy of the Union of Democratic Control, London, which first published this material in pamphlet form

THE third feature of British policy under discussion is the reluctance, if not refusal, to concede social status to people who are not white. This is usually regarded more as a matter of private colour prejudice than of public racial discrimination. But the subject cannot be dismissed in that fashion. When hotels or restaurants or cinemas or shops in British colonies refuse to give Africans or Indians the same facilities as the offer to every white man, strong social colour bars grow up and the longer they last, the harder it is to break them down afterwards.

This is what is now happening in Northern Rhodesia, in Kenya, and in some other colonies. It is partly a consequence of the refusal of equal economic opportunities and equal political rights. For when these are denied to men because they are black or brown, it is easy to shut other doors in their faces and to put up notices "Europeans only." This is what is being done more and more in South Africa and it is this policy that has drawn on South Africa the fire of criticism from the world's Press.

At present it is left to the discretion of the proprietor of a cinema or hotel in a colony to decide whether he will enforce a colour bar or not. In order to avoid "trouble" with those people who have strong prejudices against colour, such as white South Africans, he will normally allow himself to be influenced by their hostility to the presence of non-Europeans.

In this way private prejudice in the individual mind can become highly infectious. When it spreads, as it has done in Rhodesia and East Africa, it sooner or later results in public discrimination, which usually takes the form of many different laws applying unequally to men of different race.

The process is discreetly referred to in a recent official report (Cmd. 8235, 1951, page 21) on Rhodesia and Nyasaland:

"A social colour bar exists in all three territories. . . Discriminatory practices include the habit of certain shops serving African customers through batches, the barring of Africans from European cinemas, hotels, and restaurants, and the provision of separate accommodation for Africans on the railways and in buses. Some post offices also have separate entrances for Africans."

Notice how easily the senior British officials who wrote that paragraph pass from privately-owned shops and cinemas to publicly-controlled post offices.

The personal prejudices of a few individuals, or a group of them, like South Africans entering Northern Rhodesia, can soon spread and influence many people. That is why the Government of a colony dare not shrug its shoulders and ignore colour prejudice as if it were merely a matter of personal tastes. This is in fact the attitude often adopted by British officials, who are themselves usually free from prejudice. But it is not good enough because it leaves the way wide open for the growth of prejudice.

Private prejudice leads to public discrimination. Then the enforcement of laws that discriminate against black or brown people encourages the growth of further prejudice against them because such people are seldom seen in exactly the same human situations or places as white people. By experiment and research in the United States, Americans have reached the conclusion that discrimination breeds prejudice.

The Government of a colony must therefore itself have a positive policy in this field. It cannot remain neutral and passive in the face of commercial or social practices that are calculated to encourage the growth of racial antagonism.

What could the Government do? It could, in the first place, announce that new licences will not be given, or old ones renewed, where hotels, restaurants, cinemas, or shops and similar public places refuse to provide equal amenities for all civilised people regardless of their race. It could, secondly, announce that it will not itself in future practise or countenance racial discrimination in any shape or form.

Americans, to their great credit, have devoted a lot of thought to these problems of racial relations. In several American States, laws have been passed which prohibit discrimination against a person on the ground of his race. Such laws apply to hotels and restaurants and cinemas and swimming baths and many other places. No such law has yet been passed in any British colony. Nor is there such a law even in Britain itself, where it should not be difficult to introduce it. It would be a splendid gesture to the peoples of the British colonial empire if Britain were to pass and to apply such a law. It would also be a heavy blow to those powerful people in British colonies who proclaim the doctrine of "white supremacy."

Such a law could hardly be passed without opposition. Those who will oppose it will no doubt produce, as they did in the United States, some fine theories about the importance of "separate but equal" facilities. Let no one be deceived by such a theory, for theory it will remain. In recent years, the United States Supreme Court, in convincing analyses of several cases brought before it, has rejected the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities as contrary to the principle of legal and human equality laid down in the American constitution. Acceptance of any such theory means endorsing in practice a policy of racial separation or apartheid, as it is called in South Africa, where it has brought indignity and misery to countless men and women whose only offence is the colour of their skin. Certainly no one who accepts social segregation or racial segregation in principle has any moral right to criticise the policies pursued in South Africa.

Although the tradition of the British common law also runs contrary to racial discrimination, administrative practices and cusoms recognising discrimination have been allowed to grow up in the colonies, partly because they are seldom challenged in the courts. Without entering into legal technicalities here, it must be said that experience both in South Africa and in the United States shows that the strongest protection for a policy of equal rights regardless of race would be a comprehensive, overriding constitutional declaration by Parliament affirming the principle in the most unequivocal terms.

A declaration to this effect made throughout East and Central Africa would be a historic landmark in progress along the road to racial freedom and human enlightenment in the dark continent.

Nor would any new departure of policy be involved in such a declaration. Neither the Labour nor the Conservative Party has ever accepted the need for racial discrimination. On the contrary, no Member of Parliament of any party would dare to stand up at Westminster and say he favoured racial discrimination in law or in social life. In theory Britain has never supported distinctions based on race. Yet in practice such distinctions are common enough in some of her dependencies. There is in fact a striking contrast between British political theory and British administrative practice. As long as this contrast continues, British good faith will be doubted by the rest of the world and Britain will be suspected, as she is by many in South Africa, of hypocrisy in these matters.

ILLUMINATING STUDY OF MAU MAU

MAU MAU AND THE KIKUYU,

By L. S. P. Leakey (Methuen) 7/6

I HOPE the prominence given to Stoeckham's Mau Mau in the April 'Form' will not distract attention from Dr. Leakey's far more satisfactory book on the same subject. Of comparable size, it costs little over half as much and is about twice as illuminating and constructive.

Where Mr. Stoeckham's more superficial book excels is in picturing what life amidst the terror means to a settler's family, a loyal chief, an African policeman, multi-racial society. Mr. Stoeckham, has nothing constructive to offer. And the reason for this is that, as "an old Kenya hand," he cannot dissociate himself from his environment long enough to see that the traditional basis of a white-dominated society has broken down and must be replaced either by an increasing reliance on force (both by those who would retain and those who wish to overthrow the existing regime) or by some new form of multi-racial partnership.

The present reviewer cannot say whether in the context of Kenya's particular problems the suggestions contained in Dr. Leakey's final chapter provide the right answers. At least they look more hopeful than Mr. Stoeckham's "Urukia us dream." And they do not minimise the material and emotional sacrifices that should be made by the white minority nor the long and arduous path to social readjustment that Africans have to tread. We in this country, who share a good deal of these aspects of an uncertain future which our fellow-Europeans and fellow Africans in Kenya, will feel more inclined to pray that they may succeed in overcoming them than to throw stones at their past failures and the harvest they are now reaping.

Dr. Leakey is widely known as an eminent pre-historian. He is also a cultured and liberal-minded European. And he has the good fortune to be a Kikuyu—that is to say that, having lived among them since childhood and speaking their language as one of them, he has been adopted into the tribe, admitted to his age-group and initiated as an elder. Without in any way palliating the enormity of the present terrorism—it has so far killed nearly 1000 of his own Kikuyu people and less than 20 Europeans—he is thus able to tell his story from both sides, to trace its origins back into tribal history and early misunderstandings between the tribe and the first Europeans. As a result we are enabled to see with sympathy how both white and black have been in large measure dupes of circumstance and we are thus less tempted to arraign one party or the other—"the unregenerate savage" or "selfish, land-grabbing whites." Things are seldom so simple.

Dr. Leakey's is a model of what such a book should be, restrained, factual, critical but constructive. He has much to say with rare authority that will interest all those concerned with race relations anywhere in Africa. It is a classic story of the impact of western civilisation on an African tribal society which becomes gradually demoralised until a new social pattern can be evolved. Some day someone must write the past-history of the concurrent white demoralisation along the lines sketched out by Dr. Albert Schweitzer from the other side of Central Africa.

Finally, I must draw attention to Dr. Leakey's closing paragraphs where he stresses how important a common language is. Since he doubts the ability of Europeans to learn African languages well, he pleads for the accelerated teaching of English to Africans. But is it that Europeans can't or won't learn African languages? It was often said in India that the British are bad linguists; but in fact they are very good oriental linguists if they will take the trouble. And those of us who were burnt in one or two of the vernacular idioms know how little the average Britisher with a smattering of the lingua franca called Hindustani really made contact with the uneducated mind of the villager. The tempo of African education in European languages will undoubtedly increase by their wish as well as ours. But, since the task is so vast and since so many will remain unaffected for so long, are not we representatives of a "higher civilisation" under the obligation to make ourselves intelligible to more primitive peoples, rather than expecting them to express themselves in a foreign language? Our present South African attitude demands from Africans and ability in linguistics whose existence we deny in all other fields of endeavour. And all who have dealt with backward peoples endorse Dr. Leakey's opinion that an interpreter is a very poor substitute for direct speech and his use constitutes an evasion of our responsibilities.

Mr. Pant In Nyseland

Mr. A. B. Pant, Commissioner for the Government of India in British East and Central Africa spoke on the subject of "India" in Blantyre last month. The Hon. Mr. P. Dayaram presided. Mr. K. P. Patel, on behalf of the Cultural Society, under whose auspices the meeting was called, welcomed Mr. Pant and party.

Mr. Pant referred to his visits to the other parts of Africa and said that he had found new patterns of society being built up all over the Continent which was once supposed to be a dark continent. This Continent had to play an important role in the development of a peaceful society.

Referring to the new developments taking place in India Mr. Pant said people of all races, religions and languages of the world reside in India except the Red Indians and all are making united efforts to build up a new India—the Father of the Nation, who did not believe in centralisation of industry by machinery but believed in Village Industries.

He also spoke at length about land gift movement carried on by Acharya Vinoba Bhave where millions of acres of land have been gifted by landlords for redistribution among the landless people with a view to increasing production of food and removing poverty. He also stressed the idea of universal brotherhood and equality.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

TIME FOR CONSTRUCTIVE THINKING

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

NEARLY all who would have liked to tell the Liberal Party one or two things have had the opportunity to have their say and now is the time to sit down and face the solid reality of the fact that the Liberal Party now exists and that it has come to stay.

I like to believe that most of the things said against the Party were largely by way of reaction to a novel development. Somehow, the Liberal Party seems to have come as a surprise to most leaders of African political thought. That goes for the Indians too. But for the moment let me confine myself to the Africans. It came as a surprise too to Dr. Malan. In London he told the British that the resistance movement was dead. He missed the real significance of that great demonstration.

The first phase of the resistance movement was, first and foremost, a feeling. The leaders of the African National Congress rightly wanted to test African feeling in the country on the prospects of a more determined march against apartheid. In other words, they wanted to know precisely where they stood in the view of their own people. The response was an eye-opener to everybody. To the extent that the leaders of the African people now know precisely where they stand, there is a real point in sending large batches of men and women to jail instead of devising means to make more positive use of the power Congress found it had when it tested African feeling.

But there is another reason why to talk of the resist movement being dead is to be propagandistic and nothing more. And this is where Dr. Malan slipped badly in London. The resistance movement provoked reactions in the white community which could not all have been foreseen during the days when people had their eyes on the Port Elizabeth and other riots and on the Sijambok Bills. There was reason to imagine that these two developments would drive Liberalism back into its old funk holes. But the success of the resistance movement and the rigid adherence of the resistors to the code of non-violence confronted a substantial number of the white people with a situation which made it possible for them to take a firm stand on principle—and bring into being the Liberal Party.

Reassessing Situation

To me, then, the leaders of the African National Congress have every right to sit down and reassess the situation in the light of what is happening in the African continent as well as in the outside world. After that, they might ask for more volunteers to go to jail; they might not. But whatever happens, the resistance movement familiarised them with everything they could have wanted to know: the readiness of their own people for bolder policies against oppression; Malanite reactions to these; the mood of the Liberals and the reactions of the world.

When Dr. Malan says the resistance movement is dead and stops there, he means, in short, that he is blind to the fact that the leaders of the African National Congress are nation-builders.

I am ready to admit that there are people in the African National Congress who appear to have been taken by surprise when the Liberal Party came on the scene. I am willing to give them the time to absorb the shock. But it does not make any sense for anybody to declaim against the Liberals either for the sins of their ancestors or to condemn them for having taken a little more heart as a result of the resistance campaign. If the campaign was set out to educate men—then what was its real purpose?

We must face the fact that the resistance campaign was an argument. If that argument has won at least one convert, we must be realistic enough to recognise the fact and sit down to find ways of what to do with this single convert so as to win more. That is one challenge of the Liberal Party and it is a challenge from which the African National Congress dare not run away. Sooner or later we must meet the European on the basis of equality and work out a way which will prove satisfactory to him and to us. I do not think we shall be able to do that if we run away from facing the challenges incidental to this from the very beginning.

For this reason, now is the time to concentrate, not so much on the things that divide us as on the things that should bring us together in the great fight against Malanism. Firstly, we should recognise quite frankly that there is room for the African National Congress and the Liberal Party to exist side by side. On the African side there are people who would be more at home in the atmosphere of racial tolerance which pervades Liberal gatherings. There are people who would find a fuller life for themselves in working with their white countrymen in a practical, no matter how imperfect a way, to solve what we in the Congress are also trying to solve in our own distinctive way. These people have all the right to believe their approach is the correct one—just as we in Congress believe in irresistible pressures. We set out in the resistance movement to "politicise" our people. That process has brought into being a greater degree of political-mindedness among our people and we should not be surprised if some of them think that the African National Congress is not the best home for them. I should welcome it if in politicising our people, we even brought into being the African who is not a nationalist. We must encourage independence of thought among our people. We must not have political sheep who can be led over any precipice by any adventurer. I am always glad to meet an African who tells me intelligently that all Congress talk of African Nationalism is so much rot. It gives me the opportunity to examine the soundness of the things in which I believe. I might believe in them when they are all wrong. Only strong criticism will ensure that I stand on solid basis. Even as a critical movement which will force us to equate African Nationalism with the demands of the present racial situation and our concept of united nationhood, the Liberal Party would be a blessing to us. We must accustom ourselves to the value of criticism and if the Liberal Party were to be intelligently critical of Congress, why, that would help us a great deal as an organisation which looks forward to ruling the country one day.

Something More Practical

To go on to something more practical. One of the things which should bring us together is parliamentary representation. I think Congress has a case in rejecting it in its present token form. Congress, further, might be right in declining to have anything to do with this type of representation itself. But Congress would be wrong to stand in the way of the Liberal Party where it wanted to capture the three Assembly and the four Senate seats. Congress did not declare war against the Communist Party years ago when it backed people interested in these seats. If Congress could not fight the Communist Party then, there is no reason why it should fight the Liberal Party now.

An agreement could be worked out whereby Congress encouraged the Liberal Party to capture these seats without any real sacrifice of anything. Congress wants the franchise for the Africans. The Cape Vote is certainly not the franchise. But against the existence of the Liberal Party, it is a step in that direction. The real fight, then, is no longer for the withdrawal of African representatives from parliament; it is for the increase of their numbers. Who they shall be is not a point we should press too far at this stage—as long as we are quite clear about ultimate goals.

In the light of this, Congress would lose nothing by helping the Liberal Party to capture these seats. One thing it would gain is that the people who would be elected would no longer be the representatives of the African people as such; they would represent only a section of African opinion; that section for which Congress could not cater.

The Liberals, on their part, would have to make up their minds about some of the reservations they continue to make on who shall be the South Africans and who shall not be the South Africans. To me there is a great deal of unrealism in the Party's insistence on being an organ of the elite. Beneath this it is quite possible that there is a nostalgic if unconscious hankering after the advantages (for the whiteman) of segregation. This is a real stumbling block to co-operation between Black and White. It casts a dark shadow over the intentions of the Liberal Party and, in short, creates the impression that deep in its heart the Liberal Party does not really want too many Africans turning to it as a political home. Against this background, people on the Liberal Party side should try to understand how their own attitude here is responsible for the stiffening of opinion on the Congress side. And if the genuine intention is to create racial amity, stumbling blocks which militate against understanding should be removed. It is no answer to say the Liberals should be given a chance. If there has been a change of heart, even as a result of the resistance movement, let it be the genuine thing.

There are no Communists in South Africa according to the law. There are people who believe Moscow's foreign policy is always right; that Russia is the paragon of political virtue. They might not even be fellow travellers either. But in their blind adoration of everything Russian they will even commit themselves to courses which are not in the best interests of the African people. Underground communism in this country is bitterly hostile to anything which might enable the African National Congress and the Liberal Party to find common ground of any sort anywhere. I suppose underground communism would place every obstacle on the way of moves to settle the issue of parliamentary representation between the ANC and the Liberal Party.

Underground communism has every reason to be nervous about this. It looks forward to the day when it will use the parliamentary seats as its own platform for its own end. If they pass on to Liberal hands, well that would be fatal for it. There are people in Congress who do not realise this danger.

My own view is that the time has come when we should be complete masters of our own home. We should be free to befriend Russia, India, America, Britain or any country. Our political organisations should take up any attitude they like towards any country whenever they like. We should refuse to see nothing but virtue in Russia and vice only in India or America. We should be willing to see good and bad in all and use our knowledge thus gained for our own good. That, it seems to me, is the attitude to take towards the Liberal Party too.

INDIA LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent

MR. NEHRU'S REMARKS ABOUT INDIANS IN KENYA

REPLYING to a question regarding the Indian community in Kenya, India's Prime Minister, Pandit Nehru stated in the Council of States: The Government of India are aware that a section of the local European community in Kenya has made various charges against the Indians in Kenya. Some such report has appeared in some Kenya newspapers. Government are not aware of newspapers in London publishing such reports.

As far as the Government of India are aware, the interests of local Indian community have not been adversely affected by this campaign. The Government of India are carefully watching the situation and will take such steps as may be considered necessary.

The Prime Minister was replying to a question by a member whether the present troubles in Kenya were being tempted to be exploited by local European community for an attack on the Indian residents in Kenya, whether some London papers had accused the Indians of being the brain behind the "Mau Mau" and, if so, what steps the Government of India proposed to take to safeguard Indian interests in Kenya.

Replying to supplementaries the Prime Minister said that he did not think that any Indian in Kenya could be described as being against the African population. So far as the Government of India were concerned, it had been made clear, both privately and publicly, that no Indian should seek any special interest at the expense of the Africans.

Question: "Is the Prime Minister aware that because of his sympathies over Africa, he has been accused in the 'Daily Express' of preparing a war against Pakistan?"

Pandit Nehru: "The 'Daily Express' of London is a particular type of paper which has not only recently but for considerable period of time expressed itself in highly objectionable way in regard to India. The attention of the U.K. Government was drawn to this fact and they said that the 'Daily Express' was a totally irresponsible paper and did not express the views of the Government. They totally disavowed the 'Daily Express'."

Land Gift Movement In India

More than 7,75 million acres of land have been collected in connection with Acharya Vinoba

Bhave's land gift movement until April 10. More than 550,000 acres of land were collected in Bihar State alone. The second highest collection was in Uttar Pradesh—474,000 acres. Among other big collections were from Rajasthan, Hyderabad and Madhya Pradesh. Praja-Socialist leader Jai Prakash Narain said in Hyderabad that he would launch a fresh campaign in Hyderabad for collection of land gifts for the movement.

Honorary Degree Of L.L.D. Conferred Upon Mr. Nehru

THE Honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Mr. Nehru, the Prime Minister of India, at a special congregation held at the Senate House, Cambridge, on June 4. The Public Orator, Prof. W. K. C. Guthrie acclaiming Mr. Nehru's reminiscence read the following eulogium

"We are all aware that we live in a time of grave crisis, that our age is fraught with danger to the whole human race. Only one hope of salvation is left, that all men of good will should learn to ignore the causes of division and dissonance between them, and present a united and harmonious front to the forces of destruction. That this hope is not mere wishful thinking, but rests on a solid basis of fact, we have evidence to-day in the visit to Britain of the leader and administrator of a great and far distant people. What, it might be asked, can the citizens of Britain and of India have in common? Do they not differ in customs, in language, in religion itself? Have they not even down to our own time been kept apart by fundamental disagreements? Be it so. Yet both our countries have been wise enough to heed the lessons of history, both understand the difference between good and evil; and in this understanding and faith they have forged new links of concord between them, and are prepared with one mind to combat evildoers and enemies of peace wherever they may be found. Surely it is with thoughts like this in mind that in this year so full of special significance for the British, the year in which our Queen is to dedicate herself to her country and to her high calling Mr. Nehru has flown across half the world to be with us, and to take counsel for the common good with the leaders of all those nations who recognise the Queen as the head and symbol of their free society.

"To us in Cambridge it is a cause of special rejoicing that in spite of all the cares and distractions of public affairs he has shown a desire to revisit this familiar place, and to renew the memory of his student days. And so we welcome him not as a stranger nor a guest, but as one of our own men. As such I commend to your warmest applause this great statesman, a steadfast champion of the cause of peace, governor of a great and family nation, Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Scientific Research in the Republic of India.

The Wrong Way

THE Mau Mau movement in Kenya is causing great consternation throughout Africa.
Nobody with any sense would either outwardly or inwardly support such a terrorist movement. We deplore it and pity those who are engaged in it. For far from rendering any service to the African people, they are paving the way for their annihilation. Mr.
Nehru, the Prime Minister of India, than whom the African people have no better friend, has warned the Africans against resorting to any form of violence to achieve their goal. Those who can bring this home to the misguided Mau Mau terrorists will be rendering the best possible service not only to their own people but to the cause of peace and to humanity.

While we condemn the Mau Mau movement in the severest possible terms we do not for one moment praise the counter steps taken by the local or the British Government. This mentality of meeting violence with violence has not brought the world the much desired peace. It has taken and is taking the world farther and farther away from peace. It is a pity that the wise statesmen are still so blind to this fact.

Both the Kenya Government and the South African Government are greatly mistaken if they believe they are going to succeed in bringing peace by repression and more repression. In South Africa our Government has virtually proscribed the non-European political organisations by banning the speech and movements of practically all their leaders. The Kenya Government, we understand, has proscribed the Kenya African Union, which is the main Native political organisation in Kenya.

The British Government has sent out Lieut. Gen.
Sir George Erskine to Kenya, who has been very boastful of his ability to crush the Mau Mau movement. He has sent his best wishes to "everyone in Kenya except the Mau Mau." He has given hope to the people of Kenya that he is going to work wonders. We believe the Lieut.
General is going to aggravate the situation. What is required is not to kill the Mau Mau terrorists but the spirit that has animated them. That spirit can only be killed by wise statesmanship and not by military action. There is no gain saying the fact that the Africans throughout the continent have been kept for too long crushed under the iron heels of imperialism and colonialism and it is therefore no wonder that they should fall prey to Communism, which offers them some hope, however false it may be. The Africans are fast gaining self-consciousness and the days of imperialism and colonialism are now over. The Africans and all the suppressed people are no longer going to remain satisfied with the existing state of affairs.

The self-appointed so-called trustees ought graciously to resign their posts and agree to work in equal partnership with their wards, who are no longer wards. The time has come when steps should be taken not to fan

the fire but to extinguish it.
That can be done not by hot-headedness but coolheadedness. Unfortunately for Africa the reins seem to have fallen in the hands of hot heads. Mau Mau can be out Mau Maued only by adopting other than Mau Mau methods.

NOTES AND NEWS

Malan Rejects Good Offices Commission

ACCORDING to Press Trust of India, the Government of South Africa has refused to recognise the Good Offices Commission of the United Nations.
The Good Offices Commission was established by a resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations on December 5, 1952, on the treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa. Its function was to arrange and assist in the negotiations between the Government of the Union of South Africa and the Governments of India and Pakistan, "in order that a satisfactory solution of the question in accordance with the purposes and the principles of the Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights may be achieved."
The Good Offices Commission addressed letters recently to the three Governments. While India has replied welcoming the appointment of the Commission, the South African Government, it is understood, has addressed the Secretary-General of the United Nations that as it had already rejected the United Nations resolution of December 5, it cannot recognise the Commission.
It is recalled that South Africa had previously rejected the resolutions on the same subject passed by the United Nations General Assembly in 1946, 1947, 1949,
1950, and on January 12, 1952.
The latest rejection, therefore, is the sixth by South Africa of the U.N. resolutions and constitutes the sixth affirmation of its policy of racial discrimination in contravention of the principles of the Charter of the U.N. and the Declaration of Human Rights.

Liberal Party To Hold Conference

The recently formed Liberal Party will hold its first Union conference in Johannesburg on July 11, 12 and 13, a spokesman of the Party is reported to have said. The Party's 20 branches in Johannesburg and branches in many other parts of the country would be represented.

The main work of the conference would be to formulate in greater detail the Party's policy within the framework of the principles announced by its founders.

End Of Colour Bar In Washington

The colour bar vanished in Washington restaurants last week after the United States Supreme Court's decision to uphold an 1873 law making restaurants open to all. But with few exceptions, White and Negro residents continued to eat and drink apart.
Almost no Negroes asked for service in restaurants where they were formerly unwelcome. An exception was Mr. Edgar Brown bearded Negro crusader for equal rights. He made a tour of Thompson's restaurants, the chain involved in the Supreme Court case, and reported that he was served courteously in every one.
The law of 1873 required that "any well-behaved and respectable person" be served in any licensed restaurant or bar-room in the district of Columbia. Of about 2,000 restaurants in Washington, more than 1,700 have banned Negro customers in the past.—Saps Reuter.

Mr. A. B. Chetty

Mr. A. B. Chetty, a distinguished member of the Indian community of Durban, ex-president of the South African Hindu Maha Sabha, Chairman of Gandhi-Tegore Lectureship Trust, left Durban for India by Air last Tuesday morning. Mr.
Chetty has built in Porayur, his place of birth, in South India, near Madras, a Maternity Home at a cost of Rs. £25,000, which is to be opened by the Hon. C.
Rajagopalachari, the Prime Minister of Madras on June 29. Mr.
Chetty proposes to spend about six months in the Motherland.

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

RACIAL ISSUES IN SOUTH AFRICA

By C. W. M. GELL

(Reproduced by Courtesy of 'Public Affairs' in which it was published in November 1952.)

THE danger of civil war between the White factions in South Africa has temporarily receded. On August 27, 1952, the High Court of Parliament, consisting only of Nationalist Members of Parliament (Opposition M.P.'s having unanimously refused to attend), overruled the Appeal Court's decision of March 30, which had invalidated the Act disenfranchising the Coloured voters. This August "judgment" was passed by the simple parliamentary majority which, the Appeal Court had ruled, could not legally enact the original legislation. On August 29, however, the Cape Division of the Supreme Court held that the Act constituting the "High Court of Parliament" was itself invalid, null and void and of no legal effect and force. This decision was unanimously upheld by the Appellate Division on November 13. By these last two judgments the properly constituted Courts of the Union have duly expressed legally what every citizen well knew, and what many Nationalists had more or less admitted—that the High Court of Parliament was a clumsy and immoral attempt to evade the legal and moral obligations of the compact of Union as enshrined in the South African Act of 1909. Neither the "High Court" nor its "judgment," therefore, have any legal existence, and the Separate Representation of Voters Act remains invalid.

On September 14, while the appeal before the Appellate Division was still pending, Prime Minister Dr. D. F. Malan said: "I can give this assurance: that with all the implications of this matter, we as a Government cannot allow ourselves to rest." As I explained in an earlier article, the two main implications are the elimination of Coloured voters from the common roll in the Cape Province in order to prevent their playing a decisive part in White elections and the ensuring of a Nationalist victory at the 1955 election. These are, in fact, the long-term and short-term aspects of the same problem. Now, despite Mr. Malan's statement quoted above, it seems probable that the Nationalists will accept the Appeal Court's two rulings, at least until after the election in which they will ask the country for a mandate to "establish the sovereignty of Parliament."

The reason for this reversal of the treacherous clamour of May and June about a Third War for freedom is that since then, another issue has been raised in a form which may well enable the Nationalists to win another three majorities in May 1953, even on the present rolls if this calculation is correct. It will pay them to keep the constitutional question relatively in the background, for many, even of their own supporters, have serious misgivings about abandoning the rule of law. Yet it should not be supposed that the Nationalists' ultimate intentions have in any way changed. No one expected them to get a two-thirds majority in May. Minister H. F. Verwoerd, the Minister of Native Affairs, said on October 30, that they would go ahead with or without a two-thirds majority. If the Nationalists win in 1953, the constitutional battle will, therefore, be resumed in 1954 or 1955 with all its implications and dangers. No simple parliamentary majority provides a constitutional mandate to reverse the entrenched clauses of the South African Act and, whatever expedient is tried (seeking the Senate with native Government nominees or tampering with the jurisdiction of the Courts) will be a breach of the law and the Union compact. This will be resisted to the utmost by non-Nationalists who know that the abrogation of the Constitution opens the way of the Nationalist goal of a one-race one-party republic.

What has reminded the Nationalists the ground they lost with the electorate by their constitutional manoeuvres is the development since June 26 of an organized agitation among the non-European races, and the failure of the Opposition parties to think out a coherent and distinctive policy in regard to it. In January 1952 the African National Congress (ANC) and the South African Indian Congress combined to warn Dr. Malan that they would resort to civil disobedience unless certain discriminatory laws were repealed—viz., the Separate Representation of Voters Act 1951, the Suppression of Communism Act 1950, the Bantu Authorities Act 1950, the Group Areas Act 1950, the Pass Laws and the estate calling regulations. This Government has consistently refused to hold any discussions with non-European leaders or delegations. Dr. Malan, therefore, replied by letter that "in no circumstances would the Government repeal the laws existing laws differentiating between Europeans and Bantu." He quite correctly discerned in the projected campaign a threat to exclusive White rule and with the insensitivity which has characterized so much of his party's handling of non-Europeans he added:

"It is self-contradictory to claim an inherent right of the Bantu, who differ in many ways from the Europeans, that they should be regarded as not different, especially when it is borne in mind that these differences are permanent and not man-made."

"If this is a matter of difference to you and if you do not value your racial characteristics, you cannot in any case dispute the Europeans' right which, in this case, is definitely an inherent right, to take the opposite view and to adopt the necessary measures to preserve their identity as a separate community."

In his reply of February 22 the ANC said:

In reply to our demand for the abolition of differentiating laws it is suggested in your letter that there are 'permanent and not man-made' differences between Africans and Europeans, which justify the maintenance of these laws. The question at issue is not one of biological differences, but one of citizenship rights which are granted in full measure to one section of the population, and completely denied to the other by means of man-made laws artificially imposed, not to preserve the identity of the Europeans as a separate community but to perpetuate the systematic exploitation of the African people.

"The African people yield to no one as far as pride of race is concerned, and it is precisely for this reason that they are striving for the attainment of fundamental rights in the land of their birth."

Thus it expressed implicitly the inevitable demand for ultimate equality of citizenship and opportunity which has since been made more explicit. So far, the Indians and African leaders have insisted that they are not anti-White, but anti-discrimination based upon inflexible differences of descent or complexion.

This attempt to reimpose a fragmented tribal pattern on Native life, while bringing the Chiefs more closely under Government supervision and control. It is opposed by all articulate Native opinion, as tribalism obstructs political advance and economic integration into one multi-racial society and the Chiefs, always a conservative element, will become mere Government stooges. This latter fear has been confirmed by the Government's dismissal of Albert Lutuli, a prominent Xhosa Chief who belonged to the ANC and supported the Defiance Campaign. Others will have to toe the line or be dismissed.

This provides for residential and territorial segregation, arbitrarily imposed by the Minister and his nominees without adequate reference to the Courts or compensation for the evicted.

These two sets of laws and ordinances compel all Native Africans to carry annual tax receipts and passers in urban areas showing that they are employed or have a permit to seek employment (failure to carry all the requisite passes makes the offender liable to instant arrest) to register all service contracts under a law which makes their breach a criminal offence and makes it a crime to be insolvent or disobedient to a White employer, to employ a person in urban areas, to stand in different queues at Post offices and railway stations and to travel in separate coaches or buses, to keep down the cattle population in their overcrowded and over-grazed Reserves. Statutory offences against these essentially civil regulations account for more than half Native crime and imprisonment. The Pass regulations are intended to help the police identify criminals and control the influx of Natives into the urban areas. But they are quite ineffective for both purposes. Real criminals forge the documents without difficulty. These regulations are the greatest source of day to day friction between the police and the law-abiding African population. Most of the laws have been long in force, but the Nationalist Government has administered them with a severity and arrogance not previously practised and has made a number of extremely provocative and quite intentional additions to the already long list of petty restrictions. It is almost inevitable that an urban African will sooner or later slip up on one of them. There was the recent notorious case of an African minister being asked at the entrance to the Bishop of Johannesburg's garden party for his pass and being taken to the chief warden to pay £1 admission at a bill before he could return to the Bishop's house, because he had left his "exemption from pass" certificate at home.

ONE SUFFERS, ONE LEARNS, ONE ENJOYS

By MURIEL LESTER

[Miss Muriel Lester is well-known as the hostess of Mahatma Gandhi when he visited England in 1931. She visited the Union about two years ago. She had been touring practically the whole world ever since. This article was written during her American tour.]

I SUPPOSE most visitors to Mexico carry away with them the same impressions: the massive masonry and spacious courts dedicated to the hero-god Quetzal Coatl; the pyramids, almost as steep as the side of a house, one'saching muscles on reaching their summit; the intellectual feat of absorbing some of Rivera del Riego's murals which cover what seems like an acre or two of wall space.

As it was Mexican Christians, both of the Roman and the Evangelical Church, who had invited me to be their guest, my contacts were mainly with ordinary people. Family cohesiveness is their indigenous pattern. The popular water picnics are obviously domestic affairs. A big family will choose one of the waiting boats, all thickly crisscrossed with flowers. Hoppers of food, a musical instrument or two, and perhaps a stove are put aboard. Other boats are peddling up and down, each offering some special goods or services, professional musicians, or freshly cooked hot food or a skilled photographer. Sometimes the picnic is at a coffee garden by the river-side. Seven or eight families occupy the small lawn and seem quite unconscious of each other, even when one or two brothers or cousins stand up to express themselves in song, both sacred and secular.

What Counts

Every carnival displays its religious pictures reminding passengers that there is another sphere besides the contingent and temporary. In the cathedral, agony distorts the features of a cripple who has decided to join the "who are making the approach to the altar on their knees." The aisle is long, each inch is painful but the great organ helps him along by a series of strange rhythmic dissonances which seem to part and yearn and struggle, just as the weaned pilgrims are pining and yearning and struggling. Gradually, as achievement of the terrible task is being attained, the pain turns to rapture; the body is forgotten; the love that prompted the ordeal is the only thing that counts.

The Evangelicals also achieve a sort of spiritual toughness. Their churches are crowded, dangerously so, according to our security standards. At the morning service there was a joyful ceremony marking the attainment of adolescence. There came a silver wedding at which the elderly bride paced up the aisle to the wedding march on the arm of her eldest son. On their knees she and her husband repeated with deep solemnity their previous vows and exchanged new rings. The regular congregational worship followed, then my sermon, then the Pastoral exhortation to members to rededicate themselves, finally came the invitation to the unbaptized, sinners, frustrated people, all who were ignorant of the joy of knowing Jesus Christ, to come up to the Communion Table where they might learn from Him how to follow Him.

Friendly Messages

What brings my mind back most often to those balmy summer days in Mexico is the original habit of their lorry drivers. These men like to post up at the back of their vans some easily legible hand-printed fragments of self-discovered truth, or some friendly message. As they swirl round corners and dash along the high roads one reads: "Lady, I would give you a lift (if only you climbed your hair more often)." Another proclaims: "Peace comes when you can understand opinions you do not hold"; another, "One suffers. One learns. One enjoys."

Here is a classical theological dogma stated in contemporary language, tucked a little crookedly perhaps across the tailpiece of a van by a man of the same grade of craftsmanship as our John Bunyan. He also is advertising his conviction that only through facing suffering can one reach the fulness of joy which is God's special gift to man.

Modern Exemplars

That motto set me thinking of modern exemplars of its truth. One is an American, a middle-aged Jew, a victim, cultured and specially helpful person. In the house of a mutual friend in Hollywood our conversation turned to prison life in various countries, including the democracies, where unauthorised punishments, physical as well as psychological, are administered more often than we like to think. This man's habit is never to refer to his own experiences under Hitler. But to illustrate some point he began to describe the posture he and if others were made to assume at specified and regular sessions of punishment.

They had to throw their heads right back so that their eyelids no longer protected the eyes and stare straight into the glare of a 400 watt lamp. If they relaxed their neck muscles or averted their gaze for an instant during that ten minutes' torture, they felt the prod of a boyaner. One memorable day it was going worse than usual with him. His blood-shot eye-balls were nearly bursting, his mouth hanging open, his face so matted that one of the Gestapo men burst out laughing. "Look at Number Five!" he shouted with an oath. "Doesn't he put you in mind of Jesus on the Cross?"

We had been unconsciously holding ourselves rigid, tense and strained, as we visualised the scene but now his face was transfigured as he looked round the circle: "That was the proudest moment of my life," he declared.

Gandhi's Word

Self-sacrifice, self-giving, self-identification with others, these are terms in which we are all accustomed. Gandhi, probably for that reason, coined his own word, "self-suffering," to express the same transaction. It revolutionized the lives of his followers. Many of them had been relying for the gaining of independence on secret societies, bomb-throwing, the rhetoric of indignation meetings. He parsimoniously ascribed that such out-ward methods, even if successful, would inevitably lead to reaction later on. Gandhi knew the Bible better than most of us and all about the seven evils who may so devastatingly enter any heart that has been cleared of a temporary evil but left isolated, aloof, empty, purposeless.

He kept pointing out that to lay the blame on the British was ridiculous. Let Indians consider themselves. What personal service were they rendering to their own people, the poor and diseased? How could anyone grumble about Indian subjection to the British while 70 million of their own people were being kept in the miserable bondage of Untouchability? If they really wanted independence, it must be independence for all. They must identify themselves with the starving, the leper, the Untouchable, even to the point of sharing their own meals and homes with them. Of course, this would mean self-suffering.

Thus the "Constructive Programme" came into existence side by side with the more noticeable and much publicized Civil Disobedience campaign.

The latter was only to be temporary, the former is still spreading over the length and breadth of India.

Many who had adopted Western ways of dress, food and behaviour, and were accustomed to every luxury, listened to Gandhi's analysis of the situation and forthwith burnt their fashionable clothing, put on home-spun, sold their possessions, set up an Ashram and lived side by side with "the poorest, the lowest and the lost." They gave no alms but set up schools and clinics, and centres where the old village handicrafts could be revived. Of course, when these pioneers accepted this costly way they automatically became Untouchable themselves. Disunity and fear filled the hearts of their relatives. But very soon something new was noticeable among these volunteers. They developed a care-free zest in life, high vitality, unquenchable energy. One suffers, one learns, one enjoys.

My own experience under lock and key for ten weeks in 1941 was not unpleasant enough to be used as another illustration of the Mexican motto but even the minor awkwardnesses and inconveniences involved in incarceration taught me things of which nearly 60 years of previous freedom had left me ignorant. On eventually reaching Bow again I could see a little deeper and further than formerly.

I was on an American liner sailing from Rio de Janeiro to New York when Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt signed the Atlantic Pact. Their four freedoms meant much closer co-operation between our two countries. It affected me, I was told, because now British Security Officers for the first time could board an American ship and take me off to the British Internment Camp in Trinidad.

I had been expecting to be sent home since the outbreak of war because at that time I was engaged on a lengthy preaching and lecturing tour in the United States. Everyone over there was talking about the wrong and the right of war and I was always being asked my opinions. Of course, I had to answer with the truth. Then I went at once to the British Embassy in Washington in case they wished to send me home. I was very proud of our democracy so that they left me free for nearly two years.

Major Wren and I had some long talks before he decided to conduct me off the liner. I had been taken over the same ground by various British Consuls in the Latin American countries where my passport was constantly being examined. They had appealed to me, asking how could I refuse to support the war effort? One Consul asked me to promise to confine my talks to the excellent series on prayer which I had sometimes given. To none of them did I need to say much: mainly that I was convinced that the first two words of the Lord's Prayer were binding on Christians always and not only when we happened not to be at war: that the doctrine of the Cross was God's way of facing evil and that it was the only way for men too; that Hitler's evil was not the only evil in the world: what about our own? France's? Russia's?

Eventually the Major told me his decision. It was better to realise my insignificance as I walked down the huge side of the ship with Lieutenant Tennyson and a sergeant in the waiting motor-launch for the morning. We were bound for the capital city.

Something Happening

Major Wren took me to a big hotel; gave me an enormous room with three beds in it; asked me not to leave the grounds. It was evening. I locked the door after him and then found myself sitting down rather promptly on one of the low beds. . . So this was loneliness! And something was happening. Time seemed to be standing still. Or was it that I was being caught up out of it into a different tempo. palpably

I was now living in time and in eternity simultaneously. I felt extraordinarily alert in every fibre, stimulated to a pitch such as is sometimes encountered in a dream when one is no longer heavily bound to earth.

Gradually I realised what had occurred. What I'd always believed in theory and faith was now an actual fact. God was here, an integral part of my situation, more real, more solid than the room or the bed, or myself.

Next evening, Major Wren came in again, bringing another official. Both looked portentously solemn. The charge was read out but I could not understand its verbiage. It ended by saying I had offended against Colonial Regulation Number 1234, a, b, c, d. I was shortly driven out to the Camp. Barbed wire entanglements and Negroes with bayonets drawn guarded the gate and the four corners. I was taken to the army hut in which cubicles were separated from each other by wooden partitions six feet high. Two sheets, a pillowcase, towel, tooth-brush, knife, fork, spoon, cup, saucer bowl and plate were handed to me. Dozens of curious eyes, belonging to folk of every class and every country but England, were on me. But the deep peace held. Even when the suffering is quite small, one learns a lot.

INDIA PLEDGED TO PEACE POLITICS BASED ON JUSTICE

THE Vice-President, Dr. B. Radhakrishnan, on the conclusion of his visit to Canada, in a broadcast talk over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, advised that: "Wise and patient political action directed towards the minds of men is what we should aim at and not military glory in future war. All our hopes will be dashed to pieces if there is a third war. It is not only moral principles but enlightened self-interest that inclines us to work for peace unswervingly."

Dr. Radhakrishnan added: "We have no faith in power politics. War solves no problems but it creates more problems. We believe in peace politics and in peace based on justice. War is not an evil means to a good end. It is evil by itself. It brings both victors and vanquished. The proper aim of political action is not to destroy our enemies but to educate them, to influence their attitudes and behaviour."

The Vice-President declared: "What we want today is not the American way or the Italian way, nor the human way. We have reached a period in human history when violence has given us the possibility from the surface of the earth. If we establish prosperity effectively in the non-Communist world, the prospects of peace will improve."

India's Foreign Policy

Explaining India's foreign policy, Dr. Radhakrishnan said: "While we are uncommitted to the policy of either of the rival groups now dividing the world, we are committed to peace, international justice and relaxation of tensions in the world. We believe that our non-involvement may increase our usefulness in the work of reconciliation. It gives us freedom and flexibility in our foreign policy. We decide issues on their merits without yielding to pressure from any side."

The Vice-President referred to India's progress in various fields since 1947. He drew attention to the stupendous elections held last year and reviewed the process of integration of the Indian Union. He also referred to the secular character of India and her acceptance of the concept of a welfare state as the basis of the state. In this connection Dr. Radhakrishnan said: "It is our hope and ambition to remove the evil of landlordism and abuses of capitalism by peaceful constitutional processes. If wholehearted concentration on the building up of the welfare state persuades us to keep away from entangling alliances, we are fortified by the example and experience of the nations of the world."

Spiritual Uprising In Asia And Africa

Dr. Radhakrishnan referred to the "upsurge" of the human spirit in Asia and Africa and thought it was both "a challenge and an opportunity." He said: "Having been ourselves victims of political and economic exploitation, we sympathise with people who are struggling to emancipate themselves from bondage, political, economic or racial. We have sympathy for these people and wish to co-operate with them in their attempts to secure a rightful place for Asia and Africa in the world."

The Vice-President added: "There is a world revolution in progress, and it is utterly independent of Communism. Hunger, disease and displaced inhabitants who form the bulk of the non-Communist world demand economic progress and development. If we hesitate to attack and answer these problems others will exploit our inertia and inefficiency. It is the privilege of the advanced nations to help the backward peoples of the world today who look to the rich democratic governments. All our efforts will be in vain unless these people believe that we think of them as brothers, and their future is our anxious concern."

Organ Of World Co-Operation

In a reference to the United Nations Organisation, Dr. Radhakrisnan said: "As a result of technical development, the world is shrinking and different national groups have become interdependent. We may either co-operate or quarrel. We believe that the United Nations is an organ of international co-operation. If we find that the great power who have leadership in the United Nations compromise with the ideal of the Charter, when they confuse stability with maintenance of present conditions, when they give rise to suspicion in the mind of frustrated peoples, when they have vested interests in the status quo, we feel unhappy."

Dr. Radhakrishnan went on to say: "Power corrupts, but conscience reforms. We must crusade for the divine in man rather than against the demon in others. If we let light spread, darkness will dissipate. If the world community, of which the United Nations is the symbol and hope, is to become an accomplished fact, we must develop a new kind of loyalty, a sense of responsibility that does not stop short at national boundaries, loyalty to more than political issues, loyalty to human welfare. In the last resort, only power which can secure and maintain the peace of the world is spiritual power, power which will lift men above national ambitions and establish that rule of right and justice which is the only basis of peace."

Addressing graduates of the Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia on June 8, Dr. Radhakrishnan said that no single nation could isolate freedom and claim it for itself. They could not have freedom in one country alone and not have it in other places. He said that whether they liked it or not, they belonged to one world, and, if one part of their body was hurt, the other part became restless.

The modern antiseptic Dettol is first and foremost a destroyer of germs: in the Hospitals of Southern

BRITAIN'S COLOUR BAR IN AFRICA

IV—EQUAL RIGHTS FOR ALL CIVILISED MEN

By JULIUS LEWIN

Reprinted by courtesy of the Union of Democratic Control, London which first published this material in pamphlet form

THIS is a bad time for any nation to be suspected of race prejudice. The United Nations was established after the second world war on the clear basis of racial equality. The Charter embodies the international trusteeship system accepted by the colonial powers, of whom Britain remains the foremost. One of the basic objectives of the trusteeship system is "to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion."

The overwhelming majority of the 49 members of the United Nations are alert to secure the application of this principle of the Charter. The 20 Latin American republics, the six Arab States, two independent African States of Ethiopia and Liberia, as well as India, Pakistan, Indonesia, Burma, the Philippines, and others, all appreciate the meaning of colonial status and the dangers of racial discrimination and prejudice. As South Africa knows to her cost, the United Nations is a forum ready to discuss in the hearing of the whole world, complaints involving the unequal treatment of non-white people. Yet at the United Nations Britain has always been careful to avoid endorsing hostile criticism of South Africa not only because South Africa is still a member of the Commonwealth of Nations but for another reason. British diplomats know full well that under British rule restrictive laws and practices exist, and could be revealed, which are a wonder in kind to those that have brought South Africa's name into disrepute in the eyes of the whole world.

In Kenya there are laws that prohibit Africans and Indians owning or occupying land in the highlands, the best part of the country. In Kenya as well as in other colonies there are laws that compel Africans to carry passes, like passports, which hamper their freedom of movement within their own country. There are laws that impose grossly unequal taxation and that maintain grossly unequal access to education as between white and black. A long list of such laws could be drawn up in addition to the two outstanding forms of discrimination already described, namely, the unfair political representation and the unjust industrial colour bar.

Moreover Britain has been fortunate in that criticism has been directed mainly at South Africa, where crude methods of enforcing racial subjection provide an easy target. But the situation is changing. Africans in Rhodesia and in East Africa are already saying that they will appeal to the United Nations against the injustices of British policy and the hardships of colonial administration. Sooner, rather than later, Britain will be forced to declare herself either in favour of racial discrimination, or definitely against it, not only in theory but also in practice. In a world hostile to colour prejudice, the difficulties of maintaining a two-faced attitude are growing.

Protectorates

They are well illustrated by Britain's position in regard to her three protectorates in South Africa—Basutoland, Bechuanaland, and Swaziland. The governor of these three dependencies is also the British ambassador to the Union. There is a very good reason why he combines these two roles. British policy requires him to consider every development of policy in the protectorates in the light of its possible repercussions in the Union. In plain words, Britain is afraid to follow a really progressive social and economic policy in the protectorates because, if she did, her neighbours, the Union would be embarrassed by her example and would object to her policy. The marriage in 1948 of a tribal chief in Bechuanaland, Seretse Khama, to a white Englishwoman, threw some light on this dilemma. In spite of all attempts to obscure it, the real question was simply the right of a black man to marry a white woman. For exercising this right, Seretse Khama was deposed from the chieftainship—which is lost by every legal consideration—and banished from his own territory. Britain took this action not because the Jewish people or British policy was ready to condemn the chief for his conduct. Not even South African opinion was prompt or unanimous in condemnation. Britain acted because the most intolerant element in South Africa demanded Seretse Khama.

Similarly, if the protectorates are eventually to be transferred to the Union in the face of the protests of one million Africans who live in them and who much prefer British rule, it will be due to the same desire to appease South Africa and to attempt to purchase her support in peace and war, even at the sacrifice of the good will of many millions of Africans throughout the continent. Appeasement of South Africa means betrayal of the principles of equal economic opportunity, effective political rights, and proper social status for Africans.

Cannot Have It Both Ways

Yet if the Commonwealth of Nations is to survive as a significant force in the world of to-day and to-morrow, it cannot fail to recognise the same principle of racial equality that the United Nations has accepted. No Commonwealth can include some Africans, like those in West Africa, on an equal footing with white people and others, like those in East and Central Africa, held back by colour bars. There can be no evasion of this clear issue. Either Britain will try to appease South Africa and to conceal from the world the fact that some of her own policies are, after all, not so very different, or she will reform her own policies and bring them into line with world opinion on racial questions. One thing is certain: Britain cannot have it both ways, as she is now trying to do. She can continue to court the friendship of South Africa only if at the same time she accepts the theory and practice of white supremacy in some of her own African colonies. But if she rejects this dangerous and unjust doctrine, and accepts the alternative of racial equality, she will risk the displeasure and possibly the antagonism of South Africa. South Africa may, indeed, not only declare for a republic, as India has done, but go further and part company from the Commonwealth. She may, of course, do so in any event and without the excuse of British policy in Africa. That is a possibility that must be faced. But that loss to the Commonwealth, whatever it may or may not signify, would surely be more than balanced by the restoration of the diminishing faith in Britain of sixty million Africans.

There is no record ample evidence of some of the creditable aims and achievements of British colonial policy. The Colonial Office showers on the British Press material reflecting credit on Britain, and it hastens to restore every sceptical inquirer with smooth explanations. What is usually hidden from British eyes are practices like those referred to in this pamphlet, and the attitudes and policies they illustrate. That is why I have written about them. They are the other side of the pretty picture that is usually displayed in the Press, in the orthodox literature and in Parliament.

As a South African, I am familiar with the conditions under which public policy has developed in Southern Africa, and with its effects. For many years I have frankly criticised my own country at home in company with a minority of liberal-minded white South Africans. We have sharply criticised successive governments for their racial policies and we are engaged in doing so. In this task we do not ask for any assistance from Britain. The Union of South Africa is a sovereign state, completely independent of Britain and of British control. But we are anxious to ask that our efforts to reform South Africa should not be rendered more difficult by Britain. That is just what is happening now, as it has been happening unnoticed ever since 1931, if not before. In Rhodesia and in Kenya particularly, but also to some extent in other British colonies, policies and practices have grown up which unpleasantly resemble those that dominate South African society, and which are sometimes used to us when we criticise our own government. Such policies have brought hatred and harm to my own country and, unless soon checked and reversed, they will bring hatred and harm to Britain through her colonies.

I have never restored criticism of South Africa by the British Press because I know that much of it can be justified. But I do sometimes wonder at the risk taken by people who throw stones while they are living in glass houses.

It is important to remember that the policies prevailing in South Africa have always been challenged in South Africa by some South Africans, however few in number.

Prevailing British policy was likewise challenged in Britain in the early part of the 19th century, at the time of the campaign against slavery. A band of courageous and determined men challenged the institution of slavery which was accepted by Church and State and supported by public opinion. "The British anti-slavery movement," says Professor Coupland, "supplied the inspiration and incentive of a great popular tradition. The movement owed much to the character of its leaders—Wilberforce, Sharp, Clarkson, Macaulay, Buxton, and the rest—but they would not have done what they did if a great body of opinion among the British people had not been resolutely and persistently bent on the destruction of an evil which Britain had once done so much to create and sustain."

The crusade against slavery was, however, only one aspect of a larger theme—the conflict of white and black, the conflict between strong and weak. At the very time in the 19th century when the battle to vindicate human rights was being fought in Britain, British missionaries, like Dr. John Philip, were waging a similar struggle in Southern Africa against the first unequal laws of the Cape Colony. These laws had kept the coloured people in a state of subjection akin to slavery until political pressure secured the passage of the famous Ordinance No. 50 in 1828, abolishing all discrimination based on race or colour. That was the beginning of the Cape liberal tradition of equal rights for all divided men. Twenty-five years later Britain saw to it that this principle was embodied in the first Constitution of 1854 which granted representative government to the Cape Colony and laid down civilisation, not race or colour, as the basis of the franchise. This tradition of racial equality in the eyes of the law took root, grew up and matured itself for a century. It influenced the outlook of more than one or two generations of South Africans, especially of those who, like myself were born and grew up in the Cape. As a political factor it was afterwards weakened but was not finally overthrown until in our own day it encountered stronger economic forces. Even now it is dormant but not dead, because there are still South Africans who draw pride from the past and courage for the future from the old Cape liberal tradition begun by the British.

But when we watch the trend of events in British Central and East Africa to-day, we ask ourselves where is now the breed of courageous men and women in Britain to attack the evil theory and the pernicious practice of white supremacy? The policy of racial discrimination involved in maintaining white supremacy to-day is comparable in its degrading effects, on white and black alike, with the practice of slavery when it was so gallantly attacked 150 years ago.

Why is it that in these days we scarcely ever hear open criticism of the principles of British colonial policy? It has become easy to divert public attention from fundamental political principles to the bewildering array of economic and social details. Yet it is false principles, and the distorted patterns of life they inevitably produce, that must be assailed.

There is one direct way for Englishmen to start to rescue black Africans from white supremacy. It is also the way to restore faith in Britain and in the value of the Commonwealth. That way is to reassert the clear principle, and to adopt everywhere under British rule the firm policy of equal rights for all divided men and women regardless of their race or colour.

AFRICAN VIEWPOINT

SANDS WASHING AWAY

By JORDAN K. NGUBANE

THE Liberal Party of South Africa is very much in the news at the moment. It would appear that this interest is genuine on both sides of the colour line. On the white side, Press reports tell us that Liberal Party meetings are surprisingly well-attended. Surprising because a community fed on white superiority should have fought shy of a political party which, no matter how falteringly, advocated racial equality of some sort. On the non-white side, I think the volume of comment, favourable and otherwise, is sufficient indication of non-white interest in the Party.

As events move on, the Liberal Party begins to clear the air of the initial confusion in which it started. And we are slowly coming face to face with a Liberal Party which might be in danger of gravitating in the direction of being some sort of half-way house between apartheid and the racial equality demanded by the African National Congress Consciously or unconsciously the danger grows every day of principle being sacrificed to expediency under the mistaken idea that the Party will win more support by trying to play the United Party's old game of trying to be a darling to most camps.

Apartheid and racial equality are fundamentally irreconcilable. The white apartheid will have no time for a wily-wasby Party which says apartheid is good and bad at one and the same time. Nor will the African pay any attention to it either. The white apartheid will want the crude but real white domination and will go to the shop which sells the genuine stuff, fresh from the manufacturer. The African will go his way and seek salvation for himself in the complete overbrow of white domination. In fact, when you get a movement like the Liberal Party coming up to be a shaky bridge between Black and White, African reactions will most likely be: "There comes the white leader-goat!" The African dislikes leader-goats, whether they are black or white—for one reason: they lead the way to the slaughter-house. To ask the African to come to terms with apartheid or the residential segregation of the Margaret Bellingers or a given standard of so-called "civilisation" of the Alan Patons, is to ask him to go into the political slaughter-house, the very place out of which the African National Congress is taking him!

If it is a question of choice, the African will naturally go the way of the African National Congress. But if he goes that way, after having been frightened away by the sight of the white leader-goat, what will happen is that he will work no longer for united nationhood but for African domination. In all my political life, I have always insisted that I hate the Black tyrant as much as I do his White counterpart. Both are evils with which it is impossible to come to terms.

The white tyrant is strong today. He crushes the African underfoot and has thrown morality and human decency to the winds. Self preservation is his guiding philosophy. When the African tyrant is in power, he will make every white man pay for all the crimes of the white tyrants. That is of the very essence of tyranny. We have seen it happen in other parts of the world.

And I am afraid the Liberal Party is starting with the wrong foot forward if from the word go it shakes African confidence in its real intentions and allows the impression to be established in the non-white mind that it merely wants equality so as to persuade the African that certain forms of segregation are for his own good.

Mr. C. W. M. Gell has been writing a series of articles for the 'Forum' trying to argue the case for principles being more important than anything else for the Liberal Party. I do not agree with very many of his propositions. But I think there is sound commonsense and a touch of realistic statesmanship in his insistence on seeing the Liberal Party a principled organisation. The African National Congress is fighting for principles. That is why it rejects the idea of having anything to do with African parliamentary representation in its present token form. You cannot reject as evil in principle and then turn round and come to terms with it.

The Liberal Party's only hope of influencing events on the African side is to adhere to principles, even if it means losing a few more white supporters nurtured in the tradition of race-baiting. I should be very much surprised if the Liberal Party won much support from the present generation of white voters. Its real converts are in the ranks of white Youth—if it wants to remain a white man's Party. If it wants to remain that, I do not think anybody would quarrel with it. It would then be free to make its own reservations on who shall be the citizens and who shall not be.

But if it is to be a political home for South Africans of all shades of colour, I am afraid, it cannot do very well if it comes with the thinly disguised white superiority complex.

If we accept the premise that God created Man in His own image, or perhaps regard Man as an end in himself we then proceed to accept the human personality as sacred. Once that is established, there is no room for quibbling about on the vital issue of racial equality. Equality is established the moment you accept the human personality as sacred—no matter what colour it has assumed.

The question which comes to the fore then and on which there is a lot of woolly thinking is one of interregeneration and all the rubbish that is usually said when this question is discussed. But if God created Man in His own image, then the human personality is the same whether Man is Black or White or Coloured. The human personality does not love anything by the pigmentation of the body in which it is encased. If a white girl thinks she will be happy with a black boy for a husband, if an African boy finds in an Indian girl all the virtues he seeks in womanhood, why let them marry of course! It is not their colour that matters. It is the human personality in them which is sacred.

And, if God created Black, White and Brown races, He did not thereby say they should not interbreed. Mind you, geography, diet, the sun's rays and the mode of life have quite a lot to do with pigmentation. But the human personality undergoes no mutation because of its historical fixating on geographical location. Men and women loved and hated in ancient Sumeria as they do today. There is virtue and

From Our Own Correspondent

Bombay, May 30.

THE Five Year Plan, put into operation formally on April 1, 1951, has progressed satisfactorily during the last two years. It has laid a firm foundation for future intensive development of the agriculture as well as the industrial resources of the country. For the first time in the history of India, locomotives, railway coaches and wagons, artificial fertilisers, telephone components, various types of machine tools and many other things for which India had to depend on foreign countries were produced in the country during this period. Industrial output went up by 15 to 30 per cent. Increase was also recorded in commercial crops and foodgrains.

In the first two years, a sum of Rs. 5850 millions was spent on the development projects both by the Centre and the State Governments. This amount represents less than one-third of the total outlay estimated for the execution of the entire Plan.

In the industrial field some of the important State undertakings went into production during the period, such as Soda, Fertiliser Factory, Chitranjan Locomotive Works, the Telephone Industries, the Raza Khatia Factory, Machine Tools Prototype and Ambernath Defence Factory. During this period 38 locomotives, 8000 railway wagons and 643 railway passenger coaches were manufactured in India. 77,000 tons of additional shipping was obtained and six ships were built at Visagapatnam Shipyard. 350 miles of National Highways and strategic roads and 17 new large bridges were constructed. 1050 miles of existing roads were improved.

In the private sector, production increases were recorded especially in cement, heavy chemicals, textiles, iron and steel, paper and paper boards, sewing machines, bicycles, rayon and jute goods and engineering industries. Against this, aluminium, diesel engines and machine tools production received a set-back due to slack demand and slump in the market.

Agricultural production, during the first two years of the Plan, has shown substantial increases in foodgrains, jute, cotton and sugar cane. In regard to foodgrains, precise data from the State Governments are not yet available but a tentative estimate made by the Central Food Ministry indicates that during 1951-52, under Grow More Food account the increase in foodgrains production was of the order of 48 lakh tons. Besides, an increase of about 2.7 lakh tons is also estimated as a result of major irrigation schemes, which increased the area receiving irrigation during 1951-52 by 8 lakh acres.

In 1952-53, an increase of about 6 million acres (about 51 per cent. of the total acreage) in the area under Kharif grain crops is reported and though production data are not yet available, it is believed that compared with 1951-52, there has been an appreciable increase.

In the case of jute and cotton the production rose from 3.3 to 4.7 million and from 2.9 to 3.3 million bales respectively.

The total expenditure on agricultural development in the State was Rs. 206 millions in 1951-52 and Rs. 220 millions in 1952-53. It is estimated that as a result of schemes executed during 1951-52, nearly 2 million acres will be brought under irrigation against 2.28 million programmed for five years. Information regarding the progress of these schemes during 1952-53 is not yet available.

Large multi-purpose projects are proceeding satisfactorily. As against a planned outlay of Rs. Rs. 2060 million during the first two years, the actual amount spent on these projects came to Rs. 1900 millions.

In terms of benefit, although the full quantum will be achieved only on completion of the works, the results show that targets fixed for the year 1954-55 have been substantially attained.

Below is a brief description of the progress made during 1951-52 on the multi-purpose projects:

Bakra-Nangal Project: The project consists of (1) the Bakra Dam across the Sutlej, (2) Nangal Dam, 8 miles lower down, (3) Nangal power channel, (4) two power houses on the Nangal canal, (5) transmission lines and (6) Bakra canal system.

At Bakra dam site, the two 30 feet diameter diversion tunnels are in an advanced stage of completion. Work in the river bed should start next winter after the flow of Sutlej has been diverted through the tunnels.

The Nangal Dam has been completed except for the installation of gates which will be in position within a year. The first power house and a large part of the transmission lines will be commissioned by the middle of 1954. Work on Bakra canal comprising 518 miles of main and branch canals and 7000 miles of distributory canals is also proceeding according to schedule. The total sum spent on this project up to the end of March 1953 is Rs. 550 million.

The Harcha Barrage at the confluence of the rivers Sutlej and Beas has been completed except for the installation of gates.

Damodar Valley Project: The construction of the Bokaro thermal station with three 50000 kilowatts electric generating sets is nearing completion. The construction of the Tilaiya Dam has been completed. The total spent on this project so far is Rs. 460 million.

Hirakud Project: After the completion of all preliminary works, work on the earthen and the concrete dam is well under way. More than half of the work of excavation of the canal system has been completed. The total spent on this project so far is Rs. 240 million. Besides these central projects, multi-purpose projects undertaken by various States are progressing well.

Over 70 per cent. of the proposed developmental outlay of Rs. 20690 millions remains to be incurred in the remaining three years. A substantial increase of nearly Rs. 800 millions over the 1952-53 level has been budgeted for in the current year, but the tempo of expenditure will have to be stepped up further in 1954-55 and 1955-56. Of the remaining expenditure of Rs. 74850 millions, Rs. 6000 millions would be available from the Central and States revenue. Rs. 2350 millions will be available from deficit financing against import surpluses financed from the sterling balances lying with the British Government. Still there will be a gap of Rs. 6690 millions which the Government is confident, can be and will be bridged through the external aid and/or new sources of revenue.

The Government of India have announced a scheme for payment of compensation to displaced persons having claims relating to immovable property left in West Pakistan. Final decision on the scheme will be taken after the conclusion of the Nehru-Mahomed Ali meeting and Indo-Pakistan discussions.

The Government of India have decided that compensation should be cashed to the utilisation of evacuee property in India as well as any amount realised from Pakistan on account of the difference between the values of evacuee properties in the two countries.

The compensation scheme expects to cover 2,35,000 claimants whose claims aggregate in value Rs. 1450 millions for the buildings and lands left by them in the urban areas and Rs. 900 millions in rural areas in West Pakistan.

As against this, the value of evacuee properties left in India which will constitute direct compensation to these claimants is estimated at Rs. 900 millions. Besides, the Government have a cash balance of Rs. 80 millions at realisation. This amount of nearly Rs. 1000 millions, together with any sum that the Government of India may be able to get from Pakistan to make the difference in the values of the properties will, under the scheme, be distributed among the displaced persons as compensation on a pro-rata basis. The pro-rata compensation will work out to 20 per cent or less.

It was also announced that the Government's responsibility for rehabilitation would continue in respect of persons not covered by the scheme.

Pandit Nehru, who has left for London to attend the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, will have preliminary talks with the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Mahomed Ali, "on Kashmir, the working of the Prime Ministers' agreement on minorities, the evacuee property payment question and other issues having a bearing on Indo-Pakistan relations," according to a joint press note issued by the Governments of India and Pakistan.

As owing to their other preoccupations detailed discussions will not be possible, the two Prime Ministers will meet again at the earliest possible occasion after their return to their respective countries and will carry on their discussions for the purpose of arriving at a settlement of all Indo-Pakistan differences.

Meanwhile, the Governments of India and Pakistan have issued a directive to those of their Ministers concerned to take up immediately the outstanding issues between the two countries with their opposite numbers.

They are directed to make every effort, in the light of improved atmosphere and outlook that happily prevails on both sides, and the earnest desire of the two Prime Ministers to reach an early, friendly and lasting solution of these differences, so that the two countries may live together as good neighbours and co-operate with each other in all matters of common interest.

In order that the two Prime Ministers may be kept fully informed of the progress made in these discussions, it was also decided to set up a Steering Committee composed of two officials nominated by each Government.

This committee will receive regular reports of the progress made towards a settlement of the outstanding issues and will meet from time to time to consider them and to devise ways and means by which any issue remaining unsettled or pending for any length of time or any disagreement that may arise may be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of the two Governments.

The first meeting of the Steering Committee will be held in Karachi soon after the return of the Pakistan Prime Minister from the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in London.

The Central Government have decided to merge Bellari Taluka with Mysore State as soon as Andhra State was formed on October 1. The Central Government have taken this decision on the basis of the recommendation of Justice Lakshmi Shankar Miah, Chief Justice of Hyderabad, who inquired into the various factors regarding the future of Bellari Taluka.

The three Talukas of Adoni, Alur and Raydurg of Bellari District, covering an area of 3061 sq. miles with a population of 4,69,813, would be merged in Andhra State and the remaining seven talukas namely Bellari, Siruguppa, Hospet, Sandur, Gadagalli, Harpanahalli and Kudalgi, covering an area of 3829 sq. miles with a population of 7,73,012, would be merged in Mysore State.

The Government of India have decided to appoint a high-powered commission to consider the re-organisation of States after the formation of Andhra State. The commission is likely to be appointed before the end of the year and will consist of leading personalities not actively connected with politics.

In making recommendations regarding reorganisation of States and fixing the boundaries of various States, the commission would take into consideration not only cultural and linguistic matters, but also other important factors such as the preservation of the unity of India, national security and defence, administrative advantages, financial considerations and the economic progress of each State as well as the whole nation.

The food position of India has improved considerably and it will not be long when India becomes self-sufficient. The Government of India are not anxious to purchase foreign rice this year except on her own terms. This optimism is the result of increased production of rice in this country during 1952-53. It is officially stated that out of a total of four million tons increase of food-grain production over the previous year, nearly 2.7 million tons is rice, which had been extremely in short supply for nearly a decade.

tion in China, in Zululand and in England.

And if God or Nature did not want the Blacks and the Whites to inter-marry, if and when they do, why do they produce children like the "pure" coloureds? Where Nature or God frowns on intermarriage, the offspring is sterile. The horse and the donkey produce the sterile mule. A white man and an African produce the Coloured. The Coloured will produce children if he marries any other human race, including Coloureds like him. Which proves one thing: That the really important thing in all this is the human personality, which is sacred above every barrier of race or colour.

If Liberalism will not become the Left-wing of the United Party, it better search itself again over the issue of reservations on who shall be the citizens of South Africa. Citizenship for every South African must be the goal. How shall we go about getting to this goal is something we can sit down and discuss. I should like to see the Liberal Party even lose very squarely like convinced democrats or Christians—whichever is the case—the issue of intermarriage. If in the final reckoning we cannot live happily as distinctive races, without one group seeking to dominate the other races, we might even have to consider mixed marriages in the future. What is wrong with that as a solution—when every other means has failed?

Fortunately, for the moment we are not called upon to crack our heads on whether Black should marry White. If it were an issue, I would not hesitate to say Yes! But, as I have said, it is not the issue at stake. Just now we are concerned with regard for the human personality. We are concerned with giving it its due in a mixed society. If Liberalism has to be an effective bridge between Black and White, it should respect the human personality regardless of colour. When it does that, it will begin to realise that you do not win your neighbour's confidence by trying to bully him into accepting you as some sort of a superior. If you want his friendship, accept him as your equal.

If the Liberal Party really wants to unite Black and White, it should accept us as equals. Reservations and equivocations waste our time. We are on the march, in the direction of our choice and one day we shall be impatient with those who waste our time.

ગાંધીજીની અજમેર યાત્રા વખત
હું એક સમયે યાદ આવે
છે, બાપુના એક જુના ચિત્રણ
ને તેમને એક સાલે પોતાને
પર જમવાનું આમ તથા અખ્ય.
કેટલાક જુવાનો એ ગુરુદયથી
નાશજ હતા. બાપુની એ યાત્રા
માં સ્વયંસેવકોની જે હુકમી
તઈયાર કરી હતી તેના આગેવા
નો અને કેટલાક સ્વયંસેવકોએ
બાપુને પેલા લાઇને ત્યાં ભોજન
માટે ન જવા દેવાનો નિશ્ચય
કયો. પુ. કકરબાપા આ યાત્રા
માં બાપુજીની સાથે જ ઉતરી
હતા. હું પણ ત્યાં જ હતો.
સ્વયંસેવકોના મતિનિધિઓએ
અમને કહી દીધું કે અમે બાપુ
ને નહીં જવા દઈએ. બાપુની
મોદર આડા સુધે જઈશું. અમે
તો ગભરાયા. ઉપરે એમ નકરી
થયું કે સ્વયંસેવકોનું એક પ્રતિ- નિધિ મંડળ સવારે બાપુને મળે
અને તે લાઇ સાથે એમને જે
ફરિયાદો દેવા તે બાપુને જણાવે.
એમને સાબરમતી પછી બાપુને
તેમને ત્યાં જઈ યોગ્ય લાગે તો
ભરે બધા સ્વયંસેવકો તે.
એમ માનતા હતા કે, બાપુ
અધારમાં ન રહેવા ભેળ્યો.
આટલું નકરી થવાથી અમે
નિરાંતનો શ્રાવ્ય લીધો.

રતના એ અડી વાગ્યા હશે.
એ વખતે હું ધણી વાર બગી
ભઈ છું. તે દિવસે પણ જાણે
તો બાપુના ઓરડામાં દીવાનો
અકાસ જણાયો. એ સ્વાભાવિક
દેખકતાથી અંદર ટોક્યું કહું
તો બાપુ એકા એકા કાંઈક
લખતા હતા. મને સ્વાઇ
લાગી. મારા મોંમાંથી નીકળી
ગયું, “બાપુ, આ શું?” બાપુ
એ પૂછ્યું, “તમે પણ જાણો
છો શું? કંઈ કહેવું છે?”

મારે કંઈ કહેવાનું નહતું.
પણ બાપુએ પૂછ્યું કે તમે
મને સ્વયંસેવકોવાળી વાત યાદ
આવી. મારા મનમાં એક
વિચાર જાગી ગયો કે હું જ

ધરમ કરતાં ધાડ

(કરીબાડ ઉપાધ્યાય ‘સેકલવન’માંથી)

બાપુ આગળ બધી ફરિયાદો
કેમ ન સુકે? સ્વયંસેવકો
પોતાના સેવકો બધી વાતો
વધારીને કહેશે. હું તે કામ
સારી રીતે થનાવી દઈશ. એટલે
જે આગળ પાછળનો કંઈ પણ
વિચાર ક્યાં વિના કહું, “કાલ, કંઈક વાત કરવી છે.”

બાપુએ કલમ નીચે સુકી
દીધી અને કહું, બોલો, શું કહેવું છે?”

સ્વયંસેવકોએ પેલા બાઇની
વિરુદ્ધ જે કંઈ અમને કહું હતું
તે બધું જે કંઈમાં બાપુને કહું.
બાપુ ગંભીર થઈ ગયા. તેમણે
પૂછ્યું, “તમે કંઈ જાણો છો?”

“કાલ બાપુ, જે પણ આવી
જ વાતો સાંભળી છે.”

“તો હું કાલે તમને એમની
સાથે સ્વયંસેવકો દરનીશ.”

મને કરી સુક ન પડી. જે
કહી દીધું, “સાહે.” હવે હું મન
મા ગભરાયો કે આ તો સુરકેલી
મા સુકાયા? ધરમ કરતા ધાડ
આવે તે આનું નામ!

બીજે દિવસે પેલા મિત્ર આ-
વ્યા. બાપુએ મને બોલ્યો.
પછી બાપુએ તેમને કહું કે
ફરિયાદો તમારે વિષે અને
આટલી આટલી વાત કહી છે.
તમારે શું કહેવું છે?

તેમણે એ બધી વાતોનો
ઇન્કાર કયો અને મારા પર
નારાજ થઈ ગયા. મને કહું,
“તમને મારા પર શક હતો તો
તમે અને કેમ ન પૂછ્યું? મારી
સાથે વાત ક્યાં વિના બાપુને
જાહેર આ બધી વાતો કહી એ
યોગ્ય કહેવાય? સત્યાગ્રહીને
આ ધર્મ છે?”

હું જવાબો. જે કહું,
“તમારી વાત સાચી છે. મારે
તમારી સાથે જ વાત કરવી
હતી. મારા તરફથી. બાપુને

કરી ફરિયાદ કરી નથી બીજા
લોકોએ જે ચીંતાજનક પરિસ્થિતિ
અને કામદો ઉભો કર્યો હતો
તેનો ઉકેલ કરવા માટે જે
બાપુને બધું કહું હતું. એમા
મારો તમારે વિષે ખરાબ હેતુ
નહોતો. મારો હેતુ તો એક
બધ કર પરિસ્થિતિ ઉભી થતી
અટકાવવાનો હતો. છતાં આ
જે દેવ થયો તે માટે હું
મારી માથું છું.”

પછી બાપુએ એમને કહું,
“કેક, તો આ વિષે પહેલાં તમે
અને ફરિયાદ વાત કરી લો.
પછી મને મળ્યો.”

અમારી વાતચીતનો જે હેવાલ
અમે બાપુને આપ્યો તે પરથી
બાપુએ પેલા મિત્રની વિરુદ્ધ
સુકાદો ન આપ્યો. તેમણે મને
કહું, “જ્યાં સુધી એ બધી
ફરિયાદો સચી સાબિત ન થાય
ત્યાં સુધી તો મારે એમને નિર્દોષ
જ માનવા પડશે. અને હું
એમને નિર્દોષ માનતો હોઉં છું
સુધી એમને છા જવાની મારી
ફરજ છે. એમ ન કરે તો હું
મારો ધર્મ સુકું.”

પછી રતના મને બોલાવીને
કહેવા લાગ્યા, “જુઓ ફરિયાદ, આ બાબતમાં પુરી તપાસ કરી
તે તમે તમારો અભિપ્રાય બોલો.
આ રીતે કાંઈ સમજવા વિચારો
વિના કાંઈને વિષે કાંઈ કહેવું એ
ખરાબ નથી. એનાથી કાં તો
જે બંધિતને વિષે કહું હોય તેને
અન્યાય થાય છે, અથવા કાંઈ
પુરાવા ન હોવાને લીધે
આપણે સાચા હોવા છતાં જુઠા
દેખાઈએ છીએ. વળી આવી
વાતો જુઠી પણ હોય છે. સજવું
બધ પણ કરી દે છે. એવે
વખતે એક વાત તો આપણી
આખા પછુ ભુલાવામાં પડે છે.”
આમ કહીને એમણે પોતાની

એક વાત કહી. તે જ દિવસે
તેમના પર એક માણસનો
કામળ આવ્યો હતો, તેણે પોતા
ના પત્ર સાથે ઘણું કરીને કાંઈ
ધટાલિયનનો પત્ર મોકલ્યો
હતો. તેમાં લખ્યું હતું કે
હીંદુસ્તાનમાં જે અધારો છે:
એક અધવરનો મહારાજ અને
બીજો ગાંધી, સાચેના પત્રમાં
લખ્યું હતું—ગાંધીજી, આપ છો
તો મારા મદમાશ, પણ મોટા
સત્યવારી અને સત્યપ્રિય છો.
એટલે મને ખાતરી છે કે આપ
ને વિષે સાચેના પત્રમાં જે
કાંઈ વાત લખી છે, તેની આપ
જરૂર કંઈક કરશો.

આ વાચીને હું તો સદક
થઈ ગયો. બાપુજી પર આવે
બધ કર અને આટલો સીધો
આરોપ! આવા માણસો પણ
હુનિયામાં હોઈ શકે?

મને ધણી ગયેલો, અને મુઝો
ધઈ ગયેલો ભેળને બાપુએ કહું,
“એણે એમ ને એમ નથી લખ્યું.
નજરે ભેળેલી વાત પરથી
લખ્યું છે. તું માનશે?”

હવે તો હું સુક બની ગયો.
“બાપુ, આપ શું કહો છો?
માનુ? આખી હુનિયામાં કાંઈ
જે ખાતરી નથી શકે. આ તો
કાંઈ રાક્ષસ લાગે છે.”

“ના. એમ નથી. વિલાયતમાં
મારી વિરુદ્ધ જે અચાર કરવામાં
આવ્યો છે, તેનો આ નમુનો
છે. હું જોજોએ પરિપક્વ માટે
વિલાયત ગયો ત્યારે તે વખત
ના વાઈસરોય વિકાંગને, ખાસ
આવી વાતો ઉકે રાજ સુધી
પહોંચાણી હતી. અને લોકોએ
જુગ ખરાબ પ્રચાર કયો હતો.
જે પાછળ એમની ધરજા એવી
હતી કે લોકો પર મારી અસર
ન પડે. જેને લોકો મહાત્મા
માને છે તે ગાંધી તો આવે
ખદમાય માણસ છે એવું તેઓ, ઈંગ્લેન્ડના લોકો અને રાજાના

બોલી રીત

કુનીયામાં માઠી માઠીની પ્રવૃત્તિ આખા આદીકા ખંડમાં મોટા ઉપભોગી રહી છે. કોઈ પણ સમજનાર અક્ષિત વ્યક્તિ કે અન્યન પીતે પણ એવા જાણપ્રવર્તનને ટેકો નહીં આપી શકે. અને તેને સામાન્ય મણીએ જીએ અને તેમાં ભોલાભેલા બોલી રવા આપમે જીએ. કારણ તેઓ આદીકાન મોઢાની જાણે સેવા નથી કરી રહ્યા પરંતુ તેઓના સદ્ગત નાદમે ખાઈ પેણ રવા છે. હોંદન, યા પ્રધાન બી, નેહરુ, કે જેવના કરતા આદીકાને વધારે સુહૃદ ધીમ આપેલ ખીલ કોઈ દરેક, તેમજ આદીકાને પોતાનું જરૂર હવે સિદ્ધ કરવાને કોઈ પણ જગ્યાની દીકા નહિ કરવા સાથે મંબીર મેલવણી આવેલી છે. આ વધુ જેઓ મેર માંજે દોરવાપેલા માઈ માઈ માસાદીઓને દાસી થકે તેઓએ માથ પોતાના મોઢાની નહિ પરંતુ કુનીયાની છાતી ને મારે અને માનવજાતની પરમ સેવા કરેલી અણખ.

માઠી માઠીની પ્રવૃત્તિને સખતમાં સખત સંબંધમાં વખોડી કાઢવા કારણે કુનીયાની રવાનિહ તેમજ અદીક સરકાર તરફથી તેની વિરુદ્ધ સેવામાં આવી રહેલાં પચ્છાને અંગે કાલુજર પચ્છ વખાણી છાત્ય નથી. દીકાને દીકાથી પહેલી વળવાનું આ માનસ કુનીયામાં છાતી રવાથી નથી યાદ. કુનીયાને તે છાતીથી કુરને કુર કાઢ નહીં રહ્યું છે. આ વસ્તુને નિમે કાઢા મુલકદિજાની આખો બચ છે એ અન્યત સામાન્ય છે.

કુનીયાની સરકાર તેમજ રક્ષિય આદીકાની સરકાર એ એમ માનતી હોય કે દમ અને વધુ દમનથી તે છાતી રવાથી છકશે તો તેઓ અંબા જલ કરે છે. રક્ષિય આદીકામાં સમસમ અણખા ખીન-જોરા મેલમોની દીકામાંપર પ્રતિપદ મુખી ખીન-જોરા બોલી રવામાં આવી છે તેમ કુનીયામાં પણ કુનીયા આદીકાન કુનીયા, ને કુનીયાના મેડીવેની કુખ્ય રાજકીય સરવા છે. તેને મેરકાવે દરવાખમાં આવી છે.

બોલીક સરકારે મેરકાવ-દ-અનરક સર બોલ અરકાવને કુનીયા મોઢામાં છે. જેઓ કુનીયામાંથી માઈ માઠીની અડ કાઢી વાજવાની પેતાની યજિત ની બાજા કરી રવા છે. તેમજ માઈ માઈ સિરવા બીજા રીકે રીકે બોલને પોતાની કુબેચા પાણી છે

કુનીયાના મોઢાને તેમજ કુનીયામાં પેતે પરાયે કરવાના છે તેવી આજા આવેલી છે. અમારું માનવું છે કે મેરકાવ-દ-અનરક પરિસ્થિતિને વધારે થય કરવાના છે. આને જરૂર માઈ માઈ માસાદીઓને નહિ પરંતુ તેની પાછળ રહેલી કાવનાનો નાશ કરવા ની છે. એ કાવનાનો નાશ કરકરી પચ્છાથી નહિ પરંતુ કાલુજરનેથી મુલકદિગીરીથી જ થઈ શકશે. એ વસ્તુ કા-કારી કાઢવ તેમ નથી કે આખા આદીકા ખંડમાં આદીકાને પચ્છા કાળા વખત મુખી કાઢીવાદ અને સરવાનવાદની રોખંડી એકીએ તીએ કચાપેલા રાખવામાં આવેલા છે. અને તેથી આને દરે તેઓ બોલી મા ખરી આજા આપવામાં સામવાદ ના મોમ થઈ પડ્યા છે. આદીકામાં મા દરે વધુની જાણથી અમમજાતી આવવા સાગી છે અને કાઢીવાદ અને સંવાનવાદના દિવસે ભરાઈ મળા છે આદીકાને અને કચળા, કચાપેલા મોઢા દરે કવત રિપતિમાં પર રહેવા તકવાર નથી. રેવજાએ ખંતી બોલા દૂરીઓએ દરે સવિવધ પોતા ના પડનું રાજનામું આપી રહ પોતાના અગિયો, જેઓ દરે અગિયો રવા નથી, તેઓની કાયે સમાન બામીકારી થી કાપ કરવાનું રિવાજી ભેગુ ભેગું દરે એ વખત આવેલો છે કે અગર બજા રહેલી આગમાં તેજ લોખનું નહિ ભેગને પરંતુ તેને છુટાવવાના પચ્છા તવાજા ભેગમે. એ વસ્તુ કુલ કુખ્ય થી નહિ બની શકે પરંતુ છાતનાથી થઈ શકશે. આદીકાના કમનસાને આને કમનસાનું પીનજામેના દામ મા આવી પડેલી છે. માઈ માઈનું નિવારણ માઈ માઈ સાથે માઈ માઈ રતા છાત પવાને પચ્છ કરવાથી જ થઈ શકશે.

દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાના હોંડીઓનો સવાલ

વડા પ્રધાન ડૉ. મજાને હાલમાં કહ્યું કે, કોમનવેલ્થના વડા પ્રધાનોની કોમનવેલ્થ બહાર, દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાના હોંડીઓ વીરો, હોંડ અને પાણીરતન ના વડા પ્રધાનો સાથે મને વાતા-વત થઈ નથી. તેઓ અને છે કે દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાના સવાલો વીરો બોલીશ કેમ્પેનના બીન-યુરોપીઓ સારી સમજૂતી ઉત્પન્ન થઈ છે અને તેઓ આ સમજૂતી વધારવા કહે છે. ૧૯૪૬ માં હાલમાં થયેલી વડા પ્રધાનોની સભા તેમજ ૧૯૫૧ ની કોમનવેલ્થ પ્રજ્ઞ કાલના રીટની ખાતેખી ખાતેમાં ૫૪૫ મીથાલ કોમનવેલ્થના વડા પ્રધાનો વચ્ચે વાતાવત થઈ હતી. 'કોમનવેલ્થનું જોર, સ્વયં રાજ્યની ખાતેખી ખાતેમાં ખાતે

રાય નહીં નાખવાથી વધે છે કોમનવેલ્થ ના દેશોના ખાતેખી સવાલોમાં સંબો ના ખાતેખી કોમનવેલ્થ ટ્રી થઈ છે. એમરટરેમક ડૉ. મજાને, ભરત્ર પ્રેસ કોમનવેલ્થ આકોશના આપણા આપણ આપણું હતું. દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકા ના મેટ્રીક સવાલો વીરો મોમતાં તેમજે કહ્યું 'બોલીસે તેમના આકોશને મેટ્રીક મા જેટલી સામાજિક સમયમાં આવે છે તેના કરતાં અને સાલ મથી વધુ અમારી બીન-યુરોપી પ્રજ્ઞને અ.પીએ છીએ. એપોર્ટકેનો સામાજિક કારો યુરોપી યુરોપ, તેના રપ દેશો અને રાષ્ટ્રીય સરહદોમાં આવે છે. દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાની વરતી જલજલ કોમેન્ડ જેટલી જ છે—આરે ૧,૦૦,૦૦,૦૦૦. હવે મારે કે કોમેન્ડમાં ૭૫,૦૦,૦૦૦ બાંન-મોરોએ અને ૨૫,૦૦,૦૦૦ મોરો એ કોપ. યુરોપીઓ ભલેલા ખોસી છે, બ્યારે બીન-મોરોએ વધુ આવે આમાં કુલરેલા અને કોમ્યુનીકમ જેની બીજી વરેલી અરોપી કોરવાલ જાય છે. બીન-મોરોએનો મથો સાથ જ મથી છે. એવા જાનેમોમાં તમે મું કરો? અમુળ્યથી કોમેન્ડ કોરવાનું મુદ્દા પ્રજ્ઞે? વાન-સાન-સીમી? કેવ આખા પારથી દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાને આ સ્થળી કુર રાખી છે. મવા જનવક પ્રસેકચન પછી સ્થળી સ્થીર બની છે.'

આફ્રીકામાં વધતો જતો અમુળ્યગચે

હોંડના વડા પ્રધાન, બી નેકરે હાલમાં કહ્યું કે કોનીયામાં શાલી સ્થપાવાની વડાપી કુનીયાના બીજા બાજેમાં આમજ વધવાનું આશાવનક વાતા વરજુ ફેલાયું છે. તેમજે હાલમાં પ્રેસ કોમનવેલ્થને કહ્યું કે યુરોપ અને બ્યારે રીકા, આફ્રીકા અને એશીયામાંના કોમેન્ડ માથુસોના સંકોટથી યુરો વીરો નથી. આપણે કોમ્યુનીકો અને બીન-કોમ્યુનીકોની વાતો કરીએ છીએ પરંતુ આફ્રીકામાં અને એશીયામાં આ બનેથી જુદું જ છે—નેકનસીત્ર્ય છે. તેથી તેમનું આર્થિક ધોરણ સુધારવાની જરૂર છે. આફ્રીકામાં વધતા જતા દેશથી મને જલ જાને છે. બે તેને સુધારવા તરફ નહીં ભેગાય તો અમાર પરીણામ આવશે.

આખાને યુનાઈટેડ નેશન્સમાં કમ્પલે કરે

વડા પ્રધાન, બી નેકરે હાલમાં કહ્યું કે કોનીયાના મુદ્દા પછી કોમ્યુનીકે આખાને 'યુનાઈટેડ નેશન્સમાં કમ્પલે કરવા કેમનવેલ્થના વડા પ્રધાનો સમક્ષ છે. રાષ્ટ્રીયતન, વડા પ્રધાન, બી. પ્રેકેમક આર્થિકે કહ્યું કે 'કોની

યાની શાલી મારેની રાજ્યીય કોમનવેલ્થમાં કોમ્યુનીકે આખાને પછ કમ્પલે કરવું જોઈએ.' આ ખાતે ૫૨ વડા પ્રધાનો વધુ મને કમ્પલે કરવા હતા. આખાને યુનાઈટેડ નેશન્સમાં કમ્પલે કરવા વીરુદ્ધ મનો હતું. ત્યાં મુખી, મુદ્દનો ખાતે આવે નહીં ત્યાં મુખી આખાને કમ્પલે કરવાનો વીરુદ્ધ, મુખીમારી મુજાબ અને આ હેતુ કમ્પલે ને કાંઈ પણ કમ્પ કરવામાં આવે તો તે યુનાઈટેડ સ્ટેટ્સમાં ખાતેચા નાખવા જરૂર થયું જોઈએ. કેપેટવેનનક મુજ એશીયા કોમેન્ડ સાથે વીરોધ

કેપેટવેનના મુજ એશીયા એન સાથે દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાની હોંડી કોમેન્ડે વીરોધ કોમેન્ડો છે. વાંધો કોમેન્ડવાની મુદ્દા જુનની ૧૬ તારીખે યુરી થઈ હતી. દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાની હોંડી કોમેન્ડે સિકાલ ૫૨ એનનો વિરોધ કર્યો હતો. અને અમુળ્ય કે રેસ કોનીમથી, રેસો વચ્ચે કોમેન્ડ કોમેન્ડ વાવ તેમજ હોંડી એને આર્થિક રીતે કમ્પલાવી નાખવા માં આવે છે. દક્ષિણ આફ્રીકાની હોંડી કોમેન્ડ આ ખાતે ૫૨ મોર્ડને જુનની આવશે.

ગુજરાતી માધ્યમોને યુવાનોની ટકાર

[લેદનીસખર્મથી એ ગુજરાતી યુવાનોએ અમારાપર એક ચર્ચાપત્ર અંગ્રેજીમાં લેખી મોકલ્યો છે. તેની ચર્ચા અંગ્રેજીમાં કરવી લેખિત નહિ હાથવાળી અને તેમ છતાં તેમાં ચર્ચના માં આવેલા ધુર્ધા ખસ કરી આજના પ્રસંગે અગત્યના જાણવાળી અને તેને ગુજરાતીમાં તરજુમે કરી તે નીચે આપીએ છીએ. અંગ્રેજીમાંથી છીએ કે આ આપણા ગુજરાતી સમાજને અગત્યના પ્રસંગે વાચકો વિચાર કરે અને તેની જુદી પુરેક ચર્ચા કરે. તેને માટે 'ઇન્ડિઅન એપિનિયન'ની હદારો અને પ્રુશ્લી મુદ્રાએ છીએ. ચર્ચા પત્રોએને એટલી વિનંતિ છે કે તેઓએ ચર્ચાપત્રો ગુજરાતી ભાષામાં જ લખી મોકલજા. ભાષી છુટી હોય તેની કચી કરાવત નહિ. તે અંગ્રેજીમાં લખવું. અક્ષર શાહીમાં રવચ્છ હોવાને જોઈએ અને સખાણ જેમ અને તેમ કુડ' હોય જોઈએ. હવેલા નીચેના પાલન નહિ કરવામાં આવેલું હોય તેવા પત્રોને પાલન આપવામાં નહિ આવે. જે ભર્મજોએ ચર્ચાપત્ર લખી મોકલ્યો છે તેમને પણ અમારી સુચના છે કે તેઓએ અવિવ્યમા ગુજરાતીમાં સખાણ મોકલવું જોઈએ. તેનો તરજુમે કરવામાં અંગ્રેજી વખત રોકી શકતા નથી ગુજરાતીમાં લખવાં નહિ આવડતું

હોય તો એ તો તેઓને માટે અને ગુજરાતી સમાજને માટે સૌથી વિશેષ રી,ચનીય છે. આપણી જાત, જાત અને ભ.પાને તિલાંજલી આપીને પશ્ચિમ ના પાલમાં તથાજ જરૂરું તો આપણી રિપતિ "નહિ કરના નહિ માટના" જેવી ચર્ચ પડશે.—ઈ. એ.]

સ હેમ,—અમને હોંડુ યુવાનોને લાગે છે કે આપણી ખાસ કરી ગુજરાતી પ્રમ આગળ વધતી નથી. તેટુ મુખ્ય કારણ જુના નકામા ચર્ચ નવેસા વહેમો, રિવાજો અને આપણા સમાજ માં પરપરાથી ચાલતી આવેલી રીતો છે. તેમાય, લખણ તરીકે, ઠાતી રીત સૌથી પ્રથમ સ્થાન ભેજવે છે. હોંડમા ભ્યા તે જીવનવેલી છે ત્યાં જો કે તે સદાતર નાજુદ થરા ઘાગી છે છતાં આ પશ્ચિમ મુધારા વાળા દેશમાં તેનું મજબુત પાલન થઈ રહ્યું છે. ડોળી, ખરી, પાચી, મેચી, દરજી એવા આપણામાં ઠાતીએદો રા સાર હોવા જોઈએ? આ મુખર્તાભરેલી જાતી રીત નાજુદ થરી જોઈએ અને સખળી કહેવતી ઠાતીએ પમા રાજમારને, હશે પણ બેદ રાખ્યા વિના હોંડુ પ્રમમાં સમાજ જરી જોઈએ. આ વસ્તુ ભારેજ સિદ્ધ થઈ શકે જો

આંતર રાત્રીય લગ્નો કરવામાં આવે અને માટે યુવાનો તેમજ યુવતી એકસે પોતાના અતિ રીતીચરત અને જુના વિચારોને વણગી રહેનારા માધ્યમો અને મોટી વય ધરાવનારા અન્ય કુટુંબીજનોનો વિરોધ કરવાની દિમત ડાખવવી જોઈએ.

ખીજી અત્યંત અગત્યની બાબત એ છે કે હોંડરા તેમજ હોંડરીએને અને ખાસ કરી હોંડરીએને જેટલું જાણ તેટલું ઇચ્છુ અધાનું જોઈએ. તેને બદલે માધ્યમો પોતાના પુત્રોને અને ખાસ કરી પુત્રીએને સખી લગ્ન થઈથી પંધ,એક જોવાને પ્રચ્છત. હોવાથી તેઓને નિશાંચામાંથી ફરજપાલ હોવાથી લેવામાં આવે છે. આમ કરી માધ્યમો બરેબર પોતાના જાળકુડ માત્રી જુનજ કરે છે. માળકના એટલી નાની વયે લગ્ન કરીને તેઓ તેઓની સખળી અભિપ્રાયમિનો નાશ કરે છે એટલુંજ નહિ પરંતુ તેનું બાવિ સખ અને આખાદી તેની પાસે થી છીનવી લઈ તેનો દેહ અને આત્મા બન્નેને નરકમાં નાખી દે છે.

યુવાન છે.કરા અને હોંડરીએને હજુ તો જીવનનો અનુભવ લેવાની તક પણ મળી ન હોય ત્યાં ખડે લગ્ન

જીવન કેમ જોમરી સકાય તેની તેમને અખર મી રીતે પડે.

અહીં ટ્રાંસવાનમાં એવો એક ૧૭જ રરીવાર માગેજ ખાલી જતો હશે જ્યારે હજુ વીસીએ ૫૫ નહિ પહેલા હોય એવા માળકોને લાકડે મરડડું વળગાડી દેવામાં આવતું નહિ હોય, કેલકાક લાખલા અને પોતે જાણીએ છીએ કે જ્યાં હોંડરીએને નિશાંચામાંથી હોવાથી લઈ પોતાની પ્રચ્છત વિરુદ્ધ પરધ્યાવી દેવામાં આવેલી છે જ્યારે તેઓની પ્રચ્છત હજુ અગળ વિચારવાસ કરવાની હતી. માગ્યોના આ મુખર્તાઓ અને રાજ્યનીય જુનોયી અમને ધલેજા આપતા થયો છે.

અમારા યુવાન જાણીએ અને બદલેને ને માધ્યમોના આવા મોટા ફલેનો દિમતથી વિરોધ કરવા અમે વિનંતી કરીએ છીએ. આપણા જીવનનો ૫૫ નાહ થઈ થયો છે તેવે વખતે આપણી જાત અંગ્રેજી પણ આપણે નામદ બનીશું? નહિ જ. આપણે અવાજ સબળાખ્યા મિના આપણે નહીજ રહીએ. આપણે ખરા વિચાર કરતાં અને ખરે માર્ગે માલતા ધીખવું જોઈએ અને આપણા અગ્તાન માધ્યમો ને સમાજની જુનોનો વિરોધ કરવો જોઈએ.

ગત વર્ષે યજ્ઞેલી મહાન કુટુંબી વિષે ખાન બેચુ અને હાંના સંમતતા કાપનું અવધેશન હતું. હાંના રાજ તંત્રમાં કમ્પેન્સેશન રાખવામાં આવ્યે, નથી અને સર્વોદયનાં સિદ્ધાંત પર રાખવીવતની રચાવના ઘટ રહી છે તે વિષે ખાન બેચુ. તેમણે કહ્યું : છાત્રીભણે બંધારણીય ઉપાયો વડે ભીનીદારી અને કુટુંબીવાદના દોષો ના છુટ કરવાની જામે આશા અને અભિલાષા છેવી રચા છીએ. સર્વોદયની ભાવનાપર રાખવત ન રચાવવામાં કલ્પથી શુધ્ધાઈ જવાના કારણે જો જામે શુધ્ધચક્ષુ થઈશું સંબંધોથી અલગ રહેવા પ્રેરણા હોઈએ તે જામે કુટુંબીવાદ અન્ય રાષ્ટ્રોના રાખસાએ અને અતુલ્યેનું અનુકરણ કરી રચા છીએ.

એણા અને આક્રોશમાં માનવ શ્રુતિઓ શુદ્ધતા આવી રહી છે તેને ઉપરેખ કરતાં ડૉ. રાધાકૃષ્ણને કહ્યું કે જો એક ચેલેજ અને તક પચ્છ છે. રાખવત અને આર્યોક શોધણના જાતે જોય ઘટ પછા હોઈ ને ભોડા અને રાખવત, આદિક કે જાતીભેદના બંધનમાંથી મુક્ત થવા કમ્પડી રચા છે તેઓ પ્રત્યે જામે સદાનુકૂળી ધરાવીએ છીએ. તેવો ભોડાના એણીવાસીઓ અને આક્રોશવાસીઓને જાટે કકદાર રચત મેળવવાના પ્રયત્નોમાં અમારો પ્રયત્ન સદકાર આપવા જામે છૂટીએ છીએ.

કુનાઈડ નેશનલ એસેમ્બલીએસને નીરે કલેજ કરતાં તેમણે કહ્યું. સાંતિક કારણોને કમને કુટુંબીવાદ આજે કુટુંબિત બનેછી છે અને બિન-ગ્રામ જોના વડો અરસપરસ પરવશ થવા છે. જામે માનીએ છીએ કે કુનાઈડ નેશનલ એક આતરરાષ્ટ્રીય સદકારની પ્રયત્ના છે. જામે અને જોએ છીએ કે, મદદ રાખવો, જેઓ કુનાઈડ નેશ

નસમાં નેશનલ ધરાવે છે, તેઓ ખરીતા ના સિદ્ધાંતોનો કાંચ કરી રચાં છે, રિપરતાને અર્થ તેઓ કાલની રિપરિત નજાવી રાખવી એવો કહે છે, નિરાશ થયેલા ભોડામાં તેઓ વડેમ ઉપજવી રચાં છે, કાલની રિપરિત આજ રાખવામાં તેઓના રચાપિત સાલો રસાર્થ રહે છે એક માને છે, જામે અમને થયું કુ.ખ ધાય છે"

ડૉ. રાધાકૃષ્ણને કહ્યું. સત્તા રતન ડરનારી છે, અંતઃકરણ શુદ્ધ કરનાર છે. બીજાઓમાં રહેલા રાજસની સામે કુડવાને જાલે અરપણામાં રહેછી રિચ્ઠ રિતિ આપણે ડેખવી જોઈએ. આપણે પ્રક.ય રેષારીયુ તો અંધકાર આપે આપ નાશ પામશે. વિશ્વમજા, જેનું કુનાઈડ નેશન પ્રતીક અને જેની આધા છે, તે જો સિદ્ધાંત ધવાની હોય તો આપણે નવી જાતની વધારી ડેખવી પડશે, એવી જવાબદારી નું કાન ડેખવું પડશે કે જોમાં રાષ્ટ્રીય મર્પદાઓ નહિ રહે. ઉવટે કુટુંબીવાદી ધાતી સિદ્ધ કરનાર અને દકાવી રાખનાર રાષ્ટ્રિય આધ્યાત્મિકજન કહે, જે ભોડાને રાષ્ટ્રીય અભિસાપાઓથી પર કલ જરી અને ખરી સાતીનું ધોરણ રચાપિત કરશે

વરજનીમાની કુનીવસ્ટીડીની મેરી વોશિંગ્ટન ડેસેલ્જના મેનુઅરેલ સમસ આપણ કરના ડૉ. રાધાકૃષ્ણને કહ્યું કે ડૉ.ય પચ્છ એક રેય સ્વતંત્રતાનો પોતા નાં એકમાને માટે ન કાવો કરી રચતો નથી. એક જ રેયમાં સ્વતંત્રતા અને બીજા રેયોમાં નહિ એકું નહિ બની શકે. આપણે છૂટીએ પા નહિ છૂટીએ છતાં આપણે સો એક વિશ્વ ના છીએ, અને આપણા શરીરના એક ભાગને છલ ધાય તો બીજા ભાગે અરવરથ થવા વિના નજ રહે.

ડરખનમાં બચકર આગ

ગયા શોમવારની સાંજના સમજા ચાર માઝ યા ડરખનના મેડન વ્હોઈ ના જતામાં જાંચ એડરના વિસ્તારમાં આઠેમં વેરકાકિસ, જેમાં સાંખા પાઉડી કાંમતના ઉત્ત. સામકા અને શુદ્ધ ભેડાની સાકીઓ પડેછી હતી તેમાં ભવકર કામ લાગી હતી ને ભુધવાર સુધી એકસવક નકાતી પંદર માઝ કુર સુધી એ કામ જોવામાં આવતી હતી. ડરખનના ઇતિહાસમાં એવી કામ જાણવામાં આવી નથી. પા રપ ઘાખનું કુકસાન થયેલ અકલ્પમાં આવે છે, આ વેર કાકિસ પ્રથમ બ્રીટીશ પુત કમીશન તરફથી વાપરવા માં આવેલું હતું. એજ રાતે સા.ન સત વાગે વરસાદનું ડીપું થયું પડવા ની આકાશમાં નીધાની જુદાં લોકામ

આવી નહિ હોવા છતાં અણુચિંતઓ વરસાદ ડરખનમાં અરખી એક કલાક સુધી કુલજાદ પડી મયો પરત્ત આજ ને તેથી કશા અસર નહિ થઈ. એડલા સારા નરણ કતા કે કવા નહિ હતી નહિ તો જો વેરકાકિસની એક બાજુ એ કરડીલાખર રોર કતો, જેમાં દન બધી નાઇટ એસીડ હતો; એક બાજુ કાકાડાને સુરેલિત રાખનાર કટી નીકળે એવો પ્રવાહી પ્રકાર પડેલો કતો; અને જે બાજુએ કાકાડાની વખારો હતી. રાખમેનોની કુલજાતથી તેમાં કામ પ્રસરતી રાડી ચકાઈ હતી. આઠ કાપરમેનોને પાછળથી કારવાર મદે એડીંગટન કોરપીટલમાં જવું પડ્યું હતું. કુખ્ય વૃકસાન શુદ્ધ કન્ટ્રોલર ડીપાર્ટમેન્ટને થયેલું અણુવાય છે. જેણે ૭-૭-૫૭ પાઉડની કીમતની કળોર શુદ્ધ બેચની માફકીએ સા ખડી રાખેછી હતી. આગન, કાકા ૭ કાલર કુટ થયે અડધા કતા

બંકગીનો પ્રતાપ

આપણા રેયમાં જ. સ. ૧૫૩૦માં દિલ્હીની મારી ૧૨ આખર નામે ખાદશ ક રાજ કરતા કતા. તેમને એક પુત્ર કતો. તેનું નામ કુમારું હતું. તે એક વાર સખત બીમાર પડ્યો. રાજાએ ધણી રવાઓ કરાવી છતાં યાદગલને કંઈ જ ફેર ન પડેલ તેથી ખાદશાદ મુજ ચીંતા કરવા લાગ્યા.

જે વખતે એક મોહરી ૧૫ આવી ચ.પા તેમણે યાદગલની તબિબત જોઈ કહ્યું કે, "આપ કે,ઈ અમુલ્ય ચીજ પ્રુકાને અર્પણ કરો, તો યાદગલો બચી જશે." ખાદશાદે વિચાર કર્યો કે કંઈક સિવાય બીજા અમુલ્ય ચીજ શી હોઈ શકે?

તેમણે તરત જ યાદગલના પ્રકંજ ની આગુભાણુ મણુ ફેરા કરીને પ્રુકા ની બંદગી કરી કે, "કે પરત્વરદિગાર, મારી કાકાગીની કુરખાની કંઈ છું. દયા થાવી મારા વકાલત પ્રુકાનો કામ બચાવો."

પ્રુકાએ ખાદશાદની બંદગી સ્લાખી? તે રિવકથી ખાદશાદની તબિબત બચવા મ.ડી, અને યાદગલની તબિબત સુધરતી અઈ. થોડા દિવસ બાદ ખાદશાદ મરણ પામ્યા અને તેમનો વકલો યાદગલને કુમારું સામે કલ થયો. ખરેખર, પ્રુકાની સાચા કલ્પથી બંદગી કરવાથી મર્યા કામ ધાય છે.

સૌરાષ્ટ્રના માછ મહેસુલ પ્રધાન અને જુનાગઢની આરતી હુકમતાના સરનામી શ્રી. સામલદાસ હરિમલદાસ આંખીનું પરમ દિવસે રાત્રે અચાનક મૃત્યુ બંધ પડી જવાથી અવસાન થયું છે. 'વડિલાતરખ' હાપીલમાં આંખી દિવસ હાપી ક્યો પછી સાંજે તેઓ હુકમતાના રાજ્ય સમિતિની બેઠકમાં ગયા હતા. સાંધી પેર પહેલ્યા પછી તરતજ તેમનું અવસાન થયું હતું. શ્રી સામલદાસના અવસાનથી જુનાગઢને એક પ્રખર ધવલારતી બેટ પડી છે. સૌરાષ્ટ્રના પ્રમુખ પ્રધાન શ્રી. દેવરભાઈ અને બીજા ઈલાકા આગેવાનોએ શ્રી આંખીને આવભરી અંજલી આપી હતી.

સુરત જિલ્લામાં જુનાગઢ અધિકારીઓના પીપલ ગળાણી બળાકાર ફેરોના મુકારો આવી ગયા છે અને સેવ-સ અદાલતે ચીખી તલુકાના પીપલગળાણી મામલા યુજવતરાવ બગવાલદાસે સાબને તેમની સેળ વર્ષની યુવલ બાલેજ પડે બળાકાર કરવા માટે ફેર વર્ષની સખત ફેરની સળ ફરી છે. આરોપી સામે લગભગ સાત મંત્રથી બદલો ચાલતો હતો.

મળકાંટના ઠાકોર શ્રાવેજ સામે તેમના ફેરલાક બાપતો અને ભાપતોની વિધવ,એ.એ. જાળીન અને નાજી બંને હરિપાદ કરતાં ભારત સરકારના વિધાસતી ખાતાએ તેમની પાસેથી ખુલાસો માગ્યો હતો. પરંતુ ઠાકોર શ્રાવેજે ખુલાસો હજી સુધી ન આપતાં સરકારે તેમનું શાસ્તિપાલું કમચલાઉ બેટકાબુ છે.

અમલવાદથી લેડે દુર આવેલા સરદાર નમરમાયી નિરાશીતોને અસેડવા નું નહીં યતા, ચોસીસે તેમને સ્વેચ્છાએ જીલ્લો જવાએ જવાનું જાણવું હતું. પરંતુ નિરાશીતોએ તેની અવગણના કરતા ચોસીસે તેમના પર દળયો લાડીયાળું ક્યો હતો અને આ રહે ૨૦ બોમ્બો સહિત ૭૦ માથાસોને ગીરકાતર ક્યો હતો.

હજી રાજ્યની સમાહકાર સમિતિ એના ફોસીસે લગ્યો અને ફેર

સરકાર વચ્ચેના તમકાનો હવે અન્ધ આવી ગયો છે. આ સુધેની સલાહની હવે સરકારી અધિકારીઓ અવગણના નહિ કરે એવી હજીના કમિસનર શ્રી. પાટણેજી ખાતરી આપી છે. એટલે આ સુધે,એ સમાહકાર સમિતિઓમાંથી રાજ્યમાં આપવાનો ચેતાનો નિર્ણય પાછો ખેંચી લીધો છે.

રસોડાનું રમખાણ? ફોન: ૬૩૦૦૪

સન ૧૫૫૫ થયા... કરતા હુરેરો રેખક ઉપરથી ચાલી, વાડકા ઉઠાવવા મામમાં, અને તોન સ્વરે તડુક્યો; "આટલો જમાનો ગયો અને તારી રસોડામાં કંઈ ફેલાયું નથી! આ દાળ ફુલેધી, આ ભજ્યામાં કાંઠરી, મચમાં કાંઠયુ..."

સરભ, ઉમ સ્વરે કંપાત કરતા બેલી; "હવે તો હું તમારાથી કંટાળી છું. ક્યો આ તમારી ફેરરી મંજી અને પાલી, અને હું આ ચાલી..."

આ યુગ લોકશાહીનો છે કે લશ્કરી સરમુખત્યારશાહીનો ?

પ્રગતિને સર્વોચ્ચ સુધારણાનાં આદ્ય સતો આપી રાજસત્તા હાથ કરી તેની એ સરમુખત્યારોનું ધ્યેય હોય છે. હિટલર અને મુસોલિની જેવા સરમુખત્યારો નાહ પામ્યા છતાં સરમુખત્યારશાહીની એ મહત્તાકાંક્ષા દૃશ્ય નજર નથી થઈ. વીજમી સદીના આ યુગને અને લોકશાહી કુચ તરીકે ઓળખાવવામાં આવેલા રોમ પરંતુ અરબી દુનિયા પર તે આજે લશ્કરી સરમુખત્યારોનું જ શાસન છે.

વીજમી સદી લોકશાહીનો કુચ હોવાનું આપણે માનીએ છાએ. બીજી મહાયુદ્ધમાં હિટલર અને મુસોલિની જેવા સરમુખત્યારો તથા જાપાન ના લશ્કરી સત્તાધીશો પરાજય પામ્યા અને કુદ નાદ છુટા પડેલા જેવા દેશમાંથી રાજ્યશાહી નાશ પડી ગઈ અને સર્વેશ લોકશાહી વધીવડી જ ચાલતો ફોજાનો આપણો અનુભવ છે. પરંતુ આ અનુભવ કેટલો જુલમનો છે એ સમજાવ અરબી દુનિયા પર લશ્કરી સત્તાધીશોએ હાથ કરેલા રાજ્યપ્રયોગો પરથી સમજાવો.

હવામાં અણી જતા વચનો

રાજ્યશાહી જેમ જેમ નાશ પડી ગઈ તેમ તેમ લશ્કરી સત્તાધીશોનો આ નવો વર્ગ અસ્તિત્વમાં આવતો ગયો. આ સર્વ સત્તાધીશો લશ્કરી મજા આપવા આવેલા છે. કયાક રાજ્ય શક્તિ દારૂ, તે કયાક ઉદ્યમ બળો ના વિરોધી બળો સાથે સહકાર સંધી ને, અહ રાષ્ટ્રી જાન-પુખ્તારીએ જનરલ આજ્ઞાનકારે અને રક્ષાના પ્રમુખને ફોટી સ્વીકારતા અમેરિકાની સજાના પશુ આવેલા દેશમાં થઈ ગયો. અમારો જ વર્ગમાં હાલ દેશમાં લશ્કરી સત્તાધીશોએ સત્તા હાથ કરેલી છે.

આ લશ્કરી રાજ્યશાસકોમાંના કેટલાક પોતાને રાષ્ટ્રપ્રધાન મનાવે છે, કેટલાક વડા પ્રધાન આ પેટીના ઘણા બધાએ પોતાની જાતે સત્તામુદ્રો હાથ કોલા છે બધારે કેટલાકને તો મરીબી તથા જાણવારથી પીડાતી જનતાએ રાષ્ટ્રપ્રયોધી સત્તાપદ ક્રેલા છે. એમાં ના કાંઈ કાંઈ ભોલો તરફથી સુદાએલા છે બરા, પરંતુ તે કેઈ નિશ્ચિત કાર્ક કમને લીધે નહિ પરંતુ કેવળ અશ્વિત મત ભોક્ષિયતાના આધારે

પોતાના દેશની ખીલિત જનતાના ઉદાર તરીકે રાજ્યશાસક તથા જાપાની ખાતરી આવા સમજા, રાજ્યશાસકો તરફ આતમા આવે છે બરી પરંતુ બહુમાં ભીમની એ ખાતરી ઉપમાના અગાળય છે. ભૌમકિતક સ્વાતંત્ર્ય અને કાયાલોક અધિકારો નષ્ટ થઈને સર્વેશ સરમુખત્યારશાહીનો જ રોડ આગુ મળ્ય છે.

અલગ જાતી સ્થિતિ

કાંઈ દેશમાં આ રોડ લશ્કરી સત્તાધીશો સત્તા હાથ કરતાં લશ્કરી તેમજ રાજ્યીય નબળે પરિસ્થિતિ બદલાય છે.

અમારે જોઈ રાજ્યમાં શક્તિ થઈ ત્યાં સુધી એ દેશ પરિચયના રાષ્ટ્રોના જ વર્ચસ્વ દેખાઈ જાય. પરંતુ ૧૯૫૨ ના નવેમ્બરની શક્તિ પછી આજે ત્યાં એ વર્ચસ્વનું નામખાત નથી જણાતું. કર્નલ યિહસેનો આજે નામજા વિરેશ પ્રધાન તથા લશ્કરનો ચીફ એફ રેક્ર છે. તે અધિકારક્રમથી જારે તેની અમાતિ એક સમયે અશ્વિત તરીકે હતી. પરંતુ હાલ તે તેના અરજ મુકિત આદેશન શિવ, પના બીજા તમામ રાજ્ય કીય પક્ષે પર પ્રતિજ્ઞા મુકી દીધો છે અને સમજા વિરેશી મુકીદારને મનાઈ રૂમાવી દીધી છે.

છટાપદમાં જનરલ નક્ષે રાજ્યસત્તા હાથ કરી છે. ઘુડીના કયાસ આતાપુર્ક સાથે તેને સરખાવવામાં આવે છે. જમાનની જેમ તેણે પણ દેશમાં સર્વોચ્ચ સુધારણા કરવા માટે રાજ્યસત્તા હાથ કરી લેવાનું કહેવાય છે. ઈ.સ. ૧૯૪૮ માં પોલેન્ડાઈનના કુદમાં સજા ઝોના પ્રવરણો ચોટાળો પકાર લાવવાથી તે સૌ પ્રથમ બહેરમાં આવ્યો. તે પણ હવે છટાપદમાંથી સર્વ રાજ્ય કીય પક્ષે વિષેરી નાખીને સરમુખત્યાર બન્યો છે. સુદાનની જાળતમા પશ્ચીમી સમાધાન કરવાને બંધને તેની પ્રતિજ્ઞા અશ્વિત વધી છે. પરંતુ તેના સલાહકારો બહુ જ ઉતાવળો સાથે છે, અને એ કારણે એણે સુધારણા માટે બહુ ઘણી ખમતો લેવા માંગ્યા છે. આર્નેન્ડિન અને કમુઆ

આર્નેન્ડિનના પ્રમુખ પેરાને પદવિ સર સત્તા હાથ કરી છે. આજે એની ઉમર ૫૭ વર્ષની છે. લશ્કરમાં કમિશન મેળવ્યા બાદ ૧૯૨૮ માં એ કુદમાં જોડા રક્ષકમાં જોડા. ૧૯૪૬ માં લશ્કરી પ્રતિનિધિમંડળ સાથે એ મુરોય ઉપડેલો. ૧૯૪૪ માં એ ઉપ-પ્રમુખ બન્યો અને ૧૯૪૫ માં સરસત્તાધીશ પરંતુ એ પહે એ કહી રાજ્યકીય ઉચ્ચ પાંચમ દારૂ નહિ પણ કામદાર વર્ગને પોતાની ખાતુ જરાબર સમજાવવાને આવ્યો છે અને એ વર્ગને સમજાવવામાં તેમનું પોષણ મેળવ્યું છે સત્તા પર આવ્યા પછી અન્ય સરમુખત્યારો જેમ એ પણ પોતાનું ધ્યેય લીધેરી ગયો છે અને રાજ્યકીય વિરોધી ઝોનું તથા અખખારી રવાનું જન માગુ રાખ્યું છે. પ્રમુખમાં પણ આજ સ્થિતિ છે. જનરલ મે, ટરડા આજે ત્યાંને પોતાના

ખાતલ છે. ૧૯૨૧ માં તે લશ્કરમાં સામાન્ય કારકુન હતો. ૧૯૩૧ માં એ બંક મુકો તેમાં તેણે પ્રમુખ બાગ લીધો. અને પોતા સમયમાં તે કર્નલ અને ચીફ એફ રેક્ર બની ગયો. લેસ્ટરિંગ સહુનથી મારીને રોડી પીલવાના કારખાન, મુધીના અનેક સેવમાં એણે માગુ મારી એણે પરંતુ જેવે રાજ્ય શક્તિએ તેને ચોક્કસ તક આપી, તેનો તેણે પુરેપુરો લાભ ઉઠાવ્યો. સરકાર નખળી હતી અને લશ્કરમાં અસતોય હતો. એણે સરકારને કુર કરી લશ્કર અને પોલીસને પમાર વમારી આપ્યો, પાકોસેન્ડને 'પમારી' રાજ આપી અને વાશીસ્વાનંત તથા અખખારી રવાનંત તે ચોક્કસ કુચો દીધો.

પુર્વના દેશોમાંની સ્થિતિ

બોલીવિયા, પાઝીય, કોલમ્બિયા, અસલાવડોર, ગ્વાટેમલા, હાઇલી, પેરુ તથા વેનેઝુએલા એ સમજા દેશો માં એ જ સ્થિતિ છે. પુર્વમાં એકમેકે તે માછળે-મામાં ૧૯૪૭ માં રાજ્યશક્તિ કરીને પિલુલ સમાયે જતા હાથ કરી છે. કાન્સમાં લીધેલા લશ્કરી સિલ્લે તેને આ કાર્યમાં પ્રુખ મદદ કરી છે. સત્તા હાથ કરી પછી તેણે કમ્યુનિસ્ટ તથા તેના જેવા સર્વ પક્ષે પર પ્રતિજ્ઞા મુકી પોતાનું આશન સિધર કમ્યુ છે

આર્મી-રીકની કુરવરમાં તે કમચાં પછ, બાકી ૧૯૨૮ માં નાનકિમ મુકામે સત્તાક્રેક થયો ત્યારથી ૨૧ વર્ષે તે તેણે બીન પર નિરંકુલ સત્તા ભોગવી. અત્યારે કમ્યુનિસ્ટોએ બીનધાથી હાથ કાઢવા જતી તે ફોર્મોસા હાથ પર રહ્યે રહ્યે અમેરિકાની મદદ કરી સત્તાધીય થવાનાં સ્વપ્ન લેવી રહ્યો છે

સરમુખત્યારોની સાથે ચોટાં ચોટાં લોકશાહી રાષ્ટ્રો પણ કોલા સહકાર સાથે છે એ માર્ચલ દીરોની ડ્રોમેન્ડની મુલાકાત દર્શાવી આવે છે. દીરો બને પોતાને કુચે સ્થાવિયાને પ્રમુખ મનાવતો હોય પણ કુચીકતમાં તે સરમુખત્યાર જ છે. લોકશાહી શિલ્પને કરેલા તેના અખખતુર્ક સરકાર પાછા કચો દાવ રહેલો છે એ તો સર્વજ્ઞત છે.

હિટલર મુસોલિનીની પર પરાને અને સોએ સો ટકા ફાઈસ્ટ જનરલ દારૂ આજ મુધી પોતાની સત્તા ટકાવી રહ્યો છે એટલું જ નહિ પરંતુ રશિયાએ જો વિરોધ ઉઠાવ્યો ન હોત તે તેને કદાચ કુચોમાં પણ રથાવ અપવામાં આવ્યું હોત. ૧૯૪૬ની શક્તિ પછી રેપેનની પ્રગતિને તેણે કેટલાય વચનો આપ્યા હતા પરંતુ આજે ત્યાંની જનતા પહેલાના નેટલી જ મરીય છે અને એની સરમુખત્યારી કુચે પ્રાચે વધી રહી છે

અપવાદરૂપ આઝર્બાઈજાન

અમેરિકાના પ્રમુખ જનરલ આજ્ઞાન કાવર આ સમજા સત્તાધીશોથી જુદો પડે છે તે એ જાણતામાં કે તે અમેરિકન લોકો દારૂ એ પહે સુદાઈને આવ્યો છે. પરંતુ તેના કાચમાં એ અખખીલિત સત્તા છે તેનો એ જેવા ઉપયોગ કરે છે તે પર સમજા આધાર રહે છે.

INDIAN OPINION

Founded by Mahatma Gandhi in 1903

The Conditions Of Leadership

"When a nation...attains to world leadership; it preserves that rank only so long as its culture commands respect and some degree of emulation. For though leadership is procured through power, it is maintained over a significant span of time only by the free assent of the led, and free assent is given only to moral, and not to material authority. These are the conditions of world leadership."

—Lewis Galantiere.

Happiness

"If all who count themselves happy were to tell very simply, what it was that brought happiness to them, the others would see that between sorrow and joy the difference is but as between a gladstone, enlightened acceptance of life and a hostile, gloomy submission."

—Macrorieck.

An American's Faith

WE are called, as a people, to give testimony, in the sight of the world, to our faith that the future shall belong to the free.

This faith is the abiding creed of our fathers. It is our faith in the deathless dignity of man, governed by eternal moral and natural laws.

This faith defines our full view of life. It establishes, beyond debate, those gifts of the Creator that are man's inalienable rights, and that make all men great in His sight.

In the light of this equality, we know that the virtues most cherished by free people—love of truth, pride of work, devotion to country—are all pleasures equally precious in the lives of the most humble and of the most exalted....

This faith we hold belongs not to us alone but to the free of all the world. This common bond binds the grower of rice in Burma and the planter of wheat in Iowa, the shepherd in southern Italy and the mountaineer in the Andes....

Honouring the identity and heritage of each nation of the world, we shall never use our strength to impress upon another people our own cherished political and economic institutions.

Concerning the defense of freedom, like freedom itself, to be one and indivisible, we hold all continents and peoples in equal regard and honour. We reject the insinuation that one race or another, one people or another, is in any sense inferior or expendable.

Respecting the United Nations as the living sign of all people's hope for peace, we shall strive to make it not only an eloquent symbol but an effective force.

The peace we seek, then, is nothing less than practice and the fulfilment of our whole faith, among ourselves and in our dealings with others. It signifies more than stilling the guns, easing the sorrow of war. More than an escape from death, it is a way of life.

This is the work that awaits us all, to be done with bravery, with charity, and with prayer to Almighty God.

—By Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States
(from his Inaugural Address)

INDIAN OPINION

FRIDAY, 28TH JUNE, 1953

Education Conference

LAST Sunday's Conference in Durban on Indian Education was a unique one in the history of Indians in South Africa, for never at any time have we seen all shades of opinion thus united together to work for a common purpose. The Congress and the Organisation—the two political bodies showed no signs of ever meeting together, but even they put aside, for once, their differences and met together on one platform. To that extent it may well be said that the repressive policy of the Government was a blessing in disguise. The time has really come when not only the education of our children is at stake but our own future and that of our future generation in this country is at stake.

What worth is academic education if one cannot live with self-respect? As pointed out by his Grace the Archbishop Hurley, in his opening remarks, the development of the spirit was of far more importance than the development of the mind. He quoted the instance of Acharya Vinoba Bhave, who was solving the land problem in India, which is baffling the whole world today, and is the root cause of all the destructive wars, past and present, by the force of his spirit. It is his great and noble heart, and not the mind, that is attracting so many people to him and is causing them to part with millions of acres of land to be distributed to the landless. He makes no show of his intellect nor of his attire for he goes about in a loin cloth just as Mahatma Gandhi did.

We must confess that we are not so enamoured with the type of education imparted in our institutions and the so-called civilisation exhibited in South Africa. Apart from what material gain that might be derived from it it is destroying us body, mind and soul. So much was said at last Sunday's conference about the lack of education swelling the ranks of juvenile delinquents. We wonder what percentage of our grown-ups are leading 'pure lives' and setting an example to the juveniles. It is not an exaggeration to say that the system under which we are living our educational institutions are delinquent-producing factories. Our remarks apply both to the Whites and the non-Whites. What we wish to point out is that while we are over-much concerned about imparting literary knowledge to our children very little attention is being paid to moulding their character hence they become victims of their environments. This can only be remedied by the parents and the gurus themselves leading exemplary lives. It has been rightly said, "an ounce of practice is worth more than a ton of precept."

After these introductory remarks, which we hope will be accepted in the spirit in which they are offered, we wish to congratulate the sponsors of last Sunday's conference on the brilliant preliminary success they have achieved. Much has yet to be done. The Indian community is ever grateful for the little concessions it gets from the local and the central authorities. It must be admitted that the Natal Provincial Administration has in recent years done a great deal to improve Indian education. But it will not do for it to sit self-satisfied at that. What it has done amounts, comparatively speaking, to very little indeed. The initial work has been done by the Indians themselves at tremendous sacrifices. They have been doing what it is the duty of the authorities to do. The authorities pay all their attention to the Whites whose vote sustains them and are hopelessly callous in paying attention to the needs of the non-Whites since the latter have no vote. We do not wish to be critical of our Provincial Administration who is being kind to us but it should indeed realise that the grievance under which we are labouring is a real one and to ignore it does no credit to the authorities in the eyes of the civilised world. Last Sunday's conference, it must be appreciated by all reasonably-minded people, has been very moderate in its requests and it is to be sincerely hoped that they will receive the sympathetic consideration they merit.

At the same time our humble advice to our own people is: Let us not rest at claiming what is due to us. Let us do our duty to our children as we have been doing to the last ounce of our strength and as we have put aside our differences on a vital matter such as the education of our children let us put aside all our petty differences in all public matters and unite together in fighting the common battle for our existence in this country as self-respecting human beings.

NOTES AND NEWS

Ladysmith Indians Defeat Group Areas Plan

DR. A. H. SADER, Chairman of the Ladysmith Indian Ratepayers Association, issued the following Press statement on the boycott of land sales in an area set aside by the Town Council's Group Areas Plan for the Indian people of Ladysmith: "Last week the Borough of Ladysmith put up 169 building plots with an upset price and with a building clause attached to each lot for sale to the Indian community. These plots are situated in an area set aside by the Town Council for Indian occupation under their Group Areas Plan. My Association realising the danger that this meant to the community, organised a boycott of these sales. During the course of our preparations for the boycott of these sales we had obtained signatures supporting this move by the Association from almost every Indian in Ladysmith and numerous mass meetings were held at which unanimous support was given to the Ratepayers Association." It is to the credit of the Indian community of Ladysmith and of the Klip River country as a whole that not a single buyer turned up on the day the sales were to have been held. The only Indians present on this occasion were two representatives of my Association who went as observers. It has come to our notice that the Council intends selling 12 business premises soon and I have no doubt that these sales like the last one will be totally boycotted. The Town Council's plan is quite clear. They are endeavouring to uproot 90 per cent of the settled Indian community from their homes and businesses and we shall not rest until any plan emanating from the Group Areas Act is defeated, as this obnoxious and unjust legislation is designed to strangle the Indian community both economically and socially."

Brave Ladysmith Indians!

Ladysmith Indians are to be heartily congratulated for their courageous stand. It is to be hoped that their example will be emulated by our Brethren everywhere.

Responsibility Of Every Indian Outside India

Mr. Nehru, the Prime Minister of India, addressing the staff of the High Commissioner of India House, London, on June 8, appealed to them to apply themselves to their work on the sound principles on which the nation is founded and strive to gether, British or Indian, for the good of India and for the furtherance of good relations between India and Britain. "I come here after two and a half years. Much has happened in these two and a half years, and in many ways our country has assumed, even reluctantly, heavier responsibilities," said the Prime Minister. "I am very glad to meet you, but I must say that I do not feel happy when at this kind of meeting. It is not very satisfactory, but perhaps there is no other way to meet large numbers of people at one time. If I had time and leisure I would have liked to visit your separate offices and meet some people individually and separately, not only to find out about their work but to get to know somewhat of them more personally. Mr. Nehru dealt in detail with major world developments and the important role that world powers had thrust on India from time to time, and said that he was a little terrified at the new responsibilities. He added: "A sense of discipline, co-operative working, and shouldering obligations and responsibility accompany freedom. Those of our people who work abroad in our missions or elsewhere naturally have to shoulder a peculiar measure of responsibility because, in a sense, every Indian abroad, apart from the work he does, is in a measure an ambassador of our country abroad and is a bit of our country abroad, and by his acts our country is judged. If a person behaves well or badly in our country, well, it is good or not good, but does not make much difference. But it makes a lot of difference how any Indian student or other behaves in a foreign country because he becomes a symbol of India and by his acts his country is judged. And now, more especially, when the world's eyes are more directed toward India and what India and Indians do, it is like a spotlight on all of us and we have to be particularly careful that we do not do anything which might bring discredit to our country. Well, that is a general proposition which I would like you to bear in mind."

EDUCATION CONFERENCE

WHAT is regarded to be a unique Conference in the history of the Indians in Natal was held at the Albert Cinema, 37 Albert Street, Durban on Sunday, June 31, under the aegis of the Natal Indian Teachers' Society, Natal Indian Council for Child Welfare, Natal Indian Congress, Natal Indian Organisation, Durban Combined Indian Ratepayers Association, Durban Indian Benevolent Society and the Friends of the Black Association, on the all-important question of Indian education with particular reference to the lack of school accommodation for the tens of thousands of Indian children of school-going age in Natal.

Conference was well attended by over 200 delegates representing the whole of Natal as well as the seven convening bodies, 12 Trade Unions and a large number of Granites and School Committees as well as the Natal Indian Blind Society. The South African Institute of Race Relations was also represented.

Conference was opened by the Right Reverend D. E. Hayler, O.M.I., D.D., Archbishop of Durban.

The Presidential address was delivered by Mr. P. R. Father, Chairman of the Convening Committee.

Mr. I. O. Nce representing the Natal Indian Congress strongly urged Conference to set a definite target for the fulfilment of its object and suggested that by the time the Indian community celebrated the centenary of their arrival in this country, every Indian child should be in school.

Mr. O. L. Amra representing the Chemical and Allied Workers Union said that "because of the low educational level of the Indian the community suffered economically. He said that secondary industries required highly educated labour and therefore debared Indians. He said that with the education of the Indian, the economic level of the Indian would also be stepped up.

Resolutions No. 1 and 2 were passed unanimously, the conference deliberated on the main resolution for well over five hours.

During discussion on the main resolution delegates strongly emphasised that if practical measures were not taken immediately the Indian community would be faced with a very serious crisis in the near future.

Mr. J. N. Singh in moving for the adoption of the main resolution said that among other things the most serious cause contributing to the present crisis of the Indian population of Natal was the dearth of educational facilities for Indian and European alike.

Mr. M. B. Naidoo was warmly applauded when reference was made to his contribution towards the establishment of the Congress High School. Dr. S. Cooper, who recently arrived from India, was officially welcomed to the conference and contributed much to the deliberations of the conference.

Mr. J. N. Singh, general secretary of the Natal Indian Congress, said in reply to an motion by Mr. P. R. Father that the Natal Indian Organisation would lend its wholehearted support to the Standing Committee, that it was for the first time that the Natal Indian Congress and the Natal Indian Organisation were speaking from a common platform. He said that both these organisations realised the danger ahead and have sought to settle all differences on the most vital question affecting the Indian community in Natal.

The following resolutions were unanimously passed:

"This conference attended by delegates representing the following organisations: Natal Indian Teachers' Society, Natal Indian Council for Child Welfare, Natal Indian Congress, Natal Indian Organisation, Durban Combined Indian Ratepayers Association, Durban Indian Benevolent Society, Friends of the Black Association, Natal Indian Youth Congress, South African Institute of Race Relations, Natal Indian Blind Society, 15 Trade Unions and a large number of Aided-School Committees and Granites, emphasises that the provision of primary and secondary education is the duty of the Natal Provincial Administration, a duty which has not been fully discharged to the case of Indian children with the result that a serious crisis has arisen in this Province in regard to Indian education, in that nearly one-third of the population of school-going age is out of school.

"This conference whilst expressing its appreciation of the part played by the Administration, particularly in recent years, in taking practical measures to meet the grave situation that has arisen, places on record that almost all the Government Aided Primary and four Secondary Schools have been erected by the initiative of the Indian community assisted by grants from the Natal Provincial Administration, records that the Indian community is finding it extremely difficult to continue to make increasing sacrifices to erect further schools, and more so, on the present financial basis.

"This conference is deeply distressed to find that notwithstanding the financial sacrifices of the Indian people and the building programme of the Administration, there are still thousands of children of school-going age who, because of lack of accommodation, are growing up in overcrowded internment.

"The conference is firmly of the opinion that unless immediate steps are taken to provide accommodation for these children many of them will inevitably swell the ranks of juvenile delinquents and thus create an added social problem.

"This conference therefore urges upon the Natal Provincial Administration to:

(1) carry out its responsibility for the education of Indian children by extending the principle of compulsory education to them, and, as first steps,

(2) (a) embark on a programme of creating Government schools particularly in localities where the need is greater and more urgent in such areas as Hydenham, Overport, Olds Estate, Cato Manor, Clarewood, Pietermaritzburg and Durban-Central.

(b) build additional accommodation existing Government Indian schools.

(c) increase the building grant to Government-aided schools from 50 per cent to 75 per cent so that the Indian people would be helped and enabled to accelerate the creation of more schools.

as practical measures towards providing the much needed accommodation for Indian children."

"This conference elects the Convening Committee as Standing Committee and requests it to present the foregoing resolution, together with a memorandum, to the Administrator-in-Executive, at an interview to be arranged by the Convening Committee within two months of this conference and requests the Committee to continue working until the above resolution is implemented, and to report progress to the participating organisations and if it is deemed necessary call a conference."

LIBERAL PERSPECTIVE

RACIAL ISSUES IN SOUTH AFRICA

By C W M. GELL

(Reproduced by Courtesy of 'Public Affairs' in which it was published in November 1952.)

II

IN an article in last Summer's 'Public Affairs' I quoted Dr. Malan as saying that his basic motive is to maintain "the European dominance over the overwhelming minority of the non-Europeans." It is well to remind ourselves of the 1951 population figures, as recently revised.

Europeans	2,643,187	20.8%
Coloureds	1,102,323	8.7%
Indians	365,524	2.9%
Natives	8,535,341	67.4%

12,646,375 100.0%

All the Coloured races significantly out-breed the White and, despite high death rates, will increase their proportionate preponderance unless there is heavy White immigration, which the Nationalists discourage lest it diminish the present Afrikaner majority (64 per cent.) among White population. It is, of course, a fact that the bulk of the non-European population, especially the Native, is backward, uneducated, ill-civilised and at a very early cultural level. There is, however, a small but growing social and economic elite to whom these general remarks no longer apply. It is this, at present, minute minority which constitutes the challenge to and test of "white civilisation," and which is leading the current agitation.

In their attitude to this challenge there is little practical difference between the Nationalists and their European opponents. Both condemn the Defiance Campaign unreservedly, though each blames the other for provoking it. Both stand for exclusive White political supremacy. The Opposition's stand against disenfranchising the Coloureds is motivated rather by fear of the immediate electoral consequences than by objection to the principle of curtailing non-European political rights. All European parties uphold the industrial colour bar which confines non-Europeans (at least in theory) to unskilled employment. All approve of residential segregation and social segregation in public places and public transport. All agree to prohibit sexual intimacy between the races. As regards the Unjust Laws apertly mentioned by the ANC, the United Party (UP), which is the chief Opposition party, would withdraw the Coloured Voters Act and amend the Suppression of Communism Act to bring alleged Communists to public trial. This would satisfy non-European opinion on these two laws. But it would only amend the Bantu Authorities Act and Group Areas Act in important but not fundamental details. It would repeal some of the latest and most irritating of the petty pass regulations and administer the others less aggressively than the Nationalists, until it could implement the general and gradual amelioration to which it is committed. But its attitude on two of the four Nationalist Acts and those most controversial of all discriminatory regulations is very far short of present African demands.

When it claims to stand for "White leadership with justice" or for "Christian trusteeship practised with humanity," the Opposition is using verbal formulas little different from Dr. Malan, who is "seeking to solve the problem by way of differentiation based upon just and fair treatment for each group in its own sphere." No European party envisages a day when its wards will grow up and justice is viewed by nearly all Whites from one side only. Where the parties differ, it is in degree and in methods of application. Nationalists proclaim a militant racial ethos of permanent, unending White supremacy, founded in predominate Calvinism and literal Scriptural sanction (Genesis IX 25 and Joshua IX 23-27). Historical circumstances, the present cultural and technical superiority of the White race and self-interest, together with the fervent patriotism of a small and isolated people, confirm Afrikaner Nationalists in their conviction of being "chosen," both inter-White and contra Coloured. There is, therefore, a special sense in which the "non-South African" loyalties of Jews, Catholics and Anglicans are depicted by Nationalist politicians and cartoonists. And it is precisely because the colour policy of the Opposition parties is unfettered by religious dogma that Nationalists regard themselves as the only true custodians of "white civilisation." Paradoxically they desperately fear the cultural advantage of the non-Europeans even while denying the possibility of their ever becoming responsible citizens or economic competitors on level terms. This explicit, if wishful and fearful, assertion of a Herrenvolk ideology leads to all too frequent discourtesy and bullying of non-Europeans (and Europeans too), to the comtemptuous and callous brutality of all too many of the police in their dealings with coloured people and, inevitably, to a great exacerbation of racial bitterness. But, while it avoided the more blatant of the Nationalist excesses, the UP's record of 1933-49 was only a little less discriminatory, against non-Europeans. It accepted implicitly the doctrine of White supremacy and its advantages. Much of its racial legislation foreshadowed Nationalist measures and, when it created non-European consultative bodies, it did not greatly defer to them.

Thus, while it was justifiably say that four years of Nationalist strong-arm methods have provoked a unified non-European movement such as could hardly have been thought possible in 1948, it must share the blame for several generations of Coloured discouragement and frustration which provide the agitation with its background and residual strength. The Nationalists merely sparked off something which had been long seething and the ANC has announced that it will continue civil disobedience even if the UP wins the 1953 election. By carrying the doctrine of "White supremacy with justice" to its logical and dogmatic conclusion, the Nationalists have brought to the surface and to the active consideration of educated non-Europeans all the latest contradictions of South Africa's traditional racial policy. No amount of "development in their own sphere" or of welfare, medical and educational services will compensate men for their permanent exclusion from the country's higher political and economic life on the grounds of the colour of their skin. The affront to justice and self-respect is too great for any material palliation, as all recent Asian history is there to prove. "White civilisation" is a philosophical and moral abstraction, a contradiction in terms, no longer acceptable to astute Coloured opinion.

Nationalists are fond of saying that White South Africa spends more per head on its Native population than any British colony. This is true. But it is also true that a much smaller proportion of the national income is spent per African in South Africa than in British colonies. South Africa is a rich, industrial state. It is all too apt to take credit for every penny spent on non-Europeans above what is extracted from them in taxes. This attitude overlooks the truth that in every country which hopes to avoid revolution the wealthy must contribute to the uplift of the poor. In South Africa, owing to historical circumstances and a colour-rigid economy, that distinction is still largely racial; and one views with alarm the recent trend to restrict expenditure on Native education and municipal locations (Native townships) to what the Natives alone can afford.

THE WIDER WORLD

By John Gild
PULL TOGETHER

THE number of political bodies actively opposed to the Government now includes the African National Congress, the South African Indian Congress, the Liberal Party, the Labour Party, the Federal Party and the Liberal members of the United Party.

There are some good people, who mean business, in all these organisations. I wonder when it will occur to them to begin to make common cause, at least on certain immediate issues. Of these, two important ones are likely to arise during the coming session of parliament. The first is the Bill to control industrial relations. It will include sections designed to put all non-White trade unions under some degree of Government control. The other Bill will bring all Native education under the control of the Native Affairs Department, depriving the Christian missions of their independence. Both these measures are fraught with great danger to African progress. Would it not be a splendid thing if men of goodwill in all the six organisations listed above were to co-operate in vigorous protests against these Bills? There is an old saying that in times of crisis those who won't hang together may find themselves hanging separately. It is certainly true at these times. I know, of course, how hard it usually is to get men in different organisations to work together, even in a limited way and for a limited purpose. But I am convinced that the effort must be made if the Opposition forces are to restrain this Government to some effect.

Mr. Lutshuli Banned

The banning of Mr. A. J. Lutshuli from all the main arenas of the Union is an outrageous act on the part of the Government. It shows to what extremely unjust lengths the Government is going in its eagerness to crush all legitimate expression of African opinion. Such banishment of individuals is allowed under the Act to suppress "communalism" and under the earlier Riotous Assemblies Act. But both these laws require the Minister to be sure that the person about to be banned has been "creating ill-feeling or hostility between White and non-White people." Now it is quite obvious to anyone that Mr. Lutshuli has been guilty of very much the opposite. On the contrary, everyone, including White people, who has ever heard Mr. Lutshuli speak in public or in private, has recognised his quality of statesmanship. His speeches have been bold and frank, but also careful and sensible. If he had ever "created ill-feeling between the races," he should be charged with that crime and properly tried in a court of law. It is significant that the police have been unable to frame such a charge against any leading Congressmen.

British Colour Bars

Mr. Fenner Brockway, a Labour member of the House of Commons, is one of the few Englishmen who are determined to break down the colour bar. Not for the first time he opened a debate on the subject at Westminster last month. He not only asked the House to condemn the colour bar, but he also demanded that the Conservative Government pass a law to prohibit the maintenance of the colour bar in British colonies. The second part of this motion proved to be a real embarrassment for the Conservatives. They don't mind saying in theory that the colour bar is a bad thing, but they feel that it is going too far to make its continuance impossible in practice. So four Tory members put forward an amendment to cut out the second half of Mr. Brockway's motion. And, rather indifferently, they passed an urgent written summons to all Tory members please to attend this debate and get ready "to vote against the abolition of the colour bar." Then, at the end of the debate, they voted their majority not to carry their amendment, so they could have done, but to adjourn the proceedings so that the House should not vote on either the motion or their amendment to it.

Successive Governments in Britain have evaded this simple issue. Following American precedent, reformers have urged Britain to make racial discrimination illegal both in Britain and in British colonies. There is no technical difficulty about doing this, but the British won't do it. Their colour bar can be broken, it seems, only by the action of the people who suffer under them. Now that in Northern Rhodesia apartheid in post offices is being withdrawn at a time when Africans are entering hotels and shops and asking to be served just like White people.

Britain In Debt

The decline of the British empire is an inevitable process. It is obscured from our eyes by the childish attitude of the English Press in South Africa which chooses to pretend to its readers that the year is 1913, not 1953. Many people believe that Britain is today pursuing a progressive racial policy. This is true only in the limited sense that the British have a habit of making a virtue of necessity. When, after a long, long struggle, they were forced to withdraw from India, their withdrawal was soon represented as a voluntary act of self-denial. What it really signified was that the British are too humbug to use force and actual warfare beyond a certain point of time. That time approaches when the cost of holding an empire, or parts of it, is greater than the benefits to be derived from it. In these days, these benefits are often invisible to the ordinary eye. For instance, as Professor G. D. H. Cole has pointed out, Britain is today borrowing money from her colonies instead of lending it to them. Some of the bigger colonies earn more, especially in precious dollars, than Britain allows them to spend. Their dollar and sterling balances are used by the Bank of England to meet the sterling area's deficit. The colonies, regarded as poor relations, have actually in recent years been compelled to accumulate in London sterling balances that now run to the astounding figure of over £1,000 millions. West African leaders are among those who have discovered this fact, and they are highly critical of its implications. They ask why the colonies should be forced to save money in order to lend it to Britain. They point out that the money granted under the schemes of colonial welfare and development, schemes advertised and praised to the skies, is in fact only a small fraction of the sums that Britain withholds from the colonies whose exports have earned them. The principle has been described as "steal a pound and give a penny to charity."

On Waiting For Freedom

"Many politicians of our time are in the habit of laying it down as a self-evident proposition that no people ought to be free till they are fit to use their freedom. The maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story, who resolved not to go into the water till he had learned to swim. If men are to wait for liberty till they become wise and good in slavery, they may indeed wait for ever."

It was Lord Macaulay who said this — in 1840.

Pakistan News

Karachi, June 1953.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

IN the sphere of politics, there has been much interesting activity, stimulated by the fact that the Coronation has provided a convenient meeting place for Mr. Mahomed Ali and Mr. Nehru.

There cannot be any doubt about the Pakistan Prime Minister's wish to reach a friendly understanding with India and it is equally clear that Mr. Nehru desires the same. In this aspect of policy, Mr. Mahomed Ali will have the support of the Governor-General who has long stressed the wisdom and, indeed, the necessity, for harmonious relations between the two countries. No sensible person will dispute that such relations would confer great benefits on both of them and it has to be recognised that the problems existing between them are not small.

The question of the canal waters is a life and death issue for Pakistan and apart from its legal aspect (as to which Pakistan's case is by no means a poor one) it is inconceivable that millions of acres of land, now producing food, shall be allowed to return to the desert. This is a matter which goes beyond the direct interests of India and Pakistan. It is of vital concern to the world at large which does not produce sufficient food for its ever-growing population. This is doubtless one of the reasons for the close practical interest which the World Bank is showing in this particular affair.

The Kashmir dispute and the dispute arising on the question of evacuee property laws are more local in their interest, although the Kashmir problem has international implications which could be exploited by people of ill will. Be that as it may, both of these issues affect the lives and property of millions and therefore are of lively concern.

In our last letter to "Indian Opinion," we took the view that nothing should be said or written that might embitter the discussions between India and Pakistan. It is believed that at all levels, such discussions are now going on, are infused with much cordiality and goodwill. This is most gratifying to hear and at present it would be grossly out of place to indulge in critical and controversial expressions of view.

Mr. Mahomed Ali's recent pronouncement on the subject of Pakistan's constitution is somewhat disquieting. He has said that it will be introduced piecemeal. This comes close to a confession of inability and to the substitution of tinkering for resolute action. It seems clear that this approach will give rise to many difficulties, legal and other, and it does not give proper weight to the patent fact that a constitution is now a basic and urgent need in Pakistan, many of whose current problems are traceable to the absence of an appropriate constitution.

No doubt the question bristles with difficulties and, in the case of Pakistan, presents certain complications of its own. There is, for example, the question whether Urdu alone shall be the state language of Pakistan, or whether Bengali shall rank equally in that status. There are the difficulties arising by reason of the division of the country into two wings. But such matters are not insoluble. Other countries have found ways of dealing with similar problems and the Pakistan Government has the clear duty of doing the same.

In some respects, however, the matter has taken a clearer shape. The differences between those who desire an Islamic emphasis and those who do not share this view, seem to have led to a victory for the latter. It is unlikely that the mullahs will enjoy the place in the constitution which, at one time they hoped to secure. In other words, the liberal view has prevailed.

The recommendations of the American Wheat Mission which recently visited Pakistan, justify the hope that the U.S.A. will give a large measure of assistance and that from this source, 1,000,000 tons of wheat will be received. This quantity will not cover the estimated deficiency of 1,500,000 tons, but it is expected that the balance will be made good from a better local harvest, from the gifts received from the Commonwealth countries and from purchases or barter deals to be effected in the next few months.

The solution of this grave and urgent problem will take Pakistan a long way forward in the arduous climb to its former prosperity. The setback of the last eighteen months has been severe and its consequences are still felt. There will be no easy recovery, but as soon as the country's food supply is restored, a great burden will have been lifted and the morale of the public is bound to rise.

Since the day of its creation, Pakistan has sought, in the face of great difficulties, to establish its own industry. It is well known that, at the outset, the degree of industrialisation in Pakistan was negligible. Apart from four cement factories, one soda ash factory, a few pucca jute baling presses at Narayanganj, a small cotton textile production, together with the sports and surgical goods production of Sialkot, Pakistan had no industry worth the mention. There has, therefore, been a considerable emphasis on the need for development and it should be interesting to review the extent of the accomplishment.

At the purely organisational level, a great deal of useful work has been done which is giving good results. The Government has set up the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation Ltd. an autonomous body, acting by statute, whose tasks are to initiate and encourage industrial enterprises to be handed over to private interests as soon as they have been firmly established. The chairman of this Corporation is Mr. Ghulam Farooq, a man of great energy and ability, who had a successful career in the railway and civil administrations of undivided India. There is also the Pakistan Industrial Finance Corporation Ltd., a similar autonomous body, whose duty it is to make loans to suitable private enterprise of an industrial nature. A top level Planning Board is shortly to be set up, under the chairmanship of Mr. Zahir Hussain who will then retire from the governorship of the State Bank. The Planning Board will have a very wide brief covering all aspects of economic life and its work is likely to add further stimulus to industrial development.

Industrial estates have been successfully developed, of which a good example is the Sind Industrial Trading Estate where property is situated on the outskirts of Karachi. The work of such estates follows the usual pattern by providing demarcated plots with shell buildings erected on them. Roads are constructed and drainage, water, power and telephones are provided. The Sind Industrial Estate has a considerable number of factories now in full production covering textiles, sulphonic acid, paints and varnishes, light engineering, tobacco and plastics.
